NOTICE OF MOTION FOR JUDGMENT.

To—United Construction Workers affiliated with United Mine Workers of America; District 50 United Mine Workers of America and United Mine Workers of America.

TAKE NOTICE that Laburnum Construction Corporation, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the Commonwealth of Virginia, with its principal office in the City of Richmond, Virginia, on the 22nd day of December, 1949, at 10 o'clock a. m. or soon thereafter as its counsel may be heard, will move the Circuit Court of the City of Richmond, Virginia, for judgment against you and each of you jointly and severally in the sum of Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($500,000.00) for this to-wit:

That Laburnum Construction Corporation, hereinafter sometimes called "Plaintiff", under and by virtue of a contract or construction agreement dated October 28, 1948, between the Plaintiff and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company of Huntington, West Virginia, was on and prior to the 26th day of July, 1949, and until on or about August 4, 1949, engaged in the construction of a coal preparation plant for said Pond Creek Pocahontas Company at that Company's Number One Coal Mine in Breathitt County, Kentucky; and further that by virtue of a contract dated December 15, 1948, page 2 } between the Plaintiff and Spring Fork Development Company, Plaintiff was engaged in the construction of twenty-five dwellings in Breathitt County, Kentucky, near the aforesaid Coal Mine. Plaintiff was continuously engaged in and about said work from on or about the respective dates of said contracts until August 4, 1949, and had nearly completed each of said projects in accord with the terms of the aforesaid contracts. Prior to undertaking said construction projects, Plaintiff had entered into a contract with Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council, a copy of which is attached to and made a part of this Notice of Motion for Judgment and is marked Exhibit "A", under the terms of which last mentioned contract Plaintiff was obligated to employ workmen through the said Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council and its affiliates, as more particularly set forth in said contract. Pursuant to the terms of said contract (Exhibit "A"), the Plaintiff entered into an arrangement with Paintsville, Kentucky, Carpenters Local Union No. 646, American Federation of Labor recognizing that Union as the bargaining agent for workmen of Plaintiff on said construction projects.

On or about July 14, 1949, one William O. Hart of Pikeville, Kentucky, communicated by telephone with the Plaintiff and said Hart stated that he was the Field Representative and an officer of United Construction Workers Affiliated With United Mine Workers of America (hereinafter sometimes called United Construction Workers) and that he worked under a Mr. David Hunter, Regional Director of and an officer of District 50 United Mine Workers of America, (District 50 United Mine Workers of America will hereinafter sometimes be called District 50) in charge of Region 58 of said District 50, and that he was calling about the work which the Plaintiff was doing for Pond Creek Pocapage 3 } hontas Company in Breathitt County, Kentucky.

The said Hart further stated that he understood that Pond Creek Pocahontas Company intended to award to the Plaintiff considerable additional work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, which would include among other things approximately 500 dwellings, stores and other buildings.
Said Hart then stated that the territory in which this work was being performed was the territory of the United Construction Workers and that he intended "to take over" all of the Plaintiff's work for the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company in Breathitt County, Kentucky. The said Hart then stated that the United Construction Workers had closed down a job of Beckett Construction Company at Wheelwright, Kentucky, and unless the Plaintiff agreed to recognize immediately United Construction Workers as the sole bargaining agent for the employees of Plaintiff on said projects in Breathitt County, Kentucky, that he, William O. Hart as Field Representative and an officer of United Construction Workers and District 50, would close down the work of the Plaintiff in Breathitt County, Kentucky. The Plaintiff informed the said Hart that it could not comply with his demands since Plaintiff was already under contract for these same employees with the Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council and the Paintsville Carpenters Local No. 646, American Federation of Labor, and other labor unions affiliated with American Federation of Labor.

On or about July 25, 1949, the superintendent in charge of the works of Plaintiff in Breathitt County, Kentucky, learned that the said William O. Hart had arranged to bring a large group of men to the job site of Plaintiff in Breathitt County, Kentucky, at about noon on the following day, July 26, 1949, for the purpose of forcibly stopping the work of the Plaintiff on said job, and the said superintendent was also informed that the said group of men with said Hart would be armed.

Pursuant to said threat, the said William O. Hart, page 4 } Field Representative of and an officer and agent of the said United Construction Workers while acting within his authority as such representative, officer and agent, as hereinafter set forth, arrived at the said job in Breathitt County, Kentucky, at about noon on July 26, 1949, with a mob of men variously estimated at between 75 and 100 men, which mob was headed by the said William O. Hart acting in his capacity as Field Representative and an officer of United Construction Workers and District 50. Upon inquiring of the said Hart as to his authority to interfere with and prevent Plaintiff from continuing its work the said Hart then replied that he was acting under orders of Tom (Thomas) Rainey and that he was carrying out Rainey's orders. The said Tom (Thomas) Rainey is a member of United Mine Workers of America and is one of the members of the International Executive Board of said United Mine Workers of America and is authorized to give orders for and on behalf of United Mine Workers of America, to said District 50 and United Construction Workers and the said Hart. The said mob headed by said Hart went to the schoolhouse being constructed by Plaintiff in Breathitt County, Kentucky, being Job No. 340 of the Plaintiff, and then went to the coal tipple in Breathitt County, Kentucky, being part of Job No. 322 of Plaintiff, and immediately began haranguing workmen employed by Plaintiff with threats and abuses and then demanded that these men immediately become members of United Construction Workers. The said Hart further in violent language said to these men that they would not be permitted to continue their work unless they became members of the United Construction Workers. Said Hart and the mob of men headed by him were informed that workmen on said job were members of Local Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor or had made application to become members of such local unions. The employees on the job promptly refused to become members of said United Construction Workers. Thereupon, the said mob headed by the said William O. Hart, Field Representative and an officer as aforesaid of United Construction Workers and District 50, swarmed around most of the laborers on said job and demanded that these laborers sign application blanks to become members of United Construction Workers. The Plaintiff is not informed whether any of its said employees signed application blanks, but is of opinion and believes that some did so under duress since they feared they would be injured or killed by said mob if they refused to sign such cards. A number of the mob headed by the said William O. Hart had been drinking and were intoxicated or seemingly intoxicated, and many of said mob headed by the said Hart were carrying pistols or guns according to the information and belief of the employees of the Plaintiff. Some of these employees saw the outline of pistol handles or bullet cylinders concealed under the shirts or in the pockets of some of the members of said mob, and after the said mob left the said schoolhouse, pistol shots were heard while this mob was approaching the said coal tipple. The said Hart then with said mob, entered the toolhouse of the Plaintiff in Breathitt County, Kentucky, and there violently addressed a group of Plaintiff's employees and said Hart then again emphatically and violently affirmed that he and his mob had come to the job for the purpose of stopping the Plaintiff's men from working unless they joined United Construction Workers. The said Hart further stated that excepting some few laborers, Plaintiff's employees had refused to join United Construction Workers and that the employees who had not joined his (Harts) Union would not be permitted to work. The said Hart stated that he and his mob were establishing a picket line and that they were prepared to use all force necessary to hold the picket line and prevent the employees of Plaintiff from working. The said Hart further stated that the United Construction Workers intended to see that the Plaintiff's men did not work and that if anyone did not believe this, he, the said Hart would bring to the job 200 tough men from Beaver Creek, Kentucky, and that these men would come "rough" and that they would kick the Plaintiff's men off the job. Some of the Plaintiff's employees resented the interference of said Hart and his mob and so stated in vigorous terms and thereupon some of the mob of followers of the said William O. Hart reached into their shirts or pockets as though they were reaching for guns, but due to the cool headedness of one of the men present, the Plaintiff's workmen were advised not to run the risk of bloodshed and to submit to be driven from their work by said Hart and his mob.

Thereupon, the said workmen employed by the Plaintiff in Breathitt County, Kentucky, were driven from their work by said Hart and his mob by use of threats of bodily harm to them and their families, and thus all work of the Plaintiff under the aforesaid contracts was stopped on July 26, 1949.

On or about July 27, 1949, many of the employees of the Plaintiff returned to their said work, but upon arriving at the aforesaid tippie, found two men who apparently were "spotters" for United Construction Workers and also found one H. G. Robinson who represented himself to be a Field Representative and an officer of United Construction Workers. A number of the employees of the Plaintiff were gathered in the carpenters toolhouse near said tippie and said employees and their steward refused to return to work for the reason that the men had been informed that in the event they undertook to work, more than 100 United Construction Workers would come upon the job and force them to stop, and that possibly something might happen to them if they returned to work on the tippie. It was also rumored that certain of the mob were hiding in the hills with rifles and would

Shortly thereafter, all of the employees of the Plaintiff left the said work because of said threats and rumors and have not since returned to their work. The Plaintiff in the meantime, had appealed to a Kentucky State Police officer for assistance, but had received no adequate assistance to maintain law and order upon the said works. The Kentucky State Police officer knew of the disturbance but stated that he had orders not to take part in any such disturbance. The said state policeman stated that he was convinced there was real danger to the men should they return to their work, and further stated that "I have not only seen them shot that way, but have picked them up after they were shot". On or about August 1, 1949, a meeting was held of United Construction Workers at a place known as "Tiptop" at or near Carver, Kentucky, which meeting was attended by approximately 250 persons. The said meeting was conducted by the said William O. Hart and at which meeting there was a further discussion of the construction work of the Plaintiff in Breathitt County, Kentucky, and the said Mr. William O. Hart at that meeting again insisted upon preventing the Plaintiff from proceeding with its work under said contracts in Breathitt County, Kentucky. Thereupon, arrangements were made by the said Hart to have certain people who were members of United Construction Workers posted at various parts of the said works of Plaintiff and the said Hart thereupon called upon the assembled crowd for volunteers to go to the Plaintiff's job site to serve as pickets or spies for United Construction Workers. The Plaintiff was constantly making every effort to induce his workmen to return to work but was unable to do so because of the threats which theretofore had been made by the said Hart and members of the United Construction Workers.

page 8 } On or about August 1, 1949, the Plaintiff did induce some of its workmen to return to the location of the job and new badges were issued to them and such other men as the Plaintiff was able to hire to go to work. Before starting actual work these men also were intimidated by the said Hart and his mob so that none of these men actually went to work because they were fearful of consequences which might be visited upon them by the said United Construction Workers if they did so. While the said men were still at the job location, the said William O. Hart came to the works and made another very emphatic speech and statement that United Construction Workers would not permit the work to go on so far as common laborers were concerned unless the Company signed a contract with the United Construction Workers. Said Hart was informed by Plaintiff that the work could go along without any laborers since the carpenters on the job would be willing to do the work which normally the laborers should do. Thereupon the said Hart stated that he would not permit the said carpenters to do any such work. The said Hart then indicated he would take whatever measures might be necessary to see to it that the men did not work. He then threatened the men with bodily harm if they attempted to go to work. The Plaintiff then undertook to communicate and did communicate with Mr. Thomas Davis, an Assistant Chairman of said District 50, and the coordinator of various Regions of District 50 including among other locations, Breathitt County, Kentucky. Mr. Davis has an office in Knoxville, Tennessee, but was not there. The Plaintiff located him in Kingsport, Tennessee. Mr. Davis was thereupon informed of the developments at the Plaintiff's project in Breathitt County, Kentucky, and of the agreement between the Plaintiff and American Federation of Labor Unions and of the agreement of Plaintiff with Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council. Mr. Davis thereupon page 9 } stated, "We do not recognize the American Federation of Labor any more than they recognize us".

Mr. Davis said he was very sympathetic with people in Plaintiff's position, but that it was caught between two big unions and he would not, although urgently requested so to do by Plaintiff, direct the said Mr. Hunter or the said Hart not to disturb or interfere with the employees of the Plaintiff. The said Davis refused to come to the location of said work because of other appointments which he claimed to have. The Plaintiff, thereupon, arranged a meeting for the succeeding day, August 2, 1949, at 10 o'clock a. m. which meeting the said Hart agreed to attend upon condition that the Plaintiff would not attempt to perform any work until said meeting. On the succeeding morning, August 2, 1949, the meeting proposed was held and at said meeting a number of representatives from various Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, were present. The Plaintiff then stated that it felt that the men should be directed to go back to work and it requested and urged them to do so. One of the representatives of the American Federation of Labor asked the question "Do you want to wait until somebody is killed before you do something?" The Plaintiff stated that it did not think anybody would be killed, but all of the representatives of the said Unions agreed that none of the men voluntarily should expose themselves to such a risk, since they believed someone would be killed if work was permitted to go on. The men then refused, because of said threats of said Hart and his mob, to go back to work. While the meeting was in progress, the representatives of the American Federation of Labor refused to meet with the said Hart. Thereupon the said Hart informed the Plaintiff that his position had not changed, that he would insist that the Plaintiff's employees discontinue page 10 } their work and said further that he would if necessary bring 1,000 men to the job to hold his picket line. Because of the threats of the said Hart and the said United Construction Workers, the employees of the Plaintiff refused to return to their work.

Under date of August 4, 1949, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, by letter, notified the Plaintiff that because of Plaintiff's inability to proceed with said work, its contract therefor was cancelled as of that date. A copy of said letter of cancellation is attached hereto and made a part hereof and marked Exhibit "B". On the same day, Spring Fork Development Company, by letter, notified the Plaintiff that because of Plaintiff's inability to proceed with the said work, its contract therefor was cancelled. A copy of said letter of cancellation is attached hereto and made a part hereof and marked Exhibit "C".

That United Construction Workers is an unincorporated association composed of numerous members and is commonly called a labor union. That District 50 is an unincorporated association composed of numerous members and is commonly called a labor union. That United Mine Workers of America is an unincorporated association composed of numerous members and is commonly called a labor union. That the constitution of the United Mine Workers of America provides among other things that the organization of United Mine Workers of America shall be international in its scope and that its international union shall be composed of workers eligible for membership in the United Mine Workers of America, and that it may be divided into districts, and sub-districts, but that the United Mine Workers of America shall have supreme legislative and judicial authority over all members and subordinate branches and shall be the ultimate tribunal to which all matters of importance to the welfare of its membership and subordinate branches shall be re-page 11 } ferred for adjustment, and that between the international conventions the supreme executive and judicial powers of the United Mine Workers of America shall be vested in its Executive Officers and the Executive Board; that all districts, subdistricts and local unions must be chartered by and under the jurisdiction of and subject to the laws of United Mine Workers of America and subject to the rulings of its International Executive Board. Under Article XX of said Constitution of United Mine Workers of America, it provided that District 50 United Mine Workers of America, subject to the jurisdiction and regulations of the said International Executive Board is thereby created and set up under the authority of the United Mine Workers of America. Said District 50 United Mine Workers of America, although organized under and pursuant to the terms of said Constitution of United Mine Workers of America, and thus subordinate to and under the control and direction of said United Mine Workers of America, is nevertheless a separate unincorporated association having members, officers, committees, and property of its own, and has power to adopt by-laws and rules not inconsistent of the Constitution of the United Mine Workers of America. Pursuant to the provisions of said Constitution of United Mine Workers of America, said District 50 was set up under rules adopted by its organizing committee, as a separate unincorporated association, but subordinate and subsidiary to United Mine Workers of America. Under the terms of its said rules said District 50 has an administrative officer operating under the authority of Article XX of the Constitution of the United Mine Workers of America, (who is sometimes known as its Chairman or Director) who has supervision over the administration of the affairs of said District 50. The said rules further provide for the payment of dues and assessments to said District 50 by its page 12 } members, and provides for a separate treasurer, so that business and affairs of said District 50 are separate and distinct from the affairs of United Mine Workers of America, with the exception that said District 50 is subordinate to and is a subsidiary of United Mine Workers of America and is completely controlled by and must act within the Constitution of the said United Mine Workers of America. The said rules set up for the governing of the said District 50 among other things, provide that the administrative officer of said District 50 shall be authorized to appoint Regional Directors who shall have supervision over local unions within the region assigned to each, and which Regional Directors are required to report to said administrative officer on all matters of policy and organizational activities at the end of each week.

It is further provided by said Constitution of United Mine Workers of America and said rules of said District 50, that subdistricts may be set up by said District 50. Pursuant to the authority therein conferred, said District 50 has caused to be set up a number of subdistricts among which is the United Construction Workers. The rules under which the said United Construction Workers is organized expressly provide that the said organization shall be affiliated with United Mine Workers of America and shall be subject to the Constitution of the said United Mine Workers of America. It is further provided by said rules that the administrative officer (sometimes called Chairman or Director) of United Construction Workers shall be subject to and conform with the Constitution and policy of the United Mine Workers of America. The said United Construction Workers, although organized by and pursuant to the direction and control of District 50, is nevertheless a separate unincorporated association having members, officers, committees and property of its own, and has power to adopt by-laws or rules page 13 } not inconsistent with the Constitution and by-laws of United Mine Workers of America and the rules and by-laws of District 50. Its members are required to pay dues and assessments. A portion of said dues after payment to United Construction Workers is transferred to District 50, and to United Mine Workers of America. That the said United Construction Workers is a separate unincorporated association but is subordinate to and a subsidiary of District 50 and United Mine Workers of America and is affiliated with and controlled by said District 50 and by United Mine Workers of America.

That the Regional Director of District 50 for the region including Breathitt County, Kentucky, is also a Regional Director of United Construction Workers and the said David Hunter and the said William O. Hart were and are the duly authorized representatives of United Mine Workers of America, of District 50 and of United Construction Workers. The said United Construction Workers is and was at all times hereinbefore mentioned, the agent of United Mine Workers of America and of said District 50, and all of the acts of the said William O. Hart and his mob and the acts of the said United Construction Workers in and about their efforts unlawfully and maliciously to prevent the Plaintiff from continuing its work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, were duly authorized, ratified and confirmed by said United Construction Workers, by said District 50 and by said United Mine Workers of America as their own acts jointly and severally.

United Construction Workers is now doing business within the Commonwealth of Virginia and has one of its principal offices in the Commonwealth of Virginia located in the City of Richmond, Virginia, and an officer thereof is also domiciled and has his office in the said City of Richmond. District 50 is now doing business within the Commonwealth of Virginia and has one of its principal offices in the Commonwealth of Virginia located in the City of Richmond, and an officer thereof is also domiciled and has his office in the City of Richmond, Virginia. That United Mine Workers of America is now doing business within the United States of America and within the Commonwealth of Virginia.

The Plaintiff urged the said William O. Hart, David Hunter and Thomas Davis, all of whom were and are officers and agents of United Construction Workers, of District 50, and of United Mine Workers of America to cease interfering with and preventing the Plaintiff from proceeding in a normal manner with its work, but each of them refused to cease their interference on behalf of said United Construction Workers, District 50 and United Mine Workers of America and each of them maliciously, wilfully and unlawfully continued their said interference with the said work of Plaintiff; all of which said actions were wilful, malicious, illegal and unwarranted and were intended to and did actually greatly damage and injure the Plaintiff's in and about its property and reputation and caused Plaintiff's work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, to be stopped and its said contracts to be cancelled, and further caused Plaintiff to lose other contracts for work which would have resulted in large profits to Plaintiff. The said United Mine Workers of America, said District 50, and the said United Construction Workers each jointly and severally ratified, approved and confirmed and authorized the acts of the said William O. Hart and his mob against the Plaintiff in Breathitt County, Kentucky, for the purpose of wilfully, maliciously and unlawfully attempting to destroy Plaintiff's business, and to prevent Plaintiff from further continuing lawfully to work within the State of Kentucky unless and until Plaintiff submitted to their demands to permit United Construction Workers to become the bargaining agent for Plaintiff's employees.

page 15 } Wherefore, the said Plaintiff will move the said court at the time and place aforesaid for judgment against United Mine Workers of America, United Construction Workers Affiliated With United Mine Workers of America, and District 50 United Mine Workers of America jointly and severally in the sum of $500,000.00 for damages both actual and punitive.

EXHIBIT "A".

THIS AGREEMENT, made this 15th day of April, 1947, between LABURNUM CONSTRUCTION CORPORATION, hereinafter called the "Contractor", of Richmond, Virginia, party of the first part; and RICHMOND BUILDING AND CONSTRUCTION TRADES COUNCIL, hereinafter called the "Council", of Richmond, Virginia, party of the second part:

WITNESSETH:

WHEREAS, the Contractor is engaged in the construction business in the State of Virginia and elsewhere; and,

WHEREAS, the Council is a voluntary association of certain Local Unions, which, through their respective International Organizations, are affiliated with the National Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor; and,

WHEREAS, The Contractor and the Council, subject to the terms and conditions hereinafter set out, desire to enter into this agreement for their mutual benefit.

NOW, THEREFORE, THIS AGREEMENT WITNESSETH:

That for and in consideration of the premises and the mutual covenants and agreements herein contained, the Contractor and the Council, subject to the terms and conditions hereinafter set out, do hereby agree as follows:

ARTICLE I. DEFINITIONS.

1. As used herein, the words "Local Union" shall mean a Local Union now or hereafter associated with the Council.

2. As used herein, the words "Other Local Union" shall mean a Local Union which is affiliated with the National Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, but which is not associated with the Council.

3. As used herein, the words "Jurisdictional page 17 } Dispute" shall mean a condition which exists when two or more Local Unions claim the right to perform the same work at the same time in the same place.

ARTICLE II. EMPLOYMENT.

1. The Contractor agrees with each Local Union to employ only members of that Local Union when working in the area over which it, the Local Union, has jurisdiction, and when performing work over which it, the Local Union, has jurisdiction. It is understood and agreed, however, that in a case where there is or may be more than one Local Union for a craft, the Contractor, as it may deem fit, may employ the members of any of those Local Unions. It is further understood and agreed that in a case where one or more Local Unions and one or more Other Local Unions have jurisdiction over the same craft or trade in the same or substantially the same area, the Contractor, as it may deem fit, may employ the members of any of those Local Unions or Other Local Unions.

2. Each Local Union agrees with the Contractor to exercise every effort to furnish to the Contractor a sufficient number of qualified workers as and when they may be needed by the Contractor. It is specifically understood that each Local Union will make every reasonable effort to discharge fully and faithfully this obligation imposed upon it and, to that end, it agrees to keep in close contact with all its members in order that prompt and efficient service may be rendered to the Contractor. If a Local Union should not be able to refer promptly to the Contractor enough members to fill the Contractor's needs, then the Local Union, at its own cost and expense, will contract, by mail, telephone or telegraph, Other Local Unions in the State of Virginia and elsewhere, and also, if deemed advisable, it will contact the International Organization with which it is affiliated, all in an effort page 18 } to recruit enough qualified workers to meet the Contractor's demands.

3. With respect to work which the Contractor may have in an area over which a Local Union does not have jurisdiction, the Contractor agrees to contact the Other Local Union which has jurisdiction over that area, to request that Other Local Union to furnish qualified workers and to give preference to members of that Other Local Union in employing workers.

ARTICLE III. SUBCONTRACTS.

1. The Council agrees to make every effort to organize all crafts and trades to the end that there shall be in each craft or trade at least three (3) Union Subcontractors having offices and engaging in business in the area or areas over which the Local Unions have jurisdiction. Each Local Union shall make known to the Contractor the names of the Union Subcontractors for its craft or trade, and the Contractor, until notified to the contrary in writing by the Local Union, may regard those Subcontractors as Union Subcontractors and may enter into agreement with them.

2. It shall be the duty and obligation of the Contractor, prior to subletting any portion of its work, to communicate with the Council or with the Local Union having jurisdiction over the trade or craft involved, and to ascertain whether a proposed subcontractor is a Union Subcontractor. If the Contractor shall be advised that a proposed Subcontractor is a Union Subcontractor, then the Contractor may enter into an agreement with that Subcontractor. If the Contractor shall be advised that the proposed subcontractor is not a Union Subcontractor, then the Contractor shall not enter into an agreement with that subcontractor.

ARTICLE IV. WAGES, RULES AND REGULATIONS.

1. With respect to wages, the Contractor agrees with each Local Union to pay wages to the members of that Local Union based upon the then prevailing wage rate as the page 19 } same may have been established as the result of collective bargaining.

2. The Contractor further agrees with each Local Union to abide by the rules and regulations of that Local Union.

3. The Council and the Local Unions agree that no change will be made in the wages to be paid and in their respective rules and regulations which will cause increased costs to the Contractor unless the Contractor is first consulted and agrees to the proposed change. This shall not be construed to mean that no changes shall be made without the consent of the Contractor. It is admitted by all parties concerned that from time to time changes will occur. It does mean that no change will be made which will cause the Contractor to sustain increased costs with respect to work then under contract or in progress.

ARTICLE V. JURISDICTIONAL DISPUTES.

1. The Council and the Local Unions agree to the following:

(a) The Council shall provide a means for the prompt and speedy temporary settlement of any jurisdictional dispute which may occur among the Local Unions, which temporary settlement shall be final and conclusive until such time as the dispute may be finally settled by the National Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor.

(b) The President of the Council shall promptly advise the Contractor in writing about any temporary settlement of a jurisdictional dispute, and shall also advise the Contractor in writing about any final settlement made by the National Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor.

(c) The Contractor agrees to abide by any temporary settlement made by the Council until such time as a final settlement shall have been made by the National Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, and further agrees, after a final settlement is made, to abide by same.

2. The Council and the Local Union agree that there will be no stoppage of work or strike because of a jurisdictional dispute unless the Contractor fails to discharge the obligations imposed upon it by subparagraph (c) next above.

ARTICLE VI. COOPERATION.

1. The Council and the Local Unions agree to cooperate with the Contractor and to promote its business and interests in every way possible, to do nothing that will injure the Contractor, and to urge the members of the Local Unions to put forth their best efforts to accomplish the work in hand as efficiently, expeditiously and economically as possible, all to the end that the Contractor may derive as much profit from its work as may reasonably be expected.

2. The Contractor agrees to cooperate with the Council and the Local Unions and to promote their business and interests in every way possible, and to do nothing which will injure the Council and the Local Unions.

3. It is the declared purpose and intention of the Council and its Local Unions on one hand and also of the Contractor on the other that each shall work for and promote the business and interests of the other.

ARTICLE VII. DURATION.

1. This agreement shall become effective April 15, 1947, and shall continue in full force and effect until terminated by the written notice provided for in the paragraph next below.

ANSWER INTERROGATORIES.

For answer to the summons directed by the Defendants to Plaintiff Laburnum Construction Corporation to answer certain interrogatories filed in the Clerk's Office of the Circuit Court of the City of Richmond, plaintiff Laburnum Construction Corporation answers and says:

1. (a) Q. Furnish a copy of the contract, dated October 28, 1948, between the Plaintiff and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company.

A. Attached hereto is a copy of the contract between Plaintiff and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company dated October 28, 1948.

(b) Q. What was the "cost of work" (as defined by such contract) incurred by the Plaintiff in the performance of such contract?

A. The contract between Plaintiff and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company dated October 28, 1948, provided page 72 } for the construction of a Coal Preparation Plant at the No. 1 Kentucky Mine of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company in Breathitt County, Kentucky. As defined in said contract, the "cost of work" incurred by Plaintiff in connection with the construction of said Coal Preparation Plant amounted to the sum of $251,546.90.

As additional work under said contract dated October 28, 1948, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company awarded to Plaintiff the construction of a Schoolhouse near said No. 1 Kentucky Mine. As defined in said contract, the "cost of work" incurred by Plaintiff in connection with the construction of said Schoolhouse amounted to the sum of $606.83.

(c) Q. What payments were made to the Plaintiff by Pond Creek Pocahontas Company under such contract?

A. The payments made to Plaintiff by Pond Creek Pocahontas Company under said contract dated October 28, 1948, amounted to the following:

(1) For work performed in connection with said Coal Preparation Plant, the payments amounted to the sum of $265,370.09.

(2) For work performed in connection with the construction of said Schoolhouse, the payments amounted to the sum of $637.16.

(d) Q. What was the maximum net profit the Plaintiff could have earned under this contract?

A. The maximum net profit which Plaintiff could have earned under said contract dated October 28, 1948, for work in connection with the construction of said Coal Preparation Plant was the sum of $12,000.00. With respect to the construction of said Schoolhouse and page 73 } other work in addition to said Coal Preparation Plant, there was no limitation to the net profit which Plaintiff could have earned under said contract. Such net profit, however, would have been equal to five per cent of the "cost of work".

(e) Q. How much of such net profit was the Plaintiff paid?

A. Pond Creek Pocahontas Company paid Plaintiff a fee of $12,000.00 for work performed in connection with the construction of said Coal Preparation Plant. Pond Creek Pocahontas Company paid Plaintiff for work performed in connection with the construction of said Schoolhouse a fee of $30.33, being five per cent of the "cost of work" amounting to $637.16 on the Schoolhouse.

(f) Q. What does Plaintiff estimate would have been the additional "cost of work" had it completed the work under the contract?

A. Had Plaintiff completed its work under said contract in connection with the construction of said Coal Preparation Plant, Plaintiff estimates that the additional "cost of work" on said Coal Preparation Plant would have been the sum of approximately $15,000.00. In this connection, the Plaintiff states the following:

Pond Creek Pocahontas Company had agreed to award Plaintiff considerable work in addition to said Coal Preparation Plant, a portion of which additional work was the construction of said Schoolhouse. The above estimate of $15,000.00 includes only the additional cost of completing work on said Coal Preparation Plant. It does not include the estimated cost of completing said Schoolhouse or of performing other work in addition to said Coal Preparation Plant and said Schoolhouse.

page 74 } (g) Q. What was the actual additional "cost of work" to complete the contract and when was it completed?

A. Plaintiff does not know the answer to this question.

(h) Q. When does Plaintiff estimate it would have completed the work under the contract had it not been cancelled?

A. With respect to Plaintiff's work on said Coal Preparation Plant, Plaintiff estimates it could have completed this work on or about September 1, 1949, had not work under said contract been cancelled. With respect to work under said contract in addition to the construction of said Coal Preparation Plant, which Pond Creek Pocahontas Company had agreed to award Plaintiff, Plaintiff does not know when it would have completed such additional work. Had it not been for the actions of the Defendants herein as shown in the Notice of Motion for Judgment, Plaintiff believes that it would still be working for Pond Creek Pocahontas Company at or near the site if its mines in Breathitt County, Kentucky.

2. (a) Q. Furnish a copy of the contract dated December 15, 1948, between the Plaintiff and Spring Fork Development Company.

A. Attached hereto is a copy of the contract between Plaintiff and Spring Fork Development Company dated December 15, 1948.

(b) Q. What was the "cost of work" (as defined by such contract) incurred by the Plaintiff in the performance of such contract?

page 75 } A. The contract between Plaintiff and Spring Fork Development Company dated December 15, 1948, provided for the construction of twenty-five dwellings on sites near the No. 1 Kentucky Mine of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Breathitt County, Kentucky. A. The payments made to Plaintiff by Spring Fork Development Company under such contract amounted to the sum of $41,282.05.

(d) Q. What is the maximum net profit the Plaintiff would have earned under this contract?

A. The maximum net profit which Plaintiff would have earned under said contract for work in connection with the construction of said twenty-five dwellings was the sum of $2,500.00. With respect to other work in addition to said twenty-five dwellings, there was no limitation to the net profit which Plaintiff could have earned under said contract. Such net profit, however, would have been equal to five per cent of the "cost of work".

(e) Q. How much of such net profit was the Plaintiff paid?

A. Spring Fork Development Company paid Plaintiff a fee of $1,965.81 for work performed in connection with the construction of said twenty-five dwellings.

(f) Q. What does Plaintiff estimate would have been the additional "cost of work" had it completed the work under the contract?

page 76 } A. Had Plaintiff completed its work under said contract dated December 15, 1948, in connection with the construction of said twenty-five dwellings, Plaintiff estimates that the additional "cost of work" would have been from $4,000.00 to $10,000.00 depending upon what work

Spring Fork Development Company wished to have performed. In this connection, the Plaintiff states the following:

Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, the parent corporation of Spring Fork Development Company, had agreed that considerable additional work would be awarded Plaintiff either under Plaintiff's contract with Pond Creek Pocahontas Company dated October 28, 1948, or under the Plaintiff's contract with Spring Fork Development Company dated December 15, 1948. The above estimate of from $4,000.00 to $10,000.00 includes only the additional cost of completing work on said twenty-five dwellings. It does not include the estimated cost of performing the additional work which Pond Creek Pocahontas Company had agreed to award to Plaintiff.

(g) Q. What was the actual additional "cost of work" to complete the contract and when was it completed?

A. Plaintiff does not know the answer to this question.

(h) Q. When does Plaintiff estimate it would have completed the work under the contract had it not been cancelled?

A. With respect to Plaintiff's work on said twenty-five dwellings, Plaintiff estimates it would have completed this work on or about September 1, 1949. had not work under said contract been cancelled. With respect to work under said contract in addition to the construction of said twenty-five dwellings, Plaintiff does not know when it would have completed such additional work. Had it not been for the actions of the Defendants herein as shown in the Notice of Motion for Judgment, Plaintiff believes it would page 77 } still be working for Pond Creek Pocahontas Company or Spring Fork Development Company at or near the site of the mines of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company in Breathitt County, Kentucky.

3. (a) Q. With regard to the aforementioned contracts between the Plaintiff and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, and between the Plaintiff and Spring Fork Development Company, what percentage of work under each contract was uncompleted on the date the contracts were cancelled?

A. With respect to the contract between the Plaintiff and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company dated October 28, 1948, Plaintiff estimates approximately five per cent of the work under said contract in connection with the Coal Preparation Plant was uncompleted on the date that contract was cancelled.

With respect to the contract between Plaintiff and Spring

Fork Development Company dated December 15, 1948, Plaintiff estimates approximately ten per cent of the work under said contract in connection with the twenty-five dwellings was uncompleted on the date the contract was cancelled.

4. (a) Q. What were the exact terms of the "arrangement" which the Plaintiff entered into with Paintsville, Kentucky, Carpenters Local Union No. 646, American Federation of Labor, and on what date was the "arrangement" entered into?

A. The "arrangement" between Plaintiff and Paintsville, Kentucky, Carpenters Local Union No. 646, American Federation of Labor, is shown in an agreement dated December 14, 1948, copy of which is attached hereto.

(b) Q. Was such "arrangement" reduced to writing?

A. Yes.

5. (a) Q. Was application ever made either by the Plaintiff or by Paintsville, Kentucky, Carpenters Local Union No. 646, American Federation of Labor, to the National Labor Relations Board, requesting that such Union be certified as the bargaining agent for the employees of the Plaintiff?

A. Plaintiff has not made any application to the National Labor Relations Board requesting that Paintsville, Kentucky, Carpenters Local Union No. 646, American Federation of Labor, be certified as bargaining agent for the employees of Plaintiff.

Plaintiff does not know whether Paintsville, Kentucky, Carpenters Local Union No. 646, American Federation of Labor, ever made application to the National Labor Relations Board requesting that it be certified as bargaining agent for the employees of Plaintiff.

(b) Q. Was such an application ever made with respect to Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council?

A. Plaintiff has not made any application to the National Labor Relations Board requesting that Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council be certified as bargaining agent for the employees of Plaintiff.

Plaintiff does not know whether Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council ever made application to the National Labor Relations Board requesting that said Council be certified as bargaining agent for the employees of Plaintiff.

6. (a) Q. Did the National Labor Relations Board ever certify Paintsville, Kentucky, Carpenters Local Union No.

646, American Federation of Labor, as the bargaining agent for employees of the Plaintiff, and if so, what employees of the Plaintiff were included in the bargaining unit?

A. As far as Plaintiff knows and has been advised, the National Labor Relations Board has never certified Paints-ville, Kentucky, Carpenters Local Union No. 646, American Federation of Labor, as bargaining agent for employees of Plaintiff.

(b) Q. Has Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council ever been so certified, and if so, what employees were included in the bargaining unit?

A. As far as Plaintiff knows and has been advised, the National Labor Relations Board has never certified Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council as bargaining agent for employees of Plaintiff.

7. (a) Q. On page 2 of the Notice of Motion for Judgment, it is stated: "On or about July 14, 1949, one William O. Hart, of Pikesville, Kentucky, communicated by telephone with the Plaintiff * * *". Who was the officer, agent or employee of the Plaintiff with whom Hart allegedly communicated?

A. The officer, agent or employee of Plaintiff with whom William O. Hart communicated by telephone on or about July 14, 1949, was A. Hamilton Bryan, President of Laburnum Construction Corporation.

page 80 } 8. (a) Q. Was the Plaintiff adhering to all of the terms of the contract between the Plaintiff and Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council (attached to the Notice of Motion for Judgment and marked Exhibit "A") between the dates July 14, 1949, and August 4, 1949?

A. With respect to the contract between Plaintiff and Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council (attached to the Notice of Motion for Judgment and marked Exhibit "A") Plaintiff, between the dates July 14, 1949, and August 4, 1949, was adhering to the terms of that contract in a manner satisfactory to said Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council.

9. (a) Q. Pursuant to Article VI(I) of the contract (attached to the Notice of Motion for Judgment and marked Exhibit "A"), with what "Local Unions" had the plaintiff, as of July 14, 1949, a prevailing wage rate which had been established as the result of collective bargaining, and if so, what are all the crafts and trades which were covered thereby?

A. Article VI(1) of the contract (attached to the Notice of Motion for Judgment and marked Exhibit "A") does not pertain to wage rates established as the result of collective bargaining. Plaintiff does not understand this question and therefore is unable to answer it.

10. (a) Q. Under the contract (attached to the Notice of Motion for Judgment and marked Exhibit "A"), what is the area over which the "Local Unions" have jurisdiction?

A. Plaintiff is advised that the area over which page 81 } each Local Union has jurisdiction is determined and fixed by the International Union with which it is affiliated.

11. (a) Q. With respect to all persons who were employed by the Plaintiff in the performance of the contracts with Pond Creek Pocahontas Company and Spring Fork Development Company between the dates of July 10, 1949, and August 4, 1949, what are their names; what were their addresses on August 4, 1949; what are their present addresses; in what capacity and at what rate of pay were they employed by the Plaintiff?

A. Plaintiff declines to answer this question except under order of the Court.

12. (a) Q. It is alleged on page 4 of the Notice of Motion for Judgment that "Said Hart and the mob of men headed by him were informed that workmen on said job were members of Local Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor or had made application to become members of such local unions". Who allegedly so informed Hart?

A. Plaintiff declines to answer this question except under order of the Court.

13. (a) Q. What is the name of the Kentucky State Police Officer to whom the Plaintiff allegedly appealed for assistance?

A. Plaintiff declines to answer this question except under order of the Court.

14. (a) Q. At page 14 of the Notice of Motion for Judgment, it is alleged: " * * * and further caused Plaintiff to lose other contracts for work which would have page 82 } resulted in large profits to Plaintiff." What are the contracts, and the dollar value of the work to be done thereunder, which it is alleged that the Defendants caused the Plaintiff to lose? What were the bids, if any, made by the Plaintiff on such contracts? On what basis were such bids made? What contracts, if any, is it alleged that the Defendants caused the Plaintiff to lose on which the Plaintiff did not bid?

A. On or about October 28, 1948, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company awarded to Laburnum Construction Corporation a contract dated October 28, 1948, for the construction of a Coal Preparation Plant at the No. 1 Kentucky Mine of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company in Breathitt County, Kentucky.

The work of Laburnum Construction Corporation on the Coal Preparation Plant was to be commenced on or about November 1, 1948, and was to be completed at the earliest possible date. Based on material delivery promises, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company estimated that this work could be completed by May 1, 1949.

Pond Creek Pocahontas Company advised Laburnum Construction Corporation that a large part of the work would be performed under winter conditions; that at times the roads leading to and from the job site would probably be impassable; that there were no facilities at the job site to house or feed the employees of Laburnum Construction Corporation; and that it would be necessary for Laburnum Construction Corporation to provide adequate facilities at the job site to house and feed most of its employees. Salyerspage 83 } ville, Kentucky, distant from the job site approximately twenty-five miles, was the nearest town of consequence.

When the contract dated October 28, 1948, was awarded to Laburnum Construction Corporation, Mr. R. E. Salvati, President of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Island Creek Coal Company and various associated companies, (at that time Mr. Salvati was Vice-President in charge of operations of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Island Creek Coal Company and various associated companies) said that Pond Creek Pocahontas Company had considerable work to be performed in Breathitt County, Kentucky, in addition to the construction of the Coal Preparation Plant at the No. 1 Kentucky Mine. This additional work included, among other things, 200 Houses, 10 Supervisors Houses, one Large Store, one Service Store, a Change House, a Lamp House, a Superintendent's Office, Machine Shops, a Warehouse Building, a Sand House, a Church, a Schoolhouse, a water system, and concrete foundations for a Coal Preparation Plant at the proposed No. 2 Mine (now called No. 3 mine) of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company.

Mr. Salvati said that he wanted Laburnum Construction Corporation also to handle this additional work, the first thing to be done in that connection being the construction of 25 dwellings. Work on the 25 dwellings was to be commenced promptly. Mr. Salvati said, however, that the most important thing to be done was to rush to completion at the earliest possible date work on the Coal Preparation Plant at the No. 1 Mine. The remainder of the additional work page 84 } would then follow.

With reference to the 25 dwellings, Mr. Salvati said that Pond Creek Pocahontas Company would form a subsidiary corporation which would enter into an agreement with Laburnum Construction Corporation for that work.

It was agreed with Mr. Salvati that Laburnum Construction Corporation would perform this additional work on a basis of cost plus a fee of five per cent. Mr. Salvati said that since Laburnum Construction Corporation would already have its organization, tools and equipment at the job site, it should be in a better position to perform the additional work than any other contractor. He also said that Pond Creek Pocahontas Company felt obligated to have Laburnum Construction Corporation perform the additional work because of the extremely difficult conditions under which the Coal Preparation Plant would be constructed. The additional work, for the most part, would be performed under much more favorable conditions.

Pursuant to the above agreement with Mr. Salvati, Laburnum Construction Corporation entered into a contract with Spring Fork Development Company, a wholly owned subsidiary of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, dated December 15, 1948, for the construction of said 25 dwellings. This work was to be performed on a basis of cost plus a fee of five per cent, the total fee not to exceed the sum of $2,500.00.

Also pursuant to the above agreement with Mr. Salvati,

Pond Creek Pocahontas Company awarded to Laburnum Construction Corporation a contract dated page 85 }

December 8, 1948, for the construction of a telephone line approximately eleven miles in length extending from Carver, Kentucky, to the No. 1 Mine of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company. This work was performed on a basis of cost plus a fee of five per cent.

Also pursuant to the above agreement with Mr. Salvati, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company during July, 1949, instructed Laburnum Construction Corporation to construct a Schoolhouse near the No. 1 Mine of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company. Laburnum Construction Corporation commenced work on said Schoolhouse during the week ended July 17, 1949, and was working on that project on July 26, 1949, when its work was interrupted by the actions of the Defendants herein as shown in the Notice of Motion for Judgment. The Schoolhouse was to be constructed by Laburnum Construction Corporation on the basis of cost plus a fee of five per cent.

Also pursuant to the above agreement with Mr. Salvati, during July, 1949, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company advised Laburnum Construction Corporation that it should prepare to install concrete foundations for the Coal Preparation Plant for the No. 2 Mine (now called No. 3 Mine) of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company. It was estimated that the cost of this work would amount to approximately $25,000.00. The work was to be commenced by Laburnum Construction Corporation during August, 1949, and was to be performed on a basis of cost plus a fee of five per cent. Laburnum Con-page 86 } struction Corporation did not commence work on this job, having been prevented from doing so by the actions of the Defendants herein as shown in the Notice of Motion for Judgment.

Also pursuant to the above agreement with Mr. Salvati, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company advised Laburnum Construction Corporation during July, 1949, that it should prepare to install asbestos shingles on the 25 dwellings referred to above. This work was to be commenced by Laburnum Construction Corporation during August, 1949, and was to be performed on the basis of cost plus a fee of five per cent. Laburnum Construction Corporation did not commence work on this job, having been prevented from doing so by the actions of the Defendants herein as shown in the Notice of Motion for Judgment.

After August 4, 1949, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company decided to enlarge the Coal Preparation Plant at the No. 1 Mine by constructing an addition on the rear thereof. This was additional work which, pursuant to the above agreement with Mr. Salvati, would have been performed by Laburnum Construction Corporation on a basis of cost plus five per cent. Laburnum Construction Corporation was prevented from performing this work by the actions of the Defendants herein as shown in the Notice of Motion for Judgment.

With respect to the additional work which, under the above agreement with Mr. Salvati, was to be performed by Laburnum Construction Corporation for Pond Creek Pocahontas Company in Breathitt County, Kentucky, on a basis of cost plus a fee of five per cent, this additional work page 87 } amounted to a sum in excess of $600,000.00. Laburnum Construction Corporation would have earned a net job profit of over $30,000.00 on this additional work. The actions of the Defendants herein as shown in the Notice of Motion for Judgment destroyed the opportunity of Laburnum Construction Corporation to perform the additional work and to earn profits therefrom.

A tabulation of this additional work is as follows:

Machine Shop	$ 60,000.00
Lamp House, Supt. Office and Oil House	12,000.00
Warehouse Building	25,000.00
200 Houses	300,000.00
10 Supervisors' Houses	60,000.00
1 Large Store	75,000.00
1 Service Store	15,000.00
Heating Plant for Tipple at Mine No. 1	23,000.00
Tipple Shop	3,000.00
Foundations for Tipple at Mine No. 2 (now called Mine No. 3)	25,000.00
Sand House	7,000.00
Water System	12,500.00
	$617,500.00

During the years 1947, 1948 and 1949 Pond Creek Pocahontas Company and Island Creek Coal Company and their associated or subsidiary companies awarded to Laburnum Construction Corporation twelve separate contracts for construction work in the States of Kentucky and West Virginia amounting to a total of more than $650,000.00. Laburnum Construction Corporation earned a substantial net profit on these jobs. Pond Creek Pocahontas Company and Island Creek Coal Company, though separate corporations, have a common management.

Since August 4, 1949, the date as of which the two contracts dated October 28, 1948, and December 15, 1948, page 88 } were terminated, no other contract for additional work has been awarded to Laburnum Construction Corporation by either Pond Creek Pocahontas Company or Island Creek Coal Company or their associated or subsidiary companies. The business relationship and connection which Laburnum Construction Corporation had built up with Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Island Creek Coal Company and their associated and subsidiary companies had resulted in substantial net job profits to Laburnum Construction Corporation. This business relationship and connection would have continued to result in substantial profits to Laburnum Construction Corporation. This business relationship and connection has been completely destroyed by the actions of the Defendants herein as shown in the Notice of Motion for Judgment. This has resulted in a large loss to Laburnum Construction Corporation.

WHEREAS, the Contractor is willing to undertake such work;

NOW, THEREFORE, THIS AGREEMENT WITNESSETH:

That for and in consideration of the premises, the parties hereto do hereby agree as follows:

Contractor shall furnish labor, supervision and services, together with all construction tools and equipment, supplies and materials not furnished by Pond Creek, necessary to perform the work in accordance with designs and specifications furnished or to be furnished by Pond Creek to Contractor.

It is understood that Pond Creek intends to furnish to Contractor at the job site materials, supplies, tools and equipment necessary for the work. Pond Creek, however, may request Contractor to furnish any of these items, or page 93 } portions thereof, and in that event Contractor shall undertake to comply with such request as promptly as possible.

With respect to subcontracts made and purchase orders issued by Contractor for necessary materials, supplies, tools, equipment and services to be furnished by it, Contractor agrees that, subject to prior approval by Pond Creek as provided in Article V, all such subcontracts and purchase orders shall be made or issued in Contractor's own name, title to materials to pass to Pond Creek upon delivery at site of work, excepting, however, equipment, tools and other items brought to site on rental basis.

ARTICLE II.

CONSIDERATION: Pond Creek agrees to pay the Cost of the Work as defined in the "Statement of Cost of Work" attached hereto and made a part of this agreement. In addition, Pond Creek agrees to pay Contractor a sum equal to five (5) per cent of the Cost of Work, Items (a) to (r), inclusive, in the "Statement of Cost of Work", as its fee for doing the work covered in Article I of this Agreement, the total fee, however, not to exceed the sum of $12,000.00. The fee shall be paid in weekly installments, based upon amount of work done, as evidenced by weekly billings.

In addition to payment for the Cost of the Work to be performed by Contractor, Pond Creek shall pay Contractor the actual traveling and living costs (but not salaries) of Contractor's main office and executive personnel when traveling to and from and while present at the job site in furtherance of the work, but not to exceed, however, the sum of $2,500.00 for the first six months of the duration of the job, and not to exceed thereafter an amount equal to two (2) per cent of such straight time labor costs as may be incurred after that six months period.

ARTICLE III.

ARTICLE IV.

TIME OF COMPLETION: Work at the site shall be started on or about November 1, 1948, and every effort shall be made to complete the work at the earliest possible date. Pond Creek states that present delivery promises for materials indicate that this work can be completed by May 1, 1949.

Pond Creek agrees that Contractor shall not be liable to Pond Creek for failure of or delay in performance hereof, when such failure or delay is occasioned by act of God, or the public enemy, fire, explosion, perils of the sea, page 94 } flood, drought, war, riots sabotage, vandalism, accident, embargo government priority, requisition or allocation or other action of any governmental authority, or any circumstance of like or different character beyond Contractor's reasonable control, or by interruption of or delay on transportation, shortage or failure of supply of material or equipment, failure of manufacturers or suppliers to make delivery or complete the installation of equipment to be furnished by them.

And provided further, if Pond Creek shall be in default with respect to any of the terms or conditions hereof, Contractor, at its option, may defer further performance hereunder until such default be remedied (in which event the Agreement period shall be deemed extended for a period of time equal to that during which performance shall be so deferred), or, without prejudice to any other legal remedy, may decline further performance of this Agreement. In the event of a postponement or declination of performance hereunder, on account of Pond Creek's default, Pond Creek shall reimburse Contractor for all damage, cost or expense suffered by it on account of such postponement and or declination.

ARTICLE V.

APPROVALS REQUIRED: Pond Creek designates Mr. W. A. Haslam as its representative to act for it in connection with this Agreement. He shall be available as often as may be necessary for inspecting and approving the work, or authorizing changes therein, and for approving currently all purchases, payrolls, invoices, and other records of Contractor.

Contractor shall procure the representative's written approval before entering into any single subcontract involving work on the property of Pond Creek, or before issuing any single purchase order for a sum in excess of $500.00.

The representative may delegate his work and authority to others as he may desire, confirming such action in writing to Contractor.

ARTICLE VI.

CANCELLATION: Contractor agrees that Pond Creek may stop the work at any stage during its progress and terminate Contractor's employment thereon upon ten (10) day's written notice. In case of such termination, Contractor shall receive, under the terms of this Agreement, payment for all expenditures made and obligations incurred which are chargeable as Cost of the Work; the fee for the portion of the work performed; and such amount as may be due Contractor for actual traveling and living costs of its main office and executive personnel.

ARTICLE VII.

COOPERATION: It is the intent of this Agreement that Pond Creek and Contractor shall cooperate, and page 95 } use every effort to execute the work in a manner consistent with the interests of Pond Creek and in accordance with Pond Creek's requests and approvals.

ARTICLE VIII.

COMPLIANCE WITH LAW: Contractor shall comply with all local, state, Federal, or other public laws applicable to the work; provided, however, that Pond Creek shall obtain all permits which may be required in connection with the performance of this Agreement.

ARTICLE IX.

LIENS: In the event that Contractor allows any indebtedness to accumulate for labor and/or materials, which indebtedness has become or may become a lien upon the property of Pond Creek, or which may become a claim against Pond Creek, Contractor, upon receipt of written request from Pond Creek, shall pay the same or cause the same to be dissolved, or discharged by giving a bond or otherwise, and in case Contractor fails so to do, Pond Creek may withhold from any moneys due Contractor an amount sufficient to indemnify Pond Creek until such indebtedness is paid.

ARTICLE X.

INSURANCE: Contractor covenants that, during the progress of the work described herein, it will comply with the laws of Kentucky respecting Workmen's Compensation Insurance; and will procure and maintain during the progress of the work Public Liability and Property Damage Insurance satisfactory to Pond Creek and also such other insurance as may be required by Pond Creek. Prior to the commencement of work hereunder, Contractor will furnish proof to Pond Creek that it has complied with the above requirements.

Pond Creek shall carry and maintain during the progress of the work adequate Builders' Risk Insurance with extended coverage, protecting the work and materials at the job site against loss, which insurance shall be for its benefit as well as for the benefit of the Contractor.

ARTICLE XI.

INDEMNIFICATION: Contractor shall indemnify and save harmless Pond Creek from and against all loss, damage, expense or liability for injury (including death) to persons or property that may occur or may be alleged to have occurred in the course of the performance of this Agreement by the Contractor; provided, however, that Contractor's liability hereunder shall not exceed the monetary limits of the Contractual Liability Insurance Contractor is required to carry by Pond Creek.

ARTICLE XII.

ASSIGNMENT: This Agreement shall be binding upon and inure to the benefit of the successors and assigns of the parties hereto.

ARTICLE XIII.

Most of the persons named above were employed by Plaintiff at the site of the work only a portion of the time between the dates July 10, 1949, and August 4, 1949.

page 121 } With reference to addresses, the above listed addresses are the only addresses which Plaintiff is able to furnish for the persons in question.

12. (a) Q. It is alleged on page 4 of the Notice of Motion for Judgment that "Said Hart and the mob of men headed by him were informed that workmen on said job were members of Local Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor or had made application to become members of such local unions". Who allegedly so informed Hart?

A. When Hart and his mob went to the coal tippie on July 26, 1949, they demanded that the employees of Plaintiff immediately become members of United Construction Workers, and said that such employees would not be permitted to continue their work unless they became members of United Construction Workers. Various employees of Plaintiff informed Hart and his mob that they were already members of Local Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and showed Hart and his mob their Union cards signifying such membership. Some of the employees of Plaintiff had a heated discussion with Hart and his mob about the right of the latter to interfere with the employees of Plaintiff in their work and to demand that they join United Construction Workers. During this discussion Hart and his mob were informed that workmen of Plaintiff were members of Local Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Shortly page 122 } thereafter on the same day, July 26, 1949, A. Hamilton Bryan, President of Plaintiff, met Hart and some of his mob at or near the job site. Bryan informed Hart and the persons with Hart that the employees of Plaintiff were members of Local Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor or had made application to become members of such Local Unions. Hart stated that the persons employed by Plaintiff as laborers were not organized. Bryan then told Hart that all persons employed by Plaintiff as laborers has made application to join Salyersville, Kentucky, Carpenters' Local Union No. 697, American Federation of Labor, as Carpenter Helpers. Hart stated that this made no difference; that Plaintiff was working in United Mine Worker territory, and that they "were taking over", and that it would be necessary for Plaintiff to sign an agreement with United Construction Workers and to pay laborers at a rate of $1.36 per hour and carpenters at a rate of $1.86 per hour.

13. (a) Q. What is the name of the Kentucky State Police Officer to whom the Plaintiff allegedly appealed for assistance?

A. On July 27, 1949, at about 12:00 o'clock, noon, A. Hamilton Bryan, President of Plaintiff, and C. M. Delinger, Superintendent for Plaintiff, saw Homer Howard, a Kentucky State Policeman, in Salyersville, Kentucky. Delinger introduced Bryan to Howard. Bryan told Howard what had happened at the job site in Breathitt County the previous day and also that day, i. e., on July 26, and 27, 1949. Howard said he had heard about it. Bryan told Howard that some of the employees of Plaintiff were afraid that they might be shot by persons hiding in the mountains and using high powered rifles. Howard was asked if he thought there was any danger of this happening. Howard said that he was sure that there was such a danger. Howard was asked if he had ever seen any one shot that way, and he replied "I have not only seen them shot that way, but have picked them up after they were shot". Howard said that he had just gotten out of a hospital after being shot himself. He showed Bryan and Dilinger some of his scars from bullet wounds. Bryan asked Howard if he would go to the job site to preserve order in case of any trouble. Bryan said that the presence of Howard at the job would help the morale of the employees of the Plaintiff. Howard said that he would not go to the job site because he had orders not to take part in any labor dispute except on express instructions from the Governor of Kentucky.

20. (a) Q. What is each and every item comprising the Plaintiff's alleged damages of $500,000.00?

A. With respect to the actual and punitive damages in the sum of $500,000.00 claimed by Plaintiff, a statement showing the approximate amounts of the items comprising these damages is as follows:

Damage from loss of fee on contract for construction of 25 Dwellings	$ 534.19
Damage from loss of fee on work in connection with construction of Schoolhouse	319.67
Damage from loss of fee in connection with work for installation of Asbestos Shingles on said 25 Dwellings	250.00
Damage from loss of fee in connection with work for installation of Concrete Foundations for Coal Preparation Plant for No. 2 (now called No. 3 Mine)	1,250.00
Damage from loss of fee on other additional work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, amounting to approximately $542,500.00 which Pond Creek Pocahontas Company had agreed to have Laburnum Construction Corporation handle on a basis of cost-plus a fee of five (5) per cent	27,125.00
Damage by reason of the destruction of the business relationship and connection which Laburnum Construction Corporation had built up and developed with Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Island Creek Coal Company and their associated and subsidiary companies	120,000.00
Damage to Plaintiff's reputation	100,000.00

GROUND'S OF OBJECTION TO INTERROGATORIES ADDRESSED TO UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA BY THE COMPLAINANT.

(1) The interrogatories as a whole and in special categories violate the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and the Statutes of Virginia, and are contrary to the decisions of the United States Supreme Court in that they constitute a fishing expedition and impose an impossible task on the defendant.

(2) A large percentage of the questions asked are irrelevant and immaterial, and the periods for which information is asked is likewise irrelevant and immaterial.

(3) That the extensive duplication of questions imposes an undue burden on the defendant.

(4) That a large percentage of questions call for interpretation of written instruments and is an invasion of the functions of the court.

page 133 } (5) That the answers to certain categories of questions are known to, or information necessary to answer same is in the possession of, complainant.

(6) That certain categories are specifically intended to create prejudice and the interrogatories as a whole are directed to creating prejudice and to confuse the jury.

GROUNDS OF DEFENSE.

First Defense.

(1) The defendants deny the allegations contained in the second unnumbered paragraph beginning on the first page of the Notice of Motion for Judgment

(2) With respect to the unnumbered paragraph beginning on page 2 of the Notice of Motion for Judgment, the defendants deny that William O. Hart was, or is, an officer of United Construction Workers, affiliated with United Mine Workers of America. Defendants deny that William O. Hart said Mr. David Hunter was an officer of District 50 United Mine Workers of America, and deny that David Hunter was such an officer. The defendants deny that William O. Hart stated to the agent of the plaintiff over the telephone that he "understood that Pond Creek Pocahontas Company intended to award to the plaintiff considerable additional page 134 } work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, which would include, among other things, approximately 500 dwellings, stores and other buildings." The defendants deny that William O. Hart stated "that the territory in which this work was being performed was the territory of the United Construction Workers." The defendants deny that William O. Hart stated "that he intended 'to take over' all of the plaintiff's work for the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company in Breathitt County, Kentucky." The defendants deny that William O. Hart stated "that the United Construction Workers had closed down a job of Beckett Construction Company at Wheelwright, Kentucky." The defendants deny that William O. Hart stated that "and unless the plaintiff agreed to recognize immediately United Construction Workers as the sole bargaining agent for the employees of plaintiff on said projects in Breathitt County, Kentucky, that he, William O. Hart, as Field Representative and an officer of United Construction Workers, District 50, would close down the work of plaintiff in Breathitt County, Kentucky."

(3) With respect to the unnumbered paragraph beginning on page 3 of the Notice of Motion for Judgment, the defendants deny that "the superintendent in charge of the works of the plaintiff in Breathitt County, Kentucky, learned that the said William O. Hart had arranged to bring a large group of men to the job site of the plaintiff in Breathitt County, Kentucky, at about noon on the following day, 'July 26, 1949' ' for the purpose of forcibly stopping the work of plaintiff on said job," and defendants deny that William O. Hart had arranged to bring a large group of men to the page 136 } job site of the plaintiff in Breathitt County, Kentucky, at about noon on the following day, July 26, 1949, or at any other time for the purpose of forcibly stopping the work of the plaintiff on said job. The defendants deny that "the said superintendent was also informed that the said group of men with said Hart would be armed," and deny that it was ever intended that the said group of men with said Hart would be armed and they deny that they were, in fact, ever armed. Defendants deny there were any threats.
 The defendants deny that the group of men accompanying William O. Hart constituted a mob and the defendants deny that the group of men accompanying William O. Hart numbered as many as 75 men. The defendants deny that William O. Hart acted as an officer of United Construction Workers, or District 50, or as a Field Representative of District 50.
 The defendants deny that the plaintiff inquired of said Hart as to his authority to interfere with and prevent plaintiff from continuing its work. The defendants deny that said Hart said "he was acting under the orders of Tom (Thomas) Rainey and that he was carrying out Rainey's orders." The defendants deny that said Tom (Thomas) Rainey "is authorized to give orders for and on behalf of United Mine Workers of America to said District 50 and United Construction Workers, and the said Hart." The defendants again deny that the group of men accompanying Hart constituted a mob and they deny that such persons harangued workmen employed by the plaintiff with threats and abuses, and they deny that these persons then demanded that workmen employed by plaintiff immediately became members of United Construction Workers. The defendants deny that said Hart used violent language to workmen employed by the plaintiff. The defendants deny that Hart said "to these men that they would not be permitted to continue their work unless page 137 } they became members of United Construction Workers." The defendants again deny that the group of men accompanying Hart constituted a mob and they deny that such persons were informed that "workmen on said job were members of local unions affiliated with American Federation of Labor, or had made application to become members of such local unions." The defendants deny that "the employees on the job promptly refused to become members of said United Construction Workers, and defendants again deny that the group of men accompanying William O. Hart constituted a mob. The defendants deny that William O. Hart was ever an officer of United Construction Workers, or of District 50, or that he acted as a Field Representative of District 50. The defendants deny that the group of men accompanied by William O. Hart "swarmed around most of the laborers on said job and demanded that these laborers sign application blanks to become members of United Construction Workers." The defendants deny that any of the laborers on said job "signed application blanks to become members of United Construction Workers under duress since they feared they would be injured or killed by the persons accompanying Hart if they refused to sign such cards." The defendants deny that the persons accompanying William O. Hart constituted a mob, and the defendants deny that any of the persons accompanying said Hart had been drinking or were intoxicated, or seemingly intoxicated, or were carrying pistols or guns. The defendants deny that any employees saw the outline of pistol handles or bullet cylinders concealed under the shirts of, or in the pockets of some of the men page 138 } accompanying said Hart, and that the group of men accompanying said Hart constituted a mob; and that pistol shots were heard while the group of men accompanied by Hart were approaching the said coal tippie. The defendants deny that the group of men accompanying said Hart constituted a mob. The defendants deny that Hart violently addressed a group of plaintiff's employees. The defendants deny that "said Hart then again emphatically and violently affirmed that he and his mob had come to the job for the purpose of stopping the plaintiff's men from working unless they joined United Construction Workers." The defendants deny that "the said Hart further stated that excepting some few laborers, plaintiff's employees had refused to join United Construction Workers and that the employees who had not joined his (Harts) union would not be permitted to work." The defendants deny that the group of men accompanying Hart constituted a mob. The defendants deny that Hart stated "that he and his mob were establishing a picket line and that they were prepared to use all force necessary to hold the picket line and prevent the employees of plaintiff from working" and again deny there was a mob. The defendants deny that "the said Hart further stated that the United Construction Workers intended to see that the plaintiff's men did not work and that if anyone did not believe this, he, the said Hart, would bring to the job 300 tough men from Beaver Creek, Kentucky, and that these men would come 'rough' and that they would kick the plaintiff's men off the job." The defendants deny that the group of men accompanying William O. Hart constituted a mob. The defendants deny the last sentence of this paragraph.

page 139 } (4) With respect to the first unnumbered paragraph on page 6 of the Notice of Motion for Judgment the defendants deny all of the allegations contained in such paragraph.

(5) With respect to the second unnumbered paragraph beginning on page 6 of the Notice of Motion for Judgment, the defendants deny that on or about July 27, 1949, many of the employees of the plaintiff returned to their work. The defendants deny that on or about July 27, 1949, United Construction Workers had any "spotters". The defendants deny that H. G. Robinson represented himself to be an officer of United Construction Workers. The defendants deny that the employees of the plaintiff "refused to return to work for the reason that the men had been informed in the event they undertook to work more than 100 United Construction Workers would come upon the job and force them to stop and that possibly something might happen to them if they returned to work on the tippie." The defendants deny that anything might have happened to them if they returned to work on the tipple. The defendants deny that "It was also rumored that certain of the mob were hiding in the hills with rifles and would shoot any of the men who might return to work." The defendants deny that "shortly thereafter, all of the employees of the plaintiff left the said work because of said threats and rumors and have not since returned to their work. The plaintiff in the meantime had appealed to a Kentucky State Police Officer for assistance, but had received no adequate assistance to maintain law and order upon the said works. The Kentucky State Police Officer knew of the disturbance page 140 } but stated that he had orders not to take part in any such disturbance. The said state policeman stated that he was convinced there was real danger to the men should they return to their work, and further stated that "I have not only seen them shot that way, but have picked them up after they were shot." The defendants deny that approximately 250 persons attended a meeting of the United Construction Workers on or about August 1, 1949, at a place known as "Tiptop". The defendants deny "the said Mr. William O. Hart at that meeting again insisted upon preventing the plaintiff from proceeding with its work under said contracts in Breathitt County, Kentucky." The defendants deny the allegations contained in the last two sentences of this paragraph.

(6) With respect to the unnumbered paragraph beginning on page 8 of the Notice of Motion for Judgment the defendants deny all of the allegations in such paragraph through the allegation "he then threatened the men with bodily harm if they attempted to go to work." The defendants deny that Mr. Davis said "he was very sympathetic with people in plaintiff's position, but that it was caught between two big unions and he would not, although urgently requested so to do by plaintiff, direct the said Mr. Hunter, or the said Hart not to disturb or interfere with the employees of the plaintiff." The defendants deny that Hart agreed to attend on August 2, 1949, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., a meeting upon condition that the plaintiff would not attempt to perform any work until said meeting. The defendants deny all of the remaining allegations in this paragraph beginning on page 9 of the Notice of Motion for Judgment with the sentence page 141 } "One of the representatives of the American Federation of Labor asked the question "Do you want to wait until somebody is killed before you do something?"', except the statement "While the meeting was in progress, the representatives of American Federation of Labor refused to meet with the said Hart."

(7) With respect to the first unnumbered paragraph beginning on page 10 of the Notice of Motion for Judgment, the defendants deny that Exhibits "B" and "C" said that the contracts were cancelled "because of plaintiff's inability to proceed with said work."

(9) With respect to the unnumbered paragraph beginning on page 12, defendants deny that the Rules of District 50 provide that sub-districts may be set up by said District 50. They deny that District 50 has caused to be set up a number of sub-districts among which is the United Construction Workers. These defendants deny that United Construction Workers were organized by and pursuant to the direction and control of District 50. Defendants deny that the by-laws page 142 } or rules adopted by United Construction Workers must not be inconsistent with the rules and by-laws of District 50. They deny that "a portion of said dues after payment to United Construction Workers is transferred to District 50 and to United Mine Workers of America."

(10) With respect to the first unnumbered paragraph beginning on page 13, defendants deny that David Hunter or William O. Hart was, or is, a duly authorized representative of United Mine Workers of America. These defendants deny that "The said United Construction Workers is and was at all times hereinbefore mentioned, the agent of United Mine Workers of America, and of said District 50, and all of the acts of said William O. Hart and his mob, and the acts of the said United Construction Workers in and about their efforts unlawfully and maliciously to prevent the plaintiff from continuing its work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, were duly authorized, ratified and confirmed by said United Construction Workers, by said District 50, and by said United Mine Workers of America as their own acts jointly and severally," and again deny that the group of men accompanying William O. Hart constituted a mob.

(11) With respect to the last unnumbered paragraph beginning on page 13, these defendants deny that an officer of United Construction Workers is domiciled and has his office in the said City of Richmond, and also deny that an officer of District 50 is domiciled and has his office in the City of Richmond.

(12) With respect to the unnumbered paragraph beginning on page 14, the defendants admit that William page 143 } O. Hart, David Hunter and Thomas Davis were agents of United Construction Workers and of District 50. The defendants deny all other allegations contained in this paragraph.

Second Defense.

The supposed cause of action arose in Kentucky and the substantive law governing the case is the law of Kentucky. The provisions of the Kentucky Revised Statutes of 1948 (4th Biennial Edition) §336.130 give the right to strike, the right to engage in peaceful picketing, and the right to assemble collectively for peaceful purposes.

Third Defense.

The plaintiff did not suffer any injuries or damages.

Fourth Defense.

The plaintiff's injuries and damages, if any, are not actionable for the reason that they are the result of peaceful picketing in the course of a lawful strike in a labor dispute.

Fifth Defense.

The plaintiff's injuries and damages, if any, are not actionable for the reason that they are uncertain, remote, speculative, and contingent.

Sixth Defense.

The plaintiff is not entitled to any punitive damages for the reason that under the law of Kentucky no defendant and no person for whose conduct the defendants, or any page 144 } of them, are legally responsible, has been guilty of wantonness, oppressiveness, recklessness, or of such malice as implies a spirit of mischief or gross indifference to the welfare or civil rights of others.

Seventh Defense.

The plaintiff's injuries and damages, if any, are not actionable for the reason that they were not caused by the defendants or persons for whose conduct the defendants, or any of them, are legally responsible

Eighth Defense.

The plaintiff's injuries and damages, if any, are not actionable for the reason that they are the result of the exercise by the defendants, and the persons for whom they are legally responsible, of their rights under the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

FURTHER ANSWER OF LABURNUM CONSTRUCTION CORPORATION TO SUMMONS OF THE DEFEND-ANTS TO ANSWER INTERROGATORIES.

For further answer to the summons directed by the Defendants to the Plaintiff, Laburnum Construction Corporation, to answer certain interrogatories filed in the Clerk's Office of the Circuit Court of the City of Richmond, Plaintiff answers and says:

14. Pursuant to the request of the Defendants that the Plaintiff make a further and more complete answer to Question No. 14 in the interrogatories filed by the Defendants in said Clerk's Office, the Plaintiff makes this further and supplemental answer.

Prior to October 28, 1948, Laburnum Construction Corporation was advised by representatives of Island Creek Coal Company and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company that they wished Laburnum Construction Corporation to handle the building program which those companies had in West Virginia. This program included the construction of stores, a lunch room, a beauty shop, a warehouse, churches, theaters, a community house and other work.

page 203 } Laburnum Construction Corporation was requested to prepare plans and specifications for the work covered by this building program and to submit them to representatives of Island Creek Coal Company and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company for approval, together with estimates of the cost of the work.

Under date of September 3, 1948, C. V. White, Real Estate Agent of Island Creek Coal Company and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, wrote a letter to Laburnum Construction Corporation regarding this building program. A copy of this letter is attached hereto.

On or about October 28, 1948, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company awarded to Laburnum Construction Corporation a contract dated October 28, 1948, for the construction of a Coal Preparation Plant at the No. 1 Mine of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company in Breathitt County, Kentucky.

When the contract dated October 28, 1948, was awarded to Laburnum Construction Corporation, R. E. Salvati, President of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Island Creek Coal Company and various associated companies (at that time Mr. Salvati was Vice-President in charge of operations of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Island Creek Coal Company and various associated companies) said that Pond Creek Pocahontas Company had considerable work to be performed in Breathitt County, Kentucky, in addition to the construction of the Coal Preparation Plant at the No. 1 Mine. This additional work included, among other things, 200 Houses, 10 Supervisors' Houses, one large Store, one Service Store, a Change House, a Lamp House, a Superintendent's Office, Machine Shops, a Warehouse Building, a Sand House, a Church, a Schoolhouse, a water system and concrete foundations for a Coal Preparation Plant at the proposed No. 2 Mine (new called No. 3 mine) of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company. The estimated cost of this additional work was $617,500.00.

Mr. Salvati discussed this additional work with page 204 } Laburnum Construction Corporation and it was agreed that Laburnum Construction Corporation would handle same on a basis of cost plus a fee of five per cent. This was a part of the consideration which Laburnum Construction Corporation would receive for constructing the Coal Preparation Plant at the No. 1 Mine under the contract dated October 28, 1948. Mr. Salvati stated that Pond Creek Pocahontas Company felt obligated to have Laburnum Construction Corporation perform this additional work because of the extremely difficult conditions under which the Coal Preparation Plant would be constructed. The additional work, for the most part, would be constructed under much more favorable conditions.

Pursuant to the agreement with Mr. Salvati regarding this additional work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company from time to time awarded certain other contracts and jobs to Laburnum Construction Corporation. One of these contracts was a contract between Laburnum Construction Corporation and Spring Fork Development Company (a wholly owned subsidiary of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company) dated December 15, 1948, for the construction of 25 dwellings.

A full statement regarding this additional work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, is set out in a previous answer filed by Laburnum Construction Corporation to Question No. 14.

As alleged in the Notice of Motion for Judgment, the said contracts dated October 28, 1948, and December 15, 1948, were terminated by Pond Creek Pocahontas Company and Spring Fork Development Company, respectively, on August 4, 1949. Between September 6, 1947, and August 4, 1949, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Island Creek Coal Company and their associated or subsidiary companies awarded to Laburnum Construction Corporation twelve separate contracts for construction work in the States of Kentucky and page 205 } West Virginia amounting to a total of more than $650,000.00. Laburnum Construction Corporation earned a substantial net profit on these jobs. Pond Creek Pocahontas Company and Island Creek Coal Company, though separate corporations, have a common management.

Since August 4, 1949, Laburnum Construction Corporation has submitted proposals to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company and Island Creek Coal Company for work in West Virginia and Kentucky. None of these proposals, however, have been accepted. A statement regarding these proposals is as follows:

(a) On September 5, 1949, Laburnum Construction Corporation submitted a proposal to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company to furnish labor and materials necessary to install a heating plant in connection with the Coal Preparation Plant at the No. 1 Kentucky Mine for the lump sum of $25,595.00.

Laburnum Construction Corporation was not awarded a contract for this work.

(b) On September 7, 1949, Laburnum Construction Corporation submitted a proposal to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company to furnish labor and materials necessary to construct a Store, two 6-room frame dwellings and thirteen 5-room frame dwellings at Evanston, Kentucky, near the No. 1 Kentucky Mine in Breathitt County, Kentucky, all for the lump sum of $205,047.00. The proposal provided that Pond Creek Pocahontas Company would carry and maintain adequate insurance protecting the work and materials at the job sites against loss, damage or destruction resulting from vandalism and acts of mischief, malicious or otherwise, and that this insurance would be for its benefit as well as for the benefit of Laburnum Construction Corporation. The proposal further provided that if a contract should be awarded to Laburnum Construction Corporation, it intended to use craft labor employees affiliated with the A. F. of L.

Laburnum Construction Corporation was not awarded a contract for this work.

(c) On September 29, 1949, Laburnum Construction Corporation submitted a proposal to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company to construct an Addition to a Store Building at Bartley, West Virginia, on a basis of cost plus a fee of eight per cent. Laburnum Construction Corporation estimated that the cost of this work would amount to $28,877.00. There were, however, no drawings and specifications for this job.

Laburnum Construction Corporation also offered to perform this work on a lump sum basis of $28,877.00; provided, however, drawings and specifications should be prepared so that there would be no misunderstanding as to what the price included.

page 206 } Laburnum Construction Corporation did not receive a contract for the work covered by that proposal.

(d) On or about November 4, 1949, Laburnum Construction Corporation submitted a proposal to Island Creek Coal Company to construct a Community Building near Ragland or Delbarton, West Virginia, for a lump sum of $94,359.00.

Laburnum Construction Corporation was thereafter advised that this proposal would not be acted on because Island Creek Coal Company had decided to make considerable changes in the building and that it would be necessary to revise the drawings and specifications.

(e) On November 23, 1949, Laburnum Construction Corporation submitted another proposal to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company to construct an Addition to the Store at Bartley, West Virginia, for the lump sum of $37,308.00. The work to be performed was considerably different from the work covered by the proposal submitted by Laburnum Construction Corporation dated September 29, 1949.

As of November 23, 1949, Laburnum Construction Corporation was in the course of constructing a Boiler Plant at Bartley, West Virginia, for Pond Creek Pocahontas Company. Representatives of United Mine Workers of America on or about November 10, 1949, protested to representatives of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company against Pond Creek Pocahontas Company permitting Laburnum Construction Corporation to construct the Boiler Plant with A. F. of L. labor. These representatives of United Mine Workers of America said that all work in, near or in connection with coal mines must be performed by workers who were members of United Mine Workers of America. They advised the representatives of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company that unless this matter was straightened within five days, the miners employed by Pond Creek Pocahontas Company at the No. 1 Tipple at Bartley, West Virginia, would stop work.

Laburnum Construction Corporation did not receive a contract for the construction of the Addition to the Store at Bartley, West Virginia, in accordance with the proposal dated November 23, 1949.

(f) On December 29, 1949, Laburnum Construction Corporation submitted a proposal to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company to construct a proposed Service Station at Bartley, West Virginia, on a basis of cost plus eight per cent. It was estimated that the cost of this work would amount to $5,596.00.

Laburnum Construction Corporation did not receive a contract for the work covered by its proposal dated December 29, 1949.

(g) On or about January 16, 1950, Laburnum Construction Corporation submitted a proposal to Island Creek Coal Company to construct a Main Office Building, near Ragland or Delbarton, West Virginia, for the lump sum of $28,012.00.

Laburnum Construction Corporation did not receive a contract for this work. A contract for same was awarded by Island Creek Coal Company to R. H. Hamill Company, of Huntington, West Virginia. The work of R. H. Hamill Company on this job was interrupted by representatives of District 50 and United Construction Workers, and R. H. Hamill Company was unable to complete same. This work was taken over and completed by Frederick Engineering Company, a contractor which had an agreement with United Construction Workers.

(h) During April and May, 1950, Laburnum Construction Corporation was preparing and had substantially completed an estimate of the cost of constructing a Church and a Recreation Building for Island Creek Coal Company near Ragland or Delbarton, West Virginia. Laburnum Construction Corporation intended to submit a proposal for this work during May, 1950.

Just prior to the time when Laburnum Construction Corporation intended to submit this proposal, it learned that the work of R. H. Hamill Company in connection with the Office Building near Ragland or Delbarton, West Virginia, had been interrupted by representatives of District 50 and United Construction Workers. In view of this, Laburnum Construction Corporation decided that, before submitting a proposal for the Church and the Recreation Building, it should investigate what had occurred in connection with the work of R. H. Hamill Company on the Office Building.

On May 15, 1950, a representative of Laburnum Construction Corporation went to the office of A. D. Hunter, Regional Director of District 50 and United Construction Workers, in Pikeville, Kentucky. Mr. Hunter was informed that Laburnum Construction Corporation wished to submit a proposal to construct a Church Building and a Recreation Building for Island Creek Coal Company near Ragland or Delbarton, West Virginia, and that it would like to have an understanding with Mr. Hunter that if Laburnum Construction Corporation obtained a contract for that work, neither United Construction Workers nor District 50 would interfere with same and intimidate the workers of Laburnum Construction Corporation as was done in the case of the work in Breathitt County. Mr. Hunter was informed that if Laburnum Construction Corporation performed the work near Ragland or Delbarton, it would do so with A. F. of L. labor.

Mr. Hunter said that he would not agree to this; that Mingo County, West Virginia, was the territory of page 208 } United Construction Workers; and that the A. F. of L. had no business coming in there. Mr. Hunter said that if Laburnum Construction Corporation obtained additional work in Mingo County, West Virginia, Paintsville, Kentucky, or elsewhere in his area, he would attempt to organize the laborers and other workers of Laburnum Construction Corporation as was done in connection with the work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, and that Laburnum Construction Corporation would be expected to make an agreement with United Construction Workers.

Mr. Hunter was also asked about the work of R. H. Hamill Company on the Office Building near Ragland or Delbarton, West Virginia. He confirmed the fact that representatives of District 50 and United Construction Workers had stopped the work of R. H. Hamill Company on that job; that R. H. Hamill Company had not continued with the work; and that the job had been taken over by Frederick Engineering Company which had an agreement with United Construction Workers.

On the following day, May 16, 1950, a representative of Laburnum Construction Corporation reported to Mr. R. E. Salvati, President of Island Creek Coal Company and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, the above conversation with Mr. A. D. Hunter which occurred on May 15, 1950.

Mr. Salvati was told that it would not be possible for Laburnum Construction Corporation to construct the Church and the Recreation Building near Ragland or Delbarton, West Virginia, unless a sufficient number of guards should be brought in to protect the work while under construction and also to protect the employees of Laburnum Construction Corporation while performing the work. It was pointed out to Mr. Salvati that unless a sufficient number of guards were on hand, the employees of Laburnum Construction Corporation would be driven from their work as was done in the case of the job in Breathitt County, Kentucky, and that the work under construction might be destroyed by fire or page 209 } dynamite. The representative of Laburnum Construction Corporation said that it was not possible to estimate the cost involved in furnishing a sufficient number of guards to protect the work, and asked Mr. Salvati if Island Creek Coal Company would furnish the guards.

The representative of Laburnum Construction Corporation also informed Mr. Salvati that Laburnum Construction Corporation would not care to enter into a lump sum contract which it could not complete. He asked Mr. Salvati if Island Creek Coal Company would consider having Laburnum Construction Corporation perform that work on a cost-plus basis.

Mr. Salvati said that Laburnum Construction Corporation should not submit a proposal for the Church and Recreation Building if there was any question as to whether same could be completed by it. Mr. Salvati said that he would think about the matter and would talk about it with Mr. J. D. Francis, Chairman of the Board of Island Creek Coal Company and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, and that he would then let Laburnum Construction Corporation hear from him.

On May 18, 1950, Mr. R. E. Salvati wrote a letter to A. Hamilton Bryan, President of Laburnum Construction Corporation, suggesting that Laburnum Construction Corporation refrain from bidding on the Church Building and Recreation Building. A copy of this letter dated May 18, 1950, is attached hereto.

Under date of May 23, 1950, A. Hamilton Bryan wrote a letter replying to Mr. Salvati's letter of May 18, 1950. A copy of this letter is attached hereto.

Since May 18, 1950, the date of the letter from Mr. R. E. Salvati, President, referred to above, Laburnum Construction Corporation has not been invited by Island Creek Coal Company or Pond Creek Pocahontas Company or any of their associated or subsidiary companies to submit proposals to perform additional work.

page 210 } Laburnum Construction Corporation has been advised that it has not been invited by Island Creek Coal Company or Pond Creek Pocahontas Company or any of their associated or subsidiary companies to submit proposals to perform additional work because Island Creek Coal Company and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company could not be assured that Laburnum Construction Corporation would be able to complete a job which they might award to it at or near the coal mines; and for the further reason that, in the opinion of Mr. Salvati and the operating management of Island Creek Coal Company and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, it was inadvisable to award work to Laburnum Construction Corporation because labor trouble might spread to the operation of the coal mines and to other work which Island Creek Coal Company and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company might be doing, and that because of this situation, they have felt it inadvisable to ask Laburnum Construction Corporation for bids on further work.

Since August 4, 1949, the date as of which the two contracts dated October 28, 1948, and December 15, 1948, were terminated, no contract for additional work has been awarded to Laburnum Construction Corporation by either Pond Creek Pocahontas Company or Island Creek Coal Company or their associated or subsidiary companies.

The Plaintiff is advised and believes that the actions of the Defendants herein caused the Plaintiff to lose the additional work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, amounting to a sum in excess of $600,000.00, which work it had been agreed would be performed by Laburnum Construction Corporation on a basis of cost-plus five per cent.

The Plaintiff is advised and believes that the actions of the Defendants herein further caused the Plaintiff to lose contracts for all the work on which it submitted proposals to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company or Island Creek Coal Company after August 4, 1949.

page 211 } The Plaintiff is advised and believes that the actions of the Defendants herein further caused Plaintiff to lose contracts for work in connection with the building program of Island Creek Coal Company and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company in West Virginia, which work it had been agreed Laburnum Construction Corporation would handle.

The business relationship and connection which Laburnum Construction Corporation had built up with Pond Creek Pocahontas Company and Island Creek Coal Company and their associated and subsidiary companies had resulted in substantial net profits to Laburnum Construction Corporation. This business relationship and connection would have continued to result in substantial profits to Laburnum Construction Corporation. The actions of the Defendants herein have completely destroyed this business relationship and connection. This has resulted in a large loss to Laburnum Construction Corporation.

Mr. Christie, Mr. Beattie, Mr. Saxe, Mr. Flint, and the writer discussed proposed Bartley Store, to replace one that burned recently. Mr. Beattie made a rough estimate of the cost, which I understand he will check and we will be advised within a few days. I am unable to give you the floor plan of this building at this time; but Mr. Flint expects to have it ready within a few days and we will forward it to you.

In connection with our building program, about which we have had considerable correspondence, I would like to have you keep in mind the priority for the completion of these buildings, which is as follows:

1. Bartley Store (mentioned above).
2. No. 15 Store. Floor plan for this building was furnished Mr. Beattie and we request that you prepare plans and specifications and forward to Mr. Saxe, with copy to me, as soon as possible.

3. Club Lunch Room.
4. Beauty Shop.
5. Appliance Warehouse.

I will advise you later on the matter of Churches and Theaters. We are also drawing a floor plan for a Community House which will be approximately 64' wide and 100' in length, with a basket-ball court, bowling alley, and other recreational facilities. All of the above buildings will be at Holden or Pigeon Creek with the exception of Bartley Store.

As pointed out above, Bartley Store and No. 15 page 214 } Store have first priority, and we would like to have them completed before the first of the year. As soon as agreement can be reached on the above, we would like for you to be ready to put additional crews on these projects.

I am suggesting that you send the plans, pending final approval, to Mr. Saxe in order that time may be saved.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mr. Bryan:

I have seriously considered your bidding on the recreation building and church at Rockhouse. Since I talked to you, I find that we have about four or five other reputable and well qualified concerns, which have contracts with the United Mine Workers, that are going to bid. In view of this situation, it seems to me that it would be better that you refrain from bidding because of the facts outlined to me in our conversation Monday evening.

I regret that these circumstances prevail, but I believe it is better to go along with the suggestion which I have outlined.

I was glad to have an opportunity to talk and be with you.

With kindest regards.

Dear Mr. Salvati:

I thank you for your letter dated May 18, 1950, advising that you have seriously considered our bidding on the Recreation Building and Church at Rockhouse, and that, because of the facts which I outlined to you last Tuesday evening, you think that it would be better for us to refrain from bidding.

I am sorry to say that the United Construction Workers appear determined to try to prevent us from performing and completing work for you in the coal field unless we enter into an agreement with that organization. As you know, we are not in a position to do this.

We also regret that these circumstances prevail. We have valued highly the connections established between our company and your organization, and had hoped that from time to time we would be able to perform additional work for you.

May I take this opportunity to thank you personally for the splendid cooperation which your organization has always given to us in connection with our work as well as for the cordial relations which have been maintained throughout.

I hope that in the future circumstances will be changed so that we can again undertake to perform some of your work

With kindest regards, I am

MOTION FOR MISTRIAL.

Now come the defendants separately and severally and jointly and move the court to discharge the jury and to declare a mistrial in this cause, and for grounds of this motion assign the following separately and severally:

(1) Counsel for the plaintiff has engaged in highly prejudicial, inflammatory, poisonous and false argument to the jury injected for the purpose of prejudicing the jury and piling up punitive damages as a part of the verdict sought by the plaintiff.

On Friday, January 26, 1951, near the conclusion of these proceedings, counsel for plaintiff used this language in the presence and hearing of the jury:

"They (referring to the defendants, United Construction Workers and the Mine Workers) are an outlaw organization. I state that. They are outlawed under the Taft-Hartley Act. I will talk a little law on that."

page 238 } (2) Immediately preceding the utterance of Counsel for the plaintiff, made the basis of Ground No. (1), Counsel for plaintiff made the following statement in the presence and hearing of the jury:

"I think he has a right to say it, your Honor. He (referring to Mr. Mullen, Counsel for Defendants) asked for it, and he (the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan) gave it to him."

(3) At or near the close of the day's proceedings in this cause on January 26, 1951, the question of adjournment to Monday, January 29, 1951, was under consideration. Counsel for the plaintiff used the following language in the presence of and in the hearing of the jury.

"I was going to say I think that is all right because they want it to go over until Monday anyway, you see, to keep Mr. Bryan on the stand."

And further in reply to Mr. Mullen's question as to whether plaintiff's counsel would want it to go over, plaintiff's counsel replied:

"Not if I were getting it like you are."

Defendants separately and severally and jointly assign as additional grounds for this motion to discharge the jury and declare a mistrial the statements made by A. Hamilton Bryan, witness for the plaintiff, and President of plaintiff corporation, while on the witness stand testifying as a witness as follows, to-wit:

(4) In response to the following question by Counsel for defendants:

page 239 } "Q. You followed the identical same plan in Hopewell to block off the Construction Workers, who had a perfect right to organize your unorganized labor, and you followed the same thing in Kentucky. Instead of sitting down and talking with them to see if you could reach an agreement, you immediately set out to fight them, didn't you, and to block them?"

The witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, made answer:

"A. United Construction Workers and the Mine Workers are outlaw organizations when you come down to it."

And to this statement of the witness, Counsel for the defendants then and there in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury stated:

"I object to that, if Your Honor please."

(5) Defendants charge that the statement of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, just quoted in the preceding gound hereof, was not responsive to the question asked him, was entirely voluntary, was highly inflammatory and prejudicial, was for the purpose of injecting poison and prejudice against the defendants in this cause, and that said statement was false and also injected for the purpose of wrongfully and illegally prejudicing the jury against the defendants and piling up a verdict for punitive damages.

(6) The witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, President of the plaintiff, and while testifying as a witness for the plaintiff, was asked by Counsel for the defendants the following question:

"You went out to Kentucky on the 19th, and you didn't communicate with Mr. Hart. Did you ask Mr. Delinger what had been done?"

page 240 } And to said question the aforesaid witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, made answer as follows:

"Mr. Mullen, I would just as soon negotiate with Mr. Hart (referring to Mr. Hart, the District Representative of United Construction Workers affiliated with United Mine Workers of America and District Representative of District 50, United Mine Workers of America) as I would negotiate with a robber that threatened to rob my house."

And defendants do herewith and hereby charge that the quotation just made was not in response to any question by Counsel for defendants, was highly prejudicial, poisonous and inflammatory, and was injected for the purpose of piling up a verdict for punitive damages against the defendants.

(7) Defendants charge and represent to this Court that the foregoing remarks of both Counsel for plaintiff and of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, are each of such highly prejudicial, poisonous and inflammatory nature that the poison and prejudice injected in this cause thereby cannot be removed by any direction or instruction of this Honorable Court, and the only way these defendants can obtain justice and a fair and impartial trial is for this Court to order the jury discharged and to declare a mistrial in this cause.

(8) Defendants allege that the conduct hereinabove set forth, as a basis of grounds (1) through (7) inclusive, occurred near the close of the proceeding on January 26, 1951, and were cumulative of a course of conduct which had been indulged in by Counsel for plaintiff and by the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, from the beginning of the testimony of the witness up to and including the occurrences hereinabove listed, said prior statements and testimony being as follows, to-wit:

When Counsel for defendants asked the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, the following question:

"Q. You were not told it was because of any of the difficulties you had already had there, were you?"

He made answer as follows:

"A. No, we were not given any reason. We, frankly, conditioned the bid in certain ways that I think were objectionable to Pond Creek. For one thing, we said that we expected them to keep those roads in passable condition so we could get in and out, and I don't think they liked that very much.

"For the second thing, we asked that they provide builder's risk insurance with extended coverage, which would protect the buildings against loss or destruction from malicious mischief or acts of vandalism. That was put in there purposely in order to get some protection in case the United Construction Workers and that crowd should come in there and burn the building down."

(9) During the examination of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, President of the Plaintiff, by Mr. Archie G. Robertson, Attorney for the Plaintiff, on January 23, 1951, the aforesaid attorney made the following statement in the presence and hearing of the jury:

"We are suing here in all earnestness and good faith for the biggest lawsuit that I personally have ever been in."

And the defendants allege that the aforesaid statement of counsel was wholly without any evidence in the cause to justify this statement.

page 242 } (10) During the direct examination of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, President of the Plaintiff corporation, by Mr. Archie G. Robertson, Counsel for Plaintiff, a colloquy arose when defendants' counsel made objection as follows:

"Colonel Harris: We object to the witness reading from a document. I notice he keeps looking at the document and then turning the pages."

During the aforesaid colloquy Mr. Robertson, the aforesaid Counsel for Plaintiff in the presence and hearing of the jury made the following statement:

"It seems to me, your Honor, that the real purpose of my friend here is to break in on this story and destroy the effectiveness of the testimony."

And the defendant alleges that the purpose imputed to counsel for defendant was not the real purpose of counsel and the statement so made was false and highly prejudicial.

(11) During the direct examination of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, President of the Plaintiff, by Counsel for Plaintiff, on January 24, 1951, counsel for defendant made the following objection:

"Mr. Mullen: If your Honor please, if the only part relevant is the telephone number, it is improper to put in a whole newspaper in evidence in the record."

Whereupon, Mr. Robertson, Counsel for Plaintiff, in the presence and hearing of the jury made the following statement:

"Mr. Robertson: If your Honor please, I brought it here -- of course, if I had brought one sheet they would have said that looked might fishy."

(12) During the course of the direct examination of the witness A. Hamilton Bryan, President of the Plaintiff, Counsel, Mr. Fred G. Pollard, objected to a question by counsel for Plaintiff, which objection the court then and there overruled. Whereupon, the following occurred:

"Mr. Robertson: You ought to go to night school Freddie."

"Mr. Mullen: We object to a remark like that.
page 243 } We are trying to facilitate the case.

"The Court: The jury will disregard sidebar remarks."

And the defendant alleges that the personal remark about Mr. Fred Pollard, one of the defendants' counsel, was highly prejudicial and was made for the purpose of intimating to the jury any further statement or argument made in their presence and hearing by Mr. Fred Pollard was not worthy of belief or consideration by them because he was an ignorant lawyer and needed to go to night school.

And defendant further alleges that the remark was false and unjustified for the reason that Honorable Fred Pollard has already gone to Law School and received his LL.B. degree from the Law School of the University of Virginia during the year 1942, and defendants further allege that said Law School has a high reputation not only in the State of Virginia, but among educated and experienced lawyers throughout the boundaries of the United States.

(13) During the course of the cross examination of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, by Mr. Mullen, Attorney for the defendants, he asked the witness the following question:

"Q. By 'lay off', he meant recognition of the A. F. of L. by U. C. W.?"

"A. I don't see what you could say about that, because United Construction Workers certainly didn't recognize the A. F. of L. at Wheelright when they went there with 200 or 300 men and broke up a job."

And defendants allege that the quoted answer was made in order to arouse prejudice against the defendants, and particularly against United Construction Workers, and was the gratuitous introduction of a transaction which was not a part of the transactions complained of by the Plaintiff in its Notice of Motion for Judgment.

page 244 } (14) During the course of the cross examination of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, President of the Plaintiff, said witness disregarded the rulings of the Court, for instance, Counsel for the plaintiff objected to a question by Mr. Mullen whereupon the following proceedings were had:

"Q. Would you have done it?"

"Mr. Robertson: If your Honor Please, that is getting right into the realm of speculation. You can get into all sorts of things."

"The Court: I will sustain the objection."

"The Witness: We were trying our best to cooperate with the Paintsville Local."

"The Court: I sustained the objection."

"The Witness: To try to have friendly relations."

"Colonel Harris: Will your Honor exclude that statement made after you had ruled?"

"The Court: Gentlemen, the statement made by Mr. Bryan after the court sustained by objection should be disregarded by you."

(15) During the course of the cross examination of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, President of the Plaintiff, the following proceedings were had:

"Q. They were working there because they wanted a job, weren't they?

"A. Most of them had been working there since November, 1948. This was sometime in July, almost nine months, and there never had been any discussion, no trouble. Everything was going smoothly, as far as things could go on a job of that kind.

"Q. I am not asking you that question. I am asking you what chance was there that they would refuse when they were put on the spot by an employee of the company undertaking to say what union they must go in and presenting it to them at the direction of the boss of the job?

"A. Nobody was being put on the spot at all.

"Q. That is what you may call it.

"A. They were being given.

page 245 } "Mr. Robertson: If that is what you call it, it doesn't make it so. That is what you said.

"The Court: You gentlemen are even now.

"Mr. Mullen: That is a matter of inference for the jury.

"The Witness: Those laborers had sense enough to know that the United Construction Workers and the A. F. of L. people wouldn't work out very well together.

"Colonel Harris: Your Honor, will you exclude that statement as not responsive to any question?

"The Court: Gentlemen, I instruct you to disregard the last statement which was made by Mr. Bryan."

An agent is one who by the authority of his principal transacts his principal's business or some part of it, and represents his principal in dealing with third persons.

It is admitted that William O. Hart and David Hunter were agents of United Construction Workers Division of District 50, United Mine Workers of America, and of District 50, United Mine Workers of America, at all times involved in this case; but it is for you to say whether they were then also agents of United Mine Workers of America, and whether during that period of time they committed the acts charged against them within the scope of their agency for United Construction Workers, or District 50, or United Mine Workers of America, or all of them.

And if you further believe from the evidence that William O. If you believe from the evidence that William O. Hart, was acting for United Construction Workers Division of District 50, United Mine Workers of America, and for District 50, United Mine Workers of America and for United Mine Workers of America within the scope of his authority, and if you believe from the evidence that while he was so acting he went to plaintiff's job site in Breathitt County, Kentucky, on July 26, 1949, with a disorderly crowd of men, to organize plaintiff's employees, and if you believe from the evidence that he was then acting in furtherance of the business of all three defendants, and if you believe from the evidence that while so acting he, by intimidation, threats, acts of violence, or coercion, caused plaintiff's workmen to leave their job, and put them in such fear

INSTRUCTION NO. 8.

The Court instructs the jury if you believe from the evidence (1) that William O Hart was acting within the scope of his authority and employment and was acting for all the defendants for the purpose of "organizing the unorganized", and (2) that in furtherance of that purpose he was going about Eastern Kentucky leading men to various job sites for the purpose of compelling by intimidation, coercion or force the workers on such jobs to join one of the Defendant unions, or failing that, to stop the jobs, and (3) that such activities of Hart were known or reasonably should have been known to the defendants, and (4) that in furtherance of this purpose Hart led men to plaintiff's job site in Breathitt County, for the purpose of compelling the employees of plaintiff to join one of the defendant unions, irrespective of such employees' wishes, and (5) that Hart or others at his direction, by means of threats and intimidation, backed up by overwhelming force, did in fact compel some employees of plaintiff to "sign up" with one of the defendant unions, and forced others to quit work, and (6) that Hart did such acts with utter disregard for the rights of the employees and with utter disregard for the rights of Plaintiff, and with the express and avowed purpose of forcing plaintiff to recognize one of the defendant unions or failing in that, forcing the plaintiff to get out of the territory, then defendants are liable to plaintiff not only for all damages proximately resulting from such action but also for punitive damages if you deem it appropriate to award punitive damages under other instructions of the Court.

INSTRUCTION NO. 9.

The Court instructs the jury if you believe from the evidence that the plaintiff is entitled to recover compensatory damages, then in order to determine the amount of such damages you should consider any actual loss to the plaintiff of

(1) Profits under its contract dated December 15, 1948, with Spring Fork Development Company, provided you believe from the evidence that such profits are reasonably certain as defined in other instructions;

(2) Profits the plaintiff might have realized from alleged promised cost plus 5% contracts with Island Creek Coal Company, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company and their associated and subsidiary companies, provided you believe from the evidence that such profits are reasonably certain as defined in other instructions;

(3) Any loss, as defined in other instructions, to plaintiff from destruction of its business connection with Island Creek Coal Company, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company and their associated and subsidiary companies, provided you believe from the evidence such profits are reasonably certain as defined in other instructions; and

(4) Any loss to plaintiff from impairment of plaintiff's business reputation.

And you should return your verdict in such amount of compensatory damages as defined in other instructions on damages as will fairly and fully compensate the plaintiff for any of the aforesaid losses the plaintiff has actually sustained as a proximate result of the wrong acts of the defendants or any of them

INSTRUCTION NO. 10.

The Court instructs the jury that damages recoverable in actions like this, in the event plaintiff is entitled to recover, are of two kinds: (1) compensatory damages, and, (2) punitive damages.

(1) Compensatory damages are the measure of the loss or injury sustained and may embrace pecuniary loss suffered by the plaintiff, if any; a fair compensation to the plaintiff for destruction of the plaintiff's business connection with Island Creek Coal Company, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company and their subsidiaries or associates, if shown by the evidence; and the profits which the plaintiff would have gained by a continuation of its business relationship with the several corporations with whom it had established business relations, if any. But only such profits may be recovered as can be ascertained with reasonable certainty. The fact that such profits may be involved in some uncertainty and contingency and can be determined only approximately upon reasonable conjectures and probable estimates does not necessarily mean that they cannot be recovered at all. If it is certain that substantial damage has been caused by the acts of the defendants and the uncertainty is not whether there have been damages, but only an uncertainty as to their true amount, then the jury may not refuse all compensatory damages merely because of that uncertainty.

The plaintiff has a right to prove the nature of his his relationship with the coal companies, the circumstances surrounding the acts of the defendants, and the proximate consequences naturally and directly traceable thereto. If and when that is done, it is for the jury to determine the amount of compensatory damages to be awarded the plaintiff. The fact that such compensatory damages cannot be computed with any exactness is not a sufficient reason for refusing to award any compensatory damages, provided there is a sufficient foundation for a rational conclusion.

(2) Punitive damages may be given in the discretion of the jury, not solely as compensation, but rather with a view to the enormity of the offense to punish the defendant and thus make an example of him so that others may be deterred from committing similar offenses. Punitive damages may be given in the discretion of the jury where a wrongful act has been accompanied with circumstances of aggravation, or committed in a high-handed and threatening manner, or maliciously and with a design of injuring plaintiff in its business, or where the wrongful act is accompanied by insult, indignity, oppression, or threats, or where the wrongful act is committed in a manner so wanton or reckless as to manifest a wilful disregard for the rights of others. In all such cases, the jury may assess the damages at any sum which you may believe from all of evidence, in the exercise of sound discretion, the plaintiff ought to recover, not exceeding the amount claimed. If you should find that the plaintiff is entitled to both compensatory and punitive damages, you should find each class of damages separately; that is to say, you should award compensatory damages in one amount and punitive damages in another amount. Punitive damages need not necessarily bear any relation to the damages allowed by way of compensation, but punitive damages must bear some relation to the injury and the cause thereof.

In order that the plaintiff may recover damages in this case, whether compensatory or punitive, or both, it is not necessary to prove the acts complained of were either expressly authorized or expressly ratified by those for whom Hart was acting if you believe from the evidence that the acts complained of were committed by Hart within the scope of his employment in the performance of a duty to his principals to organize the unorganized. If, in doing any acts which he was authorized to do, he did them in such a manner as to render him liable, his principals are likewise liable, although they did not expressly authorize the acts to be done in the manner in which they were done, and did not expressly ratify the manner in which the acts were done.

H. F. S.

INSTRUCTION "A"

The jury is instructed that:

Since the events complained of are alleged to have taken place in the State of Kentucky, the law of that state determines the substantive rights of the parties in this case.

H. F. S.

INSTRUCTION "B"

The jury is instructed that:

The burden is upon the plaintiff to prove by a preponderance of the evidence all facts necessary to constitute a claim for damages against the defendants. And you may consider a fact established by the greater weight of the evidence as being proven by a preponderance of the evidence, but a greater number of witnesses for the proof of a fact does not necessarily constitute a preponderance of the evidence.

H. F. S.

INSTRUCTION "C"

The jury is instructed that:

The plaintiff's common laborers and carpenter helpers had the right, free from restraint or coercion by the plaintiff or its agents, to associate for self-organization; to designate collectively representatives of their own choosing; to negotiate the terms and conditions of their employment, all for the purpose of effectively promoting their own rights and welfare. Such employees, collectively or individually, had the right to strike, to engage in peaceful picketing, and to assemble peaceably.

In the exercise of the above rights such employees had the right to interfere with the plaintiff's business without being liable in damages for such interference.

The above rights are not lost because others who are not employees of the plaintiff join with them in asserting the employees' rights.

Minor disorders and trivial rough incidents on a picket line, not serious enough to intimidate or coerce a man of ordinary strength of character, do not deprive the picketing of its peaceful character.

H. F. S.

INSTRUCTION "D"

The jury is instructed that:

In Kentucky the employees of the plaintiff, including common laborers and carpenter helpers, had the right to organize to promote their mutual advantage, to secure fair wages, to secure better working conditions, to secure better hours, to induce plaintiff to establish usages with respect to wages and working conditions which are fair, reasonable, and humane, and to achieve the fundamental right to contract collectively with the plaintiff, Laburnum Construction Corporation.

To accomplish these legitimate ends, employees of the plaintiff, including common laborers and carpenter helpers, may strike, may indulge in peaceful picketing, may use any peaceful means not partaking of fraud to induce others to become members; may acquaint the public with facts which it regards as unfair, publicize its cause, and use persuasive inducements to bring its own policies to triumph. When engaged in a lawful strike its members may join in a crowd to persuade other men who propose to work not to take their places. Its members have a lawful right to assemble, to address their fellow-men, and endeavor in peaceful, reasonable, and proper manner to persuade them regarding the merits of their cause and to enlist sympathy, support, and succor in the struggle for the legitimate labor ends, and finally its members may assemble and agree to pursue, and pursue any legal means to gain their ends, that is, use persuasive powers in a peaceful way.

H. F. S.

page 277 } INSTRUCTION "E"

The jury is instructed that:

If you find from the evidence that the plaintiff's employees refused to work for it solely because of the existence of a peaceful picket line and that they would have worked if there had been no picket line, your verdict must be for the defendants.

H. F. S.

The jury is instructed that:

Under the law the plaintiff's common laborers and carpenter helpers had a right to organize for the purpose of bargaining collectively with the plaintiff. If you believe that the plaintiff restrained or coerced such employees in the exercise of these rights, then the plaintiff acted unlawfully.

H. F. S.

The jury is instructed that:

A part of the plaintiff's claim for damages is based on the loss of future profits which it alleges it would have earned but for the wrongful acts of one or more of the defendants. In this connection you shall be governed by the following:

(a) No damages can be awarded against any defendant unless you first find as a fact from the evidence that the plaintiff is entitled to recover against that defendant.

(b) No damages can be awarded unless you also find that the damages were directly and proximately caused by the alleged wrongful acts of one or more of the defendants.

(c) The damages claimed by the plaintiff must be capable of being ascertained with reasonable certainty. Remote, speculative or contingent damages are not recoverable.

(d) The plaintiff has the burden of proving with reasonable certainty the profits that it claims as damages. If you cannot determine profits from the evidence with reasonable certainty, then you cannot award any damages based on the profits the plaintiff claims it would have earned.

(e) If you believe from the evidence that the profits, if any, of Virginia Mechanical Corporation should not be included in the profits, if any, of the plaintiff then you must deduct such profits, if any, from the plaintiff's claim.

INSTRUCTION "O-2"

The jury is instructed that:

A part of the plaintiff's claim for damages is based on the loss of future profits which it alleges it would have earned but for the wrongful acts of one or more of the defendants. In this connection you shall be governed by the following:

(a) No damages can be awarded against any defendant unless you first find as a fact from the evidence that the plaintiff was wronged by the acts of that defendant.

(b) No damages can be awarded unless you also find that the plaintiff was actually damaged; that the damage was directly and proximately caused by the alleged wrongful acts of one or more of the defendants, and that such damage was intended by one or more of the defendants or could reasonably have been foreseen as a result of its wrongful conduct.

(c) The damages claimed by the plaintiff must be capable of being ascertained with reasonable certainty. Remote, speculative or contingent damages are not recoverable.

(d) The plaintiff has the burden of proving with reasonable certainty the net profits that it claims as damages. From its gross profits must be deducted all expenses of every kind (including taxes other than income taxes) properly chargeable to the earning of such gross profit. If you cannot determine from the evidence with reasonable certainty such deductions, then you cannot determine with reasonable certainty the plaintiffs net profits and you cannot award any damages based on the net profits the plaintiff claims it would have earned.

page 291 } (e) If you believe that Virginia Mechanical Corporation would have done any part of the work for which the plaintiff is claiming damages, you must from the evidence determine with reasonable certainty the part of such work that Virginia Mechanical Corporation would have done and deduct such part from the plaintiff's claim. If you cannot do so, you cannot award any damages based on work the plaintiff claims it would have done.

(f) There is no evidence that the plaintiff had a reasonably assured gross earning capacity in Kentucky and West Virginia upon which you can award damages for future earnings based upon a gross profit of cost plus 5%.

(g) If you find that one or more of the defendants is liable to the plaintiff for damages, the plaintiff is entitled to recover from such defendant only the damage caused by the wrongful conduct of that defendant, unless you also find from the evidence that the defendants acted in concert to injure the plaintiff.

DEFENDANTS K.

The jury is instructed that:

The mere expectancy of a contract is not sufficient to justify recovery of alleged loss of profits therefrom. The plaintiff claims damages in the amount of $27,125.00 representing the loss of gross profits in connection with approximately $542,500.00 worth of work on a basis of cost plus a fee of 5% which the plaintiff claims Mr. Salvati had agreed to have the plaintiff perform. If you find that the defendants committed the acts complained of, and you further find that the plaintiff did not have an enforceable contract for this work, you cannot consider it as an item of damages.

If you believe that the work which the plaintiff claims would have been awarded to it has not been done or any part thereof has not been done, then you may not award damages with respect to any of such work which has not been done.

If you believe that any part of this work was let on bids, and if you further believe the plaintiff would have been awarded this work if it had bid on it and been the low bidder, then the plaintiff is not entitled to recover any damages for this item.

(18) The misconduct of the jury in taking into consideration improper matters not in the record in arriving at a verdict, namely, the tax situation in the event of a recovery by the plaintiff.

(19) The verdict constitutes a denial to the defendants of the exercise of rights granted by the Constitution and laws of the United States, including the Norris-LaGuardia Act, 29 U. S. C. A. reasonable and unconstitutional search and seizure, and in requiring defendants, in the absence of compliance by the plaintiff with the provisions of Section 8-324 of the Code of Virginia to furnish answers to interrogatories which were not relevant or material to the issues of this case, contrary to Section 8-321, Code of Virginia.

PROCEEDINGS.

The Court: We will proceed, gentlemen.

Mr. Robertson: The appearances for the complainant are Archibald G. Robertson, Francis V. Lowden, Jr., and T. Justin Moore, Jr. Also present is Mr. A. Hamilton Bryan, President of the Laburnum Construction Corporation. As such, he is interested in these proceedings.

I now ask defendants to let the record show everybody present, who they are, that have already not been named. I ask that everybody in this room be shown as to who was here, what their capacity is.

The Court: The Court doesn't see any objection to that.

Mr. Pollard: The appearances for the Defendant are James Mullen, Fred G. Pollard.

Mr. Robertson: And—

Mr. Pollard: If you will wait until I finish—

Mr. Robertson: I don't know when you have finished, and when you are whispering to other people.

Mr. Pollard: Also appearing for the Defendants, Crampton Harris, Esq., counsel for the defendants. He has been admitted to practice before this Court. His address is on file with the Clerk.

Mr. Robertson: Have you any objection here to telling what his home address is? What his firm is? 1000

Col. Harris: It is 1018-19 First National Building, Birmingham, Alabama. I practice law.

Mr. Pollard: Also present is Yelverton Cowherd.

Mr. Cowherd: My address is 1435 K Street, N. W., Washington 5, D. C.

Mr. Robertson: I think you are also counsel for the United Construction Workers in this case?

Mr. Cowherd: Before I was so rudely interrupted, I will say that I have appeared in the case as counsel for United Construction Workers and District 50, United Mine Workers, each of which organization I am the General Counsel of. If that satisfies Mr. Robertson, I will cease, otherwise, I will talk until he gets tired.

The Court: Let's don't get in any controversy between counsel.

Mr. Pollard: Also present is Mr. Willard Owens, 900—15th Street, N. W. Washington, D. C.

Col. Harris: Mr. Owens doesn't appear as counsel. He is a mere spectator visiting in this Court.

Mr. Robertson: May we ask what function he has?

Col. Harris: No, we may not, it is immaterial. We decline to state why he is here.

Mr. Robertson: I ask the Court to ask him, so we will know.

The Court: Does the Court understand that Mr. 1000 page 5 } Owens is just a visitor here?

Col. Harris: Yes.

The Court: I think that explains his presence here.

Mr. Robertson: I ask the Court if I might ask Mr. Owens one question. I want the record to show everything that occurs.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Robertson: Are you the son of Mr. John Owens, Secretary and Treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America?

Col. Harris: I object to that question. It is wholly immaterial. This hearing is a public hearing. As I understand it, any citizen is entitled to come here, and Mr. Owens does not appear as counsel. The time of this Court shouldn't be wasted in trying to get information as to who Mr. Owens is.

The Court: I sustain the objection.

All Right, Mr. Mullen.

Mr. Mullen: If your Honor, please—

Mr. Robertson: May I have that answer for the record? I except to the ruling of the Court. I would like to have it in the record.

The Court: I suppose you would be entitled to it for the record. All right.

Mr. Robertson: Mr. Owens, are you the son of Mr. John Owens, who is Secretary-Treasurer of United Mine page 6 } Workers of America?

Col. Harris: Don't answer. We repeat the objection.

The Court: The Court has sustained the objection. Counsel asked the privilege to ask the question for the benefit of the record, not for the benefit of the Court, in case this matter goes up.

Mr. Owens: Am I to become a witness, your Honor?

The Court: No, no witness at this point.

Mr. Mullen: The Judge has already ruled you don't have to answer the question. You can put it in the record.

The Court: In the record, but not for the purpose of this hearing. He has saved his point.

Mr. Robertson: The Court says that you answer the question.

The Court: Answer the question.

Mr. Owens: I am.

Mr. Mullen: If your Honor please, the defendant, United Mine Workers of America object as a whole to the interrogatories addressed by the complainant in this case.

The grounds of objection are as follows:

(1) The interrogatories as a whole and in special categories violate the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and the Statutes of Virginia, and are contrary to the decisions of the United States Supreme Court in that they constitute a fishing expedition and impose an impossible task on the defendant.

(2) A large percentage of the questions asked are irrelevant and immaterial, and the periods for which information is asked is likewise irrelevant and immaterial.

(3) That the extensive duplication of questions imposes an undue burden on the defendant.

(4) That a large percentage of questions call for interpretation of written instruments and is an invasion of the functions of the Court.

(5) That the answers to certain categories of questions are known to, or information necessary to answer same is in the possession of, complainant.

(6) That certain categories are specifically intended to create prejudice and the interrogatories as a whole are directed to creating prejudice and to confuse the jury.

I have already stated the grounds for the objection.

The Court: Does counsel desire Mr. Mullen to repeat?

Mr. Lowden: There is a copy for us?

Mr. Mullen: I first objected that the interrogatories violate the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The Court: Did you say Fourteenth?

Mr. Mullen: Fourth, in that it constitutes a fishing expedition and imposes an impossible task on the defendant.

The interrogatories are addressed to three distinct things: one, the production of documents; second, declarations by the defendants as to certain facts; and, third, declarations by defendants as to their interpretation of certain provisions of their respective constitution and rules.

Section 8-320 of the Code of 1950, Virginia, provides that a party may file interrogatories to any adverse party. Thereupon, the clerk shall issue a summons requiring the officer to summon the proper party to answer such interrogatories.

Section 8-321 of the Code of Virginia, 1950, provides:

"When the court * * * is satisfied that the interrogatories are relevant and such as the person to whom they are propounded would be bound to answer upon a bill of discovery * * * it may, if such person do not in a reasonable time file answers thereto, upon oath, or, if he file answers which are evasive, attach him and compel him to answer in open court, or to answer more explicitly. It may also, if it see fit, set aside a plea of his, and give judgment against him by default, or if he be plaintiff, order his suit to be dismissed with costs . . . .”

If he files answers which are evasive, the Court may attach him and compel him to answer in open court, under certain penalties.

Section 8-324 provides:

page 9 } “In any case at law a party may file an affidavit, setting forth that there is, he verily believes, a book of accounts or other writing in possession of an adverse party . . . containing material evidence for him, specifying with reasonable certainty such writing or the part of such book.”

It then provides the Clerk is to summons as provided in Section 8-320.

Section 8-325 provides:

“When the court is satisfied that the person filing such affidavit has no means of proving the contents of such writing, or of such part of the book, but by the person summoned producing what is required by the summons, and that the same is relevant and material . . . it may unless the person summoned shall, in a reasonable time, either produce what is so required, or answer in writing upon oath, that he has not under his control such book or writing.”

Then he may attach him and compel him to answer.
The code section just quoted establish:

1. All facts demanded must be such as the applicant could obtain on a bill of discovery.

2. No document may be demanded unless the following requisites concur:

- page 10 } (a) The application is sworn to;
(m) It states that the document is material;
(c) It specifies the document “with reasonable certainty”;
(d) The contents of the document are not otherwise provable by the applicant;
(e) The person summoned to produce the document does not state under oath that it (or another of like import) is “not under his control”.

3. No fact or document may be demanded unless "relevant" or "material", under the terms of the statute.

• • • • •

I don't want to take the time of the Court, but I would like to refer to three little cases here, very briefly. There are innumerable cases on this subject, and all of them go to this same point, that it must show materiality. It must reasonably specify the document or book which contains the evidence and the mere suspicion isn't sufficient.

• • • • •

page 19 } Mr. Mullen: I am going into certain questions that apply under the law I have just read. I am not undertaking at this time to go through all of the questions and ask a ruling on them. I desire to argue this question fully, citing the cases, the questions that come under it, and also arguing the other points, in order that the Court may pass on my request for an order to send these interrogatories and the interrogatories addressed to United Construction Workers and District 50 back to be reformed and revised by the complainant.

No. 1. is: "When and upon what authority was United Mine Workers of America first organized?"

"2. Furnish a copy of the Charter, Constitution, Rules, Laws, By-Laws and all other regulations and rulings of United Mine Workers of America in effect between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, together with a copy of all changes or revisions made in same since August 4, 1949."

Not only are the regulations and rulings not shown to be relevant, but United Mine Workers was organized in 1890, sixty years ago. It is entirely conceivable that a ruling made in the very first year is still in effect. That is the question, what rulings or regulations are in effect. That would mean a search over sixty years of records and looking up every letter, every ruling that they might make. The ruling might be what is the tonnage rate to be applied to mines page 20 } in the State of Missouri. It might be any one of thousands of questions. They are asking to bring in all rulings and all regulations, regardless of whether relevant, and over a period of time that is simply impossible, an impossible burden on the defendant.

The difference is illustrated right in that very question, because a copy of the Charter, the Constitution, Rules, Laws and By-Laws, if there are any such papers, they are designated. They are designated by name.

There is a Constitution. They know that. They have had it already. So that is one of the examples of a fishing expedition.

Now, No. 6 calls for a charter or certificate of affiliation granted by U. M. W. to District 50. All right. That is a specific designation of a specific document that we can identify. If that is relevant, and it may be, they have a right to call for it.

The same thing applies to Question 7.

We now refer to Questions 13. It reads:

"13. Did the Constitution of United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide that, among other objects, it was an object of United Mine Workers of America to do the following:"

This is quoted from the Constitution:

page 21 } "Second. To increase the wages, and improve the conditions of employment of our members by legislation, conciliation, joint agreements or strikes."

Then dropping down to Subsection (d):

"(d) As used in the language quoted above, what is meant by the words 'joint agreements'? Were United Mine Workers of America, or District 50, or United Construction Workers parties to or bound by the provisions of any such joint agreement during the period between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949? If so, furnish a copy of all such joint agreements."

Those joint agreements are more than 1,500 in number. They are not joint agreements between United Mine Workers, District 50 and/or United Construction Workers. They are collective bargaining agreements entered into between the employer and the Union representing his employees. They have no possible bearing on this Question here. In addition to which, they will disclose the private business of the employer.

The United Mine Workers have thirty districts, 3,000 locals and 650,000 men, members. District 50 has 58 districts, 850 locals, 112,643 members. United Construction Workers has 58 districts, 655 locals and 45,000 members.

Those locals of United Construction Workers, District 50, have such agreements, but it has no bearing here.
page 22 } It can't possibly have any. It is purely a fishing expedition to try to find some evidence to bolster up their case.

Take as another example, Question 34. They quote from the Constitution of United Mine Workers of America, this:

"He may appoint a member whose duty shall be to collect and compile statistics on the production, distribution and consumption of coal and coke, freight rates, market conditions, and any other matter that may be of benefit to the Organization. Said statistician shall make a report to the regular convention."

Now, coming to Subsection (c), they ask:

"(c) During the period between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, did any person or member having been appointed for the purpose by the President of United Mine Workers of America, collect and compile or attempt to collect and compile statistics relating to District 50 and United Construction Workers or to the work and industries claimed by them, respectively? If so, what statistics were collected and compiled and what reports thereon were furnished to the President of United Mine Workers of America? Furnish a copy of all these reports."

We have another case there where they are simply fishing, hoping that something will develop in some of these reports, if there are any, which may help them get evidence page 23 } for their case. It is exactly the things that are condemned by the cases I have read your Honor, and by the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution.

Another example of fishing in violation of the Amendment, is Page 37, in which they quote from the Constitution of the United Mine Workers of America—that is Question 37:

"He shall interpret the meaning of the International Constitution but his interpretation shall be subject to repeal by the International Executive Board."

In Subsection (d) of Question 37, they say:

“(d) During the period between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, did the President of United Mine Workers of America have the right to interpret or to cause to be interpreted the meaning of the Constitutions or Rules of District 50 and of United Construction Workers? If so, what interpretations of the meaning of said Constitutions or Rules made by the President of United Mine Workers of America were in effect between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949? Furnish a copy of all these interpretations.”

Now, we have got the same, in effect. I read from Subsection (d). There we have the same question in effect.

District 50 was organized in 1936. He is going back 14 years to find every interpretation that may have page 24 } been made. Those interpretations certainly had nothing to do with Laburnum Corporation. Laburnum Construction Corporation and its work down there was never heard of until after the suit was brought. It may be a big matter for Laburnum, but in proportion to the volume of business and the administration that has to be done, as shown your Honor by the figures that I gave you, as to those Districts and the Locals, the membership, why, of course, it is a matter that the head administrators wouldn't know anything about.

These interpretations couldn't possibly, all these prior years and all, be furnished. If they want to add, if there are any interpretations relevant to this matter, that conceivably would be within the purview of the decision by Mr. Justice Holmes, which suggests in that case that they should ask for any documents, correspondence that are relevant and then if, in the judgment of the other side, that given was not correct, then they could ask by a showing to have it supplemented.

I read (d). I offer the same objection as to Subsection (c) of Question 37, which also asks:

“(c) What interpretations of the meaning of said ‘International Constitution’ made by the President of United Mine Workers of America were in effect between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August page 25 } 4, 1949? Furnish a copy of all these interpretations.”

Now we go back sixty years. “What interpretations of the meaning of said ‘International Constitution’ made by the President of United Mine Workers were in effect”, not what were made during this period involved in this matter: not even what interpretations were made generally during that period. But your Honor sees from the numerous Districts and numerous Locals and the membership, that there again they are asking for something that is impossible and is purely a fishing expedition, hoping to find something that will bolster their case.

To go through those records and answer that question and a similar one on No. 2, would take weeks and weeks. They had records stored away back. It would call for hunting up every letter the President may have written in reply to inquiry from any of those Locals, from any of those Districts, from any of the members, all upon rulings or interpretations, rather the right to inquire to do so and so under the Constitution. The mere correspondence—it is an impossible task.

In Question 85 they ask for the following:

“85. Furnish a copy of all credentials issued by United Mine Workers of America or its International Executive Board or its President or any other representative of United Mine Workers of America to each of the persons named below for his or her proper identification and use page 26 } between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, said persons being as follows:

John L. Lewis
A. D. Lewis
Kathryn Lewis
Thomas Raney
O. B. Allen

Thomas Davis
David Hunter
William O. Hart
H. G. Robinson

We have no particular objection to giving the information. In fact, we have no objection to giving any information that is pertinent to this case. I have been instructed not to raise any captious objections, and even where cases are wrong in many cases, if they are properly framed, to answer them, even though we could object. But to the interrogatories as a whole, based on those objections which I stated, we are going to ask for that order, and I will cover the other points now. However, that calls for a good deal of work.

Question 86—I am giving you the principal now, on the question of what papers are called for, that part.

“86. Was John L. Lewis, as an employee or representative of United Mine Workers of America or District 50 or United Construction Workers, required to provide automobile liability insurance or any other kind of insurance for the protection of United Mine Workers of America or District 50 or United Construction Workers at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949? If so, who required such insurance? Furnish a copy of the policy or policies of insurance affording such protection."

That covers automobile liability insurance or any other kind of insurance. We don't know whether any one was required, but the part I am objecting to is the scope of that question. There might be innumerable policies, if there was such a requirement. Yet we are asked to furnish copies of all of them.

The same question is asked in Questions 87 to 95 for A. D. Lewis, Kathryn Lewis, O. B. Allen, Thomas Raney, also, Thomas Davis, David Hunter, William O. Hart, H. G. Robinson, the clearest possible evidence that they are fishing. Everyone they can think of, they are asking if they have got any insurance and want the papers, hoping that they might find something to bolster their case. They doubtless are asking that, hoping to find something to show agency or responsibility of this defendant for the acts alleged to have been wrongfully done by Employer, or representative of United Construction Workers.

Now we come to the most serious invasion of the rights of the defendants under the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution, Questions 95 through 103.

"95. What written reports on work performed, page 28 } on matters of policy or on organizational activities did John L. Lewis, as an employee or representative of United Mine Workers of America or District 50 or United Construction Workers submit to the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949? Furnish a copy of all such reports."

That same questions is asked for A. D. Lewis, for Kathryn Lewis, for O. B. Allen, Thomas Raney, Thomas Davis, for David Hunter, W. O. Hart, H. G. Robinson.

I am calling your Honor's attention to the form of that question, "What written reports, etc. were made"? What was meant? The question, itself, shows they cannot comply with the requirements of the law in regard to interrogatories. They can't merely surmise that something may be in existence. They have got to show what they are asking for specifically as existing documents or papers having some relevancy to the matter upon which the case is based. The very form of this question shows they do not have any such information. It shows that they are guessing, hoping that there are reports on work performed or matters of policy or organizational activity made by some of these people that may have in it some allusion to what happened down in Kentucky in July and August, 1949. That is what they are after. It is a gross perversion of a right given in asking for interrogatories.

page 29 } As I said, there are questions addressed to every one whose names they have heard of, asking about reports made backwards or forwards or between them, first about reports made to one man; second, what reports did he make, and asking for copies.

That again shows clearly the fishing expedition that they they are engaged in.

Then we come to another set of questions that is equally bad. Starting at Question 105.

"105. What written instructions, statements, reports, memoranda, letters and other papers were submitted by District 50 or by its Administrative Officer or Secretary-Treasurer or Comptroller to United Mine Workers of America or to the International Executive Board or the President or any other International Officer of United Mine Workers of America between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also since August 4, 1949? Furnish a copy of all such instructions, statements, reports, memoranda, letters and other papers."

We have almost the identical language used in the Lorillard Case, that is what they asked for. It was condemned and the opinion written by Mr. Justice Holmes. The same thing we have here, the very form of the question shows they can't comply with the premises under which they can ask for interrogatories. They show it is simply a dragnet, hoping to find something somewhere, that somebody has said to this man down there, "You did right" or, "You did wrong", whatever you did—that is what you are hunting for. Nothing is relevant. They are not able to specify reasonably or identify reasonably the papers they ask for.

That same question goes on down through 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112. Again I call attention to the territory that those requests would cover. There are the numerous Districts, Locals that I have spoken of. These questions might apply to any one of them. But even if they apply only to District 50 or to Region 58, they still must meet the requirements of the Virginia Statute and the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution.

They show on their face the whole purpose and aim is a dragnet to try to bring out something, to hope there is in existence. They don't know whether there is in existence any such, or don't know whether they have ever been in existence, and they want to bring out—

Mr. Robertson: May I ask you one question? I am not as familiar with Constitutional law as you are. The Fourth Amendment relates to unlawful searches and seizures?

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

Then in Question 125 they ask:

“125. Furnish a copy of the minutes of all meetings of the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America held between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also since August 4, 1949.”

There again they are asking for production of papers and all which do not come within the purview of the requirements of law, which must be met, as a basis for propounding interrogatories calling for introduction of papers, documents and so forth.

The second objection that we made is to the duplication of questions.

Question 8 reads:

“8. Did the Constitution of United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide, among other things, that ‘This Organization shall be known as the United Mine Workers of America’, and that ‘It shall be International in scope’, and, if so, during what period or periods; and has said Constitution at any time since August 4, 1949, so provided and, if so, during what period or periods?”

Then follows 32 questions in which that identical question is asked, after quoting some phase of the Constitution, when one would cover the whole thing. It is just an imposition upon the defendants; and in addition to that, they page 32 } have the information in their possession. They } have the Constitution of the International Union, United Mine Workers of America, in which it is stated:

 "Adopted at Cincinnati on October 11, 1948, effective November 1, 1948". And on Page 38, Article XII, Section 1:
 "The next International Constitutional Convention shall be held on the first Tuesday in October, 1952."

There is the answer to these 32 questions that they ask, identical, without so much as a change of a comma. Not only is it an imposition to ask that all of those questions be answered, the same questions, but also they have the information in their possession at this time. And it is only to get information not in the possession of parties proposing interrogatories. This is a fishing expedition.

Question 14 (b) is as follows:

"(b) As used in the language quoted above, do the words
 'International Union' mean the United Mine Workers of America and its Districts, Sub-Districts, branches and subordinate branches, including District 50 and United Construction Workers; and, if not, what do they mean?"

That is the language referred to in the quotation from the Constitution of the International Union, United Mine Workers of America. This question is repeated eight times in the identical form. They are bound to know they are page 33 } quoting from the Constitution. They are bound to } know that the references in it are to the International Union, United Mine Workers of America. It couldn't be anything else. A large number of the 32 questions that they ask, upon quotations from the Constitution, they have the answer right in the Constitution. And anybody who understands elementary English, anybody who can understand the by-laws of a corporation, or anybody who could understand the organization of the Methodist Church, or the Episcopal Church, can understand the Constitution of the United Mine Workers of America and the Rules of the United Construction Workers and District 50. They are all perfectly clear and consistent and are no different from the by-laws of any corporation.

Question 16 (c) reads:

"(c) As used in the language quoted above, do the words
 'Executive Board' mean the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America, and, if not, what do they mean?"

That question is repeated nine times in the same identical words, no change of comma, even.

Question 13 (d) reads as follows:

"(d) As used in the language quoted above, what is meant by the words 'joint agreements'? Were United Mine Workers of America, or District 50, or United Construction Workers parties to or bound by the provisions of any page 34 } such joint agreement during the period between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949? If so, furnish a copy of all such joint agreements."

I have already explained what those joint agreements were, but that question is repeated four times. There are the instances of repetition which I haven't taken; however, taking those questions alone that I have referred to, there are 53 duplications which could be answered in four questions, four answers. The answers are bound to be the same. They are quoted in there.

Take another, for example, Take Question 23. I think that is a typical question.

"23. Did the Constitution of United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide, among other things, as follows:

" 'Charters of Districts, Sub-Districts and Local Unions may be revoked by the International President, who shall have authority to create a provisional government for the subordinate branch whose charter has been revoked. This action of the International President shall be subject to review by the International Executive Board upon appeal by any officers deposed or any members affected thereby. Until such review is had and unless said order of revocation is page 35 } set aside, all members, officers and branches within the territory affected by the order of revocation shall respect and conform to said order. An appeal may be had from the decision of the Executive Board upon such order of revocation, to the next International Convention'."

Then they ask questions (a) through (h), and in the first place, (a) is the usual question:

(a) During what period or periods did said Constitution so provide?"

That is one of the 32 times they ask that question.

"(b) During what period or periods between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, did said International President have the authority or right to revoke the charter or certificate of affiliation of District 50 in accordance with and subject to the provisions of the language quoted above?"

They have got the answer to the very thing they quote. It states they have got that specific power. They have got it in here, and they have got it in what they quoted, themselves.

"(c) During what period or periods between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, did said International President have the authority or right to revoke the charter or certificate of affiliation of United Construction Workers in accordance with and subject to the provisions of the language quoted above?"

Even the question shows that they know the answer. Then there is (d):

"(d) During what period or periods between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, did said International President have the authority or right to revoke or to cause to be revoked the charter of United Construction Local Union 778A or of Local Union No. 778A, District 50, in accordance with and subject to the provisions of the language quoted above?"

They go on with the whole series of questions, of which they have the answer right here (indicating), and the answer is in what they, themselves, have quoted specifically and clearly and imposes an undue burden upon the defendant to ask them to answer all of those things that they already have answered and they are contrary to the statement of the premises upon which interrogatories can be required to be answered.

In addition to those repetitions, and to other repetitions, there are more than sixty questions asked in the identical language in each one of the three sets of interrogatories that they have filed up to date, that is United Compage 37 } struction Workers and the District 50, and United Mine Workers. So we have over 250 duplications, which imposes an unnecessary burden on the defendants in this case.

Then there are 35 questions in which the defendants are asked to interpret—I have read one or two of them—the Constitution. We have no particular objection to interpreting the Constitution. The counsel may not like our interpretation. I don't know whether they would really be bound by it or not, but we have no particular objections to interpreting it. But where there is duplication, we do have, and a lot of duplications occur therein. Of course, there is an usurpation of the province of the Court.

In a review in the Virginia Law Review summarizing Rule 30 in the Federal Procedure, which relates to interrogatories, it is said that the party cannot be required to summarize or interpret any paper to which it is a party, that that is within the province of the Court.

I assume the same thing applies, in fact it is established law, that where papers introduced in a suit to which a party in the suit is one of the signers, an objection asking him to interpret it, will be sustained. It must be by the Court.

Then, we believe that all through, that these lone 245 questions are addressed to the purpose of creating prejudice.

For example, we don't mind answering Questions page 38 } tion 45, as such, but it clearly states:

"45. Did the Constitution of United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide, among other things, as follows:

" 'The salary of the President shall be $50,000 per annum; Vice President, $40,000 per annum; Secretary-Treasurer, $40,000 per annum; International Executive Board Members, $1,000 per month; Tellers and Auditors, $25.00 per day when employed. Each of the above mentioned officers shall receive, in addition to their salaries, such additional sums for additional service rendered as may be authorized and approved by the President; together with all legitimate expenses when employed by the Organization away from their places of residence.' "

The question based on that quotation is this: "During the periods inquired about, did United Mine Workers of America pay to Thomas Raney, member of the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America, in addition to his salary, an additional sum for additional services rendered. If so, what additional?" That question can be asked, with the last half of that quotation, namely, "Did they pay him for additional services". But it is clearly put in there for prejudicing you.

page 39 } As I say, we have no particular objection to it.

Those salaries, in the face of salaries paid to large corporations, paid to men who administer the affairs of an institution the size I have shown, are nothing to be ashamed of. But they are evidently put in there for prejudice.

There is another question specifically put in there for prejudice, Question 78:

"78. What is the relationship, by blood or marriage, between John L. Lewis and A. D. Lewis; and what is the relationship by blood or marriage, between John L. Lewis and Kathryn Lewis?"

That can have no other possible purpose except to create prejudice. Anybody who reads the newspapers can know perfectly well what the relationship is, but it is wrong in an interrogatory in this place, and serves to create prejudice.

Now, for those reasons, because it violates the right of these defendants under the Fourth Amendment of the Constitution and under the Virginia law and under the decisions, as clearly demonstrated by the questions, they are engaged in a fishing expedition and because of the undue burden, the date, placed on these defendants by the duplication of questions and because the questions clearly are intended to create prejudice, we are asking that order that I have referred to.

We see no reason why these defendants should be page 40 } punished by being required to answer interrogatories as slovenly as these interrogatories are. We don't object. We have no right to object to proper interrogatories, but we do have the right to object to being imposed upon under the guise of interrogatories. And we do have the right, we submit, your Honor, to require that they reform their interrogatories and bring them within the scope of what is permitted by the law and not to impose an unreasonable obligation upon the defendants and not to have them expect to go back sixty years or to make all kinds of copies which would take weeks and weeks.

That is the basis of our prayer to the Court to send back all three of these interrogatories. We have indicated what the questions are that should be changed to avoid duplication. They can pick them out themselves. I don't see why we should pick them out for them.

As far as the other question of a fishing expedition, of course, they are for your Honor to pass on; if he does, he can correct those. That is the basis of our request for interrogatories to be sent back, upon our objection, to be reformed and revised by the complainant.

The Court: Let's take a recess of five minutes.

(Whereupon, a recess was taken.)

The Court: All right, are you ready?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

page 41 } Your Honor will recall that this action was instituted in December, 1949, and set for trial beginning December 11 of this year.

Your Honor will recall also that the first interrogatories filed in this action were filed in behalf of all three defendants last summer. And the plaintiff was directed to answer those interrogatories on or before September 20, and counsel for all parties appeared here on September 20 and the plaintiff answered the vast majority of the interrogatories and the Court ruled upon certain of those interrogatories as to whether they should or should not be answered. And subsequently, on September 26, all parties came before the Court, by counsel, and the plaintiff answered the additional interrogatories that the Court ruled it must answer.

Now, I will not go back to reading those interrogatories at this moment, but I wish to call the attention of the Court to the fact that in those interrogatories, these three defendants here have done many other things which they now claim we have no right to do. In the form of the questions they asked and the insistence that they be answered and the benefit they have gotten through the answers and they cannot blow hot and cold, they are committed to the course of action they took there, so far as it applies to these interrogatories.

Prior to September 20, this plaintiff filed various interrogatories against the three defendants, returnable on page 42 } September 20. None of them have yet been answered. On September 13, this plaintiff filed these interrogatories that Mr. Mullen has just discussed this morning, and made them returnable to September 20, so that they would come before the Court on that date. So when these interrogatories under discussion here this morning were formulated and filed, counsel for the plaintiff had not had the benefit of what transpired here before the Court on September 20, where I recall in some instances the Court now has disposed of the plaintiff's interrogatories.

Then we came back here on September 26 and discussed various matters, got these subsequent dates and the Court will recall that it asked Mr. Mullen and I to get together promptly and indicate what questions we could and what questions we could not agree upon.

I undertook to do that promptly with Mr. Mullen, and did it, I think prior to September 28, as will appear from my memorandum to him, which was written on September 28. My recollection is that I telephoned him before that date. I heard nothing from Mr. Mullen until October 10, and this letter from him to me was delivered by a messenger. Prior to that time, Mr. Mullen had told me he was so busy he would let me know whether he wanted to get together or not.

"With respect to the suggestion that we endeavor as far as possible to determine beforehand what questions in the interrogatories addressed to the United Mine page 43 } Workers of America we would not object to I beg to advise as follows:-

"We shall object to the interrogatories as a whole. If, however, the Judge should rule against us on this point we list below the questions to which we will specifically object. This does not necessarily mean that we may not criticize some of the questions in any argument against interrogatories as a whole. It simply means that if we are required to answer any part of the interrogatories the following questions will be specifically objected to:

"(2), (9-e), (13-d), (19), (24-f), (28-e), (34-e), (35-e), (37-e and d), (40-b), (43-b), (45), (61) to (64), both inclusive, (78), (96) to (103), both inclusive, (105) to (112), both inclusive, (118), (119), (120), (121a and b), (123-a and d), (124) and (125). In the supplemental interrogatories we will object to (1) and (2).

Those are the ones that are before the Court. When we come to those I am going to show they are exactly the ones they asked up there, just in reverse.

This is the case where the plaintiff seeks to recover $500,000. It is an important case in this Court. It is a case where there are three defendants, and all the witnesses, page 44 } and many of the key witnesses are out of the state. We conceded here this morning that the Court had no inherent power to compel their attendance. And Mr. Mullen has stated prior to this time that they will make no commitment for any witness whatsoever to attend here.

These interrogatories have been framed and submitted in good faith after the most painstaking study and preparation. In view of the hour and a half that Mr. Mullen has taken here this morning, and the scope of his argument, it is perfectly obvious that we are going to have to take these depositions up one by one seriatim. I am going to ask the Court to do it. If Mr. Mullen was too busy before we got here today, I ask the Court to do it today. I say the seriousness and importance of the case merits whatever time is necessary.

It seems to me that the necessary time will be minimized if I reply generally to his argument against the interrogatories in toto. And then we take them up one at a time and dispose of them, rather than try to group them in any such way as Mr. Mullen attempted to do, to which, of course, I do not agree.

So if the Court will permit me, I will make a general reply to Mr. Mullen's argument, then come to the specific question. I call the Court's attention to one fact at the very outset. When Mr. Mullen charges us with having the Constitution of the International Union, which I think we page 45 } have, and in one of the other times when we were here, he stated specifically and categorically that there was no Constitution of it, and the reason that we need this Constitution, we have had these things, these questions are based on these various Constitutions, Rules and Regulations; but if all of their witnesses are out of the State and if we have no assurance that they be here, does your Honor think for one minute if we had offered this to the Court at the trial of this case, out of a blue sky, that it would have been received?

Mr. Mullen: May I interrupt?

Mr. Robertson: You may once. I interrupted you.

Mr. Mullen: We offered to furnish you the Constitution, which you could produce in Court.

Mr. Robertson: I don't remember any such offer. The record will show it now. Do you still hold that offer?

Mr. Mullen: We never said there wasn't any constitution of the United Mine Workers. We did say there was no Constitution of United Construction Workers or District 50.

Mr. Robertson: That is one reason we have asked for what we have asked for. We don't want to quibble about what you call it. We want what actually is that governs these three different defendants.

Now, if your Honor please, I ask you to let me read you the names of these three defendants. United Construction Workers Affiliated with United Mine Workers of America; District 50, United Mine Workers of America, and United Mine Workers of America, the three defendants.

Now, if you go to the notice of motions of judgment filed in this case, you will see that our theory of the case is that these three different defendants are either component parts of one whole, to-wit, United Mine Workers of America, or they are instrumentalities or agents of the United Mine Workers of America, and that the three defendants are so inter-related and interwoven that they act through their members and component parts, or through their agencies, or through both.

I repeat what I said when we were here before. I make this statement based on the most exhaustive study that I, Mr. Lowden, Mr. Moore and Mr. Bryan are capable of making, that these things cannot be intelligently understood and co-related to each other, and that they are not intended to be, but they are intended not to be. That is a fair statement based on anybody, on a study of them by anybody, including the Court.

Mr. Mullen: I object to him imputing improper motives.

Mr. Robertson: I am not imputing the motives. I think it is very skillfully and artfully done. I don't think you did it. I certainly didn't do it.

If your Honor, please, I think much of what Mr. Mullen says here today comes with poor grace and too late, because I understand, I think the working notes I made, page 48 } and my associates made when we were there, showed that he agreed without any strings to it, to answer certain interrogatories; that he challenged the right to be required to answer certain other interrogatories and the Court ruled that some of them he didn't have to answer, some of them he did have to answer. Some of them he need not answer as tendered, but must be tendered in modified form and a modified form was worked out. Then on those occasions, that what he says now as to any interrogatories, except those before the Court today, come too late. He did reserve the right to urge any and all objections he chose to urge against these interrogatories here today against the United Mine Workers of America.

If your Honor, please, at the outset of Mr. Mullen's argument, he said that these instruments, documents, records that we have called for could only, as I understood his argument, could only be acquired under subpoena duces tecum. Now, if your Honor please, I am not naive enough to come here and ask this Court for irrelevant and immaterial information, inadmissible information. I do ask, I submit I am entitled to have every bit of information in answer to these interrogatories which tend to show the inter-relationship as component parts or as agents each of the other of these three defendants.

I can speak with some authority and with some feeling about the question of whether this Court right now, at this moment can ask any, demand that any of these page 49 } parties bring anything here that this Court says bring here, without any subpoena duces tecum or anything else, and the Court has that authority. That fact is set forth in the decision of Robertson v. Commonwealth, and it is discussed in the briefs and it is discussed in oral arguments and it appears in the record. And I think it appears in the opinion and the reason it runs through the whole thing, if the Court didn't have that power, the Court could not function. And we are not going to stop with any tweedle-dee-tweedle-dum thing, to have a subpoena duces tecum issued when the parties are right there before the Court, within the jurisdiction of the Court. I cite that case as my authority for that statement.

I have not come here unprepared on what questions are proper in the form of interrogatories. There is a discussion of it in Burke's Pleading and Practice, the last edition. You can get it there largely in one paragraph. There are some decisions in Virginia. I do not recall them at the moment. I have it at my file in the office. I can get it within fifteen minutes.

The rule as to what is admissible is the rule which applies in a pure bill of discovery, and you can make the distinction between a pure bill of discovery in equity and a bill for discovery and relief.

A pure bill of discovery means exactly what it says. You are trying to discover something, but you are not page 50 } asking for relief and in that instance, the things do not, the interrogatories do not have to be sworn to.

If it is a bill for discovery and relief, it must be sworn to to show the Court that they are acting in good faith. The rule which determines the propriety of interrogatories in a civil action is the rule which applies where a pure bill of discovery is sought. And you will find that in Burke's Pleading and Practice, with cases cited.

Then in Lyles' Notes on Equity Pleadings where he discusses the difference between the pure bill of discovery and a bill of discovery and relief, he says that in a pure bill of discovery, which is the rule that applies here, you can get any information which is helpful to aid you in the proof of the case, where it is relevant, necessary and material, but it need not be vital to the proof of your case.

I can get those authorities, it is just a question of going to the office and getting them.

This case here, so far as the procedure is concerned, is governed by the law of Virginia, and not by any Federal rules of procedure and not by any Federal decisions in matters of interstate commerce. I submit it is a far cry from anything we have asked here, to a violation of the Fourth Amendment against illegal searches and seizures. The law your Honor applies here is the procedure law of Virginia, and the substantive law which your Honor will apply here will be the substantive law of Kentucky, where this cause of page 51 } action arose. They have made the point. It was stated here repeatedly; when we were here on September 20 and September 26, they made no point of the correctness and incorrectness of the service. They expressed this desire to cooperate in giving information and then we can't even get them to give the names and addresses except under compulsion of the people who are in this courtroom this morning.

As I have said, these interrogatories have been prepared as result of the greatest study, the most painstaking preparation and in good faith. And we have got these three copies, which one of them is the Constitution of the International Union, United Mine Workers of America, the one to which Mr. Mullen referred. We got it from one of our labor services in Washington, D. C. It is not certified. If I were to offer it in Court as it is, Mr. Mullen, I think, would be the first one to object. Whether he did or not, I would be a fool to offer any such thing as that, because it certainly could be ruled out upon objection.

He said, and before I leave that, it was said here that John L. Lewis is the Czar of the United Mine Workers. Before a matter gets to the International Executive Board, which represents the membership of the Union, John L. Lewis' word is the word of God, subject to be overruled page 52 } by the International Executive Board. And the word of the International Executive Board, except when you are going to expel a man from the Union, I believe is final, subject to review by the General Convention, and John L. Lewis, according to the wording of that thing, has the right to interpret that Constitution and apply it as he sees fit, in his uncontrolled judgment. And when we submit this thing to the Court or Mr. Mullen gives us a copy of it, unless in some of these interrogatories that we have asked here, we don't know who is coming here to say that is the written constitution, but John L. Lewis has changed it. Mr. Mullen says now that there is no such thing as a Constitution of District 50, of the United Construction Workers. We have got this thing, here, that we got from a labor service, "Rules of United Construction Workers, Affiliated with United Mine Workers of America, March 15, 1949, 900—15th Street, N. W., Washington, D. C." If that is what they operate under, that is what we want. We want them to produce it here so we will have it in a form admissible in evidence, the Constitution of the United Mine Workers, these Rules and Regulations of the United Construction Workers, and these Rules of District 50, United Mine Workers of America, March 15, 1949.

So, to say that those things upon which our interrogatories are based, are irrelevant in this proceeding, is like trying to discuss the Constitution of the United States without having a copy of the Constitution available to you. And page 53 } it is an argument that doesn't merit the thought of a man of Mr. Mullen's ability to come here and say we have got this information in our own possession, when he ought to know we have got it in a form that is not admissible in evidence and that this Court has got the power to require them to make it available to us in a form that will be admissible in evidence. That is what we are asking this Court to do.

Mr. Mullen made the point that most of these questions are irrelevant and immaterial and inadmissible. I didn't think they were going to like them. I have intimated here before that I thought of obstacles that could be put in our way, would be put in our way to keep us from getting information.

He says that he wants through testimony under oath to show the relevancy of what we ask for and the materiality of it and whether or not it is an unjustified fishing proposition. I say that we have Hamilton Bryan, the President of the plaintiff company here prepared, if the Court wants him, to testify under oath and he has lived with this thing from its inception down to this minute.

I don't think it is any use going into the different questions now, like Mr. Mullen did, because it is perfectly obvious from what he said that we have got to go over them all anyway. I will stop and come back to that. I do say this, your Honor, when we come to that, it is going to be page 54 } tedious. It is going to be irritating. It is going to get boring. But I submit that those questions are framed and submitted in good faith. I think some of them are probably too broad and should be narrowed in their scope here and now today, and I ask the Court to bear with all the parties and get these things thrashed out here now, today.

One purpose of our question is that we want to show the interrelationship, the interwoven scheme of things between these three defendants, in support of our allegation that they are acting through their component members who are or are not also their agents. You can't say that that is not relevant in this case, that that is not material in this case, that that is not admissible in this case, nor in the form of interrogatories, when they have put us on notice that they may not have anybody here for this hearing if they deem it unnecessary.

Of course, if they thought they could make our case collapse without having them here, there wouldn't be anybody here but us. Then Mr. Mullen, having argued this morning, you have got all this here in your testimony all right, put it in evidence—how far do you think I would get? How far do you think he would have a right to let me get away with any such stuff as that?

Mr. Mullen charges that we have been guilty of inexcusable and persecutory repetition in these three sets of interrogatories of these three different defendants. What page 55 } we have a right to do and are doing is to show the interrelationship between them so far as it applies to these events between October 28, 1948, when Laburnum had his first contract to go to work out there, and August 4, 1949, when the thing came to an utter collapse through the illegal acts of all three defendants acting as agents and component parts of each other.

Just to end this first phase of what I have to say, we have three further short sets of interrogatories here which we are going to submit this morning and ask the Court to either rule on them or rule on them here in time for it to be answered before the trial date of this case. I want to anticipate them to say this, those interrogatories demonstrate—perhaps they don't demonstrate it—but those authorities ask for specified copies of their official newspapers of one of these defendants and the file has been available to us through the courtesy of someone else and we have copies of them now, and those copies are in our possession. We think they contain information which is necessary to the proper presentation of our case. And we are going to ask for them in our interrogatories. That is what they won't admit, that these papers are correct copies. We still want other copies of them so we can return these to where we got them.

If your Honor, please, I think I have covered the ground generally. I suggest that we go—I think as long as I am presenting the interrogatories and they are challenged, that I should present them and if they are challenged seriatim, then I will say what I have got to say, then Mr. Mullen say what he has got to say. Then I have the right to close the argument. There is no use of Mr. Mullen shaking his head and saying it is too tedious or takes too long. That is the way to proceed. I will cooperate in making it short. There is plenty of time in a court of justice to assert a $500,000 claim for damages, which has worked any such results as we claim have been represented and we claim it in good faith, on this plaintiff.

Mr. Mullen: I am not objecting to time. I hate to take the time. I am objecting to Mr. Robertson trying to assume our position on these interrogatories. We are here by agreement to meet, to state my objections. I don't think it should be turned over to him to start them and for me simply to come in the middle to answer them.

Mr. Robertson: I have said. I want to hear what the Court thinks.

Mr. Mullen: I want to say a few things.

Mr. Robertson: He doesn't like me to do that. He is assuming this pontifical air here—

The Court: I think everybody is getting along all right this morning.

Mr. Robertson: He is asserting to himself the right to open and close, when I am offering the proof.

The Court: Wouldn't it be proper first for the page 57 } Court to pass on Mr. Mullen's position?

Mr. Mullen: May I say one or two words?

The Court: Yes, you may reply to Mr. Robertson.

Mr. Mullen: Your Honor, please, you will recall that Mr. Robertson has said he has not been able to get these introduced. In reading Question No. 2, I stated:

"2. Furnish a copy of the Charter, Constitution, Rules, Laws, By-laws and all other regulations and rulings of United Mine Workers of America in effect between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, together with a copy of all changes or revisions made in same since August 4, 1949."

What we objected to were the words, "All regulations and rules in effect" from that time.

Mr. Robertson: I told you I wouldn't interrupt you. I want to be heard on each separate interrogatory and not have Mr. Mullen "pooh-pooh" them in the way he is doing.

The Court: As I understand, your remarks are being addressed to your motion?

Mr. Mullen: The motion as a whole, so that what he has stated about not being able to prove those, I stated this morning with the proper question, it would show the difference between a proper question and a fishing expedition and that we would be glad to answer it. I have already stated that we had no objection if these were revised, to in-page 58 } terpreting as they have asked in some 32 questions the Constitution. We are not going to fight against that. We are fighting against simply the dragnet in those questions I took up, and on the burden imposed by duplication.

We have no quarrel at all with what Professor Lyles says. The very statement of it by Mr. Robertson that they must be relevant, material, that is all we contend, that these are not relevant and material.

He states he can't possibly understand what it is, he wants to find out. It is perfectly clear. The Union is the International Union, United Mine Workers of America. It has 30 Districts. One of those Districts is District 50, an autonomous District. The other Districts include minors, District 50 does not. And it has its own Conventions, its own administrations, its own functions. It is an autonomous district of United Mine Workers.

United Construction Workers is a division of District 50. It and District 50 are as specifically stated in this and in both of those, bound by and operating under the Constitution of the International Union, United Mine Workers of America. Where there is anything obstruse about that, I can't see. It is perfectly clear. As I say, we are perfectly willing to interpret, we don't want to in doing that answer one question 32 times.

Mr. Robertson addressed himself largely to the page 59 } question of time. We take no blame for that whatsoever. They started this suit in December, 1948.

Mr. Pollard: They started this suit in December, 1949.

Mr. Mullen: They started this suit in December, 1949. They never filed these interrogatories until September. We filled interrogatories away back in June. They took three months to answer them. Then they commenced filing these lengthy interrogatories to us, didn't want us to have any time to do it. Now, if there is any delay in this matter, it lies with them, not with us.

The Court: The Court will say this: The Court has no fault to find with either side, up to the present, for the co-operation it has received in this matter.

Mr. Mullen: That is just the situation. I do not see that Mr. Robertson has at all answered the objections made to these, either on the ground that they are fishing expeditions or that they were unduly burdensome in their tremendous duplications, 200 duplications in them.

Mr. Robertson: If the Court please, I submit that is not a proper argument. That is in argument of his motion to return everything, because the whole thing is improper and if that argument is to be addressed to each specific question, we are consuming time for nothing on any such page 60 } argument as that.

Mr. Mullen: That is your opinion. I ask the Court if I may proceed.

The Court: Well, go ahead.

Mr. Mullen: As I was saying, I do not see that he has answered the question at all, the question of undue burden and duplication. He speaks of the hearings heretofore on the interrogatories addressed to the United Construction Workers and District 50. We objected to a great many things in those. We did not then know what was in here to throw a very different light on the matters. We now renew our objections to those because of what I have said, because of the duplication, because all of them put together constitute a gross fishing expedition.

All we are asking is that they reform, after your Honor has passed on certain questions.

The Court: I suspect I had better rule on your page 61 } motion to require the plaintiff to reform these several interrogatories to the defendants. The Court overrules that motion.

In regard to the interrogatories addressed to the United Mine Workers of America, then we may proceed and you may take up any question that you like, object to any of them and the Court will pass on them as we go along.

Mr. Mullen: As I understand, your Honor overruled the motion to send them back for reformation.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Mullen: Then, of course, we except.

The Court: You except, of course, to the ruling.

Mr. Mullen: Then, your Honor, as we have written in that case, we only object to certain questions, why is there any use to read all of these questions?

Mr. Robertson: That is the only way I can get them answered. I have been trying to get them answered since the 13th of September. I want the Court to rule on them now.

The Court: Of course, he has made a general exception to all of them. Then he comes and says he wants to make specific objections to a certain number.

Mr. Robertson: Does he mean except those, he is going to answer the others?

The Court: The Court will require him to answer the others. I don't see any need—

Mr. Robertson: I don't either, if the Court is page 62 } going to do that.

Mr. Mullen: The whole purpose is to simplify the matter, as your Honor has requested.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the letter and ask the Court to mark it filed, and I offer it in evidence.

The Court: Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1.

Mr. Pollard: The defendant, of course, will object to that.

The Court: The defendants object to the introduction of this letter, Plaintiff's Exhibit 1.

(The letter referred to was marked Plaintiff's 1, and filed with the Court.)

Mr. Robertson: When we come to these specified questions, you want to hear from Mr. Mullen first, or from me?

The Court: I think Mr. Mullen said he would prefer to do that, then you can answer him.

Mr. Mullen: (The first objection is to Question 2, to that part of Question 2 which calls for any Rules and Regulations that were in effect between the dates of October 28, 1948 and the present time. I think I made a paraphrase of that.

Mr. Robertson: Have you finished?

Mr. Mullen: No. That question is objected to, page 63 } that part of it, on the ground that that part of the question is in contravention to the Fourth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States and imposes undue burden on the defendants. The question is unlimited as to the time and the rules or regulations pertinent to the issue in this cause and calls for immaterial testimony.

As I have already stated, they were organized sixty years ago. It would take a month to make the examination that they ask for.

That is all on that.

Mr. Robertson: If your Honor pleases, you will notice it does no such thing. It says: "Furnish a copy of the Charter, Constitution, Rules, Laws, By-Laws and all other regulations and rulings of United Mine Workers of America."

That is what I am driving at, is to get these things which I think control them. I tried to make it broad enough to cover the whole thing, it says, "In effect between the dates October 28, 1948 and August 4, 1949", less than one year, "together with a copy of all changes or revisions made in same since August 4, 1949."

The reason I want that—there is no use of reading it here—John L. Lewis has a right to change it if he wants to.

Mr. Mullen: Nothing of the kind.

Mr. Robertson: Don't interrupt me. I can read page 64 } it here. He has a right to interpret it as he sees fit. We want to know. It is not for any long period of time. We want to know from October 28, 1948, when we first went out there, when we first got our contract out there, down through the time they ran us off of the work, that the work was taken away from us, down to the present time, are these things complete. Are there any changes to them. If so what are they? If so, gives us copies of them. I ask for you to admit these three to go in testimony, or give us copies of them.

Mr. Mullen: I told you three or four times we would admit it. We thought it a proper question to call for those. We admit it.

Mr. Robertson: Because we are not sure they are complete. We want to know whether this Czar's right to change them has been exercised or not. We want these things and we want them brought down to date.

Mr. Mullen: He has no more power than the President of a corporation. It is so stated in there, everything he does is subject to—

The Court: Is it stipulated that they may be introduced in evidence?

Mr. Mullen: Certainly we will stipulate that. We have offered it every time I have been up here.

The Court: Then, if it is stipulated that they page 65 } may be introduced in evidence, what you would like to know is whether or not those constitutions and by-laws have been amended since their enactment.

Mr. Mullen: We will answer that.

The Court: That will answer that question?

Mr. Robertson: That will answer it.

Mr. Pollard: May I interrupt a minute?

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

Mr. Pollard: This was adopted on October 11, 1948, became effective November 1, 1948.

Mr. Robertson: Which one are you talking about?

Mr. Pollard: The Constitution of the United Mine Workers.

I don't see where the date they request, October 28, 1948, is material to the facts which are alleged to have happened in Kentucky. Do you think if we put in this one, it ought to be enough and ought not to put in one in effect prior to that?

Mr. Robertson: We have already stipulated and agreed upon it now, Mr. Pollard tries to kick over the traces. We are entitled to know whether these things are down to date, whether this is in effect now or whether it is not. They might have changed them to try to cover up the tracks of the agents.

Mr. Mullen: Mr. Pollard isn't talking about page 66 } that. He is talking about you asked between October 28, 1948, this Constitution became effective three days later, November 1, 1948. That is what he is talking about.

Mr. Robertson: I want the other Constitution, too. I have seen them. There are very little changes in them, I think.

Mr. Mullen: There are no changes practically.

Mr. Robertson: All right, if you say there are no changes, I will accept that, if you will be bound by these.

Mr. Mullen: Let me finish. There are no changes involving anything here. There are such changes as this—

Mr. Robertson: I can help you, if you will say there are no changes in this Constitution in comparison with any prior Constitution, which changed the application of that Constitution to this situation, on the date of its adoption, I will accept that statement, without going any further.

Mr. Mullen: No, I won't make that statement.

Mr. Robertson: You see, I am entitled to it.

Mr. Mullen: Here is the thing, "to demand not more than six hours from bank to bank in each 24 hours, not more than five days a week shall be worked by each member of the organization." Before that it was 7 days, 8 days. That has been changed by the Constitution, nothing in the basic covenants of it.

page 67 } Mr. Robertson: I told you—

Mr. Pollard: I don't think Mr. Mullen heard you question.

Mr. Robertson: The Court heard it. I think I am speaking loud enough. I asked him would he agree that this Constitution which was adopted on October 11, 1948, and became effective November 1, 1948, so far as it applies to this case, was identical with whatever was in effect beginning October 28, 1948. He said he would.

Mr. Pollard: He said he would not.

Mr. Robertson: He said if—

Mr. Cowherd: He said he would not.

Mr. Robertson: I say, if he won't make that stipulation, I am entitled to the one in effect on October 28, 1948, everything in effect from that down to this time.

Mr. Mullen: I submit this occurrence they claim happened in July.

Mr. Robertson: If I don't get that, and I come into Court with that, they are free to pull something else out of the hat and say, "You are all wrong. This other thing applied all the time you are talking about." I have a right to be safeguarded against any such thing as that.

Mr. Mullen: Your Honor please, the date alleged is July, 1949. Now, all they could be concerned with us what constitutes the rules that were in effect, what Constitution and Rules were in effect at that time and since then, and I think they are entitled to that. Prior to that, they have nothing to do with it. As far as any of this is concerned, they were only affected by what was in effect in July, 1949.

Mr. Robertson: Your Honor please, there were threats against us there almost from the beginning. We have got a right to show from our observation how they tie up, who is responsible for them.

The Court: That wouldn't be a tremendous task to furnish those.

Mr. Mullen: We will give them copies of those. We can say there is no changes in these from the date they were in effect, down.

Mr. Robertson: If you will tell me that these are the same provisions that were in effect, so far as this case were concerned, on October 28, 1948, and subsequent to that, I will accept your statement and won't ask for anything else.

The Court: Can you agree to that?

Mr. Harris: Judge, the point we want to make clear, and we want to avoid any waiver of that point in any form is that the critical times in this case begin with the dates alleged in his complaint, that we did a wrong. And he claims that we did wrongs in July, 1949, in his complaint. We have given and it is stated here this morning that the Constitution in effect in July, 1949, up to the present time, we have handed him, and it can be introduced in evidence.

But at no point in this case do we think we should start going and bringing in things that have nothing to do with the case. It is the integrity of our position that the time that is material to this Court begins with the time mentioned in his complaint, when he said we did things to him and to go back of it is to bring in wholly irrelevant and immaterial bits of evidence. And he has that date specified in question after question hereafter. Do I make myself clear?

The Court: I see what you are talking about. What is your answer to that, Mr. Robertson?

Mr. Robertson: We have got a right to know what was the setup when we first went out there in Kentucky and show the background of this thing. That is going to be the testimony in this case. They have asked in their questions, what we did in that whole time, from the time we first went in there, October 28, on down to date. They want to know what we made, what we didn't make. We want to show from the time we got our contract, what we were up against, as result of their threats, what they were doing, which culminated in these things, which were done on July—I think it shows there they made one threat against us—

Mr. Bryan: On July 14, 1949. There had been threats, all sorts of stuff before that.

Mr. Robertson: There had been threats before page 70 } that. Why, if they say it is all right, Mr. Mullen was willing personally to agree to it, they called him off, what is the bug under the chair?

Mr. Cowherd: I would like to speak to that. We want to narrow it down to those dates. We have those other copies. We have no objection to letting them in as such, those particular ones. When it runs to the whole case, we must be consistent. We think the dates are the dates upon which they allege we first came on the job, to do anything wrong. If it were two or three weeks before the actual date complained of, we wouldn't object to that. We wouldn't object to anything they claim prior to the date upon which they claim we did a wrong.

Mr. Robertson: That argument boils down to this, we can't show any relationship of principal and agent or principal and component members and parts an hour before they came on the job and threatened us with physical force to run us off, or an hour before they called Bryan and told them to get off there.

Mr. Cowherd: This is a nine-month interval he is talking about. This Constitution was adopted prior to the date he stipulated, the giving effect date three days later, all of which was nine months before he claims any wrong was done.

Mr. Robertson: If any counsel of record for page 71 } these defendants will make a statement of record so far as the issues involved in this case is concerned, that these three sets of provisions were in effect on October 28, 1948, I don't ask for anything else.

Col. Harris: If the Court pleases, I feel that I should make it clear to the Court that the form of questions, "bug under the chip", we object to. We have come into this Court, as stated by Mr. Mullen. We are not making objections to a lot of questions that we thought we had the right to object to. We do want the issue which we understand will be tried before a jury, we do want the issue kept clear. We do not want in any reference to any question to appear to waive our basic contention that anything prior to July, 1949, is wholly irrelevant. We are trying to come into this Court and make a fair and honorable answer to interrogatories, which the consensus of opinion of these lawyers in Washington is that they are relevant and call for relevant and material evidence. Such questions, we are not objecting to. Every objection we we put in is, we think, a sound objection and not a hyper-technical objection. We are not here to engage in intellectual gymnastics with the gentlemen on the other side, but we do think that a jury trial must be in accordance with the statutes of the State of Virginia.

Mr. Robertson: Your Honor, please, the gentleman, of course, hasn't had the benefit of being here either page 72 } on September 20 or on September 26. It is my understanding of the Court's former ruling that whatever questions the Court directs to be answered here, the Court reserves its right here to rule all out, if the Court thinks they are not admissible.

Col. Harris: I appear under a misapprehension, if the statement just made by counsel is correct. I understood, I represent in my ordinary business the International Union of the United Mine Workers of America. I understood the interrogatories to the International Union, United Mine Workers of America, we were to have our objections in today and that they have not been ruled on by your Honor heretofore. Your Honor may have made rulings—

Mr. Robertson: I think you misunderstood me. My understanding is that when we get into the jury trial, and as we go forward with the introduction of evidence, and that as the pattern of the case appears, and then if any of these interrogatory answers are offered by anybody, the Court will then rule whether they come into evidence.

The Court: That was my understanding. Is that yours, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: Will you read that?

The Court: In other words, you can object to the introduction of any part of these interrogatories at the page 73  $\frac{1}{2}$  trial of the case.

Col. Harris: But you were not dealing with United Mine Workers of America at that time, were you?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Mullen: He meant this, now if he requires them to be answered, that still doesn't bar us from objecting at the time of the trial.

Col. Harris: I understand that, but we are still arguing upon matters that are material and important here.

The Court: Exactly.

Col. Harris: The right to make objections at the trial does not forfeit our right to interpose objections that are carefully considered today?

The Court: That is true.

Mr. Pollard: May I say something?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Pollard: This Constitution, as has been stated, went into effect November 1. They asked for the Constitution in effect beginning October 28. I don't think that the plaintiff's have shown how it is in any way material what was in effect between October 28 and November 1, certainly on those three days—

The Court: Was October 28 the date of the contract?

Mr. Pollard: That is the date of their contract.

Mr. Cowherd: No.

page 74  $\frac{1}{2}$  The Court: Were those the people you were doing the work for?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

The Court: Gentlemen, I will allow this question to be answered.

Col. Harris: We reserve an exception.

Mr. Pollard: Exception.

The Court: For reasons stated.

Mr. Mullen: That relates to the Rules and Regulations portion of the question, that we are required to go back sixty years?

The Court: I don't understand you have to go back sixty years on that, Mr. Mullen. These Rules and By-laws are in pamphlet form. I assume that those before the amendments were made were in pamphlet form. Won't you just furnish copies of those that were immediately prior to the ones?

Mr. Pollard: As to any rules that were made in 1890, it has been overruled? It is still in effect, I would assume.

Mr. Cowherd: If your Honor please, we have carefully considered this because the duty falls largely on me personally to try to correlate and corral all of this voluminous material. I was concerned as a practicing lawyer, if perchance they could find some little document that we didn't know anything about that might have been passed page 75 } on thirty years ago, or 20 weeks ago, that had no remote connection in this case, produce it in Court and say then we should forget our defense, we should have our testimony moved out of Court because we were toying with the Court, as I understand has been said heretofore with reference to us, have some kind of adverse ruling under Virginia procedure thrown at us, because we failed to turn up with some insignificant ruling.

If this Court now rules we have to produce the Constitution, I see no objection; but if we are required to produce anything that might conceivably be charged to be by the eminent counsel for the opposition, a regulation or a ruling in effect, and that would include anything that hadn't been revoked since 1890—

Mr. Robertson: No, it doesn't.

Mr. Cowherd: We would like to have that clarified in the record. What are we being asked to produce?

Mr. Robertson: You are asked for the rulings from October 28, 1949, down to date. I think it is a reflection on the Court to say to make an effort in good faith, and some little trivial thing found here, that the Court would strike it out, of course the Court wouldn't do it.

Mr. Cowherd: That is not my understanding of the word "effect".

The Court: Don't you gentlemen have all your rulings combined?

page 76 } Mr. Cowherd: No, sir, we do not. It would be an immaterial ruling where one man would write in and ask a question under so and so of the Constitution, am I required to pay dues for the month of April, and May and June, 1899.

Mr. Robertson: We only want the rulings from October 28—

The Court: Why can't we simplify the matter? We don't want you to go back sixty years.

Mr. Robertson: Will you state your ruling in the record? All I am asking for is from October 28, 1948, down to date. I am not asking him to go back behind that date. That is not such a terrible thing, from that time.

The Court: You want the rulings that were put into effect between those dates.

Mr. Cowherd: Just a moment. I have an objection to that. Suppose the District President of the State of Washington writes in and says XYZ Coal Company has asked me for an interpretation, does the present national contract affect our tonnage rate under the article of the Constitution as affecting diggers of coal in the State of Washington.

Mr. Robertson: We are entitled to show the interrelationship between these different people. That is the only way we know to get at it.

Mr. Cowherd: The question should be stated as to form, as to what rulings—page 77 } Mr. Robertson: I am stating what I have asked the Court to do.

The Court: What do you say?

Mr. Cowherd: I suggest he narrow it down to any rulings in anywise connected with the case at bar, or in anywise connected with relationship, if he wants, between the components of the organization, if she desires to call it that, dealing with the subject matter under litigation, not some man who wants—

Mr. Robertson: I don't want to put myself at their mercy that way. I want them all. The Court can rule which ones apply. I am not willing to accept their statement. They have already said everything I asked for is irrelevant. I don't want any such ruling as that.

Mr. Mullen: The Supreme Court of the United States said that was the way to call, on those relevant; then you objected they were not relevant—

Mr. Robertson: I think they are relevant, though, here from the date of our contract down to the present time.

Mr. Mullen: It will take months.

Col. Harris: May I give your Honor an additional bit of information? The United Mine Workers of America mine coal in 26 different states. The total membership of the mine workers of District 50 and the Construction Workers runs to 600,000 men.

page 78 } Mr. Robertson: I am willing to leave out "all other regulations and rulings."

The Court: All right.

Mr. Robertson: If they try to introduce any of them, I am. Of course, they can't blow hot and cold on that.

The Court: We are scratching out, "and all other regulations and rulings". It will read, "Charter, Constitution, Laws and By-Laws". That ought to be simple enough.

Mr. Cowherd: No objection.

The Court: No objection, now that we have taken out "all other regulations and rulings".

Mr. Cowherd: Yes.

Mr. Pollard: We still object as to the scope of the time.

Mr. Cowherd: As to the date.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Robertson: The next one.

Mr. Mullen: That is 9-e.

Mr. Robertson: I am asking that you read the whole question and subsection, so you can get the content of what we are driving at. If you don't, I will.

The Court: I think that is fair.

Mr. Mullen: Question 9.

"9. Did the Constitution of United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, page 79 } 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide that, among other objects, it was an object of United Mine Workers of America to do the following:

" 'First. To unite in one organization, regardless of creed, color or nationality, all workers eligible for membership, employed in and around coal mines, coal washeries, coal processing plants, coke ovens, and in such other industries as may be designated and approved by the International Executive Board, on the American continent',

"and, if so, state the following:

"(a) During what period or periods did said Constitution so provide?

"(b) With respect to the 'one organization' mentioned in the language quoted above, were the members of District 50 at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, a part of this 'one organization', and, if so, during what period or periods?"

We are not objecting to that. We will get the whole answer as to proposed organization, right there.

The Court: Let me read the whole thing.

(Pause, while the Court examines said document.)

The Court: All right.

Mr. Mullen: Subsection (c) is next.

page 80 } "(c) With respect to the 'one organization' mentioned in the language quoted above, were the members of United Construction Workers at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, a part of this 'one organization', and, if so, during what period or periods?

"(d) With respect to the 'one organization' mentioned in the language quoted above, were the members of United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, a part of this 'one organization', and, if so, during what period or periods?

"(e) With respect to the 'such other industries as may be designated and approved by the International Executive Board; mentioned in the language quoted above, what were the designated and approved 'other industries' between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949; and what have been the designated and approved 'other industries' since August 4, 1949?"

page 81 } Col. Harris: What is meant, this man was in the construction business. That is, Mr. Bryan is operating the Laburnum Construction Company. Then District 50 isn't limited to Construction Workers. It takes in multitudinous types of workers. What difference does it make in this case if there were chemical workers, if there were men working on other jobs, all of the varied industry of America? What has that got to do with the simple question that deals with the Laburnum Construction Company?

Mr. Robertson: It shows they are one component part of the parent company.

Col. Harris: It has no tendency logically or factually to prove the component part, to show the size of District 50.

Mr. Robertson: I am not asking the size. I am asking what other industries it included.

The Court: What relevancy do you say that has to this matter, Mr. Robertson?

Mr. Robertson: I think it shows the course of interrelationship between the parent organization and its component part of it, or this agency.

Mr. Cowherd: It would be simple enough to answer—

Mr. Robertson: Was the International Executive Board reaching down, approving things all down through this District 50?

Mr. Cowherd: It would be very simple to ask whether the industry complained of, the industry complaining, page 82 } had been accepted into the group.

The Court: Why not ask the question about this particular industry you are concerned with? That would seem to me to be relevant.

Mr. Robertson: Except I think this, your Honor, I think the whole course of dealing, as I understand the law of agency, the whole course of dealing between United Mine Workers and District 50—how far, of course, District 50 is a creature of the United Mine Workers, that is what we are trying to show. And in the course of dealing with this parent, with this creature, it is very relevant showing the agency. If they did it in just one instance, that is one thing. If they did it nationwide, as we believe it did, we would like to have the jury know that, and say if the United Mine Workers is sitting up there, they are pulling the strings for District 50 all over the United States, taking this industry, letting that one out, expel this one. That course of dealing in itself could be conclusive proof in the eyes of the jury that District 50 was the Agent of the United Mine Workers, that United Mine Workers was acting through that instrumentality.

Mr. Mullen: You would have to go much farther than that to show agency. That has been decided in the case of United Mine Workers. They are not responsible for that Local Union.

Mr. Robertson: I don't know about the relevance of these things. That will be proved at the trial. They ask me why I claim it is relevant. I say that we say under the law of Kentucky, I am prepared to argue at any time, under the substantive law of Kentucky, it is relevant.

Col. Harris: Of course, the questions of procedure, as the gentleman stated during this hearing, are governed by the laws of Virginia, and the questions of admissibility of evidence as such are questions of procedure.

Now, then, we have 26 states. They bear no relation whatsoever to the construction industry. This question is framed and the argument is directed to getting before the jury, again for purposes of prejudice, the tremendous size of District 50. It isn't framed to show agency. You can find out by asking questions limited to construction workers or to Laburnum Construction Company.

So we say that this question is subject to all objections that Mr. Mullen read this morning. Why do we have to go back and dig up a list and see every industry in every one of the 26 states? That isn't going to throw any light on what happened over in Kentucky. It has nothing to do with what happened over in Kentucky.

Mr. Robertson: If your Honor please, I never heard such argument. You mean suppose this defendant operates nationwide. It is a defendant. Haven't we got a right to show it, in addition to everything else I have said, and if the United Mine Workers has this dummy subordinate page 84 } through whom it acts nationwide, including out here in Kentucky, haven't I got a right to show it? If in addition to Breathitt County, Kentucky, they are using this instrumentality throughout the United States, do you mean it is irrelevant to show that?

Mr. Mullen: I can't see how these industries that come under District 50 can possibly throw any light on the question of liability down there. This particular industry, Construction Workers, is what they are concerned with, and what they can ask, if Construction Workers has been designated as an industry in which the District 50 could have local unions. That is all they are concerned with. If it tends to show agency, which I think it does not, to use that instance where they are concerned is just as potent as to use a hundred other industries that has no bearing on it whatsoever.

Mr. Robertson: I just can't follow that argument. If I could show United Mine Workers acting through this instrumentality is furthering its purposes all through America, and that it was acting through this instrumentality on our job—the fact that it is not only on our job, but in all of these other industries is not evidence tending to prove our case that they did here just what they did in other instances? It is what the case is on.

Mr. Mullen: What more are you concerned with in this particular in reference to this defendant than is page 85 } stated in the Constitution of these defendants, namely that District 50 is created as a District of this defendant and subject to the international laws? What more do you want?

Mr. Robertson: You have asked the question, I will answer it. I think it is additional proof. Suppose somebody claims I am general attorney for Virginia Transit Company, and say, "Well, how do you prove that?" I say, "I tried that one case for them", and they would say, "Well, that doesn't make you general attorney." During that same 12 months, I tried cases all over Virginia and North Carolina. What about that? Do you think that is not an element? It is the same proposition here.

Mr. Pollard: Excuses me, applying Mr. Robertson's argument to this case, he said he tried that one case. Does that make him general attorney? Well, if we are agent in this one case out in Kentucky, the rest of it is material anyway. That is the only thing you are concerned with.

Mr. Robertson: We are to get in the running with all of them here, I see. I say when you assert that I am general agent and I don't know but one case, that I have ever tried, that doesn't make me a general attorney necessarily. If it is up before a jury, I am certainly entitled to show whoever tried to prove me general attorney, that during the same time involved in this thing, I tried things for the same page 86 } company all over Virginia and North Carolina.

We say here you were agent of United Mine Workers. You were acting as their agents, furthering their business. You not only did this, but as further proof of that, that is what you do as practice and course of action all through the United States.

Col. Harris: We are not being tried for anything that happened with reference to other people in the United States. It is a question of whether we did any legal wrong to this plaintiff for which this plaintiff is entitled to recover. If we would list 1,500 different industries, there couldn't be any possible effect except to lead somebody on the jury to say, "Well, this Union is too big".

Mr. Robertson: We have got the right to say that, if we want to.

The Court: Let him finish.

Mr. Robertson: I have got the right sometime to make the closing argument.

The Court: We will let you close after we hear from this gentleman. Go ahead and finish.

Col. Harris: That is all. I think it is purely a question for prejudice and would be an unreasonable burden on us.

Mr. Robertson: Of course, he is arguing what I am asking is substantive law. I am not. I am asking for page 87 } method of proof, circumstantial evidence.

The Court: Well, as presently advised, I will allow the question to be answered.

Col. Harris: We reserve an exception.

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Robertson: 13 (d). I am going to ask that you read all of that.

Mr. Mullen: 13 (d).

Mr. Robertson: I want to read all of that.

Mr. Mullen: "13. Did the Constitution of United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide that, among other objects, it was an object of United Mine Workers of America to do the following:

"Second. To increase the wages, and improve the conditions of employment of our members by legislation, conciliation, joint agreements or strikes,'

"and, if so, state the following:

"(a) During what period or periods did said Constitution so provide?"

That is the question they have repeated fifty-two times.

Mr. Robertson: You didn't object to it.

Mr. Mullen: I objected to it as a whole.

The Court: Let's move along.

page 88 } Mr. Mullen: "(b) Was the above quoted object of United Mine Workers of America also an object of District 50 at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, and if so, during what period or periods?"

"(c) Was the above quoted object of United Mine Workers of America also an object of United Construction Workers at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, and, if so, during what period or periods?"

Now, your Honor, please, I have already explained what those joint agreements are. There are over 1,500 of them. They are not joint agreements between District 50 and United Construction Workers, between the Mine Workers of America and United Construction Workers, or Mine Workers of America and District 50. They are the collective bargaining agreements entered into with a party employing page 89 } labor, by that party and the Union representing those laborers. It is put into this Constitution to emphasize what the administration of the United Mine Workers stands for, namely, a contract made shall not be violated. So in all truth they have provided that the local unions cannot make any rules and regulations in violation of joint agreements. That has nothing to do with this case. It will disclose the private business of employers in more than 1,500 cases and would not show anything as to the joint connections of any of these three defendants.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, let me tell you what we are driving at there. First, because you can work for hours on here, you can't find what you are talking about. Any such interpretation as Mr. Mullen says, I have not been able to find it. Suppose you are trying to work out a collective bargaining agreement. Suppose the United Construction Workers was dealing with the employer, District 50 sits in on that thing and aids and abets and advances the purpose in conjunction with them, and United Mine Workers sends its representative there and they all agree on a joint agreement for these three defendants to work together. They all aid each other in accomplishing a collective bargaining agreement. Then we are entitled to know it and we are entitled to those agreements. And it is no excuse, it is either relevant or it is not relevant.

Of course, you don't want to make anybody do un-page 90 } necessary work, but if it is relevant and necessary and proper for the proof of this case, because it entails work they don't like to do is no reason to rule it out.

Mr. Cowherd: May I understand? Does the Court understand just exactly what we mean by 'joint agreements'?

The Court: No, I don't.

Mr. Cowherd: It is nothing in the world but what is meant by a union contract. It isn't good practice for gentlemen to reveal their contracts with one employer and another.

The Court: I want to ask, that is a contract between the Union and employer?

Mr. Cowherd: There are over 3,000, rather than 1,500, because you have got two years inquired about here. We don't object, if we have any joint agreements between this plaintiff and either of the defendants. We haven't heard of one, but we don't think this plaintiff has any right whatever to view a joint agreement which might be from his competitor, or that this Court should require us to put in the record here joint agreements which may reveal agreements between their competitors as employers. That is what joint agreements are.

Mr. Robertson: It takes all of this talk to find out—I am saying this: He is willing to give us anything except what we want that throws a light on it. We haven't page 91 } asked what the joint agreements are between these three defendants. We say here if any one of these three defendants made joint agreements with an employer, the other two were parties to that agreement in the sense of helping put it through, we are entitled to know what the interrelationship is.

The Court: I fail to see the relevance there. I refuse that question.

Mr. Robertson: Does the Court require them to answer what a joint agreement is?

Col. Harris: We do that later.

Mr. Robertson: I am asking about this question now.

The Court: I will allow them to answer what a joint agreement is. Mr. Cowherd has just made the statement.

Mr. Mullen: We are at Question 19.

"19. Who were the members of the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and who have been the members of said International Executive Board since August 4, 1949; when and by whom was each of these persons appointed or elected a member of said International Executive Board; during what period or periods between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also since August 4, 1949, did each serve as a member of said International Executive Board; what Districts or Sub-Districts or branches or subordinate branches of United Mine Workers of America did they respectively represent on said International Executive Board; and what were the locations of their respective offices?"

We object to that question because it is immaterial to the issue in this cause. Any inquiry should be limited to Region 58 of United Construction Workers or District 50. Coal is mined in 26 states. Members of the Board exceed 26 in number. This question would require information to be gotten from all Districts where they are elected. In addition, this is just a general fishing expedition. We cannot page 94 } see what the members of the International Executive Board, other than any representing this Region 58, which is the region within which this is said to occur, in which the men they are inquiring about particularly were working, were employed by whomever they were employed by—and we think that should be limited. We think that is in line with the ruling which your Honor made when we discussed the interrogatories addressed to United Construction Workers.

Mr. Robertson: Your Honor, please, our position on that is this: That we are entitled to know who was on that Committee. For instance, Tom Raney, the International Committeeman from Breathitt County, Kentucky; we think we can pin things on him, but I think I am justified in the statement, also some of the members of the Executive Committee were also members of the organizing committee of District 50, I believe members of the organizing committee of the United Construction Workers.

There is no burden on them to take this publication which appears every two weeks. It has got the names on there. It has been run down in one column. These committeemen, you know, they draw $1,000 a month through their very stable jobs. They don't change very often. We are entitled to know what the interrelationship is between that Executive Committee, this International Executive Board, and these organizing committees of District 50 and United Construction Workers. It is perfectly relevant to show who put them there, whether they were elected or whether they were put in page 95 } there by this Lewis authority, how long they stayed, who they were, so when we get an orderly development of our proof, we think we are going to show they were just all mixed up together, interwoven together, just the same old crowd.

Mr. Mullen: With regard to Thomas Raney, they ask further on specifically if he was a member of the International Executive Board, which question we did not object to. But the other members of the Board, in other Districts—there is one for each District, elected by the District, and as to the facts of their election, being a member on the Board, what that has to do with this matter we cannot see.

Mr. Robertson: Even in corporate law, suppose they are one, two, three, four, five members of the International Executive Board, who were also on the organizing committee of District 50 and held various jobs in District 50, or in United Construction Workers? That is all evidence and proof of agency and interrelationship, component parts. That is our whole case.

Mr. Cowherd: If the Court please, on Interrogatory No. 20, immediately following—

Mr. Robertson: I am talking about No. 19.

Mr. Cowherd: I was about to say in Interrogatory No. 20, the exact question is asked and we are raising no objection. It says, "Who represented District 50 on the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America between", and it is those same dates.
 page 95a } You can get that information in No. 20.

Mr. Robertson: All right. I have got the thing here to show you didn't have any on the specific date. I am entitled to show the whole picture, to establish the interrelationship.

Mr. Cowherd: Question 29 doesn't ask that at all.

Mr. Mullen: It also asks later on in here who were the members of the organizing committee, District 50 and of United Construction Workers. Thomas Raney was then on the Executive Board. It will be shown.

Mr. Robertson: I think I have the right to close, if we are going to close. I will say that is the very reason why I am entitled to know. If I come along later, they are going to try to knock it out, and anyway I can smoke it out, to show what the hook up is between all three of the defendants, I am entitled to know.

The Court: If these questions relate to others, as they come along—it may have some bearing.

Mr. Cowherd: This asks for the Executive Board member and has nothing to do with Region 58, and the area of Breathitt County, Kentucky, no connection whatever.

Mr. Robertson: If I am going to exercise my right—

The Court: Let him finish.

Mr. Cowherd: They have 30 regions scattered page 96 } geographically all over the United States, Canada, to the Gulf, and in Canada. That many.

Mr. Robertson: We are entitled to know how they are hooked up among each other.

The Court: As I understand it, the International Executive Board is the top Board.

Mr. Mullen: Composed of a Board of Directors and the corporation, and are elected by the Districts of the United Mine Workers.

The Court: The Court will allow that question to be answered.

Mr. Mullen: We note an exception.

The Court: An exception will be noted.

page 97 } Mr. Mullen: The next one is No. 24 (f).

Mr. Robertson: Read the whole thing.

Mr. Mullen: "24. Did the Constitution of United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide, among other things as follows:

"In all questions of dispute, appeals and grievances (unless restricted by joint agreement) the right of appeal of an individual member shall end with the District Executive Board, and the right of appeal of any branch of the Organization shall end with the International Executive Board. This shall not prevent individuals whose membership is at stake from appealing to the International Executive Board, which body's decision shall be final and binding until reversed by the International Convention,' and, if so, state the following:

"(a) During what period or periods did said Constitution so provide?

"(b) As used in the language quoted above, do the words 'any branch of the Organization' mean any branch of United Mine Workers of America, including District 50 and United Construction Workers, and, if not, what do they mean?

"(c) Did the members of District 50, whose membership might be at stake, have the right, at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, to appeal to the International Executive Board, all as provided in the language quoted above, and, if so, during what period or periods?

"(d) Did the members of United Construction Workers, whose membership might be at stake, have the right, at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, to appeal to the International Executive Board, all as provided in the language quoted above, and, if so, during what period or periods?

"(e) As used in the language quoted above, do the words 'International Executive Board' mean International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America, and, if not, what do they mean?

"(f) As used in the language quoted above, what is meant by the words 'joint agreement'? Were United Mine Workers of America or District 50, or United Construction Workers parties to or bound by the provisions of any such joint agreement during the period between the dated October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949? If so, furnish a copy of all such joint agreements."

That is repetition of a question gone before, in which Your Honor has ruled we do not have to furnish those agreements.

Mr. Robertson: Are you through?

Mr. Robertson: Your Honor, please, it just shows the context of that language quoted up there out of the Constitution, shows you how impossible it is to nail down the meaning of the language used.

Now, Mr. Mullen has stated here with reference to a prior question, that they referred to a joint agreement between an employer and an individual union. And, therefore, we had no right to pry into the business of that.

This thing is bound to be joint agreements between different unions. That is what we are trying to smoke out; between the United Construction Workers, United Mine Workers, District 50, and the United Mine Workers of America.

"As using the language quoted above, what is meant by the words 'joint agreement'?" If it means what we think it means, from a study of these papers, of these Constitutions and Rules, which we can't understand, it is used in a different sense here than the sense it was used in, in that other question, "Were United Mine Workers of America, or District 50, or United Construction Workers parties to or bound by the provisions of any such joint agreement" between each other during that period?

In other words, if they were all hooked up, they are interwoven and inter-related, and we have got a right to know about it. We have got a right to know how many times it was—page 100 } Mr. Mullen: Not so much as a comma has been changed in that from the question in 13 (d), which Your Honor rules, we understand, against.

The Court: Do the words "joint agreement" mean the same thing as where I ruled a few moments ago?

Mr. Robertson: We say not.

Mr. Mullen: It means the same everywhere it is used in the Constitution.

Mr. Robertson: If they will say that, if they will make that statement, that is all right, all through there, then it is perfectly easy for them to answer it, and say there were no such joint agreements between us.

Col. Harris: We can't let him frame our answers.

Mr. Robertson: You can't frame your answers except under the ruling of the Court either.

Mr. Mullen: Your Honor, please, we agreed to state what the joint agreements were at the former time you ruled.

The Court: The Court refuses to require (f) to be answered, 24 (f).

Mr. Robertson: The Plaintiff will except to refusal of the Court to require the Defendants to answer Interrogatory 24 (f) as tendered, upon the grounds advanced in argument in support of this Interrogatory (f).

Mr. Mullen: Next is No. 27 (f).

Is it necessary to read all that? It is identical page 101 } the same question you just passed on.

Mr. Robertson: I think I have the right to have the thing gone into conscientiously.

The Court: Well, I expect you had better read it then, if it is requested by either party.

Mr. Mullen: "27. Did the Constitution of United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide, among other things, as follows:

" 'Sub-Districts may be formed and assigned such numbers and territory as may be designated by the District of which they are a part, subject to the approval of the International Executive Board; and such Sub-Districts may, after being duly chartered, adopt such laws for their government as do not conflict with the laws and rulings of the International or District Unions or joint agreements', and, if so, state the following:

"(a) During what period or periods did said Constitution so provide?

"(b) Was United Construction Workers formed as a Sub-District of a District of United Mine Workers of America, and, if so, by what District was it formed and of what District did it become a part? What territory was assigned to United Construction Workers?

"(c) When was the formation of United Construction Workers approved by said International Executive Board? Furnish a copy of such approval.

"(d) As used in the language quoted above, do the words 'International Executive Board' mean the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America, and, if not, what do they mean?

"(e) As used in the language quoted above, do the words 'laws and rulings of the International or District Unions' mean the laws and rulings of the United Mine Workers of America or of the District Unions of United Mine Workers of America, and, if not, what do they mean?"

Here is the question we object to.

"(f) As used in the language quoted above, what is meant by the words 'joint agreements'? Were United Mine Workers of America, or District 50, or United Construction Workers parties to or bound by the provisions of any such joint agreements during the period between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949? If so, furnish a copy of all such joint agreements."

Same question without a change of a coma.

Mr. Robertson: Here is what I am trying to drive at. I think the context indicates that the term "joint agreements" was being used in one sense back in the question you ruled on before lunch, and being used in a different sense page 103 } now. I think what they mean here is joint agreements between these component unions or parts of unions or different defendants. You remember before lunch I said, I argued, but the Court rejected my argument, if you were the employer, I come along as the United Construction Workers, try to negotiate a contract and couldn't put it over. I then pull in District 50 to help me, they participate in it, we still can't put it over. Then I pull the United Mine Workers in it to help me, and there you have us all together succeeding in putting it over. I think I would be justified in showing that.

I understood, my recollection is, Mr. Mullen said before lunch there was no such instances of that sort existing. It would be a union making a contract with an employer. No other union or defendant involved in it. If that is correct, I don't think I had a right to ask for it.

Now here, if instead of being a contract between a union and an employer, it is a contract, for instance, between United Construction Workers and District 50, and United Mine Workers or any two of them, I think I am entitled to it.

Col. Harris: We state again that joint agreements do not refer to the agreements that he has in mind. They are employee or employer agreements.

The Court: All right. The Court will refuse to require that question to be answered.

Mr. Robertson: He can answer the first part page 104 } of it, nail that down, Your Honor, that is what you ruled this morning. Go back there to No. 24 (f), ask him to answer the first part of that, that will avoid misunderstanding hereafter.

The Court: In other words, "As used in the language quoted above, what is meant by the words 'joint agreement'?"

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

The Court: The Court will allow that to be answered.

Col. Harris: We can just refer to the previous answer we have made.

The Court: And in 27 (f), answering the first question, that would be the same.

Mr. Mullen: Our next objection is No. 28(e), which brings up the same question.

Mr. Robertson: If you make the same objection, answer it the same way, I think the Court will make the same ruling.

The Court: Same ruling. That was 28(e)?

Mr. Mullen: 28 (e).

The next one is No. 34 (c). Do you want all that read?

Col. Harris: If you are tired and want me to read it, I will?

Mr Mullen: I am going to ask one of you all to read it right now.

Col. Harris: I will be glad to read it.

Mr. Mullen: Go ahead.

page 105 } Col. Harris: "34. With respect to the privileges, powers and duties of the President of United Mine Workers of America, did the Constitution of United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and October 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide, among other things, as follows:

" 'He may appoint a member whose duty shall be to collect and compile statistics on the production, distribution and consumption of coal and coke, freight rates, market conditions, and any other matter that may be of benefit to the Organization. Said statistician shall make a report to the regular convention', and, if so, state the following:

"(a) During what period or periods did said Constitution so provide?

"(b) As used in the language quoted above, do the words 'the Organization' mean United Mine Workers of America and its Districts, Sub-Districts, branches and subordinate branches, including District 50 and United Construction Workers? If not, what do those words mean?

"(c) During the period between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, did any person or member, having been appointed for the purpose by the President of United Mine Workers of America, collect and compile or attempt to collect and compile statistics relating to District 50 and United Construction Workers or to the work and industries claimed by them, respectively? If so, what statistics were collected and compiled and what reports thereon were furnished to the President of United Mine Workers of America? Furnish a copy of all these reports." You have an objection there?

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

Mr. Robertson: I can simplify that somewhat.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Robertson: I think that is too broad, Your Honor. What we are driving at there is—come back here to the language of the Constitution on page 17.

" 'He may appoint a member whose duty shall be to collect and compile statistics on the production, distribution and consumption of coal and coke, freight rates, market conditions, and any other matter that may be of benefit to the Organization.' "

That just throws it all wide open. We want to know what the scope of his duties were there? What he did? Otherwise, these statistics, we want to show the inter-relationship between them and statistics so far as they apply there would show the inter-relationship. We don't care about those statistics all over the United States.

Col. Harris: Judge, hasn't he misread the question? Don't the words "and any other matter" relate to statistics?

Mr. Robertson: Not necessarily.

page 107 } Col. Harris: They do to me.

Mr. Robertson: If you will make that statement in the record, that is entirely satisfactory to me.

The Court: Let's see! "He may appoint a member whose duty shall be to collect and compile statistics on the production, distribution and consumption of coal and coke, freight rates, market conditions, and any other matter that may be of benefit to the Organization."

Mr. Mullen: Statistics on them.

Mr. Robertson: What we are trying to get there, if they had had anybody compiling statistics on District 50 of United Construction Workers, or Region 58, we are entitled to know it.

Mr. Mullen: United Construction Workers have 675 locals, 45,000 members, 58 regions. District 50 has 850 locals, 112,643 members, and 58 regions. We think that question of information should be confined to Region 58, which is the region involved in this matter. We don't think that to go all the way in hundreds of locals—

The Court: What is the objection to confining it to Region 58?

Mr. Robertson: I think that would give us substantially what we want.

The Court: All right. Confine it to Region 58.

Mr. Pollard: District 58, United Construction Workers.

The Court: Region 58 of District 50 of United page 108 } Construction Workers.

Mr. Mullen: Region 58, of District 50 and of United Construction Workers.

The Court: What is the next?

Mr. Mullen: The next one is 35 (c).

Col. Harris: I will read it. Would you like to have me read it all?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Col. Harris: "35. With respect to the privileges, powers and duties of the President of United Mine Workers of America, did the Constitution of United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide, among other things, as follows:

" 'He may appoint such organizers field and office workers as may in his judgment be necessary to conduct the affairs of the International Union',

and, if so, state the following:

"(a) During what period or periods did said Constitution so provide?

"(b) As used in the language quoted above, do the words 'International Union' mean United Mine Workers of America and its Districts, Sub-Districts, branches and subordinate branches, including District 50 and United Construction Workers. If not, what do those words mean?

"(c) What organizers, field and office workers did the President of United Mine Workers of America appoint or cause to be appointed to conduct or to assist in conducting the affairs of District 50 and United Construction Workers, or either of them, during the period between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949?"

Mr. Mullen: We object to that on the grounds it is not material to the issues in this cause, and covers too much ground.

We do not object to giving this information for Region 58, or District 50, United Construction Workers, but United Construction Workers has 675 Locals, 58 Regions, District 50 has 850 Locals, 58 Regions. This question would cause to determine every stenographer, office boy, or anybody else appointed in any of those Regions all over the United States and Canada.

If they want the information that they appointed anybody in the Region 58, and thereby that shows agency, all right. We will furnish that information. We don't think we are called on to go all over the United States and Canada.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, here is why we think that question is correct as propounded.

Suppose that they did at times appoint anybody within Region 58, but suppose they were employing them page 110 } everywhere else in America, then it was their general agent even though they didn't specially appoint one in this territorial subdivision, if Tom Raney was their man acting there, he was their agent there, and they would still be liable for his acts.

So, even though they may not have appointed anybody within Region 58, if they had been appointing them all over the country, it would show that the United Mine Workers was dominating and controlling District 50, had the right to do it. It would be a question of whether or not they exercised that right.

The Court: Why don't you confine it to Region 58, and any others appointed outside who performed any duties in Region 58 during that period?

Mr. Robertson: I don't think that would meet it. Suppose that the United Mine Workers appointed everywhere in America except in Region 58, they would still be their general agent. We would still show the inter-relationship between the United Mine Workers and District 50, which dominated and controlled them, if our theory of the law is right. Therefore, United Mine Workers would be liable for its illegal acts.

Mr. Mullen: That remains to be seen. Does Your Honor realize the immense amount of work in an organization of this size that this would call for, the whole United States and Canada?

Of course, in carrying on the work, there are page 111 } changes in employees from time to time. This goes down to as low as office boys. I don't think that it has any material bearing. If they want to show an agency, claims that that shows an agency, if it could so be said, they have the answer right there when it states in the Constitution: "He may appoint such organizers, field and office workers as may in his judgment be necessary to conduct the affairs of the International Union."

Mr. Robertson: Of course, here is what they are driving at. If the independent organizations, if District 50 is not dominated by United Mine Workers, there wouldn't be anything there. It would be just a little trival thing. If they are reaching down in their appointing of office boys, scullery maids, everybody else, that is proof-positive of what we are saying, that they are dominating the whole concern. And we are entitled to know it.

Col. Harris: Is it permitted for me to say something? I don't want to violate your rules.

The Court: I have an open mind on this. The Court wants all the enlightenment it can get.

Col. Harris: Well, I—

Mr. Robertson: I hadn't finished.

Col. Harris: Pardon me.

Mr. Robertson: I had another thought to add, it just came to me.

The Court: If it comes to your mind, all right.

Col. Harris: I was struck with the fact, Your page 112 } Honor used exactly the words that were running through my mind, that was this: If any men were appointed in Region 58, or if they were appointed for some other region and went down and worked in Region 58, that would not impose an unreasonable burden on us. It would give him the information that is relevant and pertinent.

Now, then, he keeps talking about showing the connection between the unions. There isn't any doubt from the Constitution that the parent organization is the International Union of United Mine Workers of America. That appears from the Constitution. Nobody could keep it from being the parent organization. So any question of trying to show a relationship seems to me beside the point.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, here is my point: That had escaped my mind. As has been said, there is the parent organization. There is the authority, if you choose to exercise it.

Now, this Coronada Case in the Supreme Court of the United States, which has been cited in this case, goes a long way in saying, which of course is correct, you have not only got to show the existence of authority, you have got to show it was exercised. Which, of course, is just a garden variety of the law of agency. We don't think the Coronada case applies here, or has got anything to do with this case at all.

This is not under Federal Statute, not under Federal laws. It is under the law of Kentucky. The Law of Kentucky is not the law of the Coronada case, which is surely page 113 } a Federal Statute. We are going to apply the garden variety of laws of agency of Kentucky, which I think is about the same as Virginia in this phase of it.

After you show the existence of an agency, you have got to show action. That is what we are trying to show. That is exactly what we don't want to show, because it takes us off on the Coronada Case, and that is exactly what we want, if they are putting in here office boys, stenographers, every Tom, Dick and Harry, we are entitled to know it.

Mr. Mullen: It won't help you under the Coronada Case.

Mr. Robertson: We don't think that case applies here. We say, in other words, to prove our case, we have got to show the existence of the relationship of an agency. We have got to show the act of the agency was actually performed. Here it is. It goes right to the heart of the case.

The Court: In assuming, if none of these employees were in Region 50, how would that tie in in this particular case?

Mr. Robertson: It would show the general agency. It would, I suppose, show a general control of District 50 by the United Mine Workers. Then, suppose I can show that somebody connected with District 50 did these unlawful acts within the scope of his authority, which would render them liable under the law of Kentucky, then I have got them.

page 114 } I have got a right to show the existence of the relationship of an agency and the exercise of the act of agency generally as supporting my claim that Tom Raney was acting as an agent in the acts that are attributed to him in this action.

The Court: May I ask this question?

Reference has been made to Mr. Raney. Did he come down into Region 50?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

The Court: Wouldn't that be covered in the question I suggested? Those employees in Region 50 appointed in Region 50, those employees appointed outside of Region 50, who have been in Region 50.

Col. Harris: Region 58.

The Court: Region 58.

Mr. Cowherd: Mr. Tom Raney is the International Executive Board member for an area larger than Region 58, but part of Region 58, that part in which Breathitt County is situated, is in that same geographical area. He is there all the time. That is his station.

Mr. Robertson: We are not suing on Region 58, we are suing District 50, whatever Region 50 is. I don't know how important Region 58 is, I have some idea how important District 50 is.

Mr. Mullen: I think Mr. Robertson's argument contradicts itself. He says after showing agency there, they must show specific acts done under that agency. Now, showing general agency in other districts isn't necessary, if he shows an agency in this District. He still hasn't gotten anywhere, unless he shows that under that agency wrongful acts were committed by employees of one or more of these organizations.

Mr. Robertson: Suppose he is a general agent of District 50, and I show that—I am using him as an illustration—he and us are agents of District 50, generally elsewhere in the United States. Then they come within Region 58, within the general scope of that authority, and in furtherance of the objectives of District 50, and of the United Mine Workers, do unlawful acts, then under the laws of Kentucky, they are liable without any prior authorization, or subsequent ratification.

The Court: What does District 50 comprise?

Mr. Robertson: That is what we are trying to find out.

Mr. Mullen: United States and Canada.

Mr. Cowherd: There are 58 different regions geographically located.

The Court: District 50 is comprised of the United States and Canada.

Mr. Cowherd: Whatever occurred in this case occurred wholly within Region 58 or District 50, one of the page 116 } 58 regions.

Mr. Robertson: We started out this morning, as I understood the claim, it was an independent union. Now it turns out they have already gotten far enough in here that it runs right square back to John L. Lewis. He runs the whole thing, the Executive Board, the top people. They object now, because we say he comes down and dictates to the office boys and the stenographers. If that is the fact, we are entitled to know it.

Mr. Mullen: We said this morning that District 50 is a district of the United Mine Workers. It runs its own affairs.

The Court: As presently advised, the Court will restrict this question to Region 58, and all employees appointed outside of Region 58, who have been doing business in the confines of Region 58, regardless of where they were appointed.

All right. 37 (c) and (d).

Col. Harris: All employees appointed outside of 58—

Mr. Cowherd: This might seem foolish. It really isn't. Would it apply to the lawyers they have sent down there who have made investigations on this case?

The Court: The Court wouldn't be interested in attorneys.

Mr. Robertson: I don't care anything about the lawyers.

The Court: The attorneys are excluded.

Mr. Robertson: I don't know. Suppose John page 117 } L. Lewis appointed them. I think—Suppose John L. Lewis employed Mr. Cowherd—I think that would be the most flagrant interference, most flagrant control.

Suppose John L. Lewis appointed Mr. Mullen or Mr. Pollard, is that evidence?

Mr. Pollard: I suggest it is not evidence. We are employed to defend this case, regardless of any agency.

Mr. Robertson: That is all right. I want to show the control. I ask they show that. If they didn't employ him, they don't have to state it. If they did, we are entitled to know it.

Mr. Mullen: We object to that. I don't think they have the right to bring lawyers into this matter.

The Court: Well, lawyers will be excluded in this.

Col. Harris: What is the next one?

Mr. Mullen: No. 37 (c) and (d).

Col. Harris: "37. With respect to the privileges, powers, and duties of the President of United Mine Workers of America, did the Constitution of United Mine Workers of America, at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide among other things, as follows:

" 'He shall interpret the meaning of the International Constitution but his interpretation shall be subject to page 118 } repeal by the International Executive Board', and, if so, state the following:

"(a) During what period or periods did said Constitution so provide?

"(b) As used in the language quoted above, do the words 'International Constitution' mean the International Constitution of United Mine Workers of America, and, if not, what do those words mean?

"(c) What interpretations of the meaning of said 'International Constitution' made by the President of United Mine Workers of America were in effect between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949? Furnish a copy of all these interpretations,"

Is it "C" you are objecting to?

Mr. Mullen: "C" and "D".

Col. Harris: "(d) During the period between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, did the President of United Mine Workers of America have the right to interpret or to cause to be interpreted the meaning of the Constitutions or Rules of District 50 and of United Construction Workers? If so, what interpretations of the meaning of said Constitutions or Rules made by the President of United Mine Workers of America were in effect between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949? Furnish a copy of all page 119 } these interpretations."

Will you state the objections, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Robertson: One minute! I think we can simplify that in line with the prior ruling of the Court, the interpretations made on and after October 28, 1948, down to date.

Mr. Mullen: If that is so, then with reference to this matter or in reference to Region 58, yes. But during these two years, the United Mine Workers have been doing business all over the United States and Canada. There were undoubtedly letters written by the President for various mining regions, asking, "Under the Constitution, can we do so and so?" or, "Under the Constitution, what is to be done about the rates, tonnage of this district?" That has no bearing on this case. It simply is almost an impossible task. It means taking the entire office practically of United Mine Workers for those two years and bringing it down to Richmond.

Mr. Cowherd: If the Court please, in trying to arrive at some means of answering these, before objections were even contemplated, we began to make our "road map." We found out to get that particular information, we would have to search the independent file of each of the thousands of local unions to get those things, because it isn't kept in a compiled form, and there isn't that much formality in connection with one out of a hundred inquiries.

Mr. Robertson: Now, if Your Honor please, to page 120 } come back to these basic things, which you can see, is the heart of our case all the way through here, to show the inter-relationship between these different defendants and the relationship either as component parts of one organization, or as principal and agent. Now, they don't have to count them all. Suppose they say they have done that generally all through the United States. That would cover the answer.

Another thing we are up against. I have read enough of these cases to know it. What we have a right to be protected against is when we go to the trial and come out and rely on one of these things (indicating the Constitution), then you see Mr. John L. Lewis has the right to interpret any way he wants, and nullify the whole thing, subject to veto by the International Executive Board. We want to be protected against that.

So, it has gone a double objective; one, is to protect us against what I have just stated; two, they have been doing it all over the United States. I am not interested in this local, that local, and the other. If it has been their practice and custom throughout the United States, this Plaintiff is entitled to know it.

Mr. Cowherd: If the Court please, that isn't what I said.

Mr. Robertson: I hadn't finished. I come to (d).

The Court: Suppose we stick on (c) first, and page 121 } confine our remarks to "C".

Mr. Cowherd: We don't know whether there has been an interpretation or not, and to find out if there has been, irrespective of the subject to which it refers, we would have to go through and search the files, thousands in number, and it can't be done under six months, to find out whether or not there has been an interpretation.

When we use the words, "were in effect", we would have to recheck and double-check, if there has been a contra inquiry, to see whether that was changed, to be sure the Constitution does not grant to the President, a reading of it will show any right to change the Constitution, or to amend it. That is granted only to the Convention, which doesn't happen until 1952. And there is no such thing as anybody having a right to change the wording of the Constitution; only to interpret its application to a particular incident that may occur somewhere.

Mr. Robertson: Let me just tell you that does not make sense. I haven't said anything about rewriting the Constitution. I have said, "Does this gentleman mean to say that the top man of this organization, whether it is John L. Lewis or Tom Jones, don't care who it is, doesn't know whether he has been interpreting these things as constant practice around throughout the United States without searching the files?"

I might as well ask Your Honor if you had tried page 122 } cases, the general character of the business of

Your Court is such, you don't have to run back to the files to tell what's what.

The Court: Let me read this again.

Col. Harris: He asks for copies.

The Court: It asks to furnish a copy of all these interpretations, to do so, you would have to go to the files to get those.

Mr. Robertson: I am willing to waive that. I want to know what the general practice is. I am willing to eliminate that.

The Court: In other words, you want to know whether general practice is for the President to interpret these—The International Constitution.

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Mullen: Is it the general practice of the President to interpret the International Constitution?

Mr. Robertson: What, in general, is done?

The Court: The general answer whether he interprets the International Constitution.

Mr. Cowherd: The Constitution so states, yes.

Mr. Robertson: It gives him the power. You want to know whether he has been doing it?

The Court: That is what he has been doing.

Col. Harris: I think he is entitled to ask page 123 } whether he has performed a function under that.

I think as limited that way, my own personal opinion, these other lawyers may disagree with me, as limited that way, has he made interpretations, yes. But, to go through all our files—

The Court: That is what you want to know.

Mr. Robertson: As I have understood it, what is the interpretation, if he can state it, in general. If he gives a general, honest, forthright answer, I am satisfied. I don't want to ask him to dig out each letter.

The Court: Answer that question to the best of your ability along those lines. All right? No copies are to be furnished.

Now we go to "D".

Col. Harris: "(d)—

Mr. Mullen: That is the same thing.

Col. Harris: No, that is slightly different.

"(d) During the period between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, did the President of United Mine Workers of America have the right to interpret or to cause to be interpreted the meaning of the Constitutions or Rules of District 50 and of United Construction Workers? If so, what interpretations of the meaning of said Constitutions or Rules made by the President of United Mine Workers of America were in effect between the dates

October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also page 124 } after August 4, 1949? Furnish a copy of all these interpretations."

The same argument that we have made—

Mr. Robertson: I think that if furnishing copies were to come out, then you would answer it like you did the other one.

The Court: I think the same would apply to "D".

Col. Harris: Will Your Honor indulge us just a second, so I can catch up here on that?

The Court: Certainly.

Col. Harris: 37 (d), the same ruling?

The Court: Yes.

Col. Harris: As in 37 (c)?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Mullen: The next is 40 (b).

Col. Harris: "40. Did the Constitution of United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide, among other things, as follows:

" 'All appointments, suspensions and removals from office done by the President shall be subject to the approval of the International Executive Board', and, if so, state the following:

"(a) During what period or periods did said Constitution so provide?

page 125 } "(b) During the period between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, what appointments, suspensions and removals done by the President of United Mine Workers of America were approved by the International Executive Board, and what appointments, suspensions and removals done by the President of United Mine Workers of America were disapproved by the International Executive Board?"

You have an objection.

Mr. Mullen: The question is objected to on the grounds—

Mr. Robertson: I may be able to save some time. If you say you approve 95, and disapprove 5, that is all I want. I am not asking to say, approve them all, or disapprove them all. There couldn't have been a terrific volume.

The Court: Does that satisfy you? In other words, if 95 were approved, and 5 were disapproved, without giving names. It seems to me you could do that without any trouble.

Col. Harris: All right. That is, giving percentages, giving numbers.

The Court: The number approved, the number disapproved.

Mr. Cowherd: No names.

The Court: Now go to 43.

Mr. Mullen: 43 (b).

Col. Harris: "43. With respect to the Inter-page 126 } national Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America, did the Constitution of United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide, among other things, as follows:

" 'The Board shall be convened upon the order of the President, or by the Secretary-Treasurer at the request of a majority of the members thereof',

and, if so, state the following:

" (a) During what period or periods did said Constitution so provide?

" (b) During the period between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, what meetings of the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America were held? When and by whose order was each meeting convened and when did each meeting adjourn?"

Mr. Mullen: Your Honor, we object to that on the grounds that it is clearly immaterial. It does not come under Mr.
Robertson's stock answer that it shows agency.

Of course the International Executive Board, which is the Board of Directors, from time to time called a meeting. But that fact, when they held meetings, when they adjourned, certainly cannot have any bearing on this case.

Mr. Robertson: Now, if Your Honor please, page 127 } Mr. Mullen here has referred to what everybody reads in the newspapers and knows; well, if I may fall back on that, it is certainly common newspaper reading that John L. Lewis dominates the whole show, and the International Executive Board is a dummy board he completely controls, that he hires and fires, and exercises the powers of an industrial czar.

Now, we are claiming that this thing starts at, and the United Construction Workers goes up through District 50, goes on up, on through to the top. We are showing all that.
We think before we get through with this case, we are going to show he reaches all the way down; whatever he wants to do, he does it. That being so, throwing light on that situation, we think we are entitled to have those questions.

The Court: Let me read this again.

Col. Harris: I might state for the record we don't deny that Mr. Lewis is President of the union and we think he is a good one. But he is no such superman, as that, that he can reach on down and touch every transaction of 600,000 members. That would require omnipotence, rather than enlarged human powers.

Mr. Robertson: That is what we are going to find out. I think he is, and we shall be enlightened about the deity. From what we read about him, that committee rarely functions without him. I didn't mean to use an offensive term.

The Court: I don't know that the Court is interested in that line of argument.

page 128 } Col. Harris: I am not offended or anything else. I am trying to arrive—

Mr. Robertson: We realize you are trying to help us get the information.

Col. Harris: I am trying to help you get that information. You are legally entitled to that. I am trying to help you get the information which you are legally entitled to, and we do not object.

Mr. Robertson: I am wary of Greeks bearing gifts.

* * * * *

The Court: Gentlemen, I will allow that question to be answered. I don't think it will work a hardship on you.

Col. Harris: 43 (b)?

The Court: Yes.

The next is 45.

Mr. Mullen: Do you want to read that?

The Court: What is your objection to 45?

Mr. Mullen: Our objection was that the salaries of the officers—

Mr. Robertson: Read the whole thing.

Col. Harris: I will read it.

“45. Did the Constitution of United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide, among other things, as follows:

page 129 } “ ‘The salary of the President shall be $50,000 per annum; Vice President, $40,000 per annum, Secretary-Treasurer, $40,000 per annum; International Executive Board Members, $1,000 per month; Tellers and Auditors, $25.00 per day when employed. Each of the above mentioned officers shall receive, in addition to their salaries, such additional sums for additional service rendered as may be authorized and approved by the President; together with all legitimate expenses when employed by the Organization away from their places of residence,'

and, if so, state the following:

"(a) During what period or periods did said Constitution so provide?

"(b) During the period between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, did United Mine Workers of America pay to Thomas Raney, as a member of the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America, in addition to his salary, 'additional sums for additional service rendered'? If so, what 'additional sums' were paid to Thomas Raney; for what 'additional service rendered' were such payments made; and when were such payments authorized and approved by the President of United Mine Workers of America?

"(c) As used in the language quoted above, does the word 'Organization' mean the United Mine Workers of America and its Districts, Sub-Districts, branches and subordinate branches, including District 50 and United Construction Workers? If not, what does that word mean?"

There has been some confusion as between Mr. Mullen's memorandum and my memorandum as to whether or not all of that question was to be objected to, or only a part of it, or none of it.

Mr. Mullen: The objection, I used it this morning in arguing against interrogatories as a whole, is on the ground of showing prejudice by the fact that, quoting, in regard to the salaries of the President and so forth, was not a necessary part of the question, which was whether Thomas Raney had been paid anything extra and that the very fact that no other question was based on that, except as to Tom Raney, shows it was used for prejudice.

Col. Harris: Am I correct in this? We see no objection to answering, if he leaves off reading to the jury the salaries of these officers?

Mr. Mullen: That is right.

Col. Harris: And confines his question to the last sentence as applied to Thomas Raney. It may be that Thomas Raney was at work down there. He thinks he did something, he got some additional pay for. He is entitled to find out. We won't object to it.

The Court: You object to the salaries being read out?

Col. Harris: Read out and paraded before the page 131 } jury.

Mr. Pollard: That has nothing to do with approving agency, Judge.

Mr. Robertson: The whole Constitution, as I understand it, is going to be put in. Evidently nothing is going to be deleted. They are going to put it in, as I understand that. Now it is not for prejudice we tried to get in here the net worth of these different unions. The Court ruled we couldn't do it. The salaries of these people have got nothing to do with their net worth. We are not claiming they were over paid, not claiming anything else. What we are principally interested in— it never occurred to me it would prejudice—I don't see why it should prejudice them. Mr. Mullen says everybody that reads the papers knows what these salaries are.

Mr. Mullen: I didn't say that.

Mr. Robertson: We are principally interested in this, whether on account of what Thomas Raney did or anybody else, whether in United Construction Workers, District 50, or United Mine Workers, if they went down there and participated in what took place, if he got extra pay for it, we want to know about it.

Col. Harris: I only asked about Tom Raney.

The Court: I think the objection is about setting forth the salaries of the officers and the question is now without the salaries, without quoting the salaries as provided in the Constitution.

Mr. Robertson: Exception.

page 132 } Col. Harris: What is the next one?

Mr. Mullen: The next is Category 61 to 64, both inclusive.

Mr. Robertson: We are getting down to the heart of it now.

Col. Harris: Shall I read it?

The Court: Yes.

Col. Harris: "61. Who are the persons who served as Regional Directors of District 50 between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949; when and by whom was each of these persons appointed a Regional Director; during what period or periods between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, did each serve as a Regional Director; what were the numbers of their respective Regions, and what were the locations of their respective Regional Offices?"

The Court: Suppose we take them one at a time and discuss them as we go down.

Mr. Mullen: We object to that on the grounds that this question is not material to the issue in this cause, as applied to United Construction Workers in District 50. It should be limited to Region 58 of District 50, and United Construction Workers, being the district in which the wrongs complained of are alleged to have occurred. The territory page 133 } had a number of people and locals in Region 58, United Construction Workers. I have heretofore set forth a large number of those. This question is merely a fishing expedition.

As I said, District 50 has 58 Regions, The United Construction Workers. There are districts under the Regions. Persons who have served as Regional Director in each district have nothing to do with what happens in District 50. That is merely a part of an organization, just like a corporation with its directors, with its managers under those directors. It compares very well to Universal Leaf Tobacco Company, with its separate districts, a man on each market, in each town, and a man in charge of those districts. What one does in Oxford, North Carolina, doesn't concern what the one in Danville does. We have a similar situation here exactly.

I don't think that question is proper under those circumstances.

Mr. Robertson: If The Court please, we can't of course, ask but one question at a time. We are entitled to smoke it out here, to what extent, if any. If we don't smoke it out, it is a point in their favor. The same individuals serve in different capacities and are all bound up together in a common cause being advanced together by these three defendants, either through their component parts, or agents. We are entitled to ask that about the officers of each one of the three defendants. These Regional Directors, I think, page 134 } are well paid positions. Therefore, they are responsible people; they have responsible people in those positions. They have got stability. The same person occupies the same position for a number of years. They are put out, I believe, on one page of the United Mine Workers paper, every time it comes out, every two weeks. That is all they have got to go back to, it is already tabulated for them. I believe that the changes during this period of time we are asking about are almost negligible. All they have to do is to go back to their efficient publication, to find out the changes in them, if any. I think they will find practically none. We are entitled to that, to know it, to know the inter-relationship between these three defendants.

Mr. Mullen: That is one of the duplications of the specific questions I referred to.

Mr. Robertson: We think each person who is a Regional Director is also an official of the United Construction Workers. We think the same crowd occupies them, the same man occupies two or three positions, some of them in one thing, some in the other.

Col. Harris: Judge, I think in fairness to my client, which is the International Union of the United Mine Workers, that I should object to the constant repetition of the phrase, "smoke them out," as if we were some animal that was being chased, or as if we were deliberately trying to page 135 } conceal information. I have stated heretofore that we are trying to give every bit of information that we thought they were legally entitled to and we were not instructed to make every technical objection we could.

I don't think that Counsel is entitled under what Your Honor has seen today to use the phrase, "Smoke them out." "Smoke them out." There is no evidence that we have been hiding anything.

The Court: The Court will ask Counsel not to use that expression, "Smoke them out" again.

Mr. Cowherd: I would like to ask the Court, I don't believe Counsel for the Plaintiff would deliberately make an incorrect statement. That paper to which he referred, which he extended to the Court, is not put out by United Mine Workers. It is put out by District 50, NUCW. There is a paper put out by the Mine Workers.

Mr. Robertson: We are going to get that—NUCW. That is what we are trying to smoke out.

The Court: They objected to the words "smoke out".

Mr. Robertson: I didn't say it then, did I?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Robertson: I apologize. What I say is each person who is a director of Region 50 is also an officer of United Construction Workers. This thing is going to show it, when we page 136 } get through, we are entitled to get that information.

Mr. Mullen: Exactly the same question.

"Who are the persons who served as Regional Directors of District 50 between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949; when and by whom was each of these persons appointed a Regional Director; during what period or periods between the dates October 28, 1948 and August 4, 1949, did each serve as a Regional Director; what were the numbers of their respective Regions; and what were the locations of their respective Regional Offices?"

I have marked on it that you have ruled it will be limited to Region 58.

Mr. Cowherd: The Court will observe all of that, 61, 62, 63, and 64 are just rephrases of the same question.

The Court: It is my recollection, it was the Court's recollection it did restrict that to Region 58 in the interrogatories. I will restrict that to Region 58.

Mr. Mullen: Then No. 62 is the next one that asks the identical same question.

Mr. Robertson: I ask you read it, and pass on it.

Col. Harris: All right.

Mr. Mullen: Go on, read it, if you insist on it.

Col. Harris: I will now read question 62.

"62. Who are the persons who served as Regional Directors of United Construction Workers between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949; when and by page 137 } whom was each of these persons appointed a Regional Director; during what period or periods between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, did each serve as a Regional Director; what were the numbers of their respective Regions; and what were the locations of their respective Regional Offices?"

I suppose the same ruling on that—

Mr. Mullen: Identical question was asked of the United Construction Workers, Your Honor ruled on it.

Mr. Robertson: What we are driving at here, Judge, I don't want to keep repeating the same thing, if Your Honor doesn't mind, I insist on it. Suppose they are the same individuals in Region 58 and also a whole lot of the same individuals everywhere else, or in other geographical areas. That is an element or factor in our proof as we see it.

The Court: Well, could you correct the question to the effect that any of the Regional Directors of 58, do they serve in any other regions. If you want to ask that question—

Mr. Robertson: I don't mean the Directors in 58. I mean out of these two concerns, the same man is a Regional Director in 58. Then you go over in some other Region, and the same man occupies both positions, then go into a third geographical territory. The same man occupies the two positions there. The sum total, every bit of it is cumulative proof of this inter-relationship and control. That is page 138 } all we are trying to show.

Col. Harris: We think if you limit it as you did before, to 58, that he may be entitled to that information, and as modified by Your Honor—

Mr. Robertson: Suppose that the same person occupies a dual position in ten different geographical areas and you limit us to showing it in Region 58. To our way of thinking, you have eliminated nine-tenths of our proof on that phase of the case.

Mr. Pollard: May I point this out? That the question deals with United Construction Workers, and in the interrogatories directed to them you have ruled that it should be limited to Region 58. Now this is a question directed to the United Mine Workers concerning United Construction Workers, and it is not information which the United Mine Workers should properly answer, because it concerns the United Construction Workers and that question has been put to them and limited as to them, so it certainly should be limited as to the United Mine Workers. The question still remains whether they can properly answer it.

Mr. Robertson: I understand I have the final say on this thing. Section 20—I believe Section 20 or Section 22 of United Mine Workers Constitution says that District 50 is a part of United Mine Workers. We claim it is the whole thing, all the way down through. If they don't know page 139 } this answer, of course, they don't have to answer it. As I said a moment ago, if the same persons occupy a dual capacity, like in ten different geographical areas, you confine us to Region 58, say we can't show it on the others, you cut out nine-tenths of our proof on that question.

The Court: I will restrict it to Region 58. The Court reserves the right to change its mind on that subject at a later date.

Col. Harris: The next one will be 63, won't it?

The Court: Yes.

Col. Harris: "63. Who are the persons who have served as Regional Directors of District 50 since August 4, 1949, and when and by whom was each of these persons appointed a Regional Director; during what period or periods since August 4, 1949, has each served as a Regional Director; what were the numbers of their respective Regions; and what were the locations of their respective Regional Offices?"

Mr. Mullen: That is the same question as in No. 61.

The Court: Is that the same question?

Mr. Robertson: It is the same thing after August 4.

Col. Harris: The date is different, that is all.

The Court: I see. We will let that be restricted to Region 58. The Court reserves the right to change its ruling on that at a later date; as presently advised, that is re-page 140 } stricted to 58.

Mr. Pollard: "No. 64. Who are the persons who have served as Regional Directors of United Construction Workers since August 4, 1949, and when and by whom was each of these persons appointed a Regional Director; during what period or periods since August 4, 1949, has each served as a Regional Director; what were the numbers of their respective Regions; and what were the locations of their respective Regional Offices?"

Mr. Mullen: It is the same thing.

The Court: That would be the same ruling.

Col. Harris: The same reservation?

The Court: The same reservation.

Mr. Mullen: The next is the categories from page 141 } 96 to 103.

Mr. Pollard: "96. What written reports on work performed, on matters of policy or on organizational activities did A. D. Lewis, as an employee or representative of United Mine Workers of America or District 50 or United Construction Workers, submit to United Mine Workers of America, or to the International Executive Board or the President or any other International Officer of United Mine Workers of America between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August, 1949. Furnish a copy of all such reports."

Col. Harris: I think if it were limited—

Mr. Robertson: I think you might well eliminate furnishing a copy of the reports.

Col. Harris: I think if it were limited to Laburnum Construction, it would be less burdensome on us.

Mr. Robertson: We don't care anything about whether they were acting. We want to know what they were doing in that territory.

Mr. Mullen: We say in that territory—

Mr. Robertson: We ask that they furnish the reports. The reason we do that, Your Honor, Mr. Bryan has seen some of those reports. Those reports are kept in a very orderly way and very correct way and they are not particularly voluminous. We ask that you restrict it to 58, and furnish copies of the records, bring the original of the reports, have them here during the trial, and if they go in evidence, page 142 } we will undertake to have photostats made if necessary, and they can be withdrawn and copies substituted.

Col. Harris: We just make a copy and attach it to our answer, under the laws of Virginia.

The Court: That will be all right.

Mr. Mullen: You said you had seen copies of reports made by A. D. Lewis?

Mr. Robertson: No, I didn't say that. I said I had seen some of the reports. I haven't seen them, but Mr. Bryan has seen some of the reports, or copies of the reports made from people in Region 58.

Mr. Cowherd: That is not what the question asks for.

The Court: This 96 will be restricted to Region 58.

Mr. Robertson: And furnish copies of the reports?

The Court: Furnish copies of the reports.

The next is 97.

Mr. Pollard: "97. What written reports on work performed, on matters of policy or on organizational activities did Kathryn Lewis, as an employee or representative of United Mine Workers of America or District 50 or United Construction Workers, submit to United Mine Workers of America or to the International Executive Board or the President or any other International Officer of United page 143 } Mine Workers of America between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949? Furnish a copy of all such reports."

Mr. Mullen: The same restriction will be put on that?

Mr. Robertson: If you restrict that to 58, it would conform to the ruling.

The Court: Furnish copies. Restrict it to 58.

Mr. Robertson: As I understand it, the Court is reserving the right to change these rulings. It all comes down to the same thing.

The Court: Of course, the Court can change the rulings at any ytime in regard to these interrogatories, as I understand.

Col. Harris: You are merely serving notice on us as to the uncertainty of your feeling on 61, 63 and 64. You have not said you were reserving rulings on these others.

The Court: I have not said so. I take it the Court can reserve rulings in any point in these interrogatories.

Col. Harris: I think so.

Mr. Pollard: No. 98.

"98. What written reports on work performed, on matters of policy or on organizational activities did O. B. Allen, as an employee or representative of United Mine Workers of America or District 50 or United Construction page 144 } Workers, submit to United Mine Workers of America or to the International Executive Board or the President or any other International Officer of United Mine Workers of America between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949? Furnish a copy of all such reports."

No. 99.

Mr. Mullen: No. 98 and 99 are similar.

Mr. Robertson: I want you to read it. There is no use getting irritated about it, Mr. Mullen. We tried to get through that way up here the other day. I wrote a memorandum, waited ten days, and you said I had it wrong.

Mr. Mullen: All right. Read them.

Mr. Robertson: I take it you will restrict No. 98 to 58?

Mr. Pollard: Furnish copies of such reports?

The Court: All right. Restrict that to Region 58.

Mr. Pollard: No. 99.

"99. What written reports on work performed, on matters of policy or on organizational activities did Thomas Raney, as an employee or representative of United Mine Workers of America or District 50 or United Construction Workers, submit to United Mine Workers of America or to the page 145 } International Officer of United Mine Workers of America between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949? Furnish a copy of all such reports."

Mr. Robertson: Restrict that to 58.

Mr. Pollard: No. 100.

"100. What written reports on work performed, on matters of policy or on organizational activities did Thomas Davis, as an employee or representative of United Mine Workers of America or District 50 or United Construction Workers, submit to United Mine Workers of America or to the International Executive Board or the President or any other International Officer of United Mine Workers of America between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949? Furnish a copy of all such reports."

Mr. Robertson: Restrict that to 58.

Mr. Pollard: The next is the same except—

Col. Harris: That was No. 100 that you just read?

Mr. Pollard: Yes.

Mr. Robertson: Restrict 101 to 58.

The Court: No. 101 is restricted to Region 58.

Mr. Robertson: Restrict No. 102 to 58.

Mr. Pollard: No. 101 refers to David Hunter. No. 102 refers to William O. Hart.

Mr. Robertson: Restrict that to 58.

Mr. Robertson: Restrict 103 to Region 58.

Mr. Pollard: Question 103 refers to H. G. Robinson.

The Court: All right.

Now, we go to 105.

Mr. Pollard: "105. What written instructions, statements, reports, memoranda, letters and other papers were submitted by District 50 or by its Administrative Officer or Secretary-Treasurer or Comptroller to United Mine Workers of America or to the International Executive Board or the President or any other International Officer of United Mine Workers of America between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also since August 4, 1949? Furnish a copy of all such instructions, statements, reports, memoranda, letters and other papers."

Mr. Mullen: That is the question I argued in part this morning and argued against the whole. Those questions are so plainly a fishing expedition, that they certainly, your Honor, violate in themselves the Fourth Amendment of the Constitution and they impose an unreasonable burden on the defendant.

Mr. Roberts: I think I can shorten that. I think under the ruling of the Court, that would have to be restricted to Region 58.

page 147 } The Court: I think I restricted it to Region 58 in these other interrogatories.

Mr. Mullen: I think you did in all of those.

The Court: Let's restrict 105 to Region 58.

Mr. Pollard: "106. What written instructions, statements, reports, memoranda, letters and other papers were submitted by United Mine Workers of America or by the International Executive Board or the President or any other International Officer of United Mine Workers of America to District 50 or to the Administrative Officer or Secretary-Treasurer or Comptroller of District 50 between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also since August 4, 1949? Furnish a copy of all such instructions, statements, reports, memoranda, letters and other papers."

Mr. Robertson: Restrict that to 58.

The Court: Restricted to 58.

All right, 107.

Mr. Pollard: "107. What written instructions, statements, reports, memoranda, letters and other papers were submitted by United Construction Workers or by its National Director or National Comptroller to United Mine Workers of America or to the International Executive Board or the President or any other International Officer of United Mine Workers of America between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also since August 4, 1949? Furnish a copy of all such instructions, statements, reports, memoranda, letters and other papers."

Mr. Robertson: My client makes this suggestion, I think it was the understanding, it was my understanding, suppose that something applied in part to Region 58 and applied also to something else. Of course, that would be called for in that answer.

The Court: I take it that would come under that answer.

Mr. Mullen: Of course, we are not splitting the questions.

The Court: How about 107, would that be restricted to Region 58, in accordance with the other rulings?

Mr. Robertson: Yes, that is restricted to Region 58.

The Court: Very well.

No. 108, would the same apply?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

The Court: Restricted to Region 58.

Mr. Mullen: What about 109?

The Court: The same ruling, wouldn't it, 109?

Mr. Robertson: Yes, I think so.

The Court: No. 109 is restricted to 58.

No. 110 is restricted to 58.

Mr. Robertson: I think 111 would be restricted to Region 58.

The Court: All right. 111 will be restricted to Region 58. What about 112?

Mr. Robertson: I would like the gentlemen to read into the record now, if they have no objection, what geographical territory Region 58 includes. I think I know. We are restricting it here now.

The Court: Do you gentlemen have any objection?

Col. Harris: I don't know.

Mr. Cowherd: We have no objection to making it. I can't accurately give it at this time. There are ten or twelve counties in all, some in Kentucky, some in West Virginia, and Breathitt was one.

Mr. Robertson: Will you give it to us before the trial?

Mr. Cowherd: I think we will under one of your questions. We are going to furnish that complete geographical area. I have got that already prepared.

The Court: Fine.

Mr. Robertson: 112 will be the same?

The Court: 112 will be the same, restricted to Region 58.

Now, we jump to 118.

page 150 } Mr. Mullen: That is the same question, 118 and 119, that you directed in the other interrogatories to be changed so as to have the "yes" and "no" answer. In other words, instead of reading, "What charter fees, initiation fees and dues were paid to United Mine Workers of America by its District Unions, Sub-District Unions, Local Unions and members between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949?" it would change the word "what" to "were".

No. 119 is the same thing, only you put "what" down in next to the last line.

Mr. Robertson: Read that.

Mr. Mullen: "119. With respect to charter fees, initiation fees and dues paid to District 50 by its Sub-District Unions, Local Unions, and members between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, what portion or portions of such fees and dues were paid by District 50 to United Mine Workers of America?"

Mr. Robertson: There is the addition of the word "were". My recollection were they need not put it in dollars, but put it in percentage.

Mr. Mullen: Here is the word you submitted to me in your letter of September 28: "Were charter fees, initiation fees and dues paid to United—" page 151 }

Mr. Robertson: What question are you on? That doesn't correspond here with 119.

Mr. Mullen: I think it will. "Were charter fees, initiation fees and dues paid to United Construction Workers and Local Unions and Members between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, also after August 4, 1949, and was any portion of such fees and dues paid by United Construction Workers to District 50 or United Mine Workers of America." That is what I was speaking of, that language in 119 that now reads, "What portion or portions", and the Court directed it should read, "Was any portion of such fees paid".

The Court: Does that answer it?

Mr. Robertson: I don't see any objection made to any percentage. They were loath to state it in dollars.

The Court: As I recall it, the reason they objected to that was they would have to get all of these figures together. What you were interested in was in knowing whether any portion went—

Mr. Robertson: Change that "what portion" to, "was any portion". I have got that all right.

The Court: I think that answers the question you want.

Mr. Mullen: The same thing in 120, "What page 152 } portion" should read, "Were any portions".

The Court: 121.

Mr. Mullen: We have 120 here that we have already fixed.

The Court: 121 (a) is next.

Mr. Robertson: I think we reframed that before. "Were funds advanced".

Mr. Mullen: Yes. That read, "Were funds advanced or paid by United Mine Workers of America to or for the account of District 50 or United Construction Workers, and why were such advances or payments made?"

Col. Harris: May I interrupt a minute?

The Court: Yes.

Col. Harris: I am not clear as to the wording on 120.

The Court: In other words, on the end of the fourth line of Question 120, it reads: "What portion or portions". That would be changed to read: "Were any portion or portions".

Col. Harris: O. K. I have it.

Mr. Cowherd: The next word "were", would naturally come out to make it grammatical.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Pollard: No. 121, part (a), reads:

page 153 } "(a) What funds were advanced or paid by United Mine Workers of America to or for the account of District 50 or United Construction Workers, and why were such advances or payments made?"

It is my recollection on the other interrogatories and our notes so show, that you ruled we did not have to answer the part which reads, "And why were such advances or payments made."

Mr. Mullen: My notes show the same thing.

Mr. Robertson: I have no recollection, but I don't see why they shouldn't say "why". Suppose they were putting up the money for the agent, why shouldn't they show it?

Mr. Pollard: May I say something?

The Court: Certainly.

Mr. Pollard: I believe you will recall the argument. I was sitting where Mr. Mullen is, and Mr. Mullen where Mr. Robertson is. They held a conference there and I couldn't help overhearing, "It makes no difference whether an agent was paid one dollar or ten; the reason why one was paid is immaterial, if the money was paid."

Mr. Robertson: I think it may be highly material, the reason for it being paid. I tried to convince Mr. Bryan on the principle that applied. I think you may give me some money as a gift, or you may give it to me to buy a piece page 154 } of real estate, or you may give it to me for running Laburnum off the job, which would be very important.

The Court: In other words, maybe a loan or something of that sort, or maybe something is due.

Mr. Robertson: Maybe Raney did such a good job at the top—we are going to see.

The Court: I think it is fair to answer that question, to see why the answers were made. So "a" will be amended.

Col. Harris: May we reserve an exception on that?

The Court: Let me state again: 121 (a) will now read: "Were funds advanced or paid", and so forth, instead of "what funds were advanced".

You go ahead and make your exception.

Col. Harris: I wasn't taking any exception to that. It is the last end, I think is improper.

Mr. Mullen: We take an exception to the inclusion of the words, "Why were such advances or payments made".

The Court: Go ahead and except to the last part of the question.

Mr. Mullen: I think he has already got it in. He stated the exception.

Col. Harris: We reserve an exception to your Honor's ruling to the effect that we must answer this clause: "Why were such advances or payments made?"

page 155 } Mr. Mullen: That is (a) and (b).

Mr. Pollard: An exception to both.

The Court: The amendment will apply to (b), as well as (a), and the same exceptions will apply.

Mr. Pollard: That is right.

Mr. Robertson: That is evidently worded wrong. There is no (a) and (d) to 123. I have got 121 (a) and (b), and you go to 123 (a) and (d). There is no 123 (a) and (d). Your Honor ruled on 121 (a) and (b).

Mr. Mullen: Your Honor has already ruled that we did not have to furnish balance sheet, did not have to furnish statement called for in Question 124.

Mr. Robertson: Let's take up 123.

Col. Harris: May I interrupt a second? We are almost through.

Mr. Robertson: I have got a lot more stuff.

Col. Harris: We haven't received any notice to appear on any motion.

The Court: Go ahead and make the statement.

Col. Harris: Mr. Pollard raised the question, if I got it correctly, as to your Honor's ruling on 121. I want to be sure I have that down, if your Honor doesn't mind.

The Court: All right, go ahead.

Col. Harris: I have here that 121 (a) is changed now to read: "Were funds", instead of "what funds".

Col. Harris: Then, as so changed, we must answer. As to 121 (b), the same change, "What funds", to "were funds", but you also ruled we had to say "why" on 121 (b), and to that we reserve an exception.

The Court: Exactly.

Mr. Mullen: That is all in the record.

Mr. Robertson: Coming down to 123.

Col. Harris: Have you read 123?

Mr. Pollard: No.

Mr. Robertson: I have no recollection on that. If somebody will say what happened, it will come to my mind, I think.

The Court: "Furnish a balance sheet of United Mine Workers of America showing its assets and liabilities and net worth as of December 31, 1949."

Mr. Robertson: Have you your file copy of that letter?

The Court: Mr. Mullen's copy to me stated an exception to 123 (a) and (d) on that one.

Mr. Robertson: That may be a typographical error.

The Court: This is under Mr. Mullen's signature. There is no 123 (a) and (d).

Mr. Robertson: I will ask somebody to give their recollection as to what we did in the other instance about page 157 } the balance sheet. I don't remember.

The Court: As the Court recalls, it ruled out the balance sheet on both sides.

Mr. Robertson: All right. It would come out here. 123 will not have to be answered.

The Court: What about 124?

Col. Harris: "Furnish a statement showing the following with respect to United Mine Workers of America: (a) Cash balance on hand as of January 1, 1949, (b) Receipts during the year 1949, (c) Disbursements during the year 1949, and, (d) Cash balance on hand as of December 31, 1949."

Mr. Robertson: That was ruled out last time, the same ruling here?

The Court: The same ruling.

page 158 } The Court: No. 125.

Mr. Mullen: "Furnish a copy of the minutes of all meetings of the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America held between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also since August 4, 1949."

Mr. Robertson: You have ruled that had to be answered, your Honor.

Mr. Mullen: No, ruled the minutes of the Local 178A had to be answered.

Col. Harris: There are many matters, we would be revealing confidential information of coal operators that had nothing in the world to do with the entire state of Kentucky, much less Breathitt County, sir. The Executive Board, as the Constitution shows, is the "Supreme Court" between conventions and they handle multitudinous matters and to take and copy all the minutes of everything they had, would be just opening up all private and confidential business of United Mine Workers for publication.

Mr. Robertson: Your Honor, please, I don't think this makes sense. "Furnish a copy of the minutes of all meetings of the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America held between the dates October, 1948", down to date. If it is confidential and should not be revealed, the Court will not have it divulged.

Mr. Mullen: Necessarily, the decision of that page 159 } Executive Board are confidential.

The Court: Here was a similar question, wasn't it?

Mr. Mullen: I have got the question right here.

"Minutes of the organizing committee of District 50. Minutes of all meetings of Local 178A." As I say, they are very different things, and of the "International Executive Board of United Mine Workers".

Col. Harris: I think anything relative to Laburnum Construction Company, they would be entitled to it.

Mr. Cowherd: Region 58.

The Court: What I was thinking about, Region 58, how about that?

Col. Harris: That would make us disclose the private affairs of other operators in that region.

Mr. Robertson: The Court could determine that when it comes up. We want to see what their minutes show here about these interrelationships. We think we are entitled to see it.

Mr. Cowherd: That isn't the question. He doesn't limit his question to any minutes dealing with interrelationships. Every important matter that the United Mine Workers had during that period that went before the Executive Board could be brought into this case. International affairs between Canada and the United States might conceivably be defense matters, and might conceivably have no connection or anything else.

page 160 } The Court: I think that question is rather broad, Mr. Robertson.

Mr. Robertson: Well, what are you going to restrict it to, your Honor?

The Court: Let's see if we can arrive at some logical conclusion on that one.

(Discussion off the record.)

The Court: On the record.

Col. Harris: The other questions he asked, and where you applied them to Region 58, did not require, as we saw it, that we disclose any confidential information of other operators and other businesses. The financial dealings with other people, say. Now, any financial dealings that affect the Laburnum Construction Company, he would be entitled to. But suppose they have had extensive dealings with corporation "X", Corporation "Y", and Corporation "Z", and don't even know Laburnum Construction Company is in existence, never heard of them. As a matter of fact, there has been a lot of talk here about Mr. John L. Lewis. I venture the assertion Mr. John L. Lewis never heard of Laburnum Construction Company in his life until litigation developed.

It would just be going where we have this past mechanism covering many states, hundreds of thousands of men and the private business of individuals and corporations and associations engaged in production of goods for commerce, and producing the necessities of American life which seems to me that a proper regard for the rights of bystanders requires that we do not have to come in and tell him their business.

page 161 } Mr. Robertson: Your Honor, please, of course we won't get anything out of—the whole talk all day is Laburnum Construction Company is small potatoes compared to these Unions, John L. Lewis never heard of them. I think it would be a miracle if you would find anything—I won't go that strong, but it may very probably be that you won't find any specific reference by name to Laburnum Construction Company in those minutes. That is not the purpose of the question. The purpose of the question is during those periods there, what were they telling their people down the line.

Even under the Coronada case, out of the Federal decisions, you have got to have specific authorization or specific ratification. And they claim that case applies here, as I understand it. We claim it doesn't. How else are you going to show it except through their minutes? We want the minutes of that Executive Board to show, yes, restricted maybe to Region 58, but what did you tell them to do within that District? What did you tell them? What did they tell you? What did you do about it? That goes to the very heart of our case.

Mr. Mullen: Minutes of the Executive Committee have to do with—page 162 } Mr. Robertson: I haven't finished.

Mr. Mullen: All right.

Mr. Robertson: I don't understand, the Court comes along on my ipse dixit says that would show the private business of the coal company. I don't understand that the Court sticks its head in the sand and refuses to get enough information to act intelligently, just because somebody say that is interpretation of the thing.

As I said, the Court will require that to be answered here. Then if the Court thinks any part of it is improper, then I think it is highly probable some parts of it will be improper to go to the jury, the Court will rule out the part that ought not to go to the jury, delete it from the record, have it destroyed on the record, if the Court thinks that is going to violate any great business secret.

Mr. Mullen: If your Honor please, like the Board of Directors of a corporation are not dealing with the actual administrative affairs, they are dealing with larger matters, matters of policy. These minutes in those two years will, I assume, show matters in regard to negotiations of the last contract with the coal operators and John L. Lewis.

Col. Harris: That is right.

Mr. Mullen: They will show the discussions in that Board, that private matter.

Mr. Pollard: And the pending negotiations.

page 163 } Col. Harris: I will call it to your Honor's attention, if we have to give those minutes, and we will assume that many of them involve financial matters, then your Honor's ruling on 123, 124 would be nullified.

Your Honor ruled we didn't have to make financial statements. That had no concern with the case. Our instructions, if I may state to the Court, our instructions were not to put in any unnecessary technical objections. We were asked to protect the private financial matters of the Union and with people that it dealt with that had nothing to do with this case.

The Court: I am wondering whether or not this would be feasible? Would you gentlemen object to one counsel for the plaintiff to kind of thumb through the minutes and see if there was anything in there?

Col. Harris: I have no authority to open the minutes to anybody on earth, Judge. I, myself, have never read a copy of the minutes of the International Executive Board. I have never had any occasion to read them. But Mr. Mullen didn't go up—I went up to Washington for the sole purpose of checking up on the objections that Mr. Mullen and I had figured out with Fred. And some of those we had figured out that we put in, Mr. Lewis said, "No, don't put them in. Go ahead. Make the answers."

Mr. Robertson: Following out the thought your Honor had there, I would be perfectly willing for them page 164 } to submit the minutes to the Court and the Court rule on what it thought was proper and improper. I have got no desire to get in anything improper here. I don't want to just read somebody's ipse dixit. He said he never read them. I don't know what is in them. I have not read them. I am not ready to accept anybody's judgment except the Courts as to what I am entitled to see out of it.

Col. Harris: I don't ask anybody to accept my statement. He doesn't know me.

Mr. Robertson: I say you haven't read them. It is no reflection on you. If you haven't read them, you can't know what is in them.

Col. Harris: I have no authority but I would recommend that they make no objection to your Honor reading them. I don't feel in view of instructions that I received, that I should deviate from them this afternoon.

The Court: I understand your position.

Mr. Robertson: I understand. I don't think it is proper for John L. Lewis or anybody else to be putting this Court on terms.

The Court: No, I don't think so, either, but there is a question in my mind whether I should require this question as framed to be answered. There is bound to be voluminous minutes there that haven't a thing in the world to do with this case.

page 165 } Mr. Robertson: I don't know whether there is or not. I don't know how often they met. This is supposed to be one man's Union. Nobody here has ever seen them. It might be one separate minute, a page, or it might be a book. If it is kept in any orderly way, it ought to be in a book to be presented here to the Court and to be determined very easily if they really wanted to give us the information we are entitled to.

Col. Harris: As I say, Judge, I know your Honor reserves the ruling, the right to change the ruling a while ago. I don't think personally that he has any right to it at all, but of course we are willing to rely on the interpretation of the Court. If the Court looks at them, says even though it has nothing to do with it, even though you learn secrets that don't concern you, business matters you are not interested in, if your Honor thinks that is what we ought to do, I will recommend it to them. You see, what I am doing is in a way trying to let the rulings of your Honor today be the end of it.

The Court: Would there be any objection if the minutes were brought here and in the presence of counsel for both sides and the Court, just thumb through them to see if there was anything in there?

Col. Harris: The Court will thumb through them, not counsel on both sides.

Mr. Robertson: That is all right.

page 166 } The Court: You wouldn't want counsel on both sides?

Col. Harris: No, sir.

Mr. Cowherd: I have seen those minutes. I am confident that this firm of lawyers representing the other side of this case has clients whose business might appear in there, and does appear in there. And there might be exchange of information there that they are not entitled to. It is just confidential stuff. I don't think any Court would require, and I don't think any lawyer on the other side should look at those minutes. But I, too, would recommend that your Honor be allowed to deal with that part. I can assure you that you wouldn't want to deal with the entire volume, regardless of what Mr. Robertson says about a one-man Union, no minutes, no meetings. I am quite sure you wouldn't want to take the time to go through all of them.

Mr. Robertson: You don't want the Court to go through it conscientiously? I think I have the right to close this discussion on this phase of it.

The Court: Let him get through before you close. Are you through?

Mr. Cowherd: That is all right.

Mr. Robertson: I say, even under the Coronado Case, they say in order to hold either District 50 or United Construction Workers in here, we have got to show prior page 167 } authorization directly or subsequent ratification directly. Now, where is a better place to find out whether it was or was not done than in these minutes? What is the equivalent of a Board of Directors in their organization?

The Court: Could the question be framed to furnish copies of minutes of the meetings which deal with the very things that you are talking about rather than just furnish copies of all the meetings? Then you are asking specifically for certain copies of the minutes.

Mr. Mullen: In those cases I read your Honor this morning, that is all they can ask for.

The Court: That might work.

Mr. Robertson: Restricted to Region 58, District 50 is the whole United States. He has been holding it down here to Region 58.

Col. Harris: Region 58 is 43 states.

Mr. Cowherd: It is 42 states.

Col. Harris: Coal producing states, coal producing districts.

Mr. Cowherd: Coal producing districts, and districts of United Mine Workers, as listed in the roster that Mr. Robertson has in his possession.

Mr. Robertson: You don't admit that is in the form that I can introduce it in evidence? I am getting my evidence in shape.

page 168 } Mr. Cowherd: Region 58 in this case, as I see it, is in Breathitt County, that is where it happened.

Mr. Robertson: You know, as I do, that no more embraces all of Region 58 than Henrico County, Virginia, does. I have never heard of such argument.

Mr. Cowherd: I didn't say it did.

The Court: We are getting off the subject here.

Mr. Pollard: Judge, your suggestion about looking at them in the presence of counsel, you meant in the presence of counsel and not have the counsel look at them, did you?

The Court: Well, I would prefer that both counsel look at it with me.

Mr. Robertson: I am perfectly willing to pass up looking at it.

The Court: Just let the Court look at it?

Mr. Robertson: Yes, but I want the books here, and let the Court make such examination as the Court deems proper, make such ruling as the Court deems proper. That is satisfactory to me.

The Court: After having seen the minutes?

Mr. Robertson: That is satisfactory to me, yes.

The Court: Is that satisfactory to you, gentlemen?

Mr. Cowherd: We couldn't stipulate that.

The Court: I understand you have got to recommend.

Col. Harris: That means by no device and page 169 } maneuvering or change of position or anything else, does anybody get to see it, if your Honor has it.

The Court: It will be private property. The agreement will be strictly complied with, as far as the Court is concerned.

Col. Harris: If you don't object, and if you, Mr. Mullen and Mr. Cowherd, don't object, we will recommend that that be done, Judge.

Mr. Robertson: By when, your Honor, is that going to be done? When the answer is on these things the 15th of November, or is it going to be done before that? If they put it off, we won't have time to act.

The Court: Why not do this, you gentlemen contact the officers or the proper persons of the Union and see whether or not they are willing to voluntarily comply with your request, and you notify the Court. It may be that they will refuse to do that. Then if they do, the Court will be in position to know what step to take next. In the meantime, I think the Court will withhold any decision on this Question 125.

Mr. Robertson: Will you put a time limit there, if your Honor please?

Col. Harris: That is what I am going to talk about. I am somewhat crowded. I had to fly up here and I have to fly back
Sunday morning, because I must before the United States

Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit in Mont-page 170 } gomery, Alabama, 101 miles from Birmingham where I live, Tuesday morning. So I am having to fly right back Sunday morning and get home and then leave next morning for Montgomery, Alabama. I won't get a chance to see any United Mine Workers officials.

The Court: How about you, Mr. Cowherd? Are you going back to Washington?

Mr. Cowherd: No, I am not. My work is taking me in the opposite direction.

Col. Harris: Mr. Cowherd couldn't come yesterday. He had to be in Hartford.

I don't devote all of my time to United Mine Workers' business. I am engaged in the general practice of law. I had this case set down in the Court of Appeals. I don't work for anybody.

Mr. Cowherd: I am afraid it is not going to be a simple question to get answered. I don't believe any one of the officials will take the responsibility for doing it. After listening to the discussion of why we should not disclose the general minutes to anybody outside the organization, I don't know how they will feel about it. I won't be back until Monday morning.

The Court: You will be back to work Monday?

Col. Harris: You go ahead and state the problem. If they want to call me in Birmingham, or if you want to call me, all right.

page 171 } Mr. Robertson: The only point I make, Judge, I, of course, realize we ought to give a fair time to do the thing. There ought to be a time limit it, to bring this question to a decision.

The Court: You could let me know by the end of next week, couldn't you?

Mr. Cowherd: Sure.

Col. Harris: Yes.

The Court: That is a reasonable length of time.

Col. Harris: We have no disposition to delay. We understand the case is going to be tried the second week in December.

Mr. Robertson: I have some more interrogatories, which you have copies of, I think, Mr. Mullen.

Col. Harris: Judge, I don't know what his interrogatories are. When we came here this morning, counsel handed one after the other to Mr. Mullen.

Mr. Robertson: I haven't gotten to those.

Col. Harris: I don't know what your Virginia rules are, but we have got to get our defenses in by Monday morning. It seems to me, to take any other interrogatories up now, shortens our time and is unduly burdensome. I submit no adequate notice has been given to us.

Mr. Robertson: Mr. Harris, you weren't here before. What I am talking about now is about interrogatories filed in here on October 2, 1950, because they were inad-page 172 } vertently not left with the Court on September 26, and Mr. Wickham, who was here then, refused to come up here with me to get the things in order. If the Court will look at them, I made a certificate on them, three sets of interrogatories.

The Court: Are these the ones?

Mr. Robertson: These are the ones this morning. I have the ones before this.

The Court: You have one before this?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Mullen: I told Mr. Wickham to tell you we had no objection to you filing them, by reason of the fact you failed to do it the day we were up here. I said I had no objection to you correcting that.

Mr. Robertson: Those are the ones they say there is no ruling on. They have had them. I understood you accepted them.

The Court: Here they are.

Mr. Mullen: In the supplemental interrogatories, we will object to 1 and 2.

Col. Harris: You want to get a ruling on 1 and 2, don't you?

Mr. Robertson: They are here, Judge.

The Court: "Was application ever made by United Mine Workers of America, to the National Labor Relations Board requesting that United Mine Workers of America be certified as the bargaining agent for the employees of the plaintiff."

Mr. Robertson: The reason I asked that, they asked that question of us in their own interrogatories. We answered it. If they had the right to ask us that question, we had the right to ask that.

Mr. Mullen: It is a very different situation.

The question is objected to on the ground it is not relevant to the issue in this cause, in that the right to organize workers is not dependent on any ruling or order of the National Labor Relations Board, that there are other methods of determining whether a given set of employees are represented by a Union and the right to strike is not dependent on application to or action by said Board.

In addition to that, before any application or anything could be made, they discharged the workers and were no longer in their employ.

Mr. Robertson: Now, your Honor, I agree that the Labor Relations Act has nothing on earth to do with this case, and the question of whether we ever applied for anything with the National Labor Relations Board, has got nothing to do with it. It was not in a Federal Court, not under the Labor Relations Act, not under any Federal Statute. They did ask us the opposite of this question, and we voluntarily answered it. We then want the other interrogatory and answer stricken out.

Mr. Pollard: May it please the Court, are you through?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Pollard: There is a provision in the National Labor Relations Act which might have created liability on the part of the defendants, had the Paintsville carpenters been certified by the National Labor Relations Board as the bargaining agent; therefore, it became on us to know whether or not it had been created. Whether or not we had applied for certification, is entirely immaterial.

Mr. Robertson: I can't follow that line of reasoning, your Honor. Mr. Lowden here, I think, knows as much about the Labor Relations Act as Mr. Pollard. I just don't follow that line of argument.

Mr. Pollard: If the Paintsville carpenters had been certified as the bargaining agent, then under the Taft-Hartley Act there is a possibility that we would have been liable for calling the strike; otherwise, not.

Mr. Lowden: Since we didn't sue you under the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act, then your interrogatory wasn't relevant.

Mr. Cowherd: Yes, it was, because it gives you the right to sue in either Court, State or Federal.

Mr. Pollard: The way the notice of motion for page 175 } judgment is drawn, you could have very well taken that position. So it is relevant as to us, but it is not as to them.

Mr. Robertson: I don't think it is relevant to either. If it comes in for them, it ought to come in here.

The Court: The Court will refuse to require the defendant to answer interrogatory No. 1, and will take under advisement the motion of counsel for the plaintiff to strike the like question in the interrogatory addressed to the plaintiff.

Mr. Robertson: I suppose you have the same ruling on No. 2?

Mr. Mullen: The second question.

The Court: There is no objection?

Mr. Mullen: No.

Mr. Robertson: We put in three additional sets of interrogatories here this morning, I did.

Mr. Pollard: Before you start, may I straighten one thing out. There were three sets of interrogatories on those questions. I take it your ruling applies to Questions 1 and 2, addressed to all three defendants?

The Court: All three defendants, yes.

Mr. Robertson: Now, if your Honor please, I have given you gentlemen copies of them. This first set goes to—

Mr. Pollard: We were just handed this paper page 176 } at the week end. I think it is unfair to ask us to make up our minds on it at this time.

Mr. Robertson: I will be frank, I am trying to get these things answered by the 15th of November, which is the time the Court said, and I am presenting them here to the Court now. So if you don't want to answer them today, if we can agree upon a date when they will come here and let the Court rule on them, they are short.

Col. Harris: It is a novel experience to me, that a man hand you interrogatories and says, "Now, let's take up whether you want to answer or not."

The Court: The Court is not going to require you to answer them.

Mr. Robertson: I am not asking that. I am talking about wanting to cooperate in helping get information and move along. I haven't seen any evidence today of it.

Mr. Mullen: I haven't seen any on your part.

Mr. Robertson: I haven't offered any, I have put them out here today so we can determine today when you will come back and get the Court to rule on them.

The Court: How many questions are there in the interrogatories addressed to all three defendants? Are they the same questions addressed to each defendant?

Mr. Robertson: Practically. They are a little different.

I mean in one of them there we call for copies of page 177 } those publications. I thought that we would save time by doing it today.

The Court: The Court is prepared to go ahead. Of course, it is unreasonable to require the defendants to.

Mr. Robertson: I agree to that.

Mr. Cowherd: I suppose I am the only one that could possibly know all of the men, and it happens that I don't know the first one. I would have to start calling to find out who he is. We don't know whether we can answer it or not.

Mr. Robertson: That is why I am bringing it up. I ask the Court to set a date.

Mr. Mullen: I certainly don't want to pass on it. I have been sitting here with no chance to read them.

Mr. Robertson: I am asking the Court to fix a date.

Mr. Mullen: Wait until we read them.

Mr. Robertson: I ask the Court to fix a date.

Mr. Mullen: I have taken the last two weeks with you.

Mr. Robertson: I am not asking favors. I will ask the Court to fix a date.

Mr. Mullen: I am submitting to the Court that I have two cases which have got to be answered, all the pleadings and everything, by the 28th of October, and it is jurisdictional unless I answer. And for two weeks or more, I have been working on this thing. I have got to do that.

Mr. Robertson: I ask the Court to fix a fair date.

The Court: It is a question of when we can, of when I am here. It may be that after you all read those interrogatories—

Mr. Robertson: Then we can release the date, just as we released two here this time.

The Court: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

The Court: On the record.

How about the 24th at three o'clock?

Mr. Robertson: I want to refer now to another letter I received from Mr. Mullen on October 10, by messenger, regarding a letter I wrote him on September 28, setting out my recollection of what occurred in here on September 26.

I sent a copy of that letter to the Court. Mr. Mullen says this:

"This will acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 28, in which you outline your understanding of what occurred on September 26, 1950, at a conference between Judge Snead and counsel for all parties.

"Paragraphs numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 correctly state what took place.

"7, I do not recall giving any definite date on page 179 } which you or the Court could be advised whether the cases referred to therein would be consolidated. Certainly I did not give as such date, October 10. I will, however, endeavor to dispose of this question on October 12, or certainly during the present week."

Now, as I understood it, the reason I am bringing that up, it has been intimated here, you remember there is a case pending in this Court with the Unions, I think, and various individuals brought against Laburnum Corporation, and Bryan, individually. It has been intimated here that the counsel for those plaintiffs may ask the Court to consolidate the two causes. We think that they should not be consolidated. The parties are different, the pleadings are different, the issues are different. We are going to oppose it, if they press their motions. We want to argue it and cite authorities. And we don't want to get up here to the trial date before that happens.

I understood Mr. Mullen will let us know this week whether or not they do want to press that motion. If they do, I want to fix a date for that.

Mr. Mullen: I said I would let you know. I think there are some matters Mr. Pollard has got to take up with the Judge on that. I think there are certain questions he wants to take up with the Judge, and that the Judge wants to take up with him.

Mr. Robertson: I want to get that out of the way.

The Court: Why can't we dispose of that on page 180 } the 24th?

Mr. Robertson: If they are really serious about it, I don't think we can. We will go ahead as far as we can. That is all right with me.

The Court: Do you want to say something?

Mr. Pollard: Yes. We are confused, and I want to broaden the scope of the discussion just a bit, about the application of the new trial procedure to this case. This case was started in 1949, and under the old rules, we filed a plea of not guilty, which completes our pleadings. And since our pleading was completed, we do not know whether or not any provisions of the new rules apply, and our first problem is this:

Mr. Robertson: Are you talking about this case we are discussing here today?

Mr. Pollard: Yes.

Mr. Robertson: I can tell you right off the bat what I think.

Mr. Pollard: I wasn't quite through.

I can tell you that we have got to file our grounds of defense by the 16th of October. I understand from the new rules, that when you file your grounds of defense, you have got to either admit or deny the allegations of the bill of complaint.

Now, in filing our grounds of defense, do we page 181 } have to do that, or do we file grounds of defense under the old rules because we had completed our pleadings under the old rules, when we filed a plea of not guilty?

The Court: Do you want to express yourself on that?

Mr. Robertson: I don't know. He is raising a new point. I think he ought to come up here with grounds of defense or a fair statement of the grounds of defense. I think that should be adequate.

Mr. Pollard: That is what would like to do. We don't want them taken as admitting—

Mr. Robertson: It is not a complaint. It is a notice of motion for judgment. I think we are entitled to know what you admit, what you deny, and what your grounds of defense are. I file them every day. That is what I put in them.

Mr. Pollard: We have got this problem, the new rules specify that in the notice of motion for judgment shall set out in numbered paragraphs the grounds on which the plaintiff relies, or facts on which it relies for the claim for relief. This is not in numbered paragraphs. That runs five pages. It is just the most difficult thing in the world to go through there—

Mr. Robertson: I do it that way all of the time.

Mr. Pollard: In other words, you think the new rules require that we admit or deny the allegations in the bill of complaint, even though we had completed our pleadings before the new rules became effective?

The Court: I haven't had opportunity to pass on that since the new rules went into effect.

Mr. Robertson: I don't think it is necessary to pass on it at this time. If you come up here in good faith and give a garden variety of grounds of defense, which is a fair statement of grounds of defense, I think that is adequate under any of the rules.

Mr. Mullen: Will you stipulate that?

Mr. Robertson: If there is just going to be a difference on what a fair statement of grounds of defense is, if you come up here, don't quibble, I will tell you whether they are satisfactory or not.

The Court: If you don't think it is a fair statement, of course you can apply to the Court.

Mr. Robertson: I don't think we would get any where now on what is a fair statement.

Mr. Mullen: If we come up here with a ground of defense, you say it is not fair, the Judge so rules, we will have opportunity to come in.

page 183 } The Court: That will be in the discretion of the Court, as I understand.

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

Col. Harris: There is no stipulation?

Mr. Robertson: No, sir.

Mr. Pollard: In that connection, getting back to the question Mr. Robertson originally brought up about whether we would ask him to consolidate, it is not clear under the new rules whether or not we have the opportunity of filing counterclaim or cross claim in this suit. Of course, after he files it, it is up to the Court to determine whether or not we have a separate trial on it. And there is something in the rules that indicates it may be necessary to bring a separate suit; to protect ourselves against any question, any statute of limitations, we filed the suit prior to the expiration of one year.

We would be perfectly willing to take a non-suit, I would recommend it, I will put it that way, to take a non-suit in the separate suit we have filed in this Court and come in by way of cross claim or counter claim at the time we file our grounds of defense, without bringing in any new parties.

Mr. Robertson: I will not agree to that. I don't think they have the right to do it. I will oppose it and want to be heard on it, if they seriously press any such suggestion.

The Court: I don't think I would take the non-suit until you knew how the Court was going to act on the page 184 } cross claim. What about the time for filing cross claim?

Mr. Pollard: Under the old rules, there was no time limit. That is one of our problems. Under the new rules, the new rules say you can file your cross claim and your counter claim in the same paper with your grounds of defense.

The Court: You have to do that within so many days, don't you, under the new rules?

Mr. Moore: It is 21 days.

Mr. Pollard: I don't know whether you do or not.

Mr. Robertson: Here is another thing, the issues in that thing are entirely different. Among other things, they have filed exactly the same kind of suits, one up here and one down in United States Court. We are claiming you can't run both of them. There is no use trying to dispose of it here this afternoon.

The thing is, if they are going to seriously press it, I should think from a half day to a full day's time would be required to dispose of that.

The Court: I don't want to give you any encouragement about trying these suits together. I am not saying I won't grant the motion, and I am not saying I will. Offhand, it seems we have got enough problems as it is, in one case here.

Mr. Pollard: If our claim for liability arises page 185 } out of the same set of circumstances in Breathitt County, Kentucky, it would certainly be serving the ends of justice.

Mr. Robertson: Coming back to Paragraph 8, I admit I am wrong on that; Paragraph 9 states correctly the agreement of the parties. Now No. 10, that was the word "why".

The Court: I think that has been settled as to these interrogatories to the United Mine Workers.

Mr. Robertson: I think that disposes of that.

The Court: All right, gentlemen, it is a quarter to five.

Mr. Pollard: It is stipulated on the 24th there will be taken up the defendants' objections to the plaintiff's answers to the defendants' interrogatories, and that in the next three days those objections will be served on the plaintiff in writing and filed with the Court.

. . . . .

Mr. Allen: May it please Your Honor, before we go any further into this matter may we note appearances here? I just don't know who represents whom today.

The Court: All right. The Minutes of the last hearing were just presented to me a few moments ago.

Note: Here are stated for the record the representations herein.

Mr. James Mullen, representing all the defendants.

Colonel Crampton Harris, representing all three of the defendants.

Mr. Yelverton Cowherd, representing District 50, United Mine Workers of America, and United Construction Workers. He does not represent the International Union, United Mine Workers of America.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard, who will be here, he is momentarily detained, he represents the three Unions.

This gentleman sitting over here, Willard Owens, is not appearing as counsel in the case, he is a mere spectator and has not entered an appearance and will not.

Mr. George E. Allen, representing plaintiffs.

Mr. T. Justin Moore, Jr., representing the plaintiffs.

Mr. A. Hamilton Bryan, President of Laburnum page 6 } Construction Corporation.

Colonel Harris: At your convenience I am prepared to hand Your Honor the Minutes. I have them with me, and they are my personal responsibility. When Your Honor has finished with them if you will communicate with me in some way I will arrange to be here and get them. They do not want the Minutes entrusted even to Registered Mail. They were not entrusted to the mail in coming down here, and Mr. Lewis said he would turn them over to me personally, and it was up to me to deliver them to the Court.

Mr. Allen: May I ask what Minutes they are?

Colonel Harris: Minutes of the Executive Board of the International Union, United Mine Workers of America, from October 28, 1948, up to the present time. I have not opened them. They are all tied up.

Mr. Allen: May it please Your Honor, before you open those Minutes there—

Colonel Harris: They are not to be opened before any of us. The agreement was that Mr. Robertson didn't care to see them, and the secrecy was to be preserved. The agreement being that the Judge would go over them himself, and then inform counsel as to which he thought if any page 7 } were pertinent, and Mr. Robertson stated, in fact he suggested, he stated that he would rely on the judgment of the Judge, and we have accepted the proposition under the statement that their secrecy would be preserved.

Mr. Allen: I had a conference with Mr. Robertson this morning, and I did not understand that any such agreement was entered into, and I might ask Mr. Bryan about that. You were there at the conference. I did not understand that any such agreement was entered into, and we should certainly like to say something on the subject of that procedure.

Mr. Mullen: It would seem to me that that is a little late. They have been delivered here under that agreement.

The Court: That was I believe toward the end of the former discussion, wasn't it?

Colonel Harris: Page 168, at the very bottom shows I made a statement which summarized it, and Your Honor answered me. It is the last line on Page 168.

The Court: I am of the opinion that Mr. Harris' statement is substantially correct, from my recollection. We will look at the record and see what it shows. You said Page 168?

Colonel Harris: At the very bottom. The last page 8 } line on the Page is where I make a statement, and Your Honor is telling us what to do.

The Court: "That means by no device and maneuvering or change of position or anything else does anybody get to see it if Your Honor has it. The Court: It will be private property. The agreement will be strictly complied with as far as the Court is concerned."

The purpose of exhibiting these Minutes to the Court, Mr. Allen, as I understand it is for the Court to go through the Minutes to determine whether or not there is anything that pertains in anyway to this case.

Mr. Allen: And that the Court is ruling without counsel knowing what the Court saw and what the Court is ruling on, and the Court's ruling will be final? Is that the status of the thing?

The Court: This is the result of Interrogatory No 125, in which the plaintiff asks that all of the Minutes of the Executive Board of the International Union, United Mine Workers, be furnished to the plaintiff. Copies of those minutes,—

Mr. Allen: Yes.

The Court: And as I understand it the Court is to look through these minutes to see whether or not there is anything pertinent to this particular case.

Mr. Allen: My question was—page 9 } The Court: I may go a little further and state: That by pertinent it is meant anything that deals with directives to any of the agents ratifying or confirming any of the acts of any of the agents, if any. Is that correct, gentlemen?

Colonel Harris: Relative to the Laburnum Construction Company.

Mr. Allen: What is that?

Mr. Moore: If there was some overall policy in the region, Laburnum might not be specifically named. You can still go into that, can't we?

The Court: The question of agency.

Colonel Harris: There has been a difference of opinion, as I understand it, all along as to the extent of collateral matters the plaintiff was entitled to look at. And our opinion as to the limitations on what the plaintiff was entitled to see—I understand there has been a difference of opinion all along before I got into the case on that.

There is an earlier statement back before that where Mr. Robertson stated that he did not want to see them; that he was willing to rely on the judgment of the Court, and it was on that statement that we met in Washington and page 10 } they decided to turn them over to the Judge.

Mr. Moore: Are you of the understanding that the Judge can only take into account the parts of those Minutes where Laburnum Construction Corporation is specifically named?

Colonel Harris: No, I don't feel that way. And, you correct me, Mr. Mullen, because you agreed, if I am wrong: I understood that the Judge was to look over those Minutes and decide which Minutes he thought we should furnish copies.

And at this point may I ask is it customary in Virginia where you have an original paper of importance to have it photostated and have the Court authorize the withdrawal of the original in substitution of the copy?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Allen: Yes.

Colonel Harris: We should like to do that whenever the proper time comes to have Your Honor so rule. I didn't understand it was a limitation on what the Judge was going to do. There has been a disagreement among us. In other words, we have turned those papers over to the Judge at this time.

The Court: And the Court, if it thinks advisable, can order copies of all of the Minutes. That is, if in the judgment of the Court it has anything to do with this case, page 11. } of course.

Colonel Harris: Yes.

The Court: Is that your understanding, gentlemen?

Mr. Moore: Yes.

Colonel Harris: If the Court thinks none of them should be copied, then none of them will be.

The Court: Then the Court will not require that question to be answered.

Mr. Moore: So that the record may be complete: Could we not here note that we object and except to the Court not granting this question 125 of the Interrogatory No. 4, as originally offered by us? We want to offer our objection and have our point clear.

Mr. Mullen: At this point I haven't read the record.

Mr. Moore: We went through it.

Mr. Allen: There is a dragnet objection, but I don't think it will suffice. May I get a little clearer understanding of this matter, Your Honor, from the agreements which have been recorded there: The Court is going to clarify the situation by carefully going through all these Minutes, and the Court is going to determine which of them bear on the issues involved in this case, and which of them we are entitled to inroduce in evidence, and then the Court will have page 12 } those photostated, or will order copies of them, and they will be turned over to us, is that correct?

Colonel Harris: We didn't agree the Court was to photostat them. It would be a lot of trouble to the Court to do that, and in order to preserve their secrecy and integrity if the Court points out that it wants some photostated I personally would prefer to have the responsibility of having them photostated.

The Court: I don't see any objection to that.

Mr. Allen: That is all right.

The Court: I didn't understand that the Court would be finally ruling on whether or not they were admissible in evidence. The ruling of the Court would be as to whether or not any or all copies would be required to be furnished the plaintiff.

Mr. Allen: That is right.

The Court: And of course the Court reserves the right to reject any and all at the time of trial.

Colonel Harris: That was my understanding, Your Honor.

The Court: If any of you gentlemen have a different understanding I would like for you to state it.

Mr. Allen: I didn't mean you were to pass upon the admissibility at all. I used that word inadvisedly.

Mr. Bryan: I am not appearing in this case at page 13 } all as counsel, and it may be a little unusual—

Mr. Allen: We ask permission that Mr. Bryan may assist us in the absence of Mr. Robertson this morning, not as counsel but from his own knowledge of the situation, and that he may not be required to enter his name here as counsel in order to have something to say to help us this morning along.

The Court: Any objection to that, gentlemen?

Mr. Mullen: No objection.

The Court: Then that seems to be perfectly all right.

Mr. Bryan: I didn't want to do anything which might jeopardize my position as a witness later on, which would cause any one to say I had disqualified myself, because if that is the case I just can't say anything.

The Court: Is it stipulated then that Mr. Bryan will not be disqualified as a witness by reason of the fact that he is assisting today in this hearing? Then it is so stipulated.

Mr. Bryan: Before we proceed any further in connection with these Minutes: I would like to point out why we think they are important to our case, and why we think that we are entitled to them without restrictions.

page 14 } We have what we believe to be a copy of the Constitution of the United Mine Workers of America, International Union. Article XX of that Constitution reads as follows, Section 1.

“District 50, United Mine Workers of America, subject to the jurisdiction and regulation of the International Executive Board, is hereby created and set up under authority of the International Union and may adopt by-laws and rules not inconsistent with this Union.”

We have information which we believe to be correct that District 50 was organized in about 1936. Prior to that time we think that Mr. John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers were part of the American Federation of Labor.

Around 1936 some difference or trouble arose and those Unions separated, and District 50 was organized by the United Mine Workers of America, not for the purpose of organizing coal miners, and the production of coal, but for the purpose of organizing people engaged in chemical companies, like Solvay, duPont, any of those big companies, and all other industries not directly connected with coal mining.

It was organized in a way to compete with the American Federation of Labor, and afterwards the C. I. O.
page 15 } in organizing various workers who were not organized. After that it appears that United Construction Workers was organized as a division of District 50. The exact distinction between those two organizations we haven't been able to find out as yet.

We also have what we believe to be the rules of District 50, Article I of those rules provides:

“This organization shall be known as District 50, United Mine Workers of America, and shall work under and be subject to the constitution of the International Union as provided in Article XX thereof.”

In other words it ties right back again to the International Executive Board, which the Constitution of the Union, International Union, said should have jurisdiction over and should regulate District 50.

We also have the rules of United Construction Workers. Rules of United Construction Workers provide that it shall be operated under the authority of the Certificate of Affiliation granted by the United Mine Workers of America. Article XVI, Section 3, of those rules provide that all policies pertaining to the administration and the government of the United Construction Workers shall be determined by the National Director, and his rulings shall be binding un-page 16 } less changed by the International Executive Board.

In the Notice of Motion for Judgment it was alleged that United Construction Workers in District 50 are simply agents of United Mine Workers of America carrying out the policies of United Mine Workers of America, that is to organize labor.

In 1941 there was a reorganization of District 50. At that time, in Volume 52, No. 16, published under date of August 15, 1941, there was an article stating that:

"The International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America has laid out a program for the further expansion and organization work of District 50, and changes affecting the District Personnel will be made in official effect on August 1."

It is our belief that there are numerous resolutions and other things pertaining to the management and the regulation of District 50 in United Construction Workers, which appear in these Minutes. If we are correct in our belief we believe that we are entitled to see them. They are very germane, pertinent. Will prove in a large way, if not completely, the allegations of agency which we have made, and which will result we believe in the United Mine Workers of America as a matter of law being liable for the acts alleged of District 50 United Construction Workers in Breathitt County, Kentucky.

We would like to renew our motion that we be page 17 } permitted to see those Minutes. We don't believe it is a fair thing to impose upon the Court to go through those Minutes for anything that might pertain to District 50, we think we would like to see them.

Mr. Allen: I don't know in what order we are supposed to present this matter. I wanted Mr. Bryan to say what he had to say as enlightenment for the Court.

The Court: I thought this matter was determined at the last meeting.

Mr. Allen: Let me approach it from a little different angle, Your Honor. Let us suppose it was. I believe we would have a right, and probably Your Honor would want us to bring to your attention, matters which we think you should bear in mind in going over those Minutes, and in order to determine what we are entitled to, and what you eventually will have to decide we are entitled to.

The Court: I would like to have that information.

Mr. Allen: Let me start with this proposition, that a lot has been said here about principles of agency, and the question of principal and agents being involved here, which is very true. But this matter should be approached, and in reading those Minutes I think it should be borne in mind that the principles applicable in this case go even beyond page 18 } that.

For instance this is a tort, and it is not an ordinary agent who is being charged with a tort. It is a group which we submit constitutes part and parcel of the United Mine Workers of America.

Now in a situation of that kind the tort law applicable is that anyone who encourages, even encourages, doesn't even have to instigate, if he, as the Virginia cases say, by word, acts or signs encourages another to commit a tort, he is liable as principal.

You have here, and I ask Your Honor when you go through those Minutes, to remember this: Mr. Bryan has hit the question squarely, so to speak, but not quite fully. You will find upon reading those three books here that the United Mine Workers of America is composed of various and sundry districts, all over the United States, and in Canada.

They are ordinary districts. They are numbered not consecutively, you might say from one up to the thirties, but just numbered at random. They are, you might say, the ordinary districts that have powers of local groups, but when this District 50 was organized, that is the last district that was organized, it was organized by the United Mine Workers of America on an entirely different basis for an entirely different purpose, and its jurisdiction both geographipage 19 } cally and industrially is coextensive with the jurisdiction of the United Mine Workers itself. And it was organized for the purpose, after competing with the American Federation of Labor, and the C. I. O. in the industrialization of workers, after John Lewis had his break with the American Federation of Labor, and the C. I. O.

It is purely an organizing body, and its representatives; it is part and parcel of the United Mine Workers of America itself.

Now that District 50 is composed of various and sundry regions. The offices of District 50 is in the United Mine Workers Building in Washington in the very same room, same building, same place where the United Mine Workers have their offices—

Mr. Mullen: Is there any evidence before the Court to argue the case on at this time?

Mr. Allen: All that will appear, I think, from these documents here.

Mr. Mullen: It doesn't appear from that.

Mr. Allen: Every bit of it will become clear. And we find that District 50, I say, is divided into many regions with offices in the numerous cities all over the United States. For instance, Region 58, at Pikeville, Kentucky, is the region where this cause of action arose. A man named David page 20 } Hunter there is Regional Director. Region 19 is here in Richmond, a man named Robert Folds is Regional Director.

The United Construction Workers is simply a division of District 50. And you will find not only in these books here, but we think you will find in those Minutes reference after reference to the effect that District 50 is affiliated with the United Mine Workers.

United Construction Workers, affiliated with the United Mine Workers. And you will find the term affiliated described in the books as being a part of, united with, allied with, working in alliance with.

Now if you bear in mind in reading those Minutes the principles of tort law which holds that any encouragement makes the party doing the encouraging liable, and that any group which is a branch of the main body, the actions of that group, makes the main body responsible.

You take these books here, and Mr. Bryan didn't go into them quite fully enough, but I have the rules here of District 50 of United Mine Workers of America.

"This organization shall be known as District 50, United Mine Workers of America."

You find the Administrative Officer operating under authority of Article XX of the Constitution of the International Union, which we have here, shall have general and page 21 } complete supervision over and administration of the affairs of District 50.

You will find "unless otherwise directed by the Administrative Officer of District, or International Executive Board"—It goes on to say the District shall receive and receipt for all monies and so forth. The Secretary-Treasurer and all aids and assistants to handle funds of the District shall give bond for the faithful performance of their respective duties in such sums as may be fixed by the International Executive Board.

On Page 8, I am reading still from the rules of District 50: "All local unions must be chartered by, and shall be under the jurisdiction of, and be subject to the laws of the International Union. The Administrative Officer shall have authority to designate an officer to administer the affairs of any local union when it is found to be within the best interest of the local union to do so. Charter territories may be issued to handle all union affairs, affairs that shall be charged in accordance with provisions of the Constitution of the International Union, United Mine Workers of America. Charters may be issued only by authority of the Administrative Officer, local union shall be composed of 10 or more members engaged in occupations within the jurisdiction of the District."

Now, that is District 50.

page 22 } Mr Mullen: Now, if Your Honor please, we have been all over this time and time again. It has been repeatedly stated by us District 50 is a District of United Mine Workers; that United Construction Workers are affiliated with United Mine Workers. We have been over this whole thing before. The question here now is as to those Minutes.

We have a definite agreement made with counsel before the Court, and sanctioned by the Court, and those Minutes have been delivered here under that agreement.

Mr. Allen: I am not trying to get away from the agreement. I am asking the Court to bear certain things in mind when going through the Minutes to determine what we are entitled to have.

Mr. Mullen: I think you are trying to argue the case before there is any evidence before the Court.

Mr. Allen: You admit, then, District 50 is a part of United Mine Workers?

Mr. Mullen: As I said once before, anybody who can read English can see that District 50 is a District of United Mine Workers. It is specifically stated in its Constitution, and in the rules of District 50. We have said it again and again and again.

Mr. Allen: To which the principles of agency page 23 } would apply?

Mr. Mullen: I haven't said anything about the law. There is no question about that. No, we don't think so.

Mr. Allen: You don't mean then that District 50 is an agent of United Mine Workers?

Mr. Mullen: Not anything like that. I am not admitting anything whatsoever.

Mr. Allen: That is why I think it is important that these things should be borne in mind.

The Court: How would it be for you gentlemen, Mr. Allen, and your associate to furnish the Court with a memorandum of what you think the Court should take into consideration in viewing these Minutes?

Mr. Allen: I think that would be a good idea.

The Court: That would save time and furnish counsel for the defendants a copy of that.

Colonel Harris: I have a number of papers of excerpts from the Digest on Admissibility of Evidence in Virginia, and we would be glad to give you a little statement of how we think Your Honor should limit it to the applicable rules of evidence.

The Court: And furnish counsel with a copy of it. It seems to me that would perhaps save time, and the Court would like to have the views of counsel for both sides on this subject.

page 24 } Mr. Pollard: If Your Honor please, we renew our objection at this time that this particular Interrogatory asking for the Minutes of the meetings does not meet the requirements of Section 8324 of the Code.

Mr. Moore: Is that the Section of Interrogatories—

Mr. Pollard: It is part of the Section of Interrogatories.

The Court: It is my recollection that objection is in the Minutes? Is that true?

Mr. Pollard: Did you overrule it?

The Court: I reserved, I think, my ruling on that. I haven't stated at this point whether I am going to require the defendant to answer a question there numbered 125 or not.

Mr. Allen: All right.

Mr. Pollard: Then we also renew our objection that none of the questions in any of the Interrogatories which require the defendant to produce—Any of the defendants to produce documents meets the requirements of Section 8 through 24, which you overruled.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Pollard: And we except.

Mr. Bryan: We were with Mr. Robertson all morning, and based on our talk with him I don't believe that his recollection of any agreement made up here last time is page 25 } exactly the same as Colonel Harris or Mr. Mullen have stated it to be.

The plaintiff is very anxious to preserve its right to call for those Minutes, not only during the period from October 28, 1948, to August 4, 1949, but all Minutes of the International Executive Board from the date of the formation of District 50. That is what we would like to see.

Any kind of an agreement that they think we are under to the contrary, we would like to be relieved of it. We want to call for the—

Mr. Mullen: We certainly will not relieve counsel of an agreement entered into in the Presence of the Court and sanctioned by the Court, and we have represented to our clients what that agreement was. It is there in writing.

These Minutes will serve the purpose as covered by the agreement, they were entrusted to the care of Colonel Harris to be brought down here to the Court pursuant to that agreement, and we are very much surprised that counsel now takes the position that it having gotten the Minutes here can get out of that agreement. That is what your position amounts to.

Mr. Allen: May I say this at this time—

Mr. Bryan: I wanted to bring that question up page 26 } before proceeding further.

The Court: Have you gentlemen read the Minutes of the last meeting?

Mr. Allen: I have not, but even if it be true that that agreement was entered into, I don't see any reason in law or equity why if we think that Mr. Robertson entered into it, maybe inadvertently, from what he said to us this morning, he didn't consider that he had entered into such an agreement.

But let's assume that he had: We have a right to come here and ask Your Honor to permit us to withdraw from the agreement. I have asked the Court of Appeals to permit me to withdraw from an agreement there, and they did allow me. Therefore I don't see why I can't ask this Court to permit me to withdraw from an agreement, since no one's position has been made any worse by it.

And if Your Honor should grant that motion, they would be entitled to their Minutes back, and let the gentlemen take them right back to Washington. Then you could pass on the question as to whether we are entitled to them. But at any rate we would like to file a written memorandum setting forth the matters that we think you, Your Honor, should bear in mind in determining which of those Minutes we are entitled to see, and we should like to also file a memorandum asking permission to withdraw from the agreement, if an agreement was made as the Minutes indicated was.

page 27 } We don't see where these gentlemen have been put in any worse position by it. They have brought the Minutes down here, and they can take them back without they being opened, if we got them to bring them down here on the faith of that agreement. Then we can proceed anew and determine whether we are entitled to the Minutes or not. It is perfectly apparent that the United Mine Workers of America run the whole show, so to speak, and that these Minutes will show that they run the whole show.

Mr. Bryan: I have before me a copy of a Resolution passed by the International Convention in its session in October of 1948. This is just a sample, I believe, of some of the things that will appear in those minutes.

"Whereas for some years District 50 has been an integral part of our great organization with an office staff that is efficient and energetic, they leave no stone unturned to bring under the banner of this branch of the UMWA thousands of unorganized men and women in our Nation. And whereas were it not for this branch of our union many who are now enjoying the benefits of working under a contract would have never heard the story of collective bargaining, and what it means to the men and women who toil. Therefore, page 28 } be it resolved, that we commend the able officials of District 50 for their past untiring efforts, for their splendid victories, their unity of purpose to never rest on past victories, but to press forward ever diligent until the last man and woman who toils in our Nation has learned of the many good things of life that can come to them by associating themselves with a trade union.

"And be it further resolved that our great Parent Body through its responsible and efficient officers continue to lend every moral and financial support to District 50, that the coming generations may reap a harvest of increased wages, shorter hours, and enjoy more of the better things of life. That the officers of this fine District may be able to continue their ceaseless efforts to make the luxuries cherished by our people a reality."

How many more resolutions like that appear in the Minutes of International Executive Board we don't know, but—

Mr. Mullen: What does that prove?

Mr. Bryan: I think it definitely shows District 50 is constituted an agent of United Mine Workers of America.

Mr. Mullen: We have said again and again and page 29 } again that District 50 is a District of United Mine Workers.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Bryan: But you do deny the agency, Mr. Mullen.

Mr. Mullen: It is a part of United Mine Workers. District.

Mr. Allen: And if District 50 is a part of United Mine Workers, then we are entitled to see the relation, and the Minutes showing the relation to District 50 are admissible in evidence here.

Mr. Mullen: You are not entitled to anything except that you can show is pertinent, otherwise it is a fishing expedition, and you have no right to the papers themselves. You have to file an affidavit showing what is pertinent, and how it is pertinent. That is provided for by the Code.

It was fully argued by me here at the last hearing. So I won't go into the details of it again at this point, but you cannot call for all the books of either a corporation or an unincorporated organization and get them in that fashion.

Colonel Harris: If the Court pleases: We made a solemn agreement in open Court, and the Court approved of it. Now he says he does not know of anything that we have done in opposition to that, but he has changed his position. This isn't a question of an estoppel. This is a question page 30 } of an agreement made in open Court.

I could tell him many various things that we might have done, but on the suggestion of Mr. Robertson this method was used, and we agreed to it. We didn't suggest it. We say that counsel can't at this time ask us successively, or ask the Court, to release them of an agreement solemnly made.

You will find a statement there by Mr. Robertson that he didn't even want to see the Minutes himself.

The Court: Suppose we read several pages of the Minutes. You gentlemen say you haven't read them, and neither have I, as a matter of fact. It might refresh our memory if we did that at this time. Let's start on Page 161 and read.

Note: At this point the Court reads aloud to counsel present at length from the transcript of the former hearing.

The Court: That is the story, gentlemen.

Mr. Allen: I do not see where Mr. Robertson has waived his right to insist upon an answer to Interrogatory 125. That is held open. And 125 calls for these Minutes.

page 31 } Note: The Court now examines a paper writing handed to the Court by Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Bryan: I don't think Mr. Robertson intended to waive by consent all further rights to ask for these Minutes, or other Minutes.

Mr. Mullen: There is nothing ambiguous in the record on that point at all. The matter was left to the Judge to go through and determine if any part was necessary, or pertinent, to this case, and if so he would require it be furnished.

Mr. Robertson agreed to it definitely. I am very much surprised that you now want to go back on that agreement.

Note: We further pause while the Court further reads this paper writing handed to him by Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Mullen: We don't understand you are offering that Order at this time. Is that correct?

Colonel Harris: I assume we will have a chance to check their Order. And if we have any suggestions we can submit them to them?

The Court: I would think so. This is the first page 32 } time you have seen the Order?

Colonel Harris: Yes, sir.

Mr. Moore: We just went through all the Interrogatories and tried as best we could to consolidate the Court's ruling on all of them in a logical order so you could easily see what parts were given and refused and modified and what not. That is all that there is in there, and it is just the part about the Interrogatories.

Mr. Pollard: I think it is better to have a written—

Mr. Mullen: We are up there today to take up Interrogatories and object to the Answers to those that we filed to you. That is our purpose here today mainly. We would like to get on with that.

Colonel Harris: Your Honor will notice there that that statement of mine, beginning at Page 168, where I looked down the road and tried to envision the possibilities, and I used the express words "any device, maneuvering, change of position, or anything else."

Now that was as broad as my mind was capable of making it. That was my understanding of what we had agreed to, and to ask something else seems to be right in the face of the plain agreement. To come in now and say they want to withdraw that stipulation, I don't understand that people can enter into a solemn agreement and then with-page 33 } draw from it.

The Court: The Court was of the opinion that that was the agreement, and the question now is, as I see it, whether or not to entertain the motion to relieve the parties of this agreement.

As I read the record it reads that the agreement was as stated. Do you gentlemen differ with the Court from the standpoint of the record?

Mr. Allen: I don't quite understand what effect that agreement has upon our Interrogatory No. 125. It seems that the answer to that is left in abeyance for the time being, but it doesn't seem that we have waived our right completely to an answer to that Interrogatory.

Colonel Harris: I understood you agreed to leave it to the judgment of the Court.

The Court: That was my understanding. The Court reserved its decision on 125, and after the Court looked at the Minutes, and the Court then being of the opinion that copies ought to be furnished then the same will be ordered.

If it is of opinion none should be furnished, that would be the Order of the Court. It may be that after looking through the Minutes the Court might order all of them to be furnished. It was a plan to be helpful to the Court in determining whether or not to grant question 125 to United page 34 } Mine Workers of America as written.

Mr. Mullen: That is the way I understood.

The Court: That is right, is it not, gentlemen?

Mr. Bryan: After listening to the statement in the record, it would appear that is what Mr. Robertson said. But it also appears that the Court reserved any final ruling on that Interrogatory, and I didn't think that the plaintiff had finally and fully waived all its rights to request that those Minutes be produced.

When we saw the Minutes here today we thought that before proceeding any further we better get that matter straight before the things are opened. We again think that material information is contained in those Minutes, as well as in Minutes of the meeting of the International Executive Board held prior to that time.

In fact, ever since District 50 was organized.

The Court: Maybe the Court will rule with you, but the Court hasn't ruled on that question as yet.

Mr. Bryan: We didn't want to be in the position of having anyone think that because these Minutes came down here and were opened that we had lost all our rights to forever after asking to see the Minutes.

Mr. Mullen: My understanding was that they were brought to help the Court to determine its ruling on that question, and after the Court had examined them it would page 35 } rule whether all or none or a part of those Minutes should be furnished, and that would be the Court's ruling, and either side then would have a right to except. That is what I understood the situation to be.

Note: Here ensues an off the record discussion by request.

Mr. Allen: I wonder if you would let Mr. Bryan, Mr. Moore and myself have a little conference for a minute?

The Court: Yes. We will recess for five minutes.

Note: At this time a five minutes recess is had, following which the matter is further discussed, as follows:

The Court: All right, gentlemen. After the conference do you gentlemen have anything further to say?

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, I have conferred with these gentlemen here, and we are willing to go along with the understanding, which Your Honor has expressed here, but inasmuch as Your Honor is going to examine the Minutes we think it is vitally important that you examine all page 36 } of the Minutes from the organization of District 50 showing the organization and management of District 50, and examine them just like you examined these, and under the same circumstances and same restrictions.

Also, subject to no change by any device, change of agreement or whatnot.

Colonel Harris: That is not in the question. Question 125 starts off with October 28, 1948.

Mr. Allen: You didn't let me get through.

Colonel Harris: Then pardon me.

Mr. Allen: I was going to ask for leave to amend the question to go back to the date of the organization of District 50.

Colonel Harris: Now are you through?

Mr. Allen: Yes.

Colonel Harris: Judge, I suppose you have other duties to perform, and other cases to handle, and I assume that you don't want to devote all of your time to going back and reading Minutes that can't possibly have any bearing on Laburnum Construction Company.

We believe when you read all those Minutes you will know far more about how you intend to rule than you can possibly know today. It seems to me that at this time to carry out the agreement we made on which we brought the Minutes into this jurisdiction, there is nothing left for either page 37 } side. We can't do anything but live up to our agreements as members of the Bar. There is no alternative left for us.

Mr. Allen: I was asking leave to amend the question. That didn't have anything to do with the agreement.

Mr. Cowherd: I think that that in itself is the very essence of the agreement. I am a little bit older than 20, and I have been around quite a bit over the United States, and this is the most unusual request I have ever heard in a law case.

I have always been able to feel secure in any agreement I ever made in Court, and counsel for the other side have never even proposed such an idea as this.

Mr. Allen: Wouldn't we have a right to file another Interrogatory asking for other Minutes?

Mr. Cowherd: I suppose you have had 7 or 8 now, so you would have some more. The way this matter is shaping up we will have nothing to do but run back and forth. We have other business that needs attention as well as this case.

Mr. Mullen: If we have to answer Interrogatories by November 15, we just can't keep on getting them. We have been delayed today because you have taken up time on page 38 } these other matters. We were here to submit objections to the last Interrogatories, so we could get into position to answer them on November 15.

So far as this request is concerned I think it is unreasonable. District 50 was formed back in 1935, and it would have a vast amount of reading to do, and, further, this is purely a fishing expedition.

Those Minutes have nothing to do with what was done, said or happened in Breathitt County in 1949.

Mr. Bryan: What Mr. Mullen has said, Your Honor, strikes the nail on the head. He keeps referring to the phrase about Breathitt County in 1949. They would like to have this inquiry just limited to Laburnum Construction Corporation and Breathitt County over a week end in July, 1949.

We feel that our efforts to prove the relationship of agency which existed between the International Union, which is a parent organization, and the affiliates or branches, District 50, and United Construction Workers, we can show the connection by showing the dealings and course of conduct between these organizations over a period of time.

The inquiry should not just be limited to one locality over a little short space of time. It is not what happened in Region 58. Anything that is in those Minutes that page 39 } pertain to District 50, to the management of District 50, or United Construction Workers, or the conduct of its affairs, we think is pertinent.

The Constitution of the United Mine Workers of America says, as I stated, District 50 shall be subject to the jurisdiction and the regulation of the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America.

The Court: The Court will overrule the motion to grant leave to amend.

If you gentlemen wish to offer another Interrogatory the Court will pass on that at the proper time.

. . . . .

. . . . .

The Court: We had several Interrogatories we didn't pass on.

Mr. Allen: 11, 12 and 13, weren't they?

The Court: No, Mr. Robertson presented some new Interrogatories.

page 41 } Colonel Harris: 14, 15 and 16 were the numbers in pencil on the top of mine.

Mr. Mullen: No, this is some further Interrogatory presented to United Mine Workers.

Mr. Bryan: He has numbered these for convenience 11, 12 and 13.

The Court: The originals are probably in the papers.

Mr. Bryan: That Order which you have a copy of undertakes to give numbers to all these different Interrogatories.

The Court: Further Interrogatories—(Starting off to read something to himself)—is this the copy?

Mr. Cowherd: Ones submitted to us were 14, 15 and 16. I don't know if it was marked that way for convenience or confusion.

Mr. Mullen: Here are the objections we are going to make to them (handing counsel a paper writing).

The Court: Before we leave the Minutes of the Executive Committee of the United Mine Workers: It is understood that you gentlemen, counsel for the plaintiff, are going to furnish the Court with a memorandum of points that you think the Court should take into consideration in viewing these Minutes.

Mr. Allen: Yes, sir.

page 42 } The Court: And it is further understood that counsel for the defendants will furnish the Court a memorandum of authorities showing the limitations, and both sides will furnish the other side copy of the respective memorandum.

Mr. Allen: Yes.

The Court: Is that understood, gentlemen?

Mr. Bryan: Also understood we reserve the right to request that the defendants furnish copies of the Minutes prior to October 28, 1948.

Colonel Harris: The Court ruled on that already.

Mr. Bryan: I thought he ruled couldn't amend the question.

Colonel Harris: But if you want to file another Interrogatory, the Court will pass on that later.

The Court: I will pass on that point if and when further Interrogatories are filed.

Mr. Mullen: Now, if Your Honor please—

The Court: Which one first?

Mr. Mullen: United Mine Workers. There was served on us further Interrogatories on October 12, 1950. We object to Question 5.

Mr. Allen: What was that? Please orient me so I will know what you have there.

Mr. Mullen: What did you say?

page 43 } Mr. Allen: I wanted to see which Interrogatory you wanted to discuss. Read the first line on the first question, so I will know that I have the right one.

The Court. Yes.

Mr. Allen: Just what was that?

Mr. Mullen: Qestion 5, the first question we object to. Here is the question: "With respect to the work which was being performed by Link Belt Company of Chicago, Illinois, for Inland Steel Company, at Priceville, Kentucky, or Wheelright, Kentucky, during the year 1949, did Thomas Raney as an official of United Mine Workers of America, or in any other capacity attend certain meetings held between representatives of United Construction Workers, affiliated with United Mine Workers of America, (hereinafter sometimes called United Construction Workers) or representatives of the District 50 United Mine Workers of America, (hereinafter sometimes called Distrct 50) and representatives of Link Belt Company during the months of May, June or July of 1949, for the purpose of negotiating an agreement by which Link Belt Company would recognize United Construction Workers or District 50 as the collective bargaining agent for some or all of the employees of Link Belt Company on page 44 } said work at Priceville, Kentucky, or Wheelright, Kentucky, and in this connection did Thomas Raney as an official of United Mine Workers of America, or in any other capacity, participate in any manner in negotiations with Link Belt Company? What meetings between representatives of United Construction Workers or District 50, and representative of Link Belt Company did Thomas Raney attend, and to what extent did he participate in the negotiations carried on with Link Belt Company?"

Now, we object to that as it calls for testimony that is immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent. It has to do with transactions res ipsa loquitur, and that it calls for testimony that will throw no light on the issue in this case, and the matters inquired about in this Interrogatory relative to Thomas Raney would shed no light on the actions or statement of Thomas Raney in any connection with any business or claims of the plaintiff Laburnum Construction Company.

The Interrogatory calls for testimony which on the surface would only serve to confuse the jury, and it is propounded for the purpose of creating prejudice against this defendant.

Now, it is entirely a separate company, has nothing to do with Laburnum Corporation, we don't know any-page 45 } thing about any of the circumstances under which they were working, or anything about their dealings with any Union.

We cannot see how it can possibly have any bearing whatsoever on this case, or that it is relevant testimony in this case.

Mr. Bryan: Are you through?

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

Mr. Bryan: Your Honor, we expect the evidence to show that during the first part of July, 1949, Mr. William O. Hart, who is a representative of United Construction Workers in District 50, United Mine Workers of America, called us over the telephone, called the plaintiff over the telephone, in Richmond, he was in Pikeville, Kentucky, and said that it would be necessary for the plaintiff to enter into an agreement recognizing United Construction Workers as the sole collective bargaining agent for the employees of the plaintiff on the work for Pond Creek Pocahontas Company in Breathitt County, Kentucky.

Mr. Hart said that they had recently broken up work and run employees off of the job in Wheelright, Kentucky for Inland Steel Company. That is, employees of Link Belt Company and Becker Construction Company. We expect to have testimony which will show that. We further expect to show, and are advised, that after this Link Belt Company page 46 } entered into an agreement with United Construction Workers recognizing that Union as collective bargaining agent for employees of Link Belt.

In connection with negotiating that agreement it appears that Thomas Raney, who is a member of the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America participated in the negotiations with Link Belt.

We believe that that establishes or shows that United Mine Workers of America and United Construction Workers are in an agency relationship, United Mine Workers backstading United Construction Workers through its International Representative Mr. Raney.

Therefore, United Mine Workers of America participates in connection with the negotiations between United Construction Workers and people like Link Belt, or Becker Construction Company, or could be Laburnum, if Laburnum had entered into an agreement with United Construction Workers.

That is the purpose of the question. We think it is relevant, it calls for pertinent evidence.

Mr. Moore: I would like to say one thing about this to you, Your Honor, if that is all right, at this time:

It brings up the question of proof of other acts, page 47 } which may on their face seem to be irrelevant. But, as you well know, Your Honor, under the law of evidence, which of course is in this case governed by Virginia Law, proof of past acts in similar instances is perfectly admissible when it goes to show a general scheme or a general pattern, and an overall picture.

Because then it tends to prove the particular act under question. We have authorities which we would be glad to quote to show if there is any doubt in your mind on that point. We believe this is perfectly pertinent to show this general plan that the defendants were using here in Kentucky.

We think that it should be allowed on that basis, as well as the agency basis.

The Court: I will allow the question, and of course I will reserve the right to refuse to admit it into evidence at the proper time.

Mr. Mullen: We note the exception.

Mr. Mullen: Next we object to Question 6, furnish a copy of each of ..... Journal.

Then they call for some 38 different issues of the publication of United Mine Workers Journal, and the furnishing of those can simply serve to only confuse the jury, as counsel will show you, it is a design also to prejudice page 48 } the jury against the defendant for the reason that the issues of the United Mine Workers Journal contain various and sundry expressions of opinion, and discussions of economic, social and political questions, which would tend to arouse debate and disagreement on the part of the members of the jury, who hold principles contrary to the principles expressed or positions taken, in said Journal, and possibly could arouse a feeling in such jury or prejudice against the said defendants. Said Interrogatory calls for testimony that would unduly burden the record in this case, and the requirement of Section 8-324 Code of Virginia of 1950, have not been met with in respect to this Interrogatory.

This Journal is a paper setting forth the view and so forth of the United Mine Workers. It contains criticism of laws proposed to be passed which they believe somewhat designed against labor. Such, in late years, as the Taft-Hartley Act. It tends to bring about discussions as to the acts of members which criticised throughout the country in connection with strikes and so forth, all of those things would go to prejudice the Jury.

Now it is just the same as if you were asked the hand to the jury a series of copies of the Times Dispatch and the News Leader, which in turn criticised the United Mine Workers in the case of strikes, criticising John Lewis in attempting to negotiate contracts, it attacks the Wagner Act, and similar things. All of it would simply prejudice the jury.

I want to ask Your Honor what would be the chances of a defendant before a Virginia jury with something like that before them (now handing to the Court a paper writing, or pamphlet).

These are partisan papers. If they can point out any item that has a bearing on this case, that is all so well and good. But 38 issues of a newspaper that contained all of these criticisms, that expresses opinions that may be contrary to every one of the opinions of the jury, it can have nothing and no effect whatever except prejudice the jury.

I have read a number of these. I have the whole bunch here. I have read them. Those I read didn't have a word in them that could have any reference or bearing to this. If they have any particular Article that they want to call for, and can point out as having any bearing or anything to do with the case, that is one question. But to put these issues of these papers before the jury will not only confuse the jury, it would prejudice the jury, and certainly they have no right to put those before them anymore than we would have a right to put the papers of the Times-Dispatch or the News Leader into evidence, any of those things, in a case where they were concerned with the other side.

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, may I say this: The question simply provides "furnish a copy of each of the following issues or United Mine Workers Journal."

There is not one word said about introducing the copies into evidence, and of course that will be a matter entirely within Your Honor's discretion and ruling, and the only certain things about it is that they would be inspected to see what parts are material. There are only certain things in those Journals that we will even ask be read to the jury, and that will be considered evidence when read to the jury.

The Journal is the official organ of the defendants, or the defendant United Mine Workers. And anything that that Journal contains with reference to the admission, or evidence that we consider proof of some of the things we allege, is certainly evidence in the case.

It is their official organ. It is their official document over their own signature. Now we won't offer any evidence except what is pertinent, we won't offer any inflammatory Articles as Mr. Mullen has referred to here. Your Honor would pass on the particular portions of those Journals which would be admissible in evidence, and would read both page 51 } portions to the jury, and that is all there would be to it.

Mr. Mullen: Haven't you copies of all of these that you called for?

Mr. Allen: I don't think that we have.

Mr. Ryan: I have one in my hand here, designated Volume 52, No. 16, dated August 15, 1941, at the top of the page No. 2, I might say Page 2 and every other issue of the United Mine Workers Journal that we have ever seen contains an official roster of the United Mine Workers of America, showing the president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, all the members of the United, or all the members of the International Executive Board, and a District President and a District Secretary-Treasurers.

At the bottom it says "United Mine Workers Journal, Official Publication United Mine Workers of America. Published on the 1st and 15th of each month by the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America. John L. Lewis, International President. Philip Murray, International Vice-President. Thomas Kenny, International Secretary-Treasurer. Ellis Sills, Editor. Publication Office 912-918 Burlington Avenue, Silver Springs, Maryland. Editorial Office United Mine Workers Building, Washington, D. C."

This particular Article, this is just an examination page 52 } tion of some of the things that we believe that we can show and should be able to show is shown on Page 3 of this particular issue under large headlines, "Plans for expansion of District 50 under way."

Under that is a picture of Miss Catherine Lewis, Secretary-Treasurer; picture of Martin Wagner, International Executive Board. The Article starts off by saying that the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America has laid out a plan for the further expansion and organization of District 50, and changes affecting the District Personnel have been made in official effect on August 1, 1941.

Many of these copies of the Journal which we have contain accounts of International Convention of the United Mine Workers of America. They have speeches and so forth in them made by John L. Lewis, referring to District 50, referring to United Construction Workers, telling what they plan to do, all of which we believe to be very relevant.

In one particular case we have a copy of a Resolution passed by an International Convention offering moral and financial assistance by United Mine Workers of America to District 50. Also its affiliate.

All of which goes to show the agency which we page 53 } have alleged, and which these people have denied.

They say in one breath that District 50 United Construction Workers are part of the United Mine Workers of America, might say part and parcel of it, and yet in the other breath they say but they were not the agents of United Mine Workers of America, United Mine Workers of America can't be held liable for anything District 50 did, even though all the time they were carrying out the policies of United Mine Workers of America.

We already have these copies of the magazine that we have called for. We are supposed to return them. And another question comes up, suppose we get into the trial of this case and then they raise a question and say that this hasn't been properly identified. How do we know it is a copy of United Mine Workers Journal.

We would like to have these things identified and furnished by them, so that that question will be obviated at the time of the trial.

We have already made a summary of everything in here that we think is pertinent. Of course, everything that is in the magazine isn't relevant, of course.

Colonel Harris: We call Your Honor's attention to the remoteness into which that Interrogatory goes. The alleged wrong that took place in Breathitt County, Kentucky, was in July, 1949, as I recall from this long Notice of page 54 } Motion for Judgment, and those questions, some of them go back to 1940 and 1941, 8 or 9 years before. I don't see how it is possible to confine the trial to the pertinent issues if they can go and bring in stuff by the armful going back over a long period of years.

It seems to me that the limitations of time, the limitations of the human mind, and the memory of the jury, plus the points that Mr. Mullen made about the necessary prejudice, he explained, that would be created, many of the opinions held by the United Mine Workers of America Editorial Writer do not square, no doubt, with many of the opinions of many of the citizens who would be serving on the jury, men who would be called as jurors in the trial of this case, and when you come to try a law suit you don't try a man from the cradle to the grave. That is reserved for the judgment of the dead that takes place hereafter. All you try anybody for is the one controversy and the one alleged wrong.

Mr. Bryan: This goes right to the meat of the case, Your Honor, in a way. We are not attempting to try the United Mine Workers of America for a lot of different things that they had done. But in an effort to hold the United Mine Workers of America liable for one thing that they did, I think it is necessary for us to prove a relationship of agency.

At least, that is what we said. Either that or that page 55 } they are all one big organization, each principal and agent of the other.

They have denied that allegation, in their grounds of defense, and the question comes up as to how are we going to prove that. How better way can we do it, than by showing what they have done and what their officers, Executive Officers, have said, and what their International Executive Board, the Supreme governing body, has done.

The Court: Gentlemen, I will allow the question, but of course at the time of trial if any of these items are offered in evidence the Court of course reserves the right to reject any and all of them. It may be helpful to you gentlemen if it can be stipulated that they are copies, and that might save some time.

Mr. Moore: We will have to return these?

The Court: Return them after the trial?

Mr. Bryan: I expect we could return them after, Your Honor. But if they have extra copies which they probably have I believe it would be better.

The Court: Do you all have copies of these, Mr. Harris?

Colonel Harris: We have except for two.

The Court: Maybe you could stipulate about them, then.

Colonel Harris: Two of them are in the bound page 56 } volume, which is the only record that the United Mine Workers have. We haven't been able to get any extra copies of these two. The others we have.

The Court: Why not stipulate about those two? Couldn't you stipulate those two that you don't have that they are true copies?

Mr. Mullen: Do you have them, the first two called for?

Mr. Bryan: First two?

The Court: It is not to be understood the Court is declaring these magazines as admissible in anyway in evidence. The Court is not passing on that at this time.

Mr. Allen: Just requiring them to produce them and identify them as the official organ.

The Court: That is right.

Mr. Mullen: We note the exception.

Mr. Allen: May 15, 1940, and June 15, 1940.

Colonel Harris: What was the stipulation that Your Honor suggested? Do you mind repeating it?

The Court: I suggested that there are two copies that you gentlemen have in bound volumes that you would not like to get out of your hands. And I am informed that counsel for the plaintiff has those two copies. Am I correct in that statement?

page 57 } Mr. Bryan: I think so.

The Court: If that be true I am wondering whether or not you would be willing to stipulate that they are the two copies referred to in this question.

Mr. Mullen: I see no objection to that. We can take the bound volume back, then.

The Court: That would save you from trying to get copies.

Mr. Mullen: We will stipulate those two copies.

Mr. Allen: Shall we produce them here now and identify them so we will know what we are stipulating?

Colonel Harris: We said it was the first two in the question. And the question identifies them.

The Court: Then they are identified.

Mr. Allen: Yes. One No. 10, the other No. 12. That is right.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Mullen: We have no further objection to the question. We make the same objection to the question which is question No. 5. We make the same objection to that question in the Interrogatories addressed to United Construction Workers, and to District 50.

The Court: All right. Same ruling, of course, and the same exception.

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

page 58 } Mr. Bryan: You say that is question 5?

Mr. Mullen: I think it is question 5 in all of them? Yes, I know it is.

The Court: What about No. 6.

Mr. Mullen: No. 6 was only in that one.

The Court: What are these papers you presented to the Court?

Mr. Mullen: The objections that we made.

The Court: You want these filed?

Mr. Mullen: Yes, like I did before.

The Court: I will mark them as filed. There is no objection to the Court marking those objections to Interrogatories filed?

Mr. Allen: No.

Mr. Mullen: I gave you a copy of the United Mine Workers. Yes, United Mine Workers. Here is the United Construction Workers.

Note: Handing paper writing to Mr. Allen.

The Court: Let the record show that the Judge is delivering the Minutes of the Executive Committee of the International Union to Mr. Mullen for safe keeping. When the Minutes are called for an returned to the Court the Court will give Mr. Mullen a receipt for same. page 59 } Colonel Harris: All right.

Th Court: And the record will also show Colonel Harris, who was designated as custodian of these Minutes, has agreed to that arrangement.

Colonel Harris: That is right. And when Your Honor is through with them you will let me know so that I personally can come and receive them.

The Court: They personally will be placed in your hands. All right, Mr. Mullen, the Court now hands them to you.

Note: This package is now taken by Mr. Pollard.

Mr. Mullen: I will lodge them in my safe for tonight.

Mr. Allen: As far as we are concerned you may keep them in your safe.

Mr. Mullen: I would rather not do that.

Mr. Pollard: There is one other matter, Judge, we would like to go into. We did not have a reporter there and it is again a question of recollection, but I don't think anyone will disagree—page 60 } Mr. Pollard: That is with respect to the depositions which were taken in Kentucky, when we dropped our objection to it it was with the understanding that the reporter was not necessarily correct in the objections, which we made to the admissibility of the evidence on the record, and that we would lose no right by that.

I have made an investigation into the law on that, and it is my understanding that we have to file the objections with the Court within a reasonable time after the depositions are filed with the Court, and we would like for you to fix a date by which we have to have that in.

The Court: What do you gentlemen have to say about that?

Mr. Bryan: Your Honor, when we were here before you may recall that depositions were taken in Pikeville, I think on August 18 and 19, and they were continued over until October 2. Mr. Mullen, Mr. Pollard, had indicated that they wanted to cross examine those witnesses. We had a hearing, I think here on either September 20 or September 26, and at that time it is my recollection that they said that they would withdraw all objections to the depositions which had been voiced, and that they were not going to cross page 61 } examine the witnesses. Nobody went out there.

Mr. Pollard: That is correct, Mr. Bryan, as far as it goes. We are withdrawing our objections to the incompetency of the court reporter, and Mr. Robertson—I don't like to say this in Mr. Robertson's absence, particularly in view of the fact that there have been so many times in this case that Mr. Robertson and I have had differences, and I think thus far I have been borne out on every one—But in view of his absence it is necessary to make this statement. We said that of course in dropping the objections to the depositions because of the manner in which they were taken by the reporter we were not giving up our objections to the admissibility of the depositions in evidence. That is, the objections to the questions and answers.

Mr. Moore: You waived your right of cross examination?

Mr. Bryan: I understood you were withdrawing your objections to the depositions, and you would not pursue a motion to have them—Don't know what the technical word is—

Mr. Pollard: Quashed, or suppressed.

Mr. Mullen: It is a very different thing from objecting to the individual questions.

Mr. Pollard: The admissibility of the testimony.

Mr. Mullen: I made that very clear, I thought.
page 62 } Mr. Bryan: I think Mr. Robertson wrote a letter to Mr. Mullen about that.

Mr. Mullen: Not on the question of the individual questions.

Mr. Allen: Why were not the questions followed by the objections?

Mr. Pollard: The court reporter was so incompetent she had everything backwards and forwards. So we say we will not object to the evidence as written up by the reporter, and we asked Mr. Robertson specifically that today about the objections to the introduction of the testimony, and he said of course as I have indicated.

Mr. Allen: You mean by that you are not objecting to the correctness of the testimony as recorded, but you were reserving your objection on the subject of admissibility?

Mr. Pollard: That is right.

Mr. Mullen: We had indicated we might ask to have the whole thing thrown out because it was botched so, and we said finally we will let it go, but we do not in that way give up the right to object to the individual questions, objections being not incorporated in the depositions themselves.

The Court: Objections were not noted in the page 63 } depositions?

Mr. Allen: But she didn't get them.

Mr. Mullen: She would just get the word "Object", for one thing, not saying what it was.

Mr. Cowherd: I was present during those depositions and the thing that caused this action was in part, probably almost entirely, as stated by the Court Reporter herself. When an objection was made by Mr. Pollard she would say "I will be the judge of what goes into the record."

Mr. Bryan: Who said that?

Mr. Cowherd: The court reporter herself. It was for that reason that we are positive that the record wouldn't be absolutely accurate, and she might or might not have gotten all of the objections properly placed, even if she had tried.

The Court: As I understand the situation now it is that Mr. Pollard, by withdrawing his objection to the depositions, did not withdraw his objections to the admissibility of the questions and answers contained therein.

Mr. Pollard: That is right. And Mr. Robertson said he wouldn't object to any objections made to that because, for instance, the objections that were made there the court reporter just would put down the words page 64 } that the defendants objects, and that was not sufficient. As long as Mr. Robertson agreed that we wouldn't be bound by just the defendant objects, or in cases where she failed to note the objection, that he wouldn't object to the manner in which the depositions were taken by the reporter.

The Court: But you reserved your objections, which are stated in the record?

Mr. Bryan: That is right.

Mr. Allen: In other words, assuming the testimony was recorded correctly you still object, you observe your objection to the admissibility.

Mr. Bryan: Didn't assume that you assumed the right to challenge the accuracy.

Mr. Pollard: No.

The Court: Not the accuracy.

Mr. Mullen: That is what we gave up.

Mr. Pollard: We understood we reserved the right, and Mr. Robertson agreed to challenge the admissibility to any and all of the depositions on the grounds as to whether or not they were proper evidence. And we understand that we have got to state those objections and those grounds within a certain time, and we would like the Court to fix the time within which we have to state our objections to the admissibility of the evidence. Not to the accuracy of page 65 } them.

The Court: I see what you mean.

Mr. Mullen: Here is an example, Your Honor—

The Court: It may not be necessary, Mr. Mullen, to go into that. These gentlemen I think have agreed. Any objection to that, gentlemen?

Mr. Bryan: Mr. Pollard from time to time objects to various questions, and I suppose that objection would still hold. I didn't understand that he was withdrawing his objections.

The Court: He is asking now for a time limit within which to file objections in writing.

Mr. Pollard: That is right. I don't understand we are limited to those which actually appear in the record.

Mr. Bryan: We do.

Mr. Pollard: That was the whole point, Mr. Robertson said that he didn't object.

Mr. Moore: I don't recall the exact words, Your Honor, but I thought that after counsel for the defendants left the room for a short intermission there, and then they came back and said "We waive all objections to this testimony, but we reserve our right as to the admissibility of these questions at the day of trial", and that is what was said between the parties. I may be wrong, but that is my recollection of it.

Mr. Mullen: We reserve the right to make objections to the questions that appear in the depositions, and to, even though it is not stated that specifically counsel objected, or the grounds are not observed, because they left out a great deal of that, it comes down to the same thing, I think anytime that we introduce them in Court we have a right to object to any part of the depositions.

Mr. Pollard: May I point out one more thing? Mr. Mullen on the last page of those Interrogatories stated that the defendants reserved the right to object to any and all of them at the time of trial, and the plaintiff didn't object to it.

The Court: Why not set a time limit for counsel for the defendants to file their objections, as they see fit.

Mr. Allen: How much time would you all want?

Mr. Mullen: We have got some 500 questions between now and November 15, for one thing, and we still have to argue the question when it comes up here, and it takes time to do that. That would be quite a laborious thing to go through there 160 pages of depositions and state your objections and write out the reasons for them all.

Mr. Allen: Yes.

page 67 } Mr. Mullen: To state the basis, reason for the objection. It will be a pretty big job for somebody to do.

The Court: How much time do you think you will need, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: Fred, how much time do you want? I will not do it. Fred will do it, he don't know it up until now.

Mr. Pollard: I think December 1 would be reasonable, gentlemen. Your Honor, it is really some question as a matter of law whether we have to do it until the deposition is really offered. But to avoid that bridge I thought we might get it in in advance.

The Court: How would December 1st, suit you, gentlemen?

Mr. Allen: If the objections take a form which could be readily remedied we ought to have time enough to remedy it. That is, if we consider the objections meritorious, and want to cure the objection we ought to have an opportunity to do it. Wouldn't have an opportunity to do it if you wait until December 1st. How about November 20? That will give you about three weeks.

Mr. Pollard: November 20.

The Court: All right. Set November 20, on or before.

Mr. Mullen: We will be up against it until the page 68 } 15th. That will only leave you 5 days after that—

The Court: Let's say November 25.

Mr. Bryan: Do the defendants intend to present a motion to consolidate these various causes?

Mr. Pollard: Yes, sir, we do.

Mr. Moore: You do want to consolidate the cases?

Mr. Pollard: Amend our other suit and then consolidate.

Mr. Allen: We would have to oppose that strenuously.

Mr. Bryan: Different parties, different issues.

The Court: It will take some time to hear argument on that, I suppose.

Mr. Cowherd: It seems as though you will give all the time of the Court between now and December 1 to this one case, the way we are proceeding.

Mr. Mullen: Of course we haven't done what we came up here to do today. That is, Your Honor, to argue our objections to the answers on there.

The Court: May I ask how long you think it will take to settle those questions, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: It won't take me very long. I won't talk very long. Might take the other side right long. We served you a copy of our objections.

page 69 } Mr. Allen: Yes.

The Court: Only date that I know I have open at the present time would be from 11:00 o'clock on the 30th.

Mr. Mullen: We would be in Washington. Made all arrangements to have everybody up there.

Mr. Cowherd: Have called in men from all over the field for the 30th and 31st.

The Court: Then it would not be reasonable to set it on that day, then.

Mr. Cowherd: Mine you, if you please, every bit of this is occasioned by their Interrogatories, trying our best to get the answers up to their Interrogatories.

The Court: I realize the tremendous task of work involved.

Mr. Mullen: There is nothing that I could do, I mean no time that I would have between now and the 6th, 6th of November except the 2nd day of November. Fred, we don't have but one day in Newport News, will we, that is the first?

Mr. Pollard: I hope so.

Mr. Mullen: Then I have to leave again on the 3rd. I have the 2nd, and after that I have the week of the 6th.

The Court: You gentlemen give me your open dates, and

I might have a case that would go off the docket, page 70 } and I could communicate with you.

Mr. Mullen: The 2nd day of November.

The Court: November 2 is open?

Mr. Mullen: The whole week of November 5th, yes.

Mr. Moore: November 7 and 8 is not open for Mr. Robertson.

The Court: What else, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: These are open dates.

Mr. Allen: November 5th is Sunday.

Mr. Mullen: The week of—

Colonel Harris: November 2 is open, Mr. Mullen.

Mr. Mullen: Yes, and all the week of the 5th.

Note: At this point the reporter is requested to not take down this discussion as to open dates, which is not recorded nor transcribed here in the record. Following this discussion on open dates, the following occurs:

Mr. Moore: What are the exact things to be taken up at that time?

The Court: Objections to the plaintiff's Interrogatories to the defendants will be taken up at that time.

Mr. Mullen: The plaintiff's answers—page 71 } The Court: Strike that, then, Mr. Edwards.
The plaintiff's answer to the defendant's Interrogatories will be taken up. (Speaking to the Reporter.)

Mr. Allen: Objections of the defendant to the plaintiff's answers?

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

The Court: What else?

Mr. Pollard: Question of consolidation of suits.

The Court: Those two questions.

Mr. Moore: I have one more that Mr. Robertson prepared, which is a ruling, as far as his records show, on the Interrogatories so far, we would like to get that officially entered before the answers to the Interrogatories come in, if possible.

The Court: In other words, you would like to discuss at this time the entrance of the order. I think it well to enter an order at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Moore: Most of those questions are those that have been reframed, and are set out there.

The Court: You want to keep this order—

Mr. Moore: Leave that with you.

Mr. Mullen: Have you given us copies?

Mr. Moore: Yes.

Mr. Mullen: Exception to the Court overruling page 72 } the objections to the Interrogatories described as further Interrogatories addressed on October 12, 1950, to United Construction Workers, and the same District
50, United Mine Workers.

The Court: I think the record will show you did except.
But anyhow it won't do any harm to put it in the record again.

James Mullen, Esq., Robert N. Pollard, Jr., Esq., Crampton Harris, Esq., Counsel for the defendants.

page 2 } Mr. Robertson: Is it agreeable that Mr. Bryan, without disqualifying him as a witness, can participate in the proceedings in chambers with the understanding that he does not thereby forfeit his right to appear as a witness, it being understood that he shall not participate as counsel in the trial in the presence of the Jury.

Mr. Mullen: That was agreed to the last time we were up here. I didn't know it was going to continue.

Mr. Harris: I am willing to defer to your judgment and your feeling in it.

Mr. Mullen: All right.

Mr. Robertson: Let the record show that Mr. A. Hamilton Bryan is also present. He is President of the plaintiff corporation. Mr. W. P. Owen—

Mr. Harris: He is present as a spectator and not as counsel and not appearing as counsel.

The Court: Add that Mr. Bryan is the President of the Laburnum Construction Corporation, the plaintiff.

Mr. Robertson: And it is stipulated between counsel for all parties that he may participate in the hearing today without disqualifying himself as a witness in the case.

Mr. Mullen: I objected to the order because that order shouldn't be entered until we complete the rulings page 3 } on this matter of today. It covers the same thing and I frankly have not looked at it. I have been in Richmond one day since the hearing and have been in Washington working on these interrogatories, and I notice some additional ones. I don't know how long they are or whether it requires any investigation or whether it requires us to go back to Washington but we are not prepared to take up the question of that order today and we don't think it is the time of take it up.

Mr. Robertson: The reason I suggest that order and the reason I think that order ought to be entered, if it is correct—of course, there are going to be orders entered all along through the progress of the case—there have been so many interrogatories and they have been handled in such a sort of free and easy way and it is so easy to get confused on them. What I have tried to do in that order is to have the Court record its rulings in orderly and correct sequence. I think that those orders are factually correct. I have checked them just as carefully as I know how and I have had Mr. Lowden and Mr. Moore and Mr. Bryan and Mr. Allen check me as well as they could. I think they are correct. You may find some errors in them but there are not any that I know of, and the purpose of the order is to have something to pin to when people's recollections of what the rulings were fade out. I put the best part of several days on preparing that order and I think it is correct and I think it ought page 4 } to be there as a safeguard to everybody, including the Court.

Mr. Mullen: We don't have to argue the desirability of entering the order. We agree with that, but we must have time to examine the order and see whether it is correct as you have drawn it. That we have not had time to do because we couldn't do two things at once.

The Court: Suppose we take up first the defendant's objections to the answers to their interrogatories?

Mr. Robertson: Before you do that, let me call the attention of the Court to this: You remember throughout these preliminary hearings where objections have been made to the admissibility of various testimony and the propriety of various answers and everything, the Court has ruled time and again that it is going to defer its rulings on the actual admissibility of any evidence before the Jury until the case is in progress of trial because as the case develops and the issue is presented in the course of the trial, the Court can determine more justly whether the evidence is in or out. As I understand it—and I have put that in that order—time and again, and at the meeting before the last, at the last minute Mr. Fred Pollard asked would it be agreeable to me to have the Court consider the defendant's objections to our answers at that last meeting. I said I had no objection to it. I don't object page 5 } to whatever argument anybody wants on it or whatever consideration anybody gives it provided the Court will defer its ruling until the progress of the trial which I understand is what the Court has said it was going to do.

Mr. Mullen: I think you probably misunderstood Mr. Pollard. His statement to the Court was that, as he understood the law, he had to complete his objections and submit them to the Court within a reasonable time after the depositions were taken; otherwise, he would be prevented from so doing.

Mr. Robertson: I can save you something there because I consider myself and the plaintiff bound by what I wrote you in my letter of September 28th, paragraph 4, which I think covers this and I think will clear your doubt on that: "Mr. Mullen stated that unless the plaintiff wished to take further depositions at Paintsville, Kentucky, on October 3, 1950, pursuant to adjournment of depositions which were taken at Paintsville in behalf of the plaintiff on August 18th and 19th, 1950, the defendants would withdraw all objections to introduction in evidence of the depositions taken on August 18th and 19th"—that was about the Court Reporter being a competent person—"it being understood that the defendants reserved the right to object to the introduction in evidence of any testimony to which they objected at Paintsville, whether or not the ground of such objection is actually set forth in the deposition."

Mr. Mullen: Read the last sentence of that.

Mr. Robertson: "It being understood that the defendants reserve the right to object to the introduction in evidence of any testimony to which they objected at Paintsville, whether or not such objection is actually set forth in the deposition."

Mr. Mullen: Do you consider that any different from what you stated a few minutes ago, that the Court would have the right to rule on objections to evidence at the time of the trial and that for that reason it had reserved the right from time to time to change the rulings it had made so far?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Mullen: If Mr. Pollard, say, should object to the introduction before the Jury of a portion of those depositions taken out at Paintsville on the ground that it was irrelevant, or for any other reason, that right he still has?

Mr. Robertson: Yes, sir, that is my understanding.

Mr. Mullen: I don't want that language to be confined solely to objections made at Paintsville.

Mr. Robertson: That is exactly what I do mean. If you didn't make the objection out there, I think you have waived it. I think the Judge has the right to reserve any ruling he wants to until we get into the trial. I don't think any objection will come up. I think they objected to everything on earth out there but I think, for instance, suppose you object to some of the testimony in those depositions on a ground that never occurred to anybody at Paintsville, that everybody overlooked. I think you have got a perfect right to do it.

Mr. Mullen: That isn't exactly consistent.

Mr. Robertson: I said if you objected but didn't state the grounds, then if you saved your objection and exception, I think every ground in law that you can think of is available to you under that objection and exception, whether you called attention to it at that time or not.

Mr. Harris: As I understood Mr. Fred Pollard in our last hearing, he made a statement to the Court that was not opposed by the gentlemen on the other side which involved a greater and more extensive right on the part of the counsel for the defendants as to those depositions and it was not limited to the elaboration of objections made with the details of the objection not specified but it was a reservation of the right not only to elaborate on the objection by stating specific grounds but it embraced the right to state an objection that you had not made before.

Mr. Robertson: My suggestion on that is to let that ride until the trial.

page 8 } The Court: I think that would be advisable.

Mr. Robertson: You may urge some objections there that I am perfectly willing for you to make.

Mr. Mullen: I don't recall the exact language of it. It will appear when we get the transcript of that hearing which we have not gotten yet.

The Court: We should have the benefit of the transcript. That was the hearing last Tuesday.

Mr. Mullen: We will take up the objections to the answers to the interrogatories in the order that the answers were made.

Mr. Robertson: It was principally on the ground that they were irrelevant or self-serving. Read the objections out.

Mr. Mullen: The first objection was made to the answer to 1(d). 1(d) was "What was the maximum net profit the plaintiff could have earned under this contract?" The plaintiff has answered, "The maximum net profit which plaintiff could have earned under said contract dated October 28, 1948, for work in connection with construction of said coal preparation plant was the sum of $12,000." The part we object to as surplusage is "With respect to the construction of said schoolhouse and other work in addition to said coal preparation plant, there was no limitation to the net profit which plaintiff could have earned."

page 9 } The Court: We are still on (d).

Mr. Mullen: On the second page. "There was no limitation to the net profit that plaintiff could have earned under said contract. Such net profit, however, would have been equal to 5 per cent of the cost of the work."

Our question was addressed to the specific contract which had been introduced, not to what other work they might have gotten. We asked simply in regard to the maximum net profit that could have been earned under the contract which had been introduced in evidence as the contract between the plaintiff and the Concrete Pocahontas Company.

Mr. Robertson: That goes right back to the point I mentioned here at the outset here this morning, that the Court is going to defer its ruling until the thing is introduced at the trial and then it will be perfectly apparent and obvious that it is either correctly in or correctly out, whereas at this time we are really guessing at it. I don't think that the Court at this time, for instance, wants to go into the question of the deposition Mr. Salvati gave in Huntington which is in the papers here, whereas he talked about the business relationship which Laburnum had built up with Island Creek Coal Company. It was an overall picture of the thing and that may or may not affect the admissibility of this thing here and I think we are right back where we were before, that the Court would defer its ruling until the matter page 10 } comes up at the trial and I think by going through it item by item today we are going to do what we are going to have to repeat at the trial.

Mr. Allen: Mr. Mullen, how does this question come up—the matter we are discussing now? It seems to me it would come up under a motion to strike the answer. There is no motion to strike the answer and just simply a discussion of objections even under a motion to strike would be premature. What you want is to keep this from going before the Jury as evidence. It hasn't been offered yet and nobody can tell at this stage of the case whether it is relevant and material and proper until you get further into the trial.

Mr. Mullen: We are in this position: This is an answer to interrogatories made by plaintiff or propounded to plaintiff by the defendants. The plaintiff can't introduce this. The defendant is the only one that can introduce it in evidence. We are not going to say we are going to introduce these answers in evidence but we object to them.

Mr. Robertson: I don't care what form it comes up in. With me it is all right the way it is up here now but I think, for instance, suppose when we get into the trial you want to offer that and you say, "There is your answer and here is a whole lot of stuff strung onto it that we think ought to be eliminated and the other part put in." I think we would have that matter out right before the Court at that page 11 } time and the Court would rule and then put it in or keep it out accordingly.

Mr. Harris: Judge, I didn't understand that Your Honor ever used the words "You were deferring ruling." I understood Your Honor was making rulings as we went along. And you stated as to several of the rulings, that you reserved the right to change them, and that is why we are up here today. We understood that we had the right to make objections and that we would get rulings. We are not here just for idle discussion.

Of course, Your Honor has the right, and wherever you have felt so inclined you have stated, "I reserve the right to change my ruling," but it would cause confusion to wait until the trial, and we have filed too many things to take them up when we have a Jury sitting there.

Mr. Robertson: What the Court has said it is going to do conforms to the Virginia practice; that is, if we get in the trial and the evidence is offered, the Court will rule whether it is admissible or not, and then admit it or hold it out accordingly. The Court has said it was going to do that because you can't tell until the pattern of the trial is set.

The Court: That has been my thought. Of course I have been making all the rulings that I thought I could consistently make at the time, but I do consider that I reserved page 12 } the right to reject any of the interrogatories, or all of them, at the time of the trial. The Court does not know what trend the case is going to take as the evidence develops.

Mr. Robertson: I think if we do that, we are going to wind up doing it twice. For instance, if he rules against you on some stuff today you are certainly going to take another crack at it at the trial, and so are we. So we are doing it twice instead of once.

Mr. Mullen: Of course, the Judge understands in our practice he has the right at the time of the trial, as you say, to sustain objections to any part of the interrogatories or anything that is offered in evidence at that time. I had understood that is the way Your Honor did, sir, to try to dispose of as many matters as possible in preliminary hearings—at least I get that word from Fred Pollard.

The Court: That is true. I want to dispose of as many matters as we can.

Mr. Robertson: So do we, but I think this: Suppose you get a tentative ruling against you today on these things. You haven't got any idea of accepting that as final and not trying to upset it in the light of the way the trial develops. I certainly haven't got any idea of doing that.

page 13 } Mr. Mullen: That is a matter, of course for the Judge to rule upon. I, of course, understand what the Virginia practice is to some extent anyhow.

Mr. Allen: I would like to add this. The question here is the admissibility in evidence before the Jury of that part of the answer to the interrogatories they object to. I say at this stage of the trial you cannot pass on its admissibility.

The Court: In other words, you allege it is surplusage?

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

The Court: At the trial if the Court be of the opinion it is surplusage, the Court can strike it.

Mr. Mullen: That is it.

The Court: All of these objections are as to surplusage?

Mr. Mullen: Yes, I think they are.

The Court: Well, Gentlemen, having listened to the argument of counsel of both sides, the Court is of the opinion that it would be best to defer rulings on these objections until the trial.

Mr. Mullen: Let me see the papers Fred has prepared.

The Court: In connection with what?

Mr. Mullen: This is in regard to the consolidation page 14 } tion.

The Court: We will take up that question next dealing with the consolidation of the two suits pending in this Court.

Mr. Mullen: Fred has prepared a motion for non-suit, and a motion to amend. And he has eliminated every one as a party plaintiff to this motion except the defendants United Construction Workers.

Mr. Mullen: There has been brought in this Court a suit by United Construction Workers and by certain individuals who claim to have signed up to join the United Construction Workers, and who were employees of Laburnum. Under this motion, the non-suit and the motion to amend, all of those plaintiffs have been eliminated except the United Construction Workers, which is one of the defendants in the principal suit here. And there are no other allegations except what appear in the motion filed by the Laburnum Corporation other than the allegations that a majority of the laborers employed by the Laburnum Corporation had signed up to be represented by the United Construction Workers, and that the Laburnum Corporation on July 27, 1949, wrongfully and without lawful cause, justification or excuse, discharged from its employ all of its employees who had made application to join the union. Other than that there are no allegations that are not contained in the motion in the cause here filed page 15 } by Laburnum Corporation. This is a motion to non-suit and to amend and to consolidate the causes.

Mr. Robertson: Now, of course, if Your Honor pleases, it is perfectly agreeable to us for them to non-suit their plaintiffs if they want to. We have no objection to their non-suiting the individuals, but we say that it is undesirable to consolidate that cause with this cause for these reasons. The purpose of consolidation, which is largely within the discretion of the Court, is to clarify and simplify the issues in order to aid the Jury and the Court in reaching a just conclusion, and as the Court has said at one of our prior meetings here, this case already has enough angles and points and headaches in it to give anybody all they can do to bring these issues that the one case presents to the Court to an end.

Regardless of what Mr. Mullen says, the parties are still different; you have got different parties; you have got different issues as between different parties and the law is totally different.

To show you that, Your Honor—of course, if you have read that thing through you can see a large part of it is a paraphrase of the Taft-Hartley Act, and of course, I will come back to the law in a moment. What we are proceeding under here, everybody has agreed of record that this case now before the Court that we are arguing this morning page 16 } is governed by the law of Kentucky—the substantive law of Kentucky—and, of course, the procedure law of Virginia.

Let us see what they say back here. Come to paragraph 9.

Mr. Mullen: Let me suggest this: I got to Richmond last night and this was handed in this morning. Fred was called in a meeting that he had set quite sometime ago. I would much prefer, inasmuch as he prepared all the papers, to defer and let him present his own case. I am frankly not familiar with it.

Mr. Mullen: He will do it very promptly.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I have inherited so much from Mr. Flippen. I was called out of town last week from Tuesday on, and I am just as busy as Mr. Mullen and Mr. Pollard—I mean, if he could come up here this afternoon or during the day—

Mr. Mullen: He is in a labor hearing and we never know when we get in those how long it is going to last.

Mr. Robertson: If we finish here at seven o'clock tonight I drive to Leesburg tonight to hold a meeting when I get there and drive on from there tonight—that's the pains I took to be here.

I think you can dispose of it right now if you will let the Court read paragraphs 9 and 10 of your motion.

page 17 } “9. By refusing to recognize the union as aforesaid and by discharging its employees who had made application to join the union as aforesaid, the Company wrongfully interfered with, restrained, and coerced the union and such employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed them by the laws of the State of Kentucky, Section 336.130. Baldwin's Kentucky Revised Statutes.” There you have the Kentucky law—“By the laws of the State of Virginia and by the laws of the United States of America.” If that isn't a hodge-podge I never heard of it. We have got in our case to guard Virginia rights even against the law of Kentucky—they come along here with Kentucky law, Virginia law and Federal law.

The next paragraph: "By adhering to and giving effect to the contract with Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council, as aforesaid, the Company unlawfully conspired with said Council and its members to create and carry out restrictions in trade or commerce and to abridge the right to work because of membership or non-membership in a union in violation of the laws of the State of Virginia (Code of Virginia 1950, as amended, Title 40, Chapter 3, and Title 59, Chapter 3), and of the laws of the United States."—laws of the State of Virginia and laws of the United States. I think what they have reference to is in the trust law—so they have got the laws of Virginia and and the laws of the page 18 } United States, and if that isn't a hodge-podge—

Mr. Moore has worked up a memorandum on that.

The Court: I am wondering about this. Mr. Mullen has certainly cooperated in every way he could in this case—

Mr. Robertson: So have I.

The Court: —so have Mr. Robertson and all of you, and I am very much impressed with the cooperation you have made on both sides.

Mr. Robertson: I am perfectly willing to do it provided I am in town. What I am trying above all else is to keep this case from being continued, and not going to trial on December 11th.

The Court: The Court is making every effort to accomplish that fact also. I might suggest, Mr. Mullen, in view of what you said, that Mr. Pollard might submit me a little memorandum, and I will look at it within a very short time; and I will ask that he furnish it within a very few days, and Mr. Moore can also submit one.

I realize that there are a lot of difficulties in this case and counsel on both sides have been very busy working up the case, and I don't want to rush Mr. Mullen into the matter this morning. I know you have been in Washington for the last two or three days—I imagine working on answers to interrogations.

Mr. Mullen: I have worked on nothing except page 19 } this case.

Mr. Robertson: What about your case in Federal Court? Are you going to lub that one in here?

Mr. Mullen: I understand they are going to dispose of that. I have not handled that phase of the matter.

Mr. Robertson: Don't forget that one—that's a mere matter of million dollars.

The Court: Do not overlook the Court in this matter. The Court has worked in this, too. I have given you every spare day I have had, and my other work is getting behind. I am going to give you the right-of-way and get rid of it.

Mr. Mullen: Suppose we don't argue this motion at this time? Suppose we do not file this motion at this time?

Mr. Robertson: We want the motion filed so we will know at what we are shooting.

The Court: File the motion, and let Mr. Pollard file his memorandum, and you all may reply to it.

Mr. Harris: There are two motions.

Mr. Robertson: Will you put a time limit?

The Court: Yes, I will put a time limit on it.

Mr. Robertson: When do you want their memoranda and when do you want ours?

The Court: What will be a reasonable time?

page 20 } Mr. Mullen: Do you think it should be done by Tuesday or next week?

The Court: And give counsel one week to reply?

Mr. Robertson: That is all right. Of course, he has worked so hard to prepare this motion all we ought to have to do is—

Mr. Mullen: Fred may know about it.

The Court: The Court will request Mr. Pollard to file a memorandum earlier if he can, and if it is filed earlier and a copy is delivered to counsel for the plaintiff, then their time will begin to run from that day.

Mr. Harris: There is a certificate on the next page.

Mr. Allen: Why not file the memoranda simultaneously?

The Court: Each side file a memorandum simultaneously, and I will give you one week within which to do it.

Mr. Mullen: That will be all right.

The Court: And that is agreed to by counsel.

* * * * *

* * * * *

Mr. Robertson: We have filed here today interrogatories which we have numbered 14 and 15 and 16. They are addressed respectively to the three defendants and we would like to go over those at this time. You all may not object to them.

Mr. Allen: I thought the Judge had already ordered them to answer those.

page 25 } The Court: These are new ones.

We will recess about five or ten minutes and give counsel an opportunity to look them over.

I will mark the motions filed.

Mr. Mullen: If you keep on filing them the Court can't answer on five.

(A short recess was taken.)

The Court: Counsel has indicated to the Court that they would like to have time to study these interrogatories just presented.

Mr. Robertson: Couldn't we all take that up on Thursday of next week, too?

Mr. Mullen: We have to go to Washington to get the information.

Mr. Harris: What is the statutory time to answer interrogatories?

Mr. Robertson: The Court has entered it here. If you will not interrupt me I will try not to interrupt you.

Mr. Harris: It is a question of who has the floor as to who is being interrupted, if the Court pleases, and we were making a statement to the Court about our objections.

He hands us interrogatories as to three different defendants which seem to be, on a rapid reading, as general and as extensive as possible and we want a reasonable time in which to study those interrogatories, confer with our clients, and prepare formal objections that would be a part of the record the same as the interrogatories are, and at this time we ask the Court for such reasonable time.

Mr. Robertson: To keep this gentleman straight: This gentleman wasn't here and therefore he hasn't read the order and he doesn't know what he is talking about. I grant you that he is entitled to a reasonable time, and I unite in the request that he be given that—and I want a time limit put on it.

The order, which the Court entered here, (and apparently he has not read—the first time we were up here in one of these pre-trial conferences—and it is in the papers there) said that any interrogatories which the Court ruled to be answered either then or thereafter would be answered by, I think it was the 15th of November. It was either the 15th or 16. Of course, I realize if they put in a date which would not give them a fair time to answer, the Court would not hold them to that and I would not ask the Court to do it, but I ask the Court to fix a time to act on them.

Mr. Mullen: I don't think you can keep filing interrogatories and claim they come under that order.

Mr. Robertson: I already said I didn't think it page 27 } necessarily came under that order, but I think if you have got thirteen days, which is practically two weeks, to answer those interrogatories—I think that is ample time.

Mr. Mullen: We are talking about time to make objections to them now, not time to answer them.

Mr. Robertson: Would the Court like to hear a discussion now as to why we think they are proper or would you rather wait?

The Court: I think we should wait, Gentlemen. These interrogatories have just been delivered to counsel.

Mr. Robertson: I think if you discuss it now you would wind up by doing it twice.

The Court: And the Court is going to give counsel a reasonable opportunity to look these interrogatories over.

Mr. Bryan: I would like to say this, Your Honor: Interrogatory 16, question 7 asks whether or not George J. Titler, President of District 29, United Mine Workers of America, on or about August 2, 1949, sent a certain letter to various local unions. That letter is quoted. The letter appears in full in an issue of the Welch Daily News, Welch, West Virginia, published on August 2, 1949. We know who wrote the article and we can prove the letter by him. I simply point that out because there is nothing in here to indicate to you where it appeared.

Mr. Mullen: I can't imagine by any reasoning page 28 } that that question is pertinent to this case. That letter, as you quoted it there, refers to District 29 of the United Mine Workers undertaking to organize, and what that has to do with the United Construction Workers in this case—

Mr. Robertson: We will show you. Just give us time.

Mr. Mullen: I don't say we gain anything by attempting to discuss them now.

Mr. Robertson: I am asking the Court to put a time. What counsel is asking is for time to consider these further interrogatories, Numbers 14, 15 and 16. These interrogatories were presented to counsel for the defendant this day, and they have not had an opportunity to study the interrogatories.

Mr. Mullen: Judge, we have dictated and are trying to type up and revise, if necessary, the answer to five hundred questions in those other interrogatories. We have spent a week doing that and that will be written up by the stenographers and we have to go over the copies, and I have got to do other work on that order with Mr. Robertson next week. There is just a limit to what you can do in a certain length of time and those interrogatories are very long, and it is going to take forty or fifty pages to answer them—and more. It has to be gone over, checked and revised. We spent days dictating it and the stenographers are writing it page 29 } up. We have got to go over and check every figure and date and everything in it.

The Court: Would you be in a position to inform counsel for the plaintiff when you gentlemen have your conference on the 10th, I believe, as to whether or not you are going to object to any of the interrogatories presented?

Mr. Mullen: We will do that.

The Court: Then, if you will call me I will try to find a time to hear you.

Mr. Mullen: There is only one week and two days before the 15th and—

The Court: The Court will give you a reasonable time.

Mr. Allen: Mr. Mullen, at that time that you inform us of the interrogatories that you will object to, would you mind indicating briefly the nature of your objections?

Mr. Harris: I think we ought to put in formal objections, if the Court pleases, and not have anything resting in parole.

The Court: I expect you to file formal objections, which won't bind them at all.

Mr. Mullen: We will notify you on the 10th whether we are going to object, and if we can we will have the objections written out by that time.

page 30 } Mr. Robertson: I think what Colonel Harris says is all right; I think it is better to have the whole thing nailed down in written form.

The Court: I think it ought to be in writing.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, we have five photographs here showing the scene of the job site involved in this case, and various angles of it, and we can, of course, get the photographer here and prove them but we hoped you might stipulate that they could come in as exhibits.

Mr. Mullen: I don't think there is anybody here who could say whether these are correct pictures or not. We will submit them to somebody who knows, and see what they say about it.

Mr. Robertson: You can question Mr. Bryan right now.

Mr. Mullen: If they are correct pictures, I don't think we will make you bring a photographer here.

Mr. Bryan: I know of my own knowledge that they are the pictures of the job site. I couldn't testify that I took the pictures.

Mr. Harris: We won't force you to bring the photographers here.

The Court: You will want an opportunity to present these pictures to some one of the defendants who have page 31 } visited the scene and have them state—

Mr. Mullen: And whether in their opinion in presenting these there should be additional pictures taken.

Mr. Robertson: Could you take those pictures with you and give us that information by next Thursday?

Mr. Mullen: We can do that.

Mr. Robertson: That is all I had on my list.

Mr. Harris: It will never be our position to put anybody to any unnecessary burden in proving something like that. All we want to do is have time to check up with our people.

The Court: I think you are entitled to that.

Mr. Allen: I would like to make this observation here: We are not assuming that under the law it would be necessary, or anybody else can take the witness stand and state that he is familiar with the locality, and that those pictures are accurate reproductions of the scene, that makes the pictures admissible in evidence under the law.

Mr. Mullen: There isn't any cause for taking the Court's time about that. There is not going to be any trouble about admitting them.

Mr. Mullen: Your Honor, would you like to dispose of this order on the interrogatories first? I think we can have that ready quickly.

The Court: I suppose that is the right thing to do first.

Mr. Bryan: The first thing was Question 4.

Mr. Mullen: I can cut it down a great deal. While I don't agree entirely with the form of the question, it is immaterial. We have no objection to the first eight pages. That cuts out a number of questions. A number of questions we have objected to, but they have been answered so it doesn't make any difference.

On page 9 that item there should read this way—

Mr. Robertson: Which one?

page 3 } Mr. Mullen: Number 2: "Need not answer questions in Interrogatories (4) numbered 78, 123, 124 and 125, but counsel for defendant United Mine Workers of America stated to the Court that they would recommend to said defendant that that said defendant submit to the Court the minutes of all meetings of the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America held between the dates October 28, 1943, and August 4, 1949, and also since August 4, 1949, for inspection by the Court."

Now right there we leave out: "in the presence of counsel for all parties."

Mr. Robertson: That is all right. I don't want that in there anyway.

The Court: "In the presence of counsel for all parties"?

Mr. Mullen: Strike that out.

Mr. Robertson: We can depend upon the Court to do what is right.

Mr. Mullen: "in order that the Court may determine what parts of such minutes, if any, shall be furnished plaintiff on or before November 15, 1950." Of course, that is impossible. Those words "November 15" ought to come out.

The Court: That is bound to come out "on or before November 15", but counsel for defendant United Mine Workers of America contending that portions of said minutes contain confidential information, the Court ruled that counsel for plaintiff shall not have access to the aforesaid minutes; and counsel for defendant United Mine Workers of America agreed to advise the Court on or before October 24, 1950, whether or not defendant United Mine Workers of America will follow the aforesaid recommendation of counsel."

Now I would like to add this: "Counsel for said defendant on or before said date advised the said Court that said defendant would follow that recommendation and said minutes covering said period have been made available to the Court."

Mr. Robertson: That is all right. That is a new sentence.

Mr. Mullen: So we will add: "Counsel for said defendant on or before said date advised the Court that said defendant would follow said recommendation and said minutes covering said period have been made available to the Court."

Now, on page 10 we agreed to Question 35 (c)—that the words: "with affairs" in the sixth line from the top and the words "the affairs" in the fifth line from the bottom come out. It doesn't make any difference to me whether they come out or not; they have been answered.

Mr. Robertson: Just leave them in then, so as not to make it up.

Mr. Mullen: Now 37(c): "What interpretations of the meaning of said 'International Constitution' made by the President of United Mine Workers of America were put into effect between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949"?

Mr. Robertson: Mr. Bryan, you ought to listen to this.

Mr. Mullen: The Court ruled that that should read: "Were interpretations of the meaning of said 'International Constitution' made by the President of United Mine Workers of America"—"Were" instead of "What".

Mr. Robertson: Then the next "were" would come out.

Mr. Mullen: It should read: "What interpretations of the meaning of said 'International Constitution' were made by the President of United Mine Workers of America were in effect—"

The Court: "were" comes out there and "in effect" comes out.

Mr. Mullen: "were made between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949".

Mr. Robertson: Of course, if they were made we want to know what they were.

Mr. Mullen: The Judge ruled we didn't have to furnish copies of the interpretations.

The Court: It seems to me we ought to change that.

Mr. Robertson: I want to make this point right now. That is why, in my opinion, the Court ought to insist that counsel on both sides ought to insist that some kind of an order is entered on these things.

Mr. Mullen: We agree on that.

Mr. Robertson: I worked on this thing way back in October and watched this thing and no one can remember what happened.

The Court: We are in accord. The transcript will show.

Mr. Robertson: What date were we here on in August?

Mr. Mullen: This was the October 12th hearing.

Mr. Robertson: All right, we agree on that one then.

Mr. Bryan: That is what you decide?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Mullen: They are all except I want to call attention to one thing—I have cut all the others out because they have all been answered and there is no use objecting to them, but on page 17 it says that “On October 12, 1950, the Court ruled that the defendant United Construction Workers, Affiliated with United Mine Workers of America, must answer questions in Further Interrogatories (8) numbered 87, 88 and 89—” page 7 } The Court: Where are you reading?

Mr. Mullen: The second paragraph.

The Court: I see.

Mr. Mullen: “that defendant District 50, United Mine Workers of America, must answer the questions in Further Interrogatories (9) numbered 89, 90 and 91 on or before November 15, 1950; and that defendant United Mine Workers of America must answer questions in Further Interrogatories (10) numbered 118, 119, 120, 121 and 122 on or before November 15, 1950.”

When Mr. Robertson and myself went over there we didn't have those, but they have all been answered in the originals because they were duplications.

Mr. Robertson: That is right, and I put this in here to complete the chronological story.

Mr. Mullen: They have been answered.

Mr. Robertson: So just leave it as is.

Mr. Mullen: With that exception then to change—

Mr. Robertson: Let's make those changes and get the order entered, which will really bring it up to date.

(Order changed accordingly.)

Mr. Mullen: My recollection is you and Mr. Lowden or Mr. Moore went out and added a section to cover one more hearing “On October 12, 1950, the Court continued argument and rulings”—wait a minute, here is it:

“On October 12, 1950, plaintiff submitted to the page 8 } Court and to counsel for defendants further interrogatories addressed respectively to defendant
United Construction Workers, Affiliated With United Mine Workers of America, said further interrogatories being now designated ‘Further Interrogatories (11)’; further interrogatories addressed to defendant District 50, United Mine Workers of America, said interrogatories being now designated 'Further Interrogatories (12)'; and further interrogatories addressed to defendant, United Mine Workers of America, said further interrogatories being now designated 'Further Interrogatories (13)'; and counsel for all said defendants accepted said further interrogatories which were filed in Court on October 18, 1950."

Mr. Robertson: We discussed everything and I forgot to leave the copies up here to be filed by the Clerk and I brought them up on a later date and they were marked filed on a later date and I put them in the order so if anybody would be digging through the papers afterwards they would understand why that happened.

Mr. Mullen: I haven't any question on that.

Mr. Robertson: That might help anybody that searched through the record.

Mr. Mullen: What we discussed out there that day—you were there, Mr. Moore—was to bring them down page 9 } through those the Court had ruled on. The Court had ruled on all except the last—those that have been ruled on since.

Mr. Robertson: Here is what I will do and I think it might help. I think by going back through my calendar and through these transcripts that I can recite the facts of what pre-trial conferences have been held and what was done at each one and bring it down to date like this order. In other words, my thought on this order is that so far as any lawyer in this case is concerned, to get the story of what happened, we need not go back of this. If I bring another order—

Mr. Mullen: I thought we could dispose of it all here.

Mr. Robertson: What have you got?

Mr. Mullen: I haven't got anything. I thought Mr. Lowden would write it.

Mr. Moore: It was 11, 12 and 13.

Mr. Mullen: Since the Judge ruled on those we can include those, too.

Mr. Robertson: What do you want to add on that final paragraph?

Mr. Mullen: On what date was it done?

Mr. Moore: It was a date Mr. Robertson wasn't here.

Mr. Robertson: October 24th was the date I page 10 } wasn't here. That was a Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Mullen: Yes. Those particular ones which were filed on October 12th I see we answered all the questions in them. It was October 24th when we had the hearing.

Mr. Robertson: Why not add there: "And subject to their aforesaid exceptions, the defendants filed their answers to said interrogatories on October 24, 1950." That would bring it down to date.

Mr. Mullen: On November 15th we filed the answers to these.

Mr. Robertson: Make that a semi-colon there and say: "And subject to their aforesaid exceptions the defendants filed their answers to said Interrogatories 11, 12 and 13 on November 15, 1950."

The Court: Do you want to put "as directed"?

Mr. Robertson: No, I don't know that we admit "as directed" as yet.

Mr. Robertson: The only interrogatories the Court has not now ruled on are 14, 15 and 16.

The Court: And they were interrogatories which were presented at the last hearing?

Mr. Mullen: Presented on November 2nd.

Mr. Bryan: I don't have the numbers of them, but they are covered in the answers filed on the 14th.

The Court: Do you want me to enter this right page 11 } now and get it behind us?

Mr. Robertson: I think it would be a good thing.

The Court: What do you want to do; all counsel mark it "Seen"?

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

The Court: All right, I am entering this as of today.

Mr. Robertson: Are you ready now on 14, 15 and 16?

Mr. Mullen: I want to take up 16 first, United Mine Workers. It is the longest one. The first question is:

"Furnish a copy of the minutes of all meetings of the International Executive Board—"

The Court: These must be numbered wrong: "In what capacity—"

Mr. Mullen: No, they are all numbered wrong.

Mr. Harris: What is the filing date?

The Court: October 12th.

Mr. Mullen: As I recall, these were presented on October 2nd. There must be some other interrogatories.

The Court: Have we acted on these?
page 12 } Mr. Mullen: No, sir, that is what we are here today to act on.

The Court: These have been acted on, but have been numbered wrong.

Mr. Robertson: I will read them out and number them correctly later on.

The Court: The ones we had before were 11, 12 and 13. We had them a moment ago. We had better get them straight.

Mr. Moore: Here are 11, 12 and 13.

The Court: They were the ones that were added to the order.

Mr. Robertson: One is marked filed October 18th and one on the 12th.

(Discussion as to correcting numbers of interrogatories previously filed.)

The Court: Have you found the originals of 14, 15 and 16?

Mr. Moore: Yes, sir.

The Court: Now you want to take up 16 first?

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

"Furnish copies of all minutes of the International Executive Board by the United Mine Workers of America in which action was taken in connection with organizing District 50, United Mine Workers of America, sometimes called District

50, and furnish a copy of the minutes of all meet-page 13 } ings of said International Executive Board held between the date of the organization of District 50 and October 28, 1948."

That calls for some fourteen years of minutes; in other words, minutes here at the disposal of the Court, plus a large number of additional minutes. We object to it on the following grounds:

(a) This interrogatory violates the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States for the reason that it constitutes an unreasonable search into the papers and effects of the defendant. Those minutes cannot have any possible bearing on this case; they go back far beyond the time of it. There is nothing in there relating to this case. They have complete information in the answers already filed, in the Charter of District 50 and in the Rules of District 50 and in the Constitution of United Mine Workers. The Charter says that District 50 was organized as a provisional district on order of the International Executive Board subject to the approval of the International Convention, and in the Constitution of the International Convention it was made a district.

Now that gives them all the information they want as to the creation of District 50, United Mine Workers of America.

Those minutes contain the private business, not only of the United Mine Workers, but also many concerns.
 page 14 } It is carrying out a fishing expedition to an absurd length. We have argued that quite fully before Your Honor. I think nothing is better established than that fishing expeditions cannot be approved. There must be a showing where the information desired is material to the case. The furnishing of that information would be a burden.

Our second ground of objection is that the interrogatories are oppressive and unreasonable in that they ask for an enormous number of documents, all of which precede in point of time the date of October 28, 1948, which is the first date referred to in the Notice of Motion for Judgment by the plaintiff.

. . . . .

There can be no possible excuse for going back, page 15 } we think, of the time the matter complained of occurred, but certainly beyond the dates of the contracts they have put in evidence with their motion. To do so is to impose an oppressive and unreasonable burden on the defendants in this case.

Our third objection is that the interrogatory constitutes an invasion of the right of privacy of this defendant and all persons with whom it did business during the long period of time between the organization of District 50, United Mine Workers of America, and October 28, 1948, and the interrogatory calls for information that is irrelevant and immaterial to the issues in this cause.

Next, the defendant respectfully submits to this Court that this interrogatory is patently propounded to the defendant in order to create prejudice and to confuse the minds of the Jury. Bringing into Court masses of minutes going back over fourteen years can have no other effect than to confuse the Jury. The whole purpose is to prejudice the Jury and the whole purpose of all of these interrogatories to a large degree and the bringing in of United Mine Workers and of District 50 is solely for prejudice. If there was a tort committed, which we deny, then the United Construction Workers if a judgment is obtained against them, are amply able to pay it. There is no reason to go beyond the United Construction Workers and it is done solely for prejudice in page 16 } the belief there is a feeling in this country against the United Mine Workers and its President.

Mr. Bryan: I know of my own knowledge that they are

Mr. Robertson: You say you think there is—did you say we are trying to create one or there is already one?

Mr. Mullen: What?

Mr. Robertson: You say you think we are trying to create a prejudice against John L. Lewis, or one already is existing? I didn't understand your statement.

Mr. Mullen: I say in your view there was the prejudice.

Mr. Robertson: You mean there is already one or we are trying to create one?

Mr. Mullen: You are trying to create one before the Jury.

Mr. Robertson: I just want to get your opinion. What I am trying to smoke out is whether you think there is already one and you must be specifically protected.

Mr. Mullen: I think you think so.

Mr. Allen: Mr. Mullen, did I understand you a moment ago to say any judgment we might obtain—I will assume you did not assume we might obtain a substantial one—would be good if alone against the United Construction Workers?

Mr. Mullen: Sure; it would be paid.

page 17 } Mr. Allen: If you can guarantee that, we might get somewhere.

Mr. Robertson: No, I don't think we would, as far as I am concerned.

Mr. Mullen: Said interrogatory constitutes a fishing expedition and is violative of the statutes and laws of the State of Virginia, in addition to the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Next, that said interrogatory calls for an impossible task for the reason that the time between service of said interrogatories and the date of the trial is not sufficient time in which to gather together all the documents of which copies are demanded in this interrogatory and obtain copies thereof. That embraces somewhat more than that question because through all of this you will find an enormous number of documents called for and in the interrogatories addressed to the United Construction Workers and District 50 they call for, among other things, 402 newspapers.

They are our objections to this question No. 1.

Mr. Robertson: Do you think it would be well to answer each one as we go along or do you want to wait until you finish them?

The Court: I think it would be well to pass on each as we go along.

Mr. Mullen: I think so.

page 18 } Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I can be very brief in what I have to say; I don't know what these other gentlemen will have to say.

Let's go back to the issues in this case and the scope of this thing has taken a wide field, but I think when you get down to the actual heart of the case it is fundamentally simple. We allege that these three different defendants are three component parts of the same organization, the United Mine Workers, or agencies of it and the problem is to pin the alleged tort of the agents or component parts onto the parent organization and the whole problem here is, one, to establish the relationship of the component parts to the principal so that you may know whether or not all three defendants and, if not, which of them, are responsible for the tort alleged in this action, and the next is to establish the commission of the tort, the wrong. Now anything that throws light on what subject is a legitimate field of inquiry.

Now, if Your Honor please, I will take these things up in the order of the first question. We are here in good faith, in dead earnestness prosecuting a suit which to us is a matter of business life or death. The Laburnum Construction Company had built up a business relationship with the third largest commercial coal company in America which promised to run for years throughout the mine fields of page 19 } Kentucky and West Virginia, and our claim is that that relationship was maliciously, illegally and wantonly destroyed by all three of these defendants. Now it is up to us to show the commission of the tort and to show the inter-relationship of these three defendants.

Now this thing—suppose it does cover a period of years. We can't say positively; they know whether it is true or not. We don't think there has been a terrible number of meetings of the Executive Board because we think it is the creature and the tool and the servant of the President of the United Mine Workers and only comes together at his call and at his pleasure and does not meet very frequently because he would rather exercise a despotic individual authority. Now that is our belief and we are entitled to find out whether that is true or not, and if it is true we are entitled to have the Jury know it and the very purpose of these interrogatories is to clear that up before we get to the trial, and what part of it is relevant or irrelevant the Court has said in each one of these preliminary trial conferences, that it is going to reserve its ruling or defer its ruling upon the admissibility and the relevancy of the evidence until we are in the progress of the trial and the Court has a better opportunity to determine as to what rulings it should make.

I say in view of that problem and in view of page 20 } that information and the materiality of it—for instance if those minutes show the transfer of dues and funds and so-called taxes from one defendant to the other, the measure of authority of one defendant over the other, the working in collaboration and in concert and in unity of one defendant with the other, what could be more relevant to the issue in this case and wherein can the search for that truth be an unreasonable search; and the argument here is not new. It is made every time these cases come up and in the W. A. Chesterman case several years ago which Mr. Marks for our office handled for the V. C. Company they made them bring a boxcar full of documents down to have them searched over a period of months.

As a private business, I don't know of any rule of law, Your Honor, that one litigant can come in and say, "I want to see those records for the purpose that I have stated", and the person who doesn't want to do so says "You can't do that; it is private. I can't let you see it because it is somebody else's business." You don't have to accept any such ipse dixit as that. The Court can compel those things to come before him and determine which ones are private business and let them go out and complete the answer to that interrogatory within reasonable limits.

Oppressive and unreasonable. We allege here that they have made it impossible for this company to do construction work out there in the coal fields of Kentucky and page 21 } West Virginia. They have run them out; they have eliminated that field from them. We come now and say if we try to show the relationship between these people, that we say in good faith they have done this tort, we think that is not oppressive and unreasonable. I might cite cases from the Federal Courts and the State Courts following the statutory law of Kentucky and procedure law of Virginia and show they approve it. I have just mentioned the Virginia Chemical Company case. The admissibility of that evidence is not now before the Court because the Court is not going to rule on it until, in the course of the trial. What we are asking the Court now is to make them show their hand. It is knowledge peculiarly in their bosom and keeping which we cannot get anywhere else. We ask the Court to say, "Show your hand and then the Court in all fairness and justice, even at this preliminary stage, will eliminate everything that obviously should not have any place here, if there be such, and the Court has been doing that in answer to all of these interrogatories."

Invasion of the right of privacy. I don't want to say any more about that. You come and ask me to produce one of my business records and I say, "You can't have them because it is private property. You want me to tell something that I did with somebody else and the Court will excuse me." Did you ever hear any such proposition as that? Are we going to let their ipsi dixit close the door like that? page 22 } Create a prejudice. We are not trying to create any prejudice. We are trying to uncover these facts that we have a right to uncover and if they create any prejudice, if it is admissible under the rules of law, let the chips fall where they may. We are not creating any prejudice against them. We are in here now in order that the Court may determine the scope this thing may take. We are not facing a Jury here now when the Court is trying to determine in a preliminary way the general scope of the thing which may go to the Jury.

The United Construction Workers are able to pay any judgment. I think they are, but that doesn't limit our right to get a judgment against all three defendants if we can and collect it out of one or all of them

A fishing expedition. Well, call it that if you want to. The limits of this inquiry are largely within the discretion of the Court, as I see it. These facts are within their knowledge and cannot be gotten anywhere else and we say we have a right to get them in order to prove our case, and that is purpose of the interrogatories.

Talk about an impossible task. It is not an impossible task. It does not cover any great span of years. I would be mistaken if it covers any tremendous number of meetings.

page 23 } Suppose it does. There is, however, a million dollars here at stake in this case and we think it deserves the best effort and all the time necessary to establish a just result that either the plaintiff or the defendants can put on.

I don't know what these other gentlemen want to say.

Mr. Allen: May it please Your Honor, I shall undertake not to repeat what Mr. Robertson has so well said, but to supplement it.

It must be remembered that the only reason for the admission of this evidence is the position the defendant has taken that the United Mine Workers are in no way responsible for what was done out there in Kentucky to our client by, they say, the United Construction Workers. We have a right to every particle of evidence in existence in the files of the United Mine Workers to show that defense is not valid and to prove this is a tort.

American Jurisprudence says in cases of torts:

"One who commands, directs, advises, encourages, procures, instigates, promotes controls, aids or abets a wrongful act by another has been regarded as being responsible as the one who commits the act, so as to impose liability on the former to the same extent as if he had performed the act himself. The liability in such cases is joint and several."

Then the American Law Institute in the restatement of the law of torts at Volume 4, Sec. 876, states it this way.

page 24 } "Declaring that for harm to a third person from the tortious conduct of another, a person is liable if he orders or induces such conduct, knowing of the conditions under which the act is done or intending the consequences which ensue, or knows that the other's conduct constitutes a breach of duty and gives encouragement to the other so to conduct himself."

Now that is the general law. There is an old Virginia case that never has been overruled—I believe it is called the Daingerfield v. Thompson, which even goes further and says in addition to the words by winks or nods or any conduct whatever encourages or induces another in the commission of a tort.

Now in view of that principle of torts involved here, we are entitled to go into the files of these gentlemen for any and everything that they have done in their close connection with the United Construction Workers or District 50. It may be a hardship on them, but they have brought it upon themselves by the defense which they have made, admitting all the time that the United Construction Workers, or District 50 is an arm, whatever that may mean, of United Mine Workers.

I am wondering if they would deny our right to examine their files and determine which of these minutes we think page 25 } admissible and then ask for the production of those. In view of the close connection which is admitted here and the denial of the responsibility for what United Construction Workers has done, we certainly have a right to go into their files, it doesn't make any difference how laborious it may be. If they don't want us to look over their files to determine which of those minutes have potential value in this case then give us a copy of all of them. If they want to avoid that labor, let us sit down and read them and determine which, if any, are pertinent. We certainly have that right. This is not a criminal case. They cannot plead any violation of the provision against unlawful search and seizure. We simply want information that is applicable in a civil case that, so far as we know, is connected with no criminality in any way, shape or form. I don't see why we are not entitled to it. This is an important case, a large amount of money involved. What we allege has been done to us is a situation that is almost too bad to describe and no amount of work on their part, if it be necessary, will justify the refusal of information which shows the connection which they deny exists.

Mr. Bryan: If Your Honor please, I would like to say a few words in this connection.

As both Mr. Robertson and Mr. Allen have pointed out, it is the position of the plaintiff in this case that these defendants are three component parts of one organization page 26 } zation or each is a member and agent of the other.

That agency in our opinion is something which must be proved in order to establish liability on the United Mine Workers of America for the tort of its branches, United Construction Workers and District 50. That agency relationship has been denied by the defendants. Now what can we do to prove that the agency relationship exists.

The Supreme Court of Virginia has held many times, and I refer now particularly to the case of Bloxom v. Rose, 151 Va.—the Court said this:

“It is impossible to lay down any inflexible rule by which it can be determined what evidence shall be sufficient to establish agency in any given case. This is a question which must be determined in view of the facts in each particular case. Whatever form of proof is relied upon, however, must have a tendency to prove agency and must be sufficient to establish it by a preponderance of the evidence. It may be said in general terms, however, that whatever evidence has a tendency to prove agency is admissible, even though it be not full and satisfactory, as it is the province of the Jury to pass upon it.”

It happens in this case that much of the evidence which would have a tendency to prove this agency relationship is in the possession and control of the defendants and is not available to us. The laws of this State take care of a situation like that. The Code provides, in the Code of 1950, Sec. 8:320, that by means of interrogatories we can call for evidence—any evidence which we think will prove our case or page 27 } tend to prove our case and which is in the possession of the defendants which we could call for on a bill of discovery. That is the type of evidence that we have called for here.

I would like to give you a little bit of the background behind this. The defendants have taken the position this calls for evidence going back over a long period of years that could not possibly be relevant. The United Mine Workers of America was organized many years ago, back in the nineties, for the purpose of representing employees in connection with the mining and production of coal. For many years it was affiliated with the American Federation of labor. William Green, who is now the President of the American Federation of Labor, used to be the President of District 6 of United Mine Workers of America. After that Mr. Green became the manager of the United Mine Workers Journal and then became the secretary and treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America and he served in that capacity for many years. After Samuel Gompers died in 1925, Mr. Green, who was then the eighth vice-president, I believe, of the American Federation of Labor, became the President of the A. F. of L. The United Mine Workers of America and the American Federation of Labor worked in harmony for years and years.

After 1932 when President Roosevelt was elected page 28 } the National Recovery Act was passed. Under that it appears that labor organizations were given certain rights which they either didn't have or didn't exercise before and there was a tremendous growth in the organization of unions in this country. At that time some of the unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor thought it would be better to undertake to organize employees on an industrial basis rather than on the crafts labor basis, such as had been the practice of the American Federation of Labor for many years. That suggestion was opposed bitterly by some of the members of the American Federation of Labor, which resulted in the eight vice-presidents of the American Federation of Labor grouping together and forming an organization known as the Committee for Industrial Organization. Mr. John L. Lewis, the President of the United Mine Workers of America became Chairman of that committee which afterwards developed into the union called the Congress of Industrial Organization.

At about the same time when this split occurred between the United Mine Workers of America and the American Federation of Labor, the United Mine Workers determined to have another district union which would represent employees in the coke and by-products field, and it thereupon organized this union known as District 50. District 50 has been used as the instrumentality of the United Mine Workers of America to organize employees in fields other than the mining and production of coal.

page 29 } Thereafter, the Congress of Industrial Organization decided in 1939—Mr. Lewis was President of that organization at that time—that it would undertake to organize employees in the construction industry on an industrial basis and it arranged for the organization of the United Construction Workers. Mr. Denny Lewis, or Mr. A. D. Lewis, John L. Lewis' brother, became the Chairman of the organizing committee of the United Construction Workers.

In 1942 a quarrel developed between the Congress of Industrial Organization—in the meantime Mr. Lewis had resigned as President of that union and been succeeded by Mr. Phil Murray, who was also a United Mine Worker—a quarrel developed between the Congress of Industrial Organization and United Mine Workers over what the United Mine Workers of America claimed to be attempts on the part of the Congress of Industrial Organization to raid District 50 unions. That was the bone of contention.

As the result, the Congress of Industrial Organization and the United Mine Workers split. After that the American Federation of Labor and the United Mine Workers of America re-affiliated again; I think it was about in 1946, not too long afterwards. Then another quarrel developed and again that District 50, because that seemed to be the union where the jurisdictions clashed, and the United Mine Workers split up.

District 50 is considered to be; in fact, in the publications I have looked at it is stated to be the largest single district at the present time of the United Mine Workers of America. It is what is known as a provisional district which is subject to the complete control and regulation of United Mine Workers of America. The chairman of its organizing committee was appointed by Mr. Lewis—John L. Lewis—with the approval of the Industrial Executive Board. He is an employee of the United Mine Workers of America and paid by the United Mine Workers of America. Miss Katherine Lewis, who is Mr. Lewis' daughter, was also appointed by Mr. John L. Lewis with the approval of the International Executive Board. She is an employee of United Mine Workers of America and is paid by that organization—

Mr. Mullen: I don't like to interrupt, but there is no evidence in this case of what he is saying and here are the interrogatories answering all of those questions with the answers to the questions before the Court today.

Mr. Allen: We expect to produce evidence of that and that is the background of the necessity of getting these documents.

Mr. Robertson: It is already here in these publications.

Mr. Bryan: I have looked at copies of the page 31 } United Mine Workers Journal dating back as far as I could go, which was about 1896; they were scattered copies at that time. What I have been saying is reported in those issues. That is where my information comes from. It is their official publication.

We think it is very relevant and very material to show, not only that District 50 was organized, but why it was organized, how that organization came about. The International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America was responsible for that.

In 1941 after District 50 had been organized, originally it had as President a man named Nelson. In 1941 the entire organization was reorganized. They had a chairman of the organizing committee, they had a special Organizing Committee, great efforts were put out to increase the membership of District 50, and there are repeated articles in the United Mine Workers Journal that everything these officers and agents had done met with the entire approval of the International Executive Board. In truth, it is just simply an arm or branch of the United Mine Workers of America, subject to its complete domination and control, just as much as if you had a servant working under you carrying out every direction you made.

We are not satisfied simply to rely on the statements in the answers which have already been filed that page 32 } these organizations are affiliated together. That may not be enough to support what we have alleged, but there is ample proof if it is made available to us to show what we allege. We are satisfied that it is there and under the laws of this State we are entitled to it and we have asked for it.

Mr. Allen: May I add one word because I don't believe we will have anything further to say?

The Court: You all say all you have to say because Mr. Mullen has the close.

Mr. Allen: I think it is important, if Your Honor please, to realize that this District 50 has nationwide jurisdiction, both geographic and industrial. In other words, its jurisdiction, both geographical and industrial, is as extensive as that of the United Mine Workers itself and it was organized by John L. Lewis after his break with the C. I. O. for the express purpose of competing with the A. F. of L. in the organization of workers. This District 50 has its office in the very same building, the United Mine Workers Building in Washington, 900 15th Street, where the United Mine Workers have their offices and John L. Lewis' brother is at the head of it and Katherine Lewis, I believe, his sister, is treasurer, and that is how close they are together and that shows the necessity of getting documentary evidence of their co-activities.

Mr. Bryan: I would like to say one more thing page 33 } and that is about the United Construction Workers.

As I pointed out, that was organized as a separate union by the Congress of Industrial Organization. In 1942 when the United Mine Workers of American and the C. I. O. split, the United Construction Workers left the C. I. O. and requested affiliation with District 50. That was accomplished under an agreement dated sometime in June or July, 1942. I think that is right; I have seen the agreement in these publications. I don't have a copy of it with me.

At the present time District 50 and the United Construction Workers have the same top officers in Mr. A. D. Lewis and Miss Katherine Lewis and Mr. O. B. Allen, Comptroller. The Regional Directors apparently are Regional Directors for both District 50 and United Construction Workers in every case. We think that the territorial limits of each region are identical; they apparently cover the same industries. In the United Construction Workers News and the District 50 News there is a column called "The Victory Parade" which purports to set out agreements made by those organizations for the purpose of representing employees of various companies. You will find that in some cases a barber shop will recognize District 50 as a bargaining agent and in some cases a barber shop will recognize the United Construction Workers as representative of the barbers. The same thing applies to stores, to groceries, even funeral homes

There is a multitude of businesses that are covered. page 34 }

We just came back from Pikesville, Kentucky, where we took the depositions of some of the representatives of the United Construction Workers and District 50. One of the people whom we examined was Mr. Hunter—A. C. Hunter, Regional Director of District 50 and of United Construction Workers, of Region 58 of both organizations. We asked Mr. Hunter, "Will you please explain to us the difference between District 50 and the United Construction Workers?" Mr. Hunter said, "I don't know." We said, "You can't tell that?" He said, "No, I don't believe anybody knows." Actually, I think they are the same organization traveling under two different names; that is all.

All of that is information which we believe is relevant and we believe we can get information on all of that from the minutes of the International Executive Board which controls lock, stock and barrel both organizations.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, Mr. Robertson is mistaken about there not being many minutes. They hold regular meetings and those that cover only a short period which have been brought down here and which were in Court—Your Honor saw the package that hick (indicating). Those meetings are not simply cut and dried meetings like Mr. Robertson has said.

The argument that Mr. Allen made that they page 35 } are entitled to go into all of our files is directly in the face of the decision of the United States Supreme Court which I cited to Your Honor before the Federal Trade Commission—

The Court: Is that the Kentucky case?

Mr. Mullen: No—laid down the general principle that you cannot order any such production of papers for the general effort to find something which they cannot point out, and the Virginia Statute says when the Court is satisfied that the exhibits are relevant—that is the point, and in the cases they cited in the memorandum they heretofore filed in every one of those cases it is said it must be shown that the evidence called for is material.

So that his argument is directly in the face of not only the Supreme Court of the United States, but a great mass of State cases throughout the nation, and this constitutes under those cases a fishing expedition which they have no right to engage in.

Their argument is and has been that they want all the information they are calling for to prove agency or to prove that the three are all component parts of one unit. I have repeatedly stated here that the International Union, the United Mine Workers of America, is a union having jurisdiction in the United States and Canada, that for jurisdictional purposes it is divided into thirty districts, one of which is

District 50, and that United Construction Workers page 36 } is a division of District 50, and the Constitution of the United Mine Workers, which they have, and the rules of District 50 and United Construction Workers make perfectly plain what the relation is. They now have the charter of District 50 which shows it was organized by order of the International Executive Board in September, 1936, which organization was then provisional subject to the approval of the regular Constitutional Convention of the United Mine Workers of America. It was embodied in the Constitution of the United Mine Workers of America where it was provided that District 50 was organized. They also have the Charter of the United Construction Workers which expressly states that it is a division of District 50, United Mine Workers of America, and in the answer to Question 9 in the interrogatories addressed to the United Mine Workers it is specifically stated what the relation is.

Mr. Harris: Suppose we read the Judge that question, if you don't mind—Question No. 9. I think it will emphasize this argument better.

Mr. Mullen: This is the question:

"Did the Constitution of the United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide that among other objects it was the object of United Mine Workers of America to do the following: To unite in one organization, regardless of creed, color or nationality, or all page 37 } workers eligible for membership employed in and around coal mines, coal washers, coal processing plants, coke ovens and such other industries as may be chosen or approved by the International Executive Board.

"If so, state the following: During what period or periods did said constitution so provide?"

The answer to that is:

"Yes, during all the time inquired about."

"(b) With respect to the one organization mentioned in the request quoted above were the members of District 50 at anytime between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, a part of this one organization and, if so, during what period or periods?"

The answer to that is:

"Yes, at all times inquired about the members of District 50 were a part of the United Mine Workers of America, but retained their identity, membership, rights and privileges at all times as members of District 50, or as provided in the Charter of District 50 and Article XX of the Constitution of the United Mine Workers of America.

"(c) With respect to the one organization mentioned in the language quoted above, were the members of the United Construction Workers at anytime between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, a part of this one organization and, if so, during what period or periods?"

The answer to that is:

"Yes, at all times inquired about the members page 38 } of the United Construction Workers were a part of the United Mine Workers of America, but retained their identity, membership, rights and privileges at all times as members of the United Construction Workers, Division of District 50, all as provided in the Charter of the United Construction Workers and the rules of District 50 and Article XX of the Constitution of the United Mine Workers of America."

I have said again and again the question of agency was not involved. You have the answer in the Charter, you have the answer in the Constitution and the rules—

Mr. Robertson: May I interrupt one minute? Do you deny any agency?

Mr. Mullen: It isn't involved.

Mr. Robertson: I can't understand you. That is the whole heart of our case. How can you say it is not involved? Do you admit it or deny it? If you admit it, it must be involved, but how can you say it is not involved when it is the whole foundation of our case? I didn't mean to interrupt you.

Mr. Mullen: We deny agency, yes, because the question of agency doesn't exist.

Mr. Robertson: Then we will have to go to it.

Mr. Mullen: I can't be an agent for myself.

Mr. Robertson: How can you say it doesn't exist when it is actually set out in the motion and that is the page 39 } basis of our case?

Mr. Mullen: You stated here today you had been trying to find out and were anxious to find out whether there was the relationship of agency between them or whether the relationship was that of all parts of one constituent organization, and we have answered it: They are parts of one constituent organization.

Mr. Robertson: And you deny the existence of agency and we assert it, and that is the main issue in the case.

Mr. Mullen: But, Your Honor, they have their answer there in the Charter of the United Mine Workers of America.

"The United Mine Workers of America hereby establishes a provisional District No. 50, under the conditions herein set forth, to be known as Gas and By-Product Coke Workers, and to have jurisdiction over workmen employed in and about plants processing coal within the United States and Canada; and for the establishment of such conditional district, this Charter is issued to James Nelson, President, James Nelson, Acting Secretary-Treasurer, their successors in office and associates in membership.

"The said district, and all sub-districts and local unions established therein, shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the International Organization United Mine Workers of America and may adopt constitutions and by-laws not in conflict with the Constitution of the United Mine Workers of America and this Charter of affiliation.

"Said district, its members and subordinate branches, shall acquire no rights in the fund, or to participate in the election or conventions of the United Mine Workers of America, but shall have their own autonomy with respect to their elections, conventions and wage negotiations.

"The district and its members shall pay the International Organization United Mine Workers of America dues and assessments, as provided in the International Constitution, and shall receive the support and guidance of the International Organization in matters of policy, administration, organization and wage negotiations, as its International Executive Board may approve.

"All questions of interpretation arising under this Charter shall be determined by the tribunals set up in the Constitution of the United Mine Workers of America, and this Charter of affiliation shall be submitted for approval to the next regular constitutional convention of the United Mine Workers of America.

"By order of the International Executive Board.

"Dated this 1st day of September, 1936.

(Signed) JOHN L. LEWIS, President.

United Mine Workers of America

page 41 }

(Signed) THOMAS KENNEDY,

Secretary-Treasurer,

United Mine Workers of America."

There is the Charter. The relation of one of these organizations to the other is clearly set forth in that and in the specific answers we have put in here and that is no basis for their asking for these further minutes because we have answered what they have claimed all along was the basis of their inquiry, namely, to find out whether it was the relationship of agency between the United Construction Workers and District 50 and the United Mine Workers or whether they were one or parts of one union.

Mr. Allen: Mr. Mullen, I didn't quite understand some of your statements a moment ago. I would just like to ask you one question to see if I understand the position you take.

You say that there is no question of agency involved, as I understood you, because you couldn't be an agent for yourself, meaning, I suppose, that each one of these organizations is a component part of one organization. Now if that is what you mean, do you go further and mean that being so, one part of the organization—one of the component parts of the organization may do something in the prosecution of the rights of the workers without responsibility on the other part?

Mr. Mullen: I haven't made any statement on page 42 } that point; I am not going to. I think that is only a part of a very large question which cannot be answered yes or no.

Mr. Allen: Of course, your charter may say one thing and your actions make you agent anyway.

The Court: Gentlemen, the Court will require the defendant to answer the first part of Question 1 in Further Interrogatories 16, which reads as follows:

"Furnish a copy of the minutes of all meetings of the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America in which action was taken in connection with organizing District 50, United Mine Workers of America, hereinafter sometimes called District 50."

As at present advised, the Court declines to require the defendant to answer the second part of the question which reads as follows:

"and furnish a copy of the minutes of all meetings of said International Executive Board held between the date of the organization of District 50 and October 28, 1948."

Mr. Robertson: I just want to ask one question. How are you going to tell whether they have complied with the order of the Court, or not?

The Court: That is something we will have to cross later. I think the gentlemen will deal with the Court fairly and are going to answer the question as far as they can.

Mr. Robertson: I have no doubt about that, but I have very decided doubt that some of the gentlemen page 43 } they represent will do so.

Mr. Mullen: Mr. Robertson has no basis for that statement.

Mr. Robertson: Yes, the statement of Mr. Tom Rainey in Pikeville, Kentucky and Mr. Hunter and some others.

Mr. Mullen: You have the fullest answer you need in all of these interrogatories.

Mr. Robertson: I challenge that statement.

The Court: If the Court requires the defendants to produce the minutes, I am satisfied that Colonel Harris and the firm of Williams and Mullen are going to cooperate.

Mr. Robertson: I realize that. I am not casting any reflection on them, Your Honor.

Mr. Mullen: The next question is:

"Who were the members of the Policy Committee or Conference Policy Committee of United Mine Workers of America between the date of the organization of District 50 and August 4, 1949, and who have been the members of such committee since August 4, 1949; when and by whom was each of these persons appointed or elected a member of such committee; and during what period or periods did each serve as a member of such committee?"

And the third question is:

"For what purpose or purposes was the Policy Committee or Conference Policy Committee of United Mine Workers of America organized, and since the date of the organization of District 50 what have been the powers of such committee?"

page 44 } And the fourth question is:

"Furnish a copy of the minutes of all meetings of the Policy Committee or Conference Policy Committee of United Mine Workers of America held between the date of the organization of District 50 and August 4, 1949, and also held since August 4, 1949."

Mr. Allen: Just a minute. Just before we get into a discussion of that I think we should except to Your Honor's ruling in refusing to require the defendant to furnish—

Mr. Robertson: I think that is understood.

The Court: I understand you except to the Court's action in refusing the last part of the question and the defendants except to the granting of the first part.

Mr. Robertson: The way we have understood it, everybody excepts to all rulings of the Court.

The Court: All adverse rulings. Is that the understanding?

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

Mr. Allen: And the grounds are those stated in the oral argument here before Your Honor.

Mr. Robertson: No, we have gone further than that; that the door is wide open for everybody to reserve every right, whether specified or not.

Mr. Allen: The Court of Appeals says that won't do.

Even though you have that understanding, you page 45 } can't assert a ground you have not stated.

Mr. Robertson: I don't say in the Court of Appeals; I said to elaborate on them and to amplify them before this Court hereafter.

Mr. Allen: Still, the Court of Appeals says the Judge must have the benefit of them.

Mr. Robertson: I think in fairness to these gentlemen, I think I should state what my understanding is, that everybody here is reserving to the utmost all of their legal rights to every adverse ruling of the Court and at any time while this case is before this Court they can specify their reasons and elaborate on them just as much as they desire to do. That would mean before we get to the end of this trial this Court has got every argument in detail that all sides can make and that is in the record for the Court of Appeals. That has been my understanding all the way through.

Mr. Mullen: That is my understanding of it.

Mr. Allen: The point I was making was this. It did not concern the understanding so much, but so that nobody may find themselves in a hole when they get through, the Court of Appeals has said that though we have an agreement with Your Honor and with all counsel that we will just go along and except and we can state our exceptions after the case is all over, those objections have to be stated to page 46 } Your Honor before you lose control of the litigation. The Court says you must have the information. That is the point I was making.

The Court: Are you gentlemen satisfied with the way we are proceeding?

Mr. Robertson: I am satisfied, Your Honor.

Mr. Mullen: I am satisfied.

Mr. Harris: I think we are protected, Judge. I think the reservation of finality of rulings that Your Honor made sometime back on some of the questions and what we are doing now under the stipulation Mr. Robertson has stated—I think we are protected.

The Court: That is a matter for you gentlemen to be concerned with.

Mr. Harris: I haven't read the case Mr. Allen mentioned and if you give me the citation I will check it up.

Mr. Robertson: It will all be in the record before we leave here because we have to make a complete argument to Judge Snead before Judge Snead can rule and there it is in black and white in the record.

Mr. Mullen: We have all stated very fully our objections in the argument on the interrogatories. Now the question coming up the second time on the question of the right to introduce, the relevancy of the evidence—

. . . . .

Mr. Mullen: Now I read those questions. The Policy Committee is a committee that meets on the question of the contract between the United Mine Workers and the mining employers.

Mr. Robertson: Repeat that again because in all my study I have never been able to find out what the Policy Committee is and this is the first moment we have heard you say it.

Mr. Mullen: It is a committee called into session to determine on the question of the contracts that the United Mine Workers make with employers and on the question of whether they will strike to enforce it, and so forth.

It would be utterly impossible to comply with this. There are 300 members of it. They are elected from three hundred different unions. No record is kept in the home office of who goes to each meeting. They come there, having been elected; they vary constantly. There would be no way of doing that except to write to three thousand districts and ask them to go back fourteen years for each man and find out who was on the Policy Committee, who they elected, when they elected him, and so forth. It has nothing to do with this case. It is a United Mine Workers Committee engaged in backing up the officers in their controversies with the mine owners.

page 49 } Mr. Bryan: What is the purpose of the Policy Committee?

Mr. Mullen: It is to confer with the officers of the company on the question of the contracts to be made with the mine owners, as to the question of rates and so forth.

Mr. Bryan: Does it have any power?

Mr. Mullen: Advisory.

Mr. Bryan: Advisory, only? Is District 50 represented on the Policy Committee?

Mr. Mullen: I don't think so. I don't know.

Mr. Bryan: You are not sure?

Mr. Mullen: I don't think so. That certainly has nothing to do with it and it would take an interminable time to get that; couldn't get it in time for the trial of this case.

Mr. Bryan: It might very well be the question as drafted is not right in view of what you say, but I have found repeated references to the Policy Committee or Conference Policy Committee—I don't know which the correct name is—

Mr. Mullen: Conference, I think.

Mr. Bryan: —as to actions taken by that committee. I have assumed it was a rather large committee. I know positively that action has been taken by the Policy Committee has some authority with reference to the affairs of District 50 and I believe that District 50 is represented on the Policy Committee. I believe that the Policy Committee has some authority with reference to the affairs of District 50 and the United Construction Workers.

This is just another example, Judge, of what we are up against where all of the information really is in the possession of the defendants. It wouldn't be a very hard job for us to find ourselves going into trial without the information in advance and without the means of proving satisfactorily what we want to show. If the defendants can force us into that sort of position, it would be very advantageous to them. It is a shame I think we have to go into this multitude of questions the way we have, but this is just not the usual case.

The Court: Do you have any objection to answering 3?

Mr. Mullen: "For what purpose or purposes was the Policy Committee or Conference Policy Committee of United Mine Workers of America organized, and since the date of the organization of District 50 what have been the powers of such committee?"

Mr. Harris: I don't think we really object to that, Judge.

Mr. Bryan: Could you answer Question 2 if it page 51 } were revised to state generally what is the Policy Committee or Conference Policy Committee and whether or not District 50 or United Construction Workers have been represented on that committee? That would release you of the necessity—

The Court: That would be a general question. I believe that would be a fair question.

Mr. Mullen: I have no objection to that.

The Court: Get it worded like you want it, Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Bryan: I would word it this way—

Mr. Harris: I suggest you are combining 2 and 3 in the way you are talking.

Mr. Bryan: No, I will leave 3 the way it is and have No. 2 read like this:

The Court: Suppose we recess for five minutes and you can word it and consider combining 3 with it.

(A recess of five minutes was taken.)

Mr. Bryan: I haven't written it all out, but I think I know what to say. I would make the question read thus:

"When and upon what authority was the Policy Committee or Conference Policy Committee of United Mine Workers of America first organized? State generally the position of the Policy Committee or Conference Policy Committee. Has District 50 or United Construction Workers been page 52 } represented on this Policy Committee or Conference Policy Committee?"

The Court: Will that take into consideration—

Mr. Bryan: Just a second, sir. I might put another question:

"Is there any difference between the Policy Committee or Conference Policy Committee? If so, state what is the difference."

Mr. Harris: I don't see any harm in that.

Mr. Mullen: No, I have no objection to that.

The Court: Then you want Question 3, too?

Mr. Bryan: Yes.

Mr. Mullen: We will answer 3 also.

The Court: 2 as amended, and answer 3. Now 4 is next.

Mr. Pollard: Your Honor, I would like to ask about this third amendment to Question 2:

"Has District 50 or United Construction Workers been represented on this Policy Committee or Conference Policy Committee?"

How about a time as to that representation? Do you mean ever?

Mr. Harris: I think that is all right. Have you got the question pretty accurately written out?

Mr. Pollard: Yes, sir, I have it.

Mr. Harris: Because I didn't try to write it.

The Court: Now 4: "Furnish a copy of the page 53 } minutes of all meetings of the Policy Committee or Conference Policy Committee of United Mine Workers of America held between the date of the organization of District 50 and August 4, 1949, and also held since August 4, 1949."

Mr. Mullen: In the first place, I don't think there are any; and if so, they were sketchy.

Mr. Robertson: Maybe we can save time on that.

Mr. Bryan: I think we might say this:

"Furnish a copy of the minutes of all meetings of this committee pertaining to District 50 or United Construction Workers."

We are not interested in rates set for coal, and so forth.

Mr. Harris: That is rather broader, I think, than Mr. Bryan really intends. District 50 has dealings with lots of different industries and it might be a question with reference to some wholly unrelated industry that had come up and in not way related to the construction industry.

Mr. Robertson: We want to show the exercise of the power.

Mr. Bryan: That is a very important point.

Mr. Allen: And control.

Mr. Bryan: It is not only the fact that the United Mine Workers of America have the right to control and regulate District 50 and United Construction Workers, but we think it is very essential to show the manner in which that page 54 } control has been exercised.

The Court: How did your question read as re-phrased?

Mr. Bryan: The question as reframed would be this way:

"Furnish a copy of the minutes of all meetings of the Policy Committee or Conference Policy Committee of the United Mine Workers of America held between the date of organization of this District 50 and August 4, 1949, and also held since August 4, 1949, insofar as those minutes pertain to District 50 or United Construction Workers."

Mr. Mullen: If you limit that to United Construction Workers, probably that would be all right.

The Court: What about that?

Mr. Robertson: That boils it down to the two defendants; exclude everything else.

Mr. Bryan: After all, United Construction Workers has been admitted in the answers to the interrogatories as a division of District 50, but the principal representatives and officers that took part in the trouble in Breathitt County, Kentucky, were officers and representatives of both United Construction Workers and District 50.

Mr. Harris: Mr. Mullen, do you see any particular objection to that as reframed?

Mr. Mullen: No, I don't because I don't think there are any minutes.

Mr. Robertson: You have no objection to 5, have page 55 } you?

Mr. Harris: We don't see the materiality of it, but there is no reason to get into a row over it, Judge.

The Court: All right, you will answer 5. How about 6; any question about No. 6?

Mr. Mullen: This goes back again over fourteen years. I don't want to raise any particular objection. We objected to it generally.

Mr. Robertson: That couldn't be very much. If it comes up it would be very little.

Mr. Mullen: They were made a provisional district under their charter and then that was ratified by the Constitutional Convention, but I know there hasn't been any such request as this.

The Court: All right, suppose you answer 6. How about 7?

Mr. Robertson: You have no objection to 7, have you?

Mr. Mullen: We don't know anything about that.

Mr. Robertson: You could find out real easy.

Mr. Bryan: If they can't answer it, we can prove it another way.

The Court: All right, answer 7.

Mr. Harris: We don't know and he doesn't page 56 } insist I believe.

Mr. Bryan: No, we would like for you to answer if you can, but if you want to take a trip to West Virginia and take some depositions—

Mr. Robertson: I don't want to go out there any more.

The Court: Answer it if you can. That is the best you can do.

Mr. Robertson: You don't object to 8, do you?

Mr. Mullen: I don't reckon we want to object to 8.

Mr. Harris: That is all right.

Mr. Mullen: And that would cover No. 9.

Mr. Robertson: There can't be any objection to 9; that is easy.

Mr. Mullen: I say that leaves 9. When you say furnish a copy of the minutes of the meetings of the International Executive Board taking action on each such request you mean the resolutions in the minutes taking action; you don't mean in the whole minutes?

Mr. Robertson: Just the part pertaining to it. There might be a recital of fact and then the resolution.

Mr. Mullen: All right.

Mr. Bryan: Before we leave that question I would like to get something clear in my own mind. Is it the position of the defendants that District 50 and United Construction Workers are autonomous unions?

Mr. Harris: I can't answer that question. You have asked and we are going to give you the answer in writing whether they are, or not.

Mr. Mullen: The Charter states it is autonomous on certain points. I read it here today.

Mr. Robertson: I don't know what autonomous means.

Mr. Harris: I don't, either.

Mr. Robertson: I don't know what it means when the Constitution says you have got to elect your members of the International Executive Board and your answer says some of them are appointed. I think that means the fine Italian hand, but I am afraid to say so because you will get mad.

Mr. Harris: I haven't been angry to the slightest degree since I came to Virginia.

Mr. Robertson: What is the date on which we will get these answers?

The Court: What about 14 and 15? What set do you want to take next?

Mr. Mullen: No. 15.

Mr. Robertson: You don't object to any of those, do you?

Mr. Robertson: You don't object to any of those, do you? page 58 } Mr. Harris: Is 15 United Construction Workers or District 50?

Mr. Mullen: District 50.

Mr. Robertson: All of your objections are substantially the same, aren't they?

Mr. Mullen: Not necessarily. The first one is:

"Furnish a copy of the issue of 'The District 50 News', the official publication of District 50, published under date of October 20, 1941, and known as Volume I, No. 1 (also known as Volume IV, No. 42), and furnish a copy of all subsequent issues of said The District 50 News to and including the issue published under date of April 15, 1948, and known as Volume 7, No. 11."

And the second question is:

"Furnish a copy of the issue of 'The News', the official publication of District 50 and United Construction Workers, United Mine Workers of America, published under date of May 5, 1948, and known as Volume I, No. 1, and furnish a copy of all the subsequent issues of said The News to and including the issue published under date of October 20, 1950, and known as Volume III, No. 20."

I might say at the same time that they called for in the next interrogatory addressed to United Construction Workers:

"Furnish a copy of the issue of 'United Construction Workers News', the official publication of United Construction Workers, published under date of August 1, 1940, page 59 } and known as Volume I, No. 1, and furnish a copy of all subsequent issues of said United Construction Workers News to and including the issue published under date of April 20, 1948, and known as Volume IX, No. 8."

That calls for 402 papers to be furnished. In the first place, we don't know that we have them. They have got to be dug down in old dusty files to be found. If we have a file—we know we had it back to a certain date—if we have a file of all of those papers, we are willing to make them available to them to read and take out anything they want to. We don't think 402 newspapers should come in here to encumber this record. If they find any items in there that they think are pertinent, then they can offer them in evidence and the Court can pass on them, but to furnish 402 papers is unreasonably burdensome, and we make the same objection as I made in the beginning to introducing the minutes of the Executive Board in the argument heretofore under the United Construction Workers, United Mine Workers, but they say they are hunting for information.

The Court: Is that satisfactory, to put the papers at your disposal?

Mr. Bryan: Where will you put them at our disposal?

Mr. Mullen: We prefer to do it in Washington, if we have them—the only permanent file they kept.
page 60 } Mr. Bryan: I have spent days in Washington, Your Honor, at the Congressional Library and also at the Library of the Department of Labor. They have very complete files; they have in bound volumes these official publications of the defendants. There are three publications involved. First, is the United Mine Workers Journal. After District 50 was organized a page in the United Mine Workers Journal was dedicated to District 50 under a headline called District 50 News.

Thereafter, in about 1940 or '41, District 50 commenced to publish its own publication known as District 50 News. At about the same time, I think in 1940, the United Construction Industrial Organization, commenced to publish its official paper known as the United Construction Workers News. After United Construction Workers and District 50 became affiliated, District 50 being taken into—I mean United Construction Workers being taken into District 50 as a division of District 50, United Construction Workers continued to publish its own paper known as the United Construction Workers News. That continued down to 1948 when the two papers, I presume for economic purposes, were consolidated into one known as The News.

There are many articles in those papers which have a direct bearing on the control which has been exercised page 61 } by United Mine Workers of America over these two subordinate branches and a bearing on the manner in which that control has been exercised. We cannot withdraw those papers from the library. It is possible to have them photostated, but that would be an enormous expense. There are many portions of the papers that have absolutely nothing to do with this case and wouldn't be in evidence, but there are many articles in the papers which are relevant and material.

The Court: As I understand from counsel for the defendants, they are willing to put all the papers they have that you have requested at your disposal to look at and if there is anything you think is relevant, they will consent that you offer it in evidence.

Mr. Bryan: Will you bring them here to Richmond?

Mr. Harris: But we don't waive our objection to it at the time it is offered.

Mr. Robertson: Of course not.

The Court: But the manner in which it is offered you raise no objection?

Mr. Harris: I think we can do that.

The Court: In other words, you can introduce it in evidence—offer it in evidence.

Mr. Robertson: Suppose he would go to Washington—you would make these papers available to him, he would go to Washington, examine them, think a part was page 62 } relevant and have a typewritten copy of it made with a reference to the volume and number—you, of course, could satisfy yourself if you wanted to that was a correct copy—then you would let that copy be introduced?

The Court: As I understand, they won't object to the manner in which it is introduced, but reserve the right to object to it—

Mr. Robertson: As to the substantive material.

Mr. Harris: As we technically call it, we won't object to it on the ground no proper foundation had been laid as to the accuracy of the exhibit, but any question as to the admissibility we would reserve.

The Court: But if they were included in the interrogatories, I take it they have a right to offer the interrogatories and you would have a right to object to the admissibility. I think that ought to be clarified.

Mr. Bryan: Will the same apply to the United Mine Workers Journal? That is not covered in this particular interrogatory.

Mr. Mullen: That hasn't been called for.

Mr. Harris: You are getting us into an uncharted sea if you ask for something the interrogatories don't cover.

Mr. Robertson: It is an official publication.

Mr. Bryan: We can go back and make another one, if you want to, but the same principle applies.

page 63 } Mr. Harris: I don't think with as long a record as we are going to have we ought to start on oral interrogatories from the other side.

Mr. Robertson: All right, we have a man here to take them down. I am trying my best not to have any more interrogatories or depositions.

The Court: I understood as far as you knew this would be the end of the interrogatories.

Mr. Robertson: Yes, sir.

Mr. Mullen: Of course, we could object to the interrogatories calling for those on the ground that it has been disclosed that he has access to the source of information called for and interrogatories are intended to be produced where that is the only way they can get the information. Now it has been disclosed that those records are in the library where they can read them, but we hadn't made that point. We are willing to have them at your disposal and if you find any item that is pertinent if he wants to make a longhand or typewritten copy and give us a chance to compare it and introduce it, I see no objection to that.

Mr. Robertson: Of any of the publications produced we do so in time for you to check them and you preserve all your rights. If he does all the work, I don't think you would object to it.

Mr. Harris: Mr. Mullen, maybe some of those page 64 } after we consider it in Washington we could get sent to your office.

Mr. Mullen: We had difficulty finding even the limited number you called for before and we know all of these earlier ones way back there if in existence are buried in dust and everything else.

Mr. Robertson: Suppose he locates this thing up in the Department of Labor and gives you the reference. You know if they are in the Department of Labor, they are correct.

Mr. Mullen: All right, give us a copy of the reference so we can compare it or if we haven't got them we will go to the Department of Labor and compare them.

Mr. Bryan: There are some we will probably want to have photostatic copies made of, but I would like to hold that to a minimum as far as possible.

The Court: Then I understand these gentlemen will co-operate with you in that respect.

Mr. Bryan: Who could we see in Washington? The editor?

Mr. Harris: I think Mr. Hought.

Mr. Robertson: Most newspapers are bound up in volumes for certain periods and if they are available and sent down here, it would be very much easier for everybody.

Mr. Mullen: We will see what we can do about that.

Mr. Harris: Just to make things a little hard page 65 } on the other side we are not interested, Judge.

Mr. Robertson: Sir?

Mr. Harris: Just to make things hard on the other side, we are not interested.

Mr. Allen: I am thinking of the mechanics of this thing and to keep this record down and to keep as much volume out of it so far as the actual physical documents are concerned. If these gentlemen—I am just making this as a suggestion—if these gentlemen would agree for us to see these various papers; say, for instance, take Question No. 2 of Interrogatory 15, furnish a copy of the issue of the News, and so forth—somebody from the office of some of counsel for the plaintiff or Mr. Bryan could go there to the Department of Labor or to the newspaper office or the office of the editor of these papers and read the article they want introduced in evidence, giving a description of it, right into one of these Audograph machines which they use down in your court in taking testimony of a witness, and then just play it to the Jury, it would be perfectly plain.

Mr. Robertson: I think we ought to consider the cost we are put to on these various interrogatories.

Mr. Harris: I can't agree to that, anyhow.

Mr. Allen: You might let me get through.

Mr. Harris: You have said enough for me to object.

Mr. Allen: No, I am coming to what you said.
page 66 } Then we can bring that machine down here and have everything that we have read into it transcribed and show a copy to them and let them check exactly what we are going to offer in evidence and it would save bringing all those papers down. They will have it, they can compare it with the papers. We could get the copies in that way into court better.

Mr. Mullen: I don't care how you get the copies.

The Court: Just so it is a true copy.

Mr. Harris: I do object to him saying anybody from our side going down to the Department of Labor and help pick them out.

Mr. Allen: No, I didn't say that. I said we could go to the office of your editor or the Department of Labor and get correct copies of the articles we wanted and read them into the machine.

The Court: The articles you are interested in, bring the machine to Richmond, have it transcribed, give a copy to counsel for the defendants and let them check with the originals in Washington to see whether or not—

Mr. Robertson: You will wind up with a whole lot of expense and three times as long a record as if you went up there with Mr. Williams and had him write them out.

The Court: As I understand, you gentlemen are not concerned how we get them transcribed, but whether they are accurate?

page 67 } Mr. Harris: That is right.

The Court: That is a matter for counsel to work out.

Mr. Bryan: You will have the copies of the papers here at the trial available?

Mr. Harris: I don't see how we can overcome that. Whatever the Court tells us to have, we will have.

Mr. Bryan: We would want the Jury to see some of them.

Mr. Harris: We will object to showing them the whole newspaper.

The Court: Why not look at the papers and see whether there is anything in there you would want?

Mr. Bryan: I have seen them and there is.

The Court: We will cross that bridge when we come to it.

Mr. Bryan: We have no way to show that until we get them here.

The Court: They will make them available to you, I understand.

. . . . .

Mr. Mullen: And there is no objection to 3 and no objection to 4.

Mr. Harris: This is on 15?

Mr. Mullen: Yes. 14 we can dispose of in a few seconds.

Mr. Allen: That is the same thing.

Mr. Mullen: Yes, we were discussing the newspapers a moment ago.

Mr. Robertson: So the same as 15 for 14?

page 69 } The Court: The same agreement and ruling on 14 as 15, is that correct?

Mr. Harris: 3 is where that applies, isn't it?

The Court: Furnish a copy of the United Construction Workers News, and so forth.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, the other two things I have on my notes here for today—

The Court: Have we finished with these interrogatories?

Mr. Harris: I defer to Mr. Mullen. I think we have finished, but I haven't got the documents.

Mr. Mullen: I think that is all right.

The Court: Now we are through with the interrogatories. Before we get to the next item on your agenda, steps will be taken to embody what has been done here in an appropriate order?

Mr. Robertson: I will undertake to prepare that.

The Court: To bring us up to date.

Mr. Robertson: The only two other things I have for argument today, and in view of what the Court said I don't think you are ready to act on one. First, what is the date for the answer to these interrogatories?

The Court: What would be a reasonable date in your opinion to answer these interrogatories, 14, 15 and 16?

page 70 } Mr. Harris: I am trying to figure. It is somewhat difficult, Judge, for me to speak for those lawyers up there that have to check because they have other court engagements that have tied them up. It is not our disposition to delay it.

Mr. Robertson: What do you think about the 15th of December?

Mr. Mullen: I was going to suggest the 20th. That would be a little more than a month.

The Court: Make it the 20th of December.

Mr. Robertson: I would like to ask one more thing: I don't know whether they want to do it. Do you think it wise to try and get one other date for one further pre-trial conference to get out of the way any other preliminaries we can before the trial date?

The Court: If you gentlemen think that is necessary.

Mr. Robertson: I have nothing else in mind, but I think it would safeguard everybody and the Court.

The Court: How would December 11th suit you gentlemen?

Mr. Harris: I am tied up in a trial on that date.

Mr. Mullen: My idea on that—we would know more after we have worked on this case and I would think early in January along about the 6th or 7th would be better for that.

Mr. Robertson: I think that is all right. I think page 71 } it ought to be early enough if anything comes up that requires further action on anybody's time, you have enough time to do it.

Mr. Mullen: I don't know what there is to come up.

Mr. Harris: Couldn't there be a little flexibility in that? I have another case suing the same defendants for the same amount of money to defend in the Federal Court in Birmingham and have got a pre-trial hearing set and I don't know what that Judge is going to do. Down there the Federal Court pays no attention to a State Court any more than if they weren't in existence. You can be in a trial of a case in a State Court and it is no excuse for not showing up in the Federal Court.

The Court: Do you have any idea of when that pre-trial conference will be heard?

Mr. Harris: I think in the next ten days. That is the reason I would suggest it be in January; all of us would know whether there was anything to bring up.

Mr. Robertson: Why not fix a tentative date in the first week in January?

(A discussion off the record, as to date, which was finally fixed as Saturday morning, January 6, at nine-thirty at the City Hall.)

page 72 } Mr. Robertson: The other two things I have got here—one, the ruling of the Court about the minutes of the United Mine Workers which have heretofore been submitted to the Court—one was the consolidation of the causes and I understand you want a memorandum on that, and the other was the disposition of the ruling of the Court on the minutes of the United Mine Workers which have been submitted to the Court.

The Court: The Court hasn't had an opportunity to call for them. I will have to get a break to read them and I assume if I want them that I can get them.

Mr. Mullen: Any time. They are locked up in the lock box at the bank.

Mr. Robertson: If it will be any assistance I will be glad to read them.

Mr. Mullen: We don't require that sort of assistance.

Mr. Bryan: Some of the answers they have made to the interrogatories I don't believe are satisfactory.

Mr. Harris: Can't we take them up on the 20th?

Mr. Robertson: That may be too late. Why not take them up now?

Mr. Bryan: As you know, there are many questions and many answers and I have been making an analysis of them but there are some that strike you right in the face that I think would be very important and whether the answer is due to a misunderstanding of the question or the Court's ruling on the question or what it is I don't know, but it just doesn't make sense and I think that ought to be taken up preliminarily now if we can do so.

Mr. Mullen: You took the position that when we had objection to your answers the time to take that up was at the time of the trial and we weren't allowed to argue that.

Mr. Bryan: It is a very different situation I think in our particular case. You will have an opportunity to prove what you want, but in our particular case if we don't get this straight in advance and the United Mine Workers of America doesn't have people down here available to answer the questions, then we just won't have any proof.

Mr. Mullen: You think we are not going to have witnesses?

Mr. Robertson: You said you weren't going to obligate yourself to have anybody here.

Mr. Mullen: Certainly not obligated to you.

Mr. Robertson: That is why I think we have got to get them finished.

Mr. Mullen: We are not going to let the case go by default. We will have plenty of witnesses here.

Mr. Robertson: I don't want any gifts from Greeks.

Mr. Bryan: Look at out at Pikeville; we were page 74 } asking questions of Mr. Hunter and Mr. Hunter had a very funny memory, he just didn't know—"I don't know; you will have to go to Washington." That is what they all tell you.

Mr. Robertson: I don't see why we can't go with them right now to the extent Mr. Bryan is ready for them. I don't want any more interrogatories if I can help it, I don't want any more depositions if I can help it, I don't want any more pre-trial conferences if I can help it, and the further we go along today the nearer we finish the thing.

Mr. Harris: I didn't want to have to interrupt Mr. Robertson, but I want to say in behalf of Mr. Hunter that I didn't observe any convenience of memory. He wasn't instructed to forget anything; he was put on up there to tell whatever he knew. There may be a difference of opinion between—

Mr. Robertson: I want to say in fairness to Colonel Harris I certainly don't think Mr. Hunter needed any instructions.

Mr. Harris: That is a difference of opinion we will argue to the Jury.

Mr. Mullen: We are filling up the record now with things that are not in the case.

The Court: It is agreeable to me to be back at two-thirty.

Mr. Robertson: Let's get rid of them as far as page 75 } we can.

Mr. Harris: I would like to finish today.

The Court: Let's go on until ten minutes to one and then recess; I have some matters I have got to attend to that will take me half an hour after lunch.

Mr. Mullen: The questions have been answered as fully as we know how. I don't see where we would get anywhere.

Mr. Harris: I have no answer of District 50 or United Construction Workers; I have the answer of United Mine Workers. Do you mind taking up United Mine Workers first because that is the only one I have a copy of?

Mr. Bryan: I don't have them in that order, Colonel; they skip. I am only going to take up a few questions because that is all I am in a position to take up at the moment. The first question, looking at Interrogatory No. 4—

The Court: The United Mine Workers of America?

Mr. Bryan: Yes, sir.

The Court: I haven't the question.

Mr. Robertson: Which question?

Mr. Bryan: 19 on page 6.

Mr. Robertson: Do you want me to read the question?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Robertson: "19. Who were the members page 76 } of the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and who have been members of said International Executive Board since August 4, 1949; when and by whom were each of these persons appointed or elected a member of said Executive Board; during what period or periods between the dates October 28, 1949, and August 4, 1949, also since August 4 1949, did each serve as a member of said International Executive Board; what districts or subdistricts or branches or subordinate branches of the United Mine Workers of America did they respectively represent on said International Executive Board; and what were the locations of their respective offices?"

Mr. Bryan: The answer as submitted appears to be complete in that it lists the names of the Board members, it shows the districts that they represent; lists their addresses and shows the dates on which they were appointed or elected. The answer is defective in that it does not show by whom they were appointed or elected. In our opinion, that is a very material point. We do not have information yet as to why some of these people were appointed and some were elected. Before we are through we expect to find out more about that. I think each one of these people who were shown as having been appointed was appointed by the International President with the approval of the International Executive page 77 } Board. The answer does not say so, however.

The Court: Did the question ask for that?

Mr. Bryan: Yes, sir, the question says when and by whom was each of these persons elected or appointed a member of the International Executive Board. They were supposed to answer that and they haven't answered it. In the case of the members who were elected, I suppose they were elected by their respective districts. However, we don't know that. They may have been elected by the Board or may have been elected by the convention or may have been elected in some other way. All of that goes to the matter of the control exercised by the International Union and the Board over these districts.

The Court: In other words, you want to know by whom they were elected or appointed?

Mr. Bryan: Yes, sir, and they did not furnish that information and we think it is quite important.

The Court: Let me see what these gentlemen have to say about that.

Mr. Harris: It is a little more work for the International.

The Court: It does appear to the Court that counsel overlooked stating in the answer to this question by whom these gentlemen were appointed or elected.

Mr. Mullen: We thought when we said elected or page 78 } appointed they would know the elections are by the districts. The Constitution provides elections shall be by districts. When there are no elections by districts, then they are appointed by the Executive Officers.

Mr. Robertson: That is just what we are trying to find out. We read the Constitution about elections and it just looks like to us they flouted the Constitution.

Mr. Bryan: All of that relates to another important question.

The Court: I don't know that it is necessary to go into that. The question is the sufficiency of the answer to the question.

Mr. Harris: As I understand, we have to answer it and we don't take any exception to Your Honor's ruling.

The Court: In other words, you will file an additional answer to this question stating by whom these gentlemen were appointed or elected. That ought to dispose of that question.

Mr. Harris: We will give you all we have. It may be some of it we haven't got.

The Court: What is the next question?

Mr. Bryan: The next question will be Question 2 in Interrogatories 4.

Mr. Robertson: I will read the question:

"Furnish a copy of the charter, constitution rules, laws, and by-laws of the United Mine Workers of America page 79 } in effect between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, together with a copy of all changes and revisions made in the same since August 4, 1949."

The Court: We are still concerned with the answer of the United Mine Workers of America to the interrogatories?

Mr. Bryan: Yes, sir. I believe these gentlemen have tried to answer that properly. They furnished what purports to be a copy of the constitution of the United Mine Workers adopted at Cincinnati, Ohio, October 11, 1948, and effective November 1, 1948. They also furnished a copy of the constitution adopted at Cincinnati on September 19, 1944. The first constitution mentioned; that is, the one adopted October 11, 1948, is in a little booklet form and it appears this booklet form is defective; there is a skip from page 72 to 83.

Mr. Harris: I stated in Kentucky that was an inadvertence and we would give him another one. I haven't been back to Washington since.

Mr. Bryan: The booklet appears to be complete on the face, but when you look through it portions of it are missing.

The Court: The Court will ask counsel to furnish a proper copy.

Mr. Mullen: What pages are missing?

page 80 } Mr. Bryan: Page 72, the portion about District 50 is missing.

Mr. Mullen: Page 72 and then what you have is 82?

Mr. Bryan: What is your next page?

Mr. Mullen: The next page is page 73.

Mr. Bryan: This book has page 83 as the next number.

Mr. Mullen: You evidently got a defective book. They jumped over to the burial service portion, thought that was all you needed.

The Court: What is your next question?

Mr. Harris: That is just one constitution I am to get for you, I understand.

Mr. Robertson: Let me have one, too.

Mr. Harris: You have a defective one, too?

Mr. Robertson: No, I haven't any.

Mr. Bryan: I next refer to Question and Answer 23, Interrogatory No. 4, United Mine Workers.

Mr. Robertson: That is quite a long one:

"Did the constitution of United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 3, 1949, provide among other things as follows:

page 81 } "Charters of districts, sub-districts and local unions may be revoked by the International President, who shall have authority to create a provisional government for the subordinate branch whose charter has been revoked. This action of the International President shall be subject to review by the International Executive Board upon appeal by any officers deposed or any members affected thereby. Until such review is had and unless said order of revocation is set aside, all members, officers and branches within the territory affected by the order of revocation shall respect and conform to said order. An appeal may be had from the decision of the Executive Board upon such order of revocation to the next international convention."

Mr. Mullen: Without reading all that in the record can't you state what your objection is to the answer? The question and answer are just too long.

Mr. Robertson: No, I can't do that and give the Court the context.

"During what period or periods did said constitution so provide?"

Mr. Bryan: The answer is: "Yes, at all times inquired about."

Mr. Robertson: Here is the next part of the question:

"During what period or periods between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, did said International President have the authority or right to revoke the charter or certificate of affiliation of District 50 in accordance with and subject to the provision page 82 } visions of the language quoted above?"

Mr. Bryan: The answer to that question is: "At no time during the period inquired about."

In that connection over in connection with Question and Answer 2 United Mine Workers of America said that the constitution adopted at Cincinnati, Ohio, October 11, 1948, was in full force and effect and that no changes had been made in it since its adoption. Then in connection with Answer 23 they admitted that that portion of the constitution had been in effect at all times inquired about. Then when they were asked whether or not the President in accordance with and subject to the provisions of that portion of the Constitution had the authority or right to revoke the charter of District 50 the answer comes out: "At no time during the period referred to."

Do they mean that he did not have the right during that period of time because there was no cause for the exercise of the right or do they mean that there was some other ruling or interpretation perhaps by John L. Lewis which would change that portion of the constitution as it relates to District 50 and would do away with the right of charter revocation? I can't tell whether it is a play on words or whether there has been some ruling or interpretation which has changed the constitution. If that is the case, it would appear their answer to Question 2 is wrong.

page 83 } Mr. Harris: It is up to him to argue to the Jury that our answers are inconsistent, if the Court please. We are not going to agree with his interpretation.

tation of everything that he brings into the case. We have answered the question.

Mr. Mullen: Answered directly and specifically, stating during what period did he have the right and we stated at no time during the period inquired about.

Mr. Bryan: We will have to have another interrogatory then.

Mr. Harris: We can't help that. The threat doesn't help you.

The Court: That is your interpretation of the answer?

Mr. Harris: Yes, sir, we gave the best answer we knew how. We were asked at what time he had that authority and we say he didn't have it.

Mr. Mullen: As to why he didn't have it we are not asked to explain why he didn't have the authority. We answered he didn't.

Mr. Bryan: The language of the constitution appears to be perfectly plain.

The Court: That is a question you could argue before the Jury, couldn't you? You have asked them this specific question and they have answered it the way they feel it should be answered.

page 84 } Mr. Bryan: I will have to ask some more questions then.

The Court: You might remember this in regard to these interrogatories, that you can't do but so much. If you want to try this case in January, you must get everything in as soon as you can because if you ask questions the Court is going to give them time to answer them.

Mr. Bryan: This is just a sample and there are a number of samples throughout these answers just like this. They might be regarded as evasive. They don't come out and make a full, frank answer. They know what we are asking for and they don't answer it.

Mr. Mullen: What do you want us to answer more than the plain facts?

Mr. Harris: I object that we didn't make a full answer. In order that this Court might know, we had a meeting in Washington at which Mr. Mullen and I were both present and we went into the question of answers to interrogatories and our instructions were to answer wherever we could. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Mullen: Absolutely, and they were answered fully. I can't see anything that can be objected to in that answer or anything that is not perfectly clear. He asked during what period did the International President have the authority and right to revoke the charter; that is, page 85 } between certain dates, and we answered at no time during the period inquired about. I don't think anything could be plainer. We are not called upon to say why or wherefore; we stated the facts.

The Court: I don't think that the Court should require amplification of that question and answer. That is their interpretation of the question and that was: "At no time" Now, of course, your interpretation, in view of the charter, may be different.

Mr. Bryan: The charter says the charter of districts, sub-districts or local unions may be revoked by the International President. We say, did he have that authority or right? They say no, and yet we show that language is in there.

Mr. Harris: That is a Jury argument.

The Court: Can't you point it out to the Jury that they are inconsistent, that by a reading of the charter it shows he does have that right and now in answer to this question they interpret it that he doesn't have that right? Isn't that a question of interpretation? You put a different interpretation on it and maybe the Jury will.

Mr. Bryan: It just didn't seem like a correct answer on the face of it.

Mr. Moore: Mr. Bryan just thinks one of the two is wrong; it is no question of interpretation. Either he has page 86 } got it or hasn't got it, and if they gave it to him and it never was changed, he has got it, and then to say he hasn't got it—

The Court: I see what Mr. Bryan is talking about, but if these gentlemen interpret it differently I don't know that I can make them say yes. What about it, Mr. Robertson?

Mr. Robertson: All right, you asked me a frank question. I don't think you can, either.

The Court: I don't see that I can make them say yes when they say no.

Mr. Robertson: They haven't fooled me any and haven't told a damn thing and we know what their argument is going to be.

Mr. Mullen: If you read the constitution, you could find the answer.

Mr. Robertson: I expect you will claim your answer is in Section 20 of the constitution.

Mr. Mullen: Yes, Section 20 covers it. It was a charter created by the Convention and therefore the International President couldn't do it.

Mr. Harris: I am glad I am not playing poker with you gentlemen.

Mr. Mullen: I know why it is a correct answer.

The Court: I think it is a question you may argue.

Mr. Mullen: We can meet that all right. What page 87 } next?

Mr. Bryan: Exactly the same question applies to 23(c) and 23(d). I think the answer is inadequate and patently wrong.

Mr. Harris: That is our hard luck if we are wrong. We have answered.

Mr. Mullen: Specifically and definitely to the point.

The Court: The same ruling on (c) and (d).

Mr. Bryan: Look at Question and Answer 1 in Interrogatory 2, United Construction Workers.

The Court: We are through with Interrogatory 4 for the time being?

Mr. Bryan: Yes, sir. I haven't got these in regular order.

Mr. Robertson: I will read the question—

The Court: Can't you just give the Interrogatory and the number? I am wondering if we can't save transcribing all of these questions because they are already in the record.

Mr. Robertson: Yes. This is No. 2, Question 1.

(Mr. Robertson read the question.)

Mr. Bryan: This is the answer:

“United Construction Workers, affiliated with United Mine Workers of America, (properly stated, United Construction Workers, division of District 50, United Mine page 88 } Workers of America) was organized independent of United Mine Workers of America and requested and received affiliation as a division of District 50, United Mine Workers of America, during or about the month of June, 1942. United Construction Workers, the defendant herein, has never had an organizing committee.”

You will note that the question asked when and upon what authority was United Construction Workers of America first organized. That question was directed to United Construction Workers and the answer just doesn't say. We know that United Construction Workers was organized by the Congress of Industrial Organization we think in about 1939. That is the proper answer, but it wasn't given.

Mr. Mullen: I don't think they are the facts. There was a split and a group came and asked for this charter under the name of United Construction Workers. The United Construction Workers originally under the C. I. O. still exists. So your answer isn't correct.

Mr. Bryan: The United Construction Workers as an organization was originally organized we believe in 1939 by the Congress of Industrial Organization and when the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. split the United Construction Workers became a part of the United Mine Workers of America. This is definitely an offshoot of the first organization.

Mr. Mullen: But not the only organization. The C. I. O. organization is still in existence. These people page 89 } left it and came down and said, "Here is a group of us that want to operate with the United Mine Workers."

Mr. Bryan: The answer just says the United Construction Workers was organized independent of United Mine Workers of America and requested and received affiliation as a division of District 50.

Mr. Mullen: Exactly.

Mr. Bryan: We asked when it was organized and upon what authority. That answer is left out. Down further they say: "United Construction Workers, a defendant herein, has never had an Organizing Committee."

Mr. Mullen: That is absolutely true.

Mr. Bryan: Mr. A. D. Lewis was Chairman of the Organizing Committee of United Construction Workers.

Mr. Mullen: That isn't correct. This is correct here. It never had an Organizing Committee. It was organized and came and asked for affiliation.

Mr. Bryan: The official publication shows the name of the Organizing Committee and shows who they were.

Mr. Mullen: Of District 50?

Mr. Bryan: United Construction Workers News shows it of the United Construction Workers.

Mr. Mullen: Well, if it does, I don't know.

Mr. Bryan: That is just simply another example.

The Court: What can the Court do about that page 90 } when you gentlemen have different views? I haven't heard the evidence; I don't know.

Mr. Mullen: I think we are discussing things to be argued before the Jury.

Mr. Robertson: They still haven't answered it. The question was when and by whom. That just doesn't answer it. They have a right to answer—

The Court: When and upon what authority.

Mr. Robertson: And they haven't said it. That is what we are complaining about.

The Court: What about that, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: A group of men got together, organized and applied for a charter. It wasn't any authority.

Mr. Robertson: You haven't answered it.

Mr. Mullen: It was no authority; it was under charter.

The Court: I think you gentlemen can amplify your answer to Question 1 and state when and upon what authority.

Mr. Harris: It is Question No. 2?

The Court: Question 1 in Interrogatories 2.

page 91 } The Court: All right, Mr. Bryan, what is your next question?

Mr. Bryan: The next relates to Question and Answer 51 in Interrogatory 4.

Mr. Harris: United Mine Workers or United Construction Workers?

Mr. Bryan: United Mine Workers.

(Mr. Robertson read the question.)

Mr. Bryan: Your answer is: "In addition to the Chairman, the members of the Organized Committee are as follows: John Ghizzoni, John P. Brisarello, Martin F. Brennan, Hugh White and George Titler, each of whom was appointed by the International President in accordance with the constitution of the International Union, with the approval of the International Executive Board, prior to the dates inquired about and has served in the capacity of a member of the Organizing Committee during the times inquired about."

We would like to know when those people were appointed. They just said prior to the dates inquired about. Can you give those dates, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: I don't know. It seems to me, however, that is a sufficient answer; it was prior to the date you inquired about.

Mr. Robertson: Of course, that is not telling when.

page 92 } Mr. Bryan: There are any number of questions in here that have the same thing, where we asked when such-and-such happened.

Mr. Harris: If we can get it, we will give it. I don't know whether we can or not.

Mr. Bryan: It just generally says prior to the date inquired about.

The Court: The Court rules the defendants should answer when the appointments were made; give the dates. What is the next one?

Mr. Bryan: Interrogatory 3, Question No. 9.

(Mr. Robertson read the question.)

Mr. Harris: Who is that addressed to ?

Mr. Robertson: District 50.

Mr. Bryan: It is the same objection to the answer.

The Court: The Court rules the dates of appointments should be given as set forth in the question. What is the next one?

Mr. Bryan: Question and Answer 18, Interrogatory 4.

Mr. Harris: I don't have them by that number.

Mr. Bryan: That is to the United Mine Workers.

(Mr. Robertson read the question.)

Mr. Bryan: The answer to that question is the same answer as given in answer 17 above. It is a rather page 93 } long answer; I don't know that it is necessary to read it all out. In connection with the answer, however, it appears that the International Officers include one president, one vice-president, one secretary-treasurer, three tellers and three auditors. While information was given about the president, the vice-president and the secretary-treasurer, the answer is silent with reference to the tellers and the auditors. Can you tell us who they were?

Mr. Mullen: I don't know who they were. I think somewhere else in here the information is given.

Mr. Harris: We have got it. We will give it to you.

Mr. Robertson: We also want when and by whom, each was elected.

Mr. Bryan: That is right.

Mr. Harris: Those are not by any chance the questions that were modified by the Court, are they?

Mr. Bryan: No, sir.

Mr. Harris: We don't want to waive any modification of the Court.

The Court: It is agreed that additional answers will be filed?

Mr. Harris: Yes, sir, on Question 18 to give the names of the tellers and auditors and by whom and when elected.

Mr. Robertson: Of course, this will be done by page 94 } the 20th of December, too?

Mr. Harris: I have got up at the head of the page "For answer by December 20th" and I just assume that would apply to all of them.

The Court: I assume that would be a reasonable time.

Mr. Bryan: Look at Question and Answer 66, Interrogatories 4; that is addressed to the United Mine Workers.

(Mr. Robertson read the question.)

Mr. Bryan: The answer is: We have no knowledge with respect to the extent of work the plaintiff may claim to have had for Pond Creek Pocahontas Company or Spring Fork Developing Company. However, Breathitt County, Kentucky, was serviced during the times inquired about by Region 58.

Is Breathitt County in Region 58 or not?

Mr. Mullen: That is a correct answer.

Mr. Robertson: You haven't answered it. It is either in or out.

Mr. Mullen: We have said Breathitt County was serviced during the time inquired about by Region 58.

Mr. Robertson: That isn't an answer. We want to know whether it is in or out.

Mr. Mullen: You will find another answer here page 95 } as to persons included in Region 58, certain counties in Kentucky and West Virginia, included in which was Breathitt County.

Mr. Robertson: And another place where it didn't include it. We want to know whether it is in or out. We are talking about this question now.

Mr. Harris: The next questions 67 and 68 are like you say—let's see what the counties are.

Mr. Bryan: That was the next question I was coming to. Will you name the counties?

Mr. Mullen: I think that is a sufficient answer.

Mr. Bryan: I don't.

Mr. Mullen: That is the county you are interested in.

Mr. Bryan: The Court has indicated it would confine certain inquiries to Region 58 and we just want to know what Region 58 comprises. We undertook to find out from Mr. Hunter by asking him some questions, but didn't get a satisfactory answer.

The Court: It wouldn't be much trouble to give the list of counties, would it?

Mr. Harris: If we know, we will give it.

The Court: Suppose you gentlemen enlarge on the answer and give the counties.

Mr. Robertson: That also applies to 67?

The Court: Yes, 66 and 67. What is the next one?

Mr. Harris: Enlarge and give the names of the page 96 } counties and say whether in Region 58?

Mr. Bryan: That is right. Next is Question and Answer 9(e), Interrogatories 4.

(Mr. Robertson read the question.)

Mr. Bryan: The answer is: "Since October 28, 1948, there have been no designations or approvals of 'other industries'."

We didn't ask which ones had been approved since October 28, 1948. We wanted to know which industries between those periods were the approved and designated other industries.

Mr. Harris: I submit we gave a fair and proper interpretation to the question framed.

The Court: Read the question again.

(The question was read.)

Mr. Harris: We took that to mean he wanted to know what industries had been designated and approved after those dates, and there had not been any.

Mr. Robertson: I don't think that is what the language said.

Mr. Harris: That is the way we interpreted it.

The Court: I believe they are asking for the names of industries in here.

Mr. Robertson: That was the idea. I know the page 97 } railroad workers are one and the dairy workers are one. You can take the various industries and occupations organized by District 50 and the United Construction Workers and they are just multitudinous.

The Court: It says what were the designated and approved other industries between the dates of August 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949. I take that to mean naming the various industries.

Mr. Mullen: The answer would be there are no industries designated other than the United States and Canada as a whole.

Mr. Robertson: If that is the answer, that is what we are entitled to.

Mr. Mullen: However, I am not undertaking to answer it. I know I heard discussion of it.

The Court: The Court will request counsel to amend that Answer 9 (e).

Mr. Harris: The way these are mixed up and not followed in sequence, if I get one wrong—I am trying to get them right.

Mr. Bryan: Question and Answer No. 55, Interrogatories 2, United Construction Workers.

(Mr. Robertson read the question.)

Mr. Bryan: The answer is: "There have been no specified claimed jurisdictions by the United Construction Workers."

Article 2 of United Construction Workers, Section 1, provides—we got this from one of the boys of the United Paper Workers—"To organize on an industrial basis without discrimination on account of creed, color, nationality or classification of employment or workers employed in and around industries within its jurisdiction."

Mr. Harris: If they have not been specified, they haven't been specified.

Mr. Bryan: Do they claim all industries?

Mr. Harris: That wasn't what you asked. You asked what had been specified.

Mr. Mullen: That is a correct answer as it stands.

Mr. Bryan: I don't think so. It says: "What work, occupations and industries were claimed by United Construction Workers to be within its jurisdiction between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949; and what work, occupations and industries have been claimed by United Construction Workers to be within its jurisdiction since August 4, 1949?"

Mr. Harris: And we say none were specified.

Mr. Bryan: Is it that you don't claim any?

Mr. Mullen: No. There is no limitation, as I told you just now.

page 99 } Mr. Robertson: Then that would be the answer.

Mr. Bryan: You claim 26.

Mr. Harris: When we say there was no limitation, none specified, that is the answer.

Mr. Moore: Have you got any limitation in here?

Mr. Mullen: No, but it says none specified.

The Court: You might add to it: "No limitation".

Mr. Harris: I assume these gentlemen on the other side know that certain railroad unions are not available to anybody under the Railway Labor Act.

Mr. Bryan: What do you mean?

Mr. Harris: We don't make any effort to organize railroad workers.

Mr. Bryan: You have a railroad workers division of District 50.

Mr. Robertson: And Mr. Carroll was very highly complimented for his work on the Long Island Railroad Company.

Mr. Harris: That is all news to me.

The Court: What is the next one?

Mr. Bryan: Question and Answer No. 54, Interrogatories 3, District 50.

(Mr. Robertson read the question.)

Mr. Bryan: "Answering the question as modified by direction of the Court this defendant says:

page 100 } "With respect to both District 50, United Mine Workers of America, and United Construction Workers, there were no specified claimed jurisdictions during the times inquired about."

I don't recall any modification of that.

Mr. Robertson: Yes, there was a misprint in it and I read it as corrected. I suppose it will be the same ruling there, the same answer.

Mr. Harris: I think the question is slightly different. Read the question again.

(The question was read.)

Mr. Harris: I submit that is a fair answer. We say they did not claim any jurisdiction.

Mr. Robertson: It is exactly the same proposition as the other one.

Mr. Harris: No, it isn't.

Mr. Mullen: We can't change the facts just to suit you.

Mr. Bryan: Does District 50 claim jurisdiction over certain industries and, if so, what are they? That is all we asked for and you haven't said.

Mr. Harris: I have stated the facts. I can't change the facts for you.

Mr. Robertson: No, but you can answer the question.

Mr. Harris: I tried to.

page 101 } Mr. Bryan: The truth is they don't want to say District 50 and United Construction Workers and, in a sense, United Mine Workers all claim jurisdiction over the same thing.

Mr. Harris: You know, you are the first lawyer I ever saw that always knew what he wanted to say.

Mr. Bryan: Well, I think I know this one.

Mr. Robertson: I think he has better studied it than any man you ever saw.

The Court: Those side remarks I don't think help.

Mr. Mullen: I discussed this question very fully with them. There was no claimed jurisdiction; it has just grown.

The Court: They say there were no specified claimed jurisdictions.

Mr. Robertson: Do they mean they claim everything without limitation like I think they do, like the other question? If they are willing to answer the other one, why aren't they willing to answer this one?

Mr. Bryan: Here is Article 2 of District 50, Section 1: "To organize on an industrial basis without discrimination on account of race, creed, color, nationality, sex or classification of employment all persons engaged in and around the industries and occupations within its jurisdiction." page 102 }

The use of the word "jurisdiction" in connection with labor unions has two meanings. Sometimes it means jurisdictional area, a certain territory or area over which the union asserts or claims jurisdiction, but it also means certain trades and occupations over which a union claims jurisdiction. That is what they are talking about here, I think: "Within its jurisdiction".

Mr. Mullen: You have said yourself that District 50 was a catch-all. There has been no limitation put on it, no specified territory.

Mr. Robertson: Then they claim unlimited jurisdiction. That is what we think it meant. If that is what they meant—

Mr. Harris: No, we can't let you frame our answer. We take the question and if our construction of the question is reasonable, that decides the question subject to the ruling of the Court.

The Court: Then the Court understands the following words "there were no specified claimed jurisdictions" to mean that there were no limitations?

Mr. Mullen: No limitations.

Mr. Robertson: Then I think they ought to say so.

The Court: Suppose you add that to their page 103 } answer, then. What is the next one?

Mr. Bryan: Look at Question 54 in interrogatories 2.

Mr. Harris: That is United Construction Workers?

Mr. Bryan: Yes, sir.

(Mr. Robertson read the question.)

Mr. Bryan: The answer is "No formal claims of jurisdiction for any particular work were ever made by Local 778A within the knowledge of this defendant." As I said a minute ago, the word "jurisdiction" has two different meanings. Sometimes it means area and sometimes it means work claimed by a union. For example, the carpenters' union does not claim jurisdiction over plumbing work or electrical work, and the electrical union does not claim jurisdiction over masonry. In asking this question we just asked did the United Construction Workers Local 778A claim jurisdiction over the work the plaintiff was doing in Breathitt County and we got this answer: "No formal claim of jurisdiction."

We didn't ask anything about formal claim. We want to know whether they claim it.

Mr. Harris: Of course, we can't read the minds of these members of the Local. There is no way we could possibly say what any particular man thought and if they made no formal claim that is the only kind of claim we know anything about. We are not mind-readers down in that country.

Mr. Bryan: We are calling on the defendant page 104 } to answer. Either it did or didn't. If it didn't, it can say so.

Mr. Mullen: We don't have to answer the question the way you want us to answer it. There are a lot of things in here you don't like.

Mr. Robertson: Mr. Hunter testified in Kentucky that 778A was a sort of—you might say a dummy—that isn't the right word, but a local set-up to be in existence—for instance, I think you have to have ten men to form a local and they would keep this shell there and if they signed up one man they would put him in 778A and keep it going until they built up ten or fifteen men and put them out in another local, but that was a receptacle to dump them in as they signed up any less number than necessary for a permanent local union. Now if I am wrong in what I said to you I invite correction, but that was a receptacle kept there to catch these fellows that signed up until they could reorganize them into something else. If that was a method of their organization there, they must know it. It is their duty to know what they were claiming and that is in substance what I understood Mr. Hunter to testify on this last trip when we were out in Kentucky.

Mr. Harris: I think my recollection is substantially the same as yours as to what Mr. Hunter swore to, page 105 } but I don't think that is relevant to the point in dispute between us. If the Local 778A didn't make any claims, we wouldn't know of any claims.

Mr. Robertson: If that is a local of the United Construction Workers, if the United Construction Workers is the larger organization and this is one of its subordinate units which it sets up for a stated purpose, when they set it up they are compelled to know what they set it up for.

Mr. Harris: You didn't ask us what it was set up for.

Mr. Robertson: No, we asked what you are claiming. I am giving the background in the light of Hunter's testimony and you say you set it up for a stated purpose, but say you can't tell what its basis was. That doesn't make sense.

Mr. Mullen: Mr. Robertson's statement of the testimony given out there shows this is a correct answer. This is a union, as he says, in order to have a place to place anybody that comes along in any kind of business they try to organize. There is no limitation on the claim or on the jurisdiction that they will undertake to exercise and that is the way they handle it.

Mr. Robertson: If there is no limitation, then they claim this work of Laburnum out there. If there wasn't any limitation on it, then they claim it and should say so.

page 106 } Mr. Harris: I don't think they can force us to try to make an answer to suit them that doesn't state the facts.

Mr. Robertson: We are not trying to do that. We are trying to make them answer the question without dodging it.

The Court: What the Court is concerned with is whether or not they can give a better answer than this.

Mr. Robertson: I think Mr. Mullen has already given it. He said it was universal. If it was universal, they claimed jurisdiction over Breathitt County.

Mr. Mullen: I didn't say that. I said this statement showed that was—in the first place, that "A" means it is a provisional union, provisional in that provision was made where they got less than ten men in any particular industry they want to take in they could handle them temporarily through that union.

Mr. Robertson: Then it covers everything on the earth. It is set up as a catch-all for everything, isn't it, and if so, then its jurisdiction is universal, including Breathitt County, Kentucky.

Mr. Bryan: We are not trying to tell Colonel Harris or Mr. Mullen how they should answer the question, but we simply feel that the answer submitted is not responsive.

This claiming of jurisdiction—United Mine page 107 } Workers claims jurisdiction over coal miners, the United Brotherhood of Carpenters claims jurisdiction over carpenters and we want to know if these people claim jurisdiction over the work we were doing.

The Court: In other words, you want an answer yes or no.

Mr. Bryan: If they don't know, say they don't know.

Mr. Mullen: We can't give them that kind of answer.

Mr. Bryan: We might have used the word "assert" instead of claimed. The meaning is the same, I think.

The Court: Can't this question be answered yes or no, or the defendant is not advised.

Mr. Mullen: We could just answer it is not advised.

Mr. Robertson: I don't think they can just duck it that way.

The Court: Suppose they don't know; I can't make them say.

Mr. Robertson: I am just trying to get away from quibbling. To my way of thinking, Mr. Mullen has already given the answer. He said it was this catch-all and it was without limitation, and if I am set up there to receive representatives of every industry on earth, then I claim jurisdiction over every industry. He has given the answer, but is page 108 } not committed to it.

The Court: Is that substantially the evidence developed in Kentucky?

Mr. Bryan: I think so.

The Court: Haven't you got that in the record?

Mr. Robertson: We got it from their witness and got it in an equivocal form here and are trying to get it in an unequivocal form.

The Court: I think you are entitled to it if they can answer it. I think it should be answered yes or no, if possible. If they say they can't answer it yes or no, I don't know of any way to compel them to say yes or no.

Mr. Mullen: I want to say the question they are talking about I think the answer is correct as made. However, we will look into it.

The Court: What is the next one?

Mr. Bryan: No. 57, Interrogatories 2, United Construction Workers.

(Mr. Robertson read the question.)

Mr. Bryan: The answer is: "The records of membership are supposed to be kept, and it is assumed that they were kept at the headquarters of Local Union 778A. This defendant has written requesting the information sought in this question and same will be attached hereto and marked as 'Exhibit 7' if and when received."

page 109 } Mr. Robertson: They can't just bow out that way. It is their agent; it is up to them to get it.

Mr. Bryan: Mr. Hunter testified he was administrator officer of the union. Maybe there is no record; it might be a dummy.

Mr. Robertson: Suppose Your Honor was my agent and the Court ordered me to do something and I said, "I will write to Judge Snead and tell him to send it in. If he sends it in, I will file it, but if he doesn't, why go and jump in the lake."

Mr. Harris: We did not, of course, insinuate anybody take a swim. We had to file our answers within a specified time and we worked I think prodigiously to get them in and we didn't have the information.

Mr. Robertson: We still haven't gotten it at this late date.

The Court: You gentlemen proceed as expeditiously as possible to get that information.

Mr. Harris: Yes, sir.

Mr. Mullen: Most of it isn't in existence, I happen to know.

The Court: What is the next one?

Mr. Bryan: Interrogatories 2, Question 39.

Mr. Harris: That would be U. C. W. again?

Mr. Bryan: Yes, sir.

page 110 } (Mr. Robertson read the question.)

Mr. Bryan: The answer is: "None".

Mr. Mullen: That ends it.

Mr. Bryan: I would like to call Your Honor's attention to this. In Question 36 of Interrogatories No. 2 the United Construction Workers was asked in what capacity or capacities was Thomas Davis employed by United Construction Workers between those dates and in what capacity or capacities was he employed by United Construction Workers since August 4, 1949. The answer says, "During all the times inquired about Mr. Thomas Davis was employed by the United Construction Workers by its director and assigned as Regional Director of Region 31 of United Construction Workers and District 31, United Mine Workers of America, and was assigned also as Assistant to the Chairman of the Organizing Committee of District 50, United Mine Workers of America, and assistant to the Director of the United Construction Workers. It appears from other answers which have been filed by the defendant that a Regional Director is required to file reports once a week with the National Director of United Construction Workers or the Chairman of the Organizing Committee of District 50."

In the case of Mr. David Hunter various reports were furnished. In the case of William O. Hart various reports were furnished, although they related to Mr. Hart's page 111 } activities up near Clarksburg, West Virginia.

Mr. Harris: Judge, we can't furnish a report if he didn't make any.

The Court: I don't see how you can either. Even though he is required to do it, if he didn't make any report, as you gentlemen say he didn't make any, I don't see how he can furnish it.

Mr. Mullen: That answer wouldn't be there if they weren't the facts.

Mr. Bryan: I raised the question because I thought perhaps in answering that question you limited the thing to Region 58 of United Construction Workers or District 50.

Mr. Harris: What is that?

Mr. Bryan: I raised the point because I had the idea in answering the question you might have had in mind limiting the inquiry simply to Region 58 of United Construction Workers. Mr. Davis is Regional Director of Region 31 and also in charge of a lot of regions, as I understand it, including Region 58. It is not specified that he hadn't filed any reports.

Mr. Mullen: Colonel Harris, these questions have been gone over by three or four people in Washington?

Mr. Harris: Oh, yes.

Mr. Mullen: They have been over them with us. This is the final form they gave to us and the answer is page 112 } "None". I think that ends any discussion on it.

Mr. Harris: I think you are right. If our witness says that none were furnished, then that is the end of it.

The Court: The question does not limit it to Region 58.

Mr. Bryan: I know it doesn't limit it to Region 58, but there was so much discussion about limiting other questions to Region 58 I thought these gentlemen in taking the matter up with the people in Washington had told them this question was also limited to Region 58 and that prompted the answer "None".

The Court: Are you gentlemen advised as to that situation?

Mr. Harris: No, Judge. I am going to ask them about it.

The Court: Ask them if that applies to the others.

Mr. Bryan: Your Honor, that is all the questions I have in mind at this time.

The Court: All right, Gentlemen. I believe that is all for today, isn't it?

Mr. Mullen: Those few objections to 400 questions shows we have tried to answer them.

Mr. Bryan: I don't say they are all the objections because we haven't finished analyzing them yet.

. . . . .

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor pleases, I believe, as Fred told you in making the appointment, we have only a single questions to take up. It is Question 57 of the original interrogatories to the United Construction Workers. The question is:

"Who were the members of United Construction Workers Local Union 778A on July 14, 1949; and when was each of those persons initiated to membership in United Construction Workers; and what persons became members of said Local Union 778A between the dates July 14, 1949, and August 4, 1949; and when was each of those persons initiated to membership in said United Construction Workers?"

We find, Your Honor, that there were on July 14th two hundred members of Local 778A. To make those names public would open the door to reprisal by employers who are opposed to the union. Even under the National Labor Relations Act in determining whether a union represents the employees of any employer they do not and are not required and cannot be required to disclose the names of the members of the union. All the voting is secret for the very reason I have mentioned. In litigation involving unions it has been a rule not to require that the names of the members of the union be made public.

That is the situation here. There are, we know, page 3 } some of the employers of some of these men who are opposed to unions, are fighting unions, and to disclose the names so that they could be seen by anyone would open them to reprisal, open them to possible loss of jobs, and so forth.

Now that is a matter we want to ask that we be not required to give the names. Those men have no relation—a great majority of them have no relation to this business. We had signed up during that period members of the Laburnum Corporation—employees of the Laburnum Corporation. If they want a list of those, that is a different matter, but if others who have no connection with this matter we submit, Your Honor, we should not be required to make their names public and subject them to possible reprisal or loss of their jobs. That is the question we have.

Mr. Robertson: Now, if Your Honor please, we think that point is absolutely without any merit. In the first place, they have no standing in Court or out of Court so far as the Taft-Hartley Act is concerned or the Wagner Act or any Federal statute. Coming back to the Taft-Hartley Act, of course when they refuse to file the anti-communist oath they are outlawed under that act.

Now the whole argument is predicated on the supposition that some unidentified people not parties to this action may do an illegal act hereafter if we get the information we have asked. Of course, the Court will not assume that page 4 } somebody is going to break the law and I don't know what law he is talking about breaking.

Now we have got a right to have the information we want for this reason. They have told us—I think this is a fair statement—when I talked to them, it might not be this witness or that witness, but that they will be here with a cloud of witnesses. We are entitled to the information that we ask both in the preparation of our case for affirmative proof of our case and also so that when they come here with whatever witnesses they bring we are entitled to that information in advance in order that we may show their bias or lack of bias, and we are entitled to it at this time so we may take such action as we deem proper within the law between now and the trial date to strengthen our case in whatever way we deem proper.

Now take this situation—I haven't even made this point before. Every single place that we have been to take any testimony—I think I am saying this correctly—David Harter and Hobbs and sometimes other people have shown up and I have no legal right to say it but I have the factual right to say it, it has constituted a continuing and absolute and malicious threat to our witnesses. I can here right now or have Your Honor out in a back room in an office in Kentucky and I can sit there and look you in the eye with an expression on my face and an attitude of manner that is such a threat as if I wrote a letter like President Truman and yet I have no right even to raise that point, and they have no right to raise any such point.

We are entitled to everything we asked in that question. I am going to ask Mr. Bryan to address himself to that.

Mr. Bryan: I might start by saying, Your Honor, that in the interrogatories propounded to the plaintiff by the three defendants the plaintiff was requested to furnish the names and addresses of every employee employed by the plaintiff at the job site at Breathitt County, not just on July 26th, the date on which this mob came to the job site and drove the plaintiff's employees away, but over a period of time extending back as far as I think July 10th or July 14th—I don't have those interrogatories with my papers at the moment. The Court instructed us to answer that question. We felt it wasn't fair because just as Mr. Robertson has pointed out, the United Mine Workers, District 50 and United Construction Workers out in that territory exercise such an overwhelming and overpowering influence that many people in that neighborhood are terrified. They are afraid to incur the displeasure of those three powerful unions. They think if they do, they will be placed in a position where they will be unable to obtain employment and may perhaps find it necessary to leave their homes in the eastern part of Kentucky where they have lived for many years. We thought to disclose that information wouldn't be fair to our own people and shouldn't be done. The Court instructed us to answer it and we did it.

Now, in connection with this incident and trouble in Kentucky various picket signs were put up. I call them picket signs; they might also be called placards. As far as we know, there wasn't any man walking around with a sign on his back whom you would ordinarily refer to as a picket. However, these defendants did cause to be put at or near the job site these placards announcing the fact that the plaintiff was unfair or there was a so-called strike or a labor disturbance.

Some of these placards have United Mine Workers of America; others have Local Union No. 778, or District 50 or United Construction Workers. I am speaking from memory at the moment. It is better to look at the signs, but we don't have them here. But I know Local Union No. 778A was on some of the placards.

We have attempted to find out what Local Union 778A really is. It appears from the information we have obtained from records in other cases involving these defendants and also from the testimony of Mr. David Hunter when his deposition was taken in Pikeville last month that Local Union 778A is a dummy organization. Mr. Hunter said he was the administrative officer of Local Union 778A. It appears that this local union is a sort of clearing house into which various employees are put by these defendants until such time as charters can be issued for other local unions to be established.

We have asked who were the members of Local Union 778A because we think if any of our employees are members of either United Construction Workers or District 50 or United Mine Workers of America they were members of that local union. We question seriously whether any of our employees were members of any of those organizations. In fact, we don't think they were because we have in our possession cards signed by all of these—not all of our employees, but certain employees, and being the main ones in contention, making application to become members of local unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and those cards were signed very near the date that this trouble occurred.

We think that we are entitled to this information and what Mr. Mullen is talking about now must be somewhat of an afterthought because in the answer prepared by United Construction Workers to our interrogatories propounded to that organization, Interrogatories No. 2, United Construction Workers said this in answer to Question 57:

“The records of membership are supposed to be kept and it is assumed that they were kept at the headquarters of Local Union 778A. This defendant has written requesting the information sought in this question and the same will be attached hereto and marked as Exhibit 7 if and when received.”

I doubt if they have got a record of the membership of Local Union 778A. I don't believe they know who the members were. I don't believe Mr. Hunter knows. If they don't know, let them say so.

Mr. Mullen: We have a list of them and know who they are. There are over two hundred.

Mr. Robertson: Then they are estopped to make the point here.

Mr. Mullen: Some of the men are objecting to having the names made public.

Mr. Bryan: They said they will furnish the information if they get it and now they say they have got it.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, the very statement of Mr. Bryan shows the difference. We asked in our interrogatories, not who all their employees were, but solely who were the men employed on that job out there. We limited it to them; didn't ask about any other job, what other unions they belonged to or anything of that kind. We are perfectly willing to furnish them the names of the men who were their employees who applied for membership in this page 9 } union. We don't think who are the members of the union who are the employees of XYZ is in any way relevant to this case. We put it on the ground of relevancy; it wouldn't prove anything for them any more than any other union roster and it can do harm to those who are innocent bystanders. Some who knew we were making up this list have objected to their names being made public. They are not involved in this trouble in any way, shape or form.

As I say, we limited our request for information as to their employees solely to those who were working out there on the job, men whom they say we drove off the job, and to have the names of these others can help them in no way. We will give them the names of their men and that we figure is the limit we should be required to go.

Mr. Robertson: Now, if Your Honor please, of course you have ruled time and time again here that you are going to defer any ruling on the relevancy of testimony until the trial proceeds and, therefore, this is not the appropriate time to raise that question and we are not bound by the ipse dixit of counsel for these defendants as to what they have told him and what he thinks is relevant and what isn't relevant; that is a matter of adjudication.

Now to give you one phase of this thing—this I think already in the record in these depositions we have taken out in Kentucky since the last time we were here—page 10 } suppose Your Honor is a member of the A. F. of L. and you go out in that territory and you want to go to work and they say, "Well, this is United Mine Workers' territory; we don't recognize the A. F. of L. and you can't go to work here unless you sign up with us and pay your dues and initiation fee," and they go to your contractor for whom you want to work and tell him the same thing and it is quite a usual thing for the contractor to say: "All right, I am going to work twenty-five men here; the initiation fee is so many dollars, the monthly dues are so much. I will just pay you that much and we will go ahead," and then it is quite the customary thing there for a fellow that is already a member of the A. F. of L. to say, "All right, I will sign up and pay my initiation fee and pay my dues," and they say, "All right, we will leave you alone and you can go to work,"

We are going to have that in the record and we are entitled now to know which of these men here signed up with this United Construction Workers for that reason in addition to all other reasons, I am not criticizing counsel because I don't think counsel are controlling the client; I think the client is controlling the case for the defendant, but I think we might come here through responsible counsel and say they have written for that information and they will put it in here in the form of an exhibit when it comes and then counsel tell you this morning they have got the list, but now page 11 } say they don't want to divulge it because some of the people think probably they might be called here as a witness and they don't like it and therefore might refuse to testify, and we have had a number—we will show you this—we have had some refuse to testify because they were scared to testify. We have had one who refused to testify because we declined to pay him $1,000 before he testified. So we are entitled to get this information in the record.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, we didn't realize at first the injury it would do to other people not involved in this controversy,

Mr. Robertson: And I don't realize it or concede it now,

Mr. Mullen: Your statement doesn't make any difference.

Mr. Robertson: I think Mr. Bryan has something further to say,

The Court: I am going to let Mr. Mullen close, so suppose you go ahead,

Mr. Bryan: I just want to point this out, that these defendants hold themselves out as being high, outstanding, up-right organization. I don't know why Mr. Mullen should take the position it is a person subjecting himself to some indignity, scorn or ridicule because it became publicly known he was a member. If that is the case, put that in the record to show some indication of the type of organization it is.

The Court: Have you gentlemen anything further to say before I give Mr. Mullen an opportunity to close?

Mr. Robertson: No.

Mr. Mullen: I think it is a matter of common knowledge that there are employers who when they learn that men in their employ are members of the union they don't want their people unionized; they discriminate against them, they discharge them. Frequent cases of that come up; we see it in the papers, find it in the record of actual cases.

We didn't realize, didn't have in mind at the time this question was brought up the damage that might be done, the injury that might be done to people in no way connected with this controversy. We do not expect to go out and bring in people from companies who were not involved in this transaction in any way, shape or form. We don't know who they are, don't see they could have anything to say that would have any bearing whatever on this.

So far as the presence of Mr. Hunter and others out in Kentucky and West Virginia, we are dependent on them when we go out there for transportation, we are dependent on them for local knowledge. Of course, we have some of them present. They are not there to threaten their witnesses; they are there to give us information and take us around from place to place.

Mr. Robertson: Of course, you haven't been out there and looked at them like I have.

Mr. Mullen: I have been in three sets of depositions taken there.

Mr. Robertson: You were sitting in the city; you haven't been out in the bushes.

Mr. Mullen: I was lucky, perhaps. If it had any bearing on this case, the names of these people, that would be a different matter, but it is certain by no stretch of the imagination can these outsiders have anything to do with this case or have any information or anything that is relevant to it, and we ask Your Honor not to subject them to the possible reprisals, but to limit the question to those who were employees of Laburnum, just as we limited our interrogatories to those who were employees of Laburnum, on that particular job. They have a right to know which of their men signed up with us. We have a right to know who were the men employed on the job. Beyond that, I don't think either one of us have a right to go. I submit that to Your Honor.

The Court: Well, Gentlemen, I think the question should be answered and the Court at the trial will pass on the relevancy of the matter.

Mr. Mullen: Very well, Your Honor. We reserve the exception.

The Court: That is understood. Does that conclude the matter?

Mr. Bryan: The last time we had a conference here we discussed the answers—some of the answers made to the interrogatories propounded to these defendants. At that time I had not had an opportunity to go over all the questions and answers, and still haven't, but there is one that has come to my attention that I would like to bring up now. It relates to Local Union 778A, Question and Answer No. 30 in Interrogatories No. 4, addressed to the United Mine Workers of America. Here was the question:

"Did the Constitution of the United Mine Workers of America at any time between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949, provide among other things as follows:

"Should any local union be dissatisfied with the decision of any of the governing branches (unless prohibited by joint agreement) it shall have the right of appeal to the branch next in authority until a final decision is reached as provided in Section 3 of Article III and, if so, state the following:

"(a) During what period or periods did said constitution so provide?"

The answer to that is all right. It says this:

"At all times during the period inquired about."

page 15 } "(b) With respect to the 'governing branches' mentioned in the language quoted above what governing branch had authority over United Construction Workers, Local 778A, between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also after August 4, 1949. Name these governing branches, commencing with the branch having the least authority and then proceeding step by step to the branch having the highest authority."

The Court: I don't see that.

Mr. Bryan: It is down here as a sort of note and it is continued over to the next page.

The Court: I see.

Mr. Bryan: That question was answered in this manner:

"The chain of authority in reference to interpretation of governing branches as inquired about in this sub-section is affirmatively answered in Sections 3 and 4 of Article VI and Section 3 of Article III of the constitution."

We disagree with that. At least, it doesn't furnish the information we want. We asked them to name the governing branches, commencing with the branch having the least authority and then proceeding step by step to the branch having the highest authority. By looking at Sections 3 and 4 of Article VI of the constitution of the United Mine Workers and at Section 3 of Article III of the same constitution you can't tell with any accuracy what the next governing page 16 } branches are that have authority. It appears that the highest is perhaps the International Convention. Down from that we don't know. We think it is the United Mine Workers of America, but it might be the International Executive Board of United Mine Workers of America or it might be some other body in the United Mine Workers of America. Then you come to below that, what would have? Is it District 50? We think it is. What part does the Organizing Committee of District 50 play? Is that considered to be a governing branch? Is there any other sub-district or district between District 50 and United Construction Workers? We don't know. We can't tell from the provisions in the constitution referred to in this answer.

Mr. Robertson: We just asked them to name the branches.

Mr. Bryan: The provision in the constitution is clear, I think, but we can't tell from the language in the constitution the exact governing branches which have authority over Local Union 778A and the exact chain of authority. That is the information we were anxious to obtain and we think it is highly relevant, has a direct bearing on our allegations of an agency relationship. The answer as given is not responsive and we would like to have it revised.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, let me just give you an illustration of that. We have spent literally page 17 } days studying these things.

Suppose that the local union—we will take 778A and suppose somebody is dissatisfied with that, or any other union. You say, "Well, where do you appeal from there?"—I am talking about United Construction Workers—"Where do you appeal from there? Do you go up to your regional officer? Do you go to District 50? Then after you go to District 50 of United Construction Workers where do you go from there?"

We think you go from there to the top of the United Mine Workers, but you can't read that constitution and tell. We know that District 50—you see there are two different District 50s; District 50 of United Mine Workers and District 50 of United Construction Workers, and all divided into different regions.

Now here is a fellow in a local union of United Construction Workers; he thinks he has been illegally treated and wants to go as high as he can. Does he go from the local to the regional office, from the regional office to District 50 and from there up into United Mine Workers or what happens to him? Suppose he is a member of the United Mine Workers local; which way does he go up? Just like you see the courts of the Commonwealth are made up of the Supreme Court and such courts as the General Assembly may constitute. That is all right. Then I come along and I say I start out with the Justice of the Peace and I want to go as high as I can and you page 18 } name me the procedure through which I go. That is what we are asking here.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, I think the answer covers the question. The right of appeal is covered by the constitution and it is stated who has the right of appeal and the order in which it goes. I haven't the answer to the interrogatory here, but I think in another one it is specifically stated exactly—I think you asked the question who had the jurisdiction over so-and-so and state the branches on up. I think it was stated specifically in that case.

District 50 has nothing to do with United Construction Workers; they don't appeal to United Construction Workers from District 50. It is all stated very specifically. You go from the local union to the governing body of United Construction Workers and from there to the International Executive Board and from there, if necessary, to the International Convention. That is all set out again and again in all three of them.

Mr. Robertson: If they have got the information, what on earth is their objection to giving it? I call the Court's attention to this: I think that goes right to the heart of our case and we can't indulge in the hope of developing that on cross examination of their witnesses. We have got to be prepared to prove our case in chief and if it is as simple and page 19 } can be stated—whether it is simple or obtuse, if we can't find it out from the way they answer it, why can't they answer it in a plain, straightforward way so anybody can understand it?

Mr. Bryan: In the interrogatories propounded to the United Mine Workers, being Interrogatories 4, they were requested to furnish a copy of the charter or certificate of affiliation granted to United Construction Workers. That was furnished as an exhibit with the answers filed by United Mine Workers, which says that United Mine Workers of America doth grant this charter to A. D. Lewis, Chairman, and Gardiner Wales, Comptroller, United Construction Workers division and their successors in office, to constitute a local union to be known as UCWD, District 50, for the purpose of effecting thorough organization of the workers in this industry.

Mr. Mullen just said that District 50 had nothing to do with United Construction Workers, yet it appears that the head administrative officers and national directors of both organizations are one and the same man, Mr. A. D. Lewis, brother of Mr. John L. Lewis, and that the comptroller of both organizations is the same man, Mr. O. B. Allen, both of whom were appointed by the President of the United Mine Workers of America with the approval of the International Executive Board. It further appears that in every case a page 20 } regional director of United Construction Workers is also a regional director of District 50. It appears that the industries each organization seeks to organize are substantially the same. Really it is one organization traveling under two different names. Why, I don't know.

Mr. Mullen: To coordinate organization.

Mr. Bryan: One of the things we were anxious to find out and asked in these questions was the position of these defendants as to the authority of District 50 over United Construction Workers. You certainly can't tell that from reading this constitution nor anything in it. You can argue what you think that means, but we would like to know what the defendants think it means.

This language means something. They refer to governing branches; that is the language in the constitution. A governing branch means a branch which has the power to perhaps, in fact, exercise control over some other branch, a subordinate branch. That, as Mr. Robertson said, goes to the heart of our case. The constitution apparently contemplates a chain of authority, one branch of the entire organization having authority and control over another branch of the organization. Now in the case of Local Union 778A, which is one branch, which apparently took part in connection with this labor trouble because its name was on a placard at the job site—we want to know the name of each governing branch page 21 } having authority over Local Union 778A.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, I don't want to prolong the argument, but Mr. Mullen interposed there this was to coordinate the temporary units. Suppose you start out at the local unit and go up to District 50. District 50 of the United Mine Workers has its national headquarters in Washington with A. D. Lewis the top executive officer; District 50 of United Construction Workers has its national headquarters in Washington with A. D. Lewis the top executive officer. There you are. Two branches put on an equal level. Where do you go from there and how do you get there? That is what we want to know. There they are out like two branches of a tree; we think they come together up above there.

Mr. Bryan: We are not sure they are on an equal level. If United Construction Workers is a division of District 50, it is some indication they are not on an even level.

Mr. Robertson: I was just following out the illustration.

Mr. Mullen: We have repeatedly said there is no question of agency here. They are all part of one organization. We asked that specifically in the interrogatories. The union is the International United Mine Workers of America divided into districts, one of which is District 50. Equal page 22 } with District 50 is United Construction Workers.

Below them are the local unions. You have the same organization throughout business, chain stores, have it in the Government. I don't see where it is hard to understand.

Mr. Bryan: Do I understand you to admit for the record that there is an agency relationship between the United Mine Workers and United Construction Workers sufficient to hold the United Mine Workers liable for acts of United Construction Workers under the doctrine of respondet superior?

Mr. Mullen: There is no agency relationship.

Mr. Bryan: You said a minute ago there was.

Mr. Mullen: No, I said there was no agency.

The Court: No, you misunderstood him. He said no agency.

Mr. Mullen: Look at the answers we gave you before. They are specific.

Mr. Robertson: You are getting off the track. We asked you to name the steps. We want you to name them.

The Court: We understand what you want, Mr. Robertson.

Mr. Mullen: I will answer the question as I see fit. I am reading from the United Construction Workers rules:

"Any officer or member of a local union charged with an offense against the organization shall be tried by the local union Executive Board."

page 23 } "The decision of the local union shall be final unless loss of membership of the accused is involved, in which event an appeal may be taken to the International Executive Board within five days after the decision. Pending such appeal the decision of the local union shall be enforced unless the same is temporarily stayed by the National Director or the International Executive Board."

From the International Executive Board he can go to the International Convention. There is a clear statement of the course which any dispute takes. I don't think it is anything obtuse about that. That are named in the rules.

Mr. Bryan: Do you object to naming them specifically?
Mr. Mullen: I named them just now.

Mr. Robertson: Then we ask that you name them in the answer to the interrogatory.

The Court: Do you object to filing a supplemental answer or stipulating what has been said here, that that may be added to it?

Mr. Mullen: Judge, ordinarily I don't object to a thing like that, but this has gone beyond any reason. They are carping criticisms of answers to questions we think are answered fully. When we brought up one objection to their questions they didn't want to have Your Honor pass on it but wanted to put it off. I want to give notice now on January 6, when we come up we are going to ask the Court to pass also on our objections to your questions inasmuch as you have insisted page 24 { upon taking up your objections to our answers and having them answered before the trial.

Mr. Robertson: We are not asking you to answer them before the trial; we are asking the Court to adhere to the procedure which has been formulated here before, to rule as far as the Court can in pre-trial conference on the questions the Court will require to be answered or modified or refuse to require them to be answered and reserve the rulings on the relevancy until we get into the trial.

Mr. Mullen: You mean the Court passed on what you said there without passing on the relevancy?

Mr. Robertson: It has been doing it ever since we have been coming up here.

Mr. Mullen: If you have the right to ask those questions and ask that we now be required to reframe our answers, we have an equal right as to your interrogatories and not be put off to the time of trial. We want to bring that up.

Mr. Robertson: You can't bring up anything you want, I guess.

The Court: Gentlemen, the Court refuses to require the defendant to amplify that answer.
page 25 { Mr. Moore: How about consolidation, Your Honor?

The Court: Gentlemen, I am about ready to pass on the consolidation. The Court is of opinion that it would cause confusion and may cause delay and that it would be best to try this case separately and if you all will prepare a proper order—

Mr. Robertson: I will put that in this order I am working on.

The Court: There was also a motion to amend and non-suit.

Mr. Robertson: In view of the Court's ruling I don't know whether or not you gentlemen are going to press your motion to amend or non-suit.

Mr. Mullen: I wouldn't know. I will have to leave that to Fred.

The Court: Mr. Robert Pollard, if you will talk to Mr. Fred Pollard about that, it may be in view of the Court's ruling he will want to abandon it.

Mr. Mullen: I imagine he would. Of course, we note the exception.

Mr. Bryan: There is one other matter pending. In the interrogatories which the defendants propounded to the plaintiff we were asked as to whether the plaintiff—whether application had ever been made by certain labor organizations to become certified as the bargaining agent for the page 26 { employees of the plaintiff. That question was answered. Then the question was asked whether the National Labor Relations Board had ever, in fact, certified these labor organizations as bargaining agents for the plaintiff's employees. That question was answered. We asked the identical question back of each one of the defendants. I don't know the numbers of these interrogatories, but I suppose you remember the questions.

Mr. Mullen: I remember the questions and remember they were discussed very fully and the Court ruled on them.

Mr. Bryan: At the time the Court said it would not require the defendants to answer those questions, why then the answers which the plaintiff made to like questions of the defendants might be expunged.

Mr. Mullen: I beg your pardon; the Court ruled you had to answer them.

Mr. Bryan: But no final action has been taken on it. We would like to have those answers answered by the defendants; we think they are relevant.

Mr. Mullen: Your Honor, Fred argued that question. They are not pertinent so far as the defendant is concerned in the case of the plaintiff unless certain things had been done—I don't know the details of it. I don't handle our labor relations matters, but he explained it very fully and Your page 27 { Honor ruled on it and saw why there was a difference and why the question should be answered by them and not by the defendant. Now if the matter is going to be argued again, I would like for Fred to do so.

The Court: The argument pro and con was recorded in the record, was it not?

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

The Court: It may be best under the circumstances to continue this until January 6th and have the record written up and we will read the record back and see what discussion took place.

Mr. Bryan: I am not sure whether we were having minutes taken of those meetings or not.

Mr. Mullen: I am just wondering myself.

Mr. Bryan: That was one of the first meetings.

The Court: If it is not in the record the Court will have to hear you.

Mr. Robertson: I think I have enough pencil notes to recall it to everybody's memory.

The Court: Mr. Fred Pollard was one of the principal counsel in the case and I think it only fair that he be here to participate in it.

Mr. Bryan: I just want to bring it up because it ought to be disposed of.

The Court: All right, Gentlemen.

Transcript of a pre-trial conference in the above styled case before the Honorable Harold F. Snead, Judge of the Circuit Court of the City of Richmond, on January 6, 1951, at nine-thirty o'clock a. m., in chambers.

Appearances: Mr. Archibald G. Robertson, Mr. George E. Allen, Mr. T. Justin Moore, Jr., Counsel for complainant.

Mr. A. Hamilton Bryan, President of Laburnum Construction Company.

Mr. James Mullen, Mr. Crampton Harris, Mr. Robert N. Pollard, Jr., Counsel for defendants.

Mr. Welly K. Hopkins.

Mr. Harrison Combs.

page 2 } Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, as long as we are the plaintiff, I reckon we lead off in this conference.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Robertson: I am going to ask the Reporter to let the record show everybody that is here. Are you counsel in the case?

Mr. Hopkins: No, sir.

Mr. Robertson: Just as a spectator?

Mr. Mullen: They are down here with me helping in the case, but not going to appear in the trial.

Mr. Robertson: I just want the record to show why they happen to be here.

If Your Honor please, I made a notation here of several things which, according to my recollection, were to come up today. You remember a considerable time ago the Court ruled tentatively on granting a special jury and for us to bring the matter to the attention of the Court before the trial date.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Robertson: Mr. Edwards, the Deputy Clerk, called me about it one day last week—this week—and I told him I would be here Saturday morning and I was going to take it up with your Honor then.

page 3 } The Court: All right. The Court is of the same opinion, will grant a special jury, but may assess the costs against the party asking for it.

Mr. Robertson: Mr. Fred Pollard has called me two or more times regarding how the case is to be reported and whether or not we wanted a daily transcript from the Alderson Reporting Company in Washington at a charge of thirty dollars per day plus $2.00 per page for the original and three copies, plus 25 cents per page for any additional copies. I told him we would be willing to split it one third to us and two-thirds to them. I thought possibly if they had the original for the Court and one copy for each side it looked to me equitable by them getting the third copy and he said he said he was going to consider that and I suggested the whole thing go through Mr. Colton Williams as he was accustomed to dealing with them, it was in his jurisdiction, and Mr. Fred Pollard said he would talk to his clients and let me know.

Mr. Mullen: I see no reason why it should not be divided half and half. If we had to have separate stenographers, and all that, it would cost you at least 40 per cent of what this would be, maybe more. We see no reason why we should pay more than half of it.

Mr. Robertson: The only reason is that because every case I have been in—and there have been a number page 4 } where we had this kind of service—where there was more than one party they divided it on a pro rata basis, which would make it one and four. Mr. Fred Pollard said he didn't think that was fair. I then suggested two-thirds and one-third. He said he thought that was fair and he would recommend it.

Mr. Mullen: He talked it over with me and he had evidently changed his mind at the time he talked it over with me because he said he thought it should be half and half.

Mr. Robertson: Then he told me one thing and told you another thing.

Mr. Mullen: I said he changed his mind, which he had a right to do, of course, after considering it. I think it should be half and half.

Mr. Robertson: Very well, if you think that is fair, we will split it.

Mr. Mullen: I think it is fair.

Mr. Robertson: I think it unfair and unjust, but do it rather than quibble about any more non-essentials.

(Mr. Williams, the present Reporter, stated that he believed that the page rate was $2.25 rather than $2.00 as stated by Mr. Robertson.)

page 5 } The Court: What is next on the agenda?

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I would like to go back to that thing a minute. Will that entire transcript be charged to the losing party, or not?

The Court: I don't know.

Mr. Mullen: I don't think so. I don't think it is a Court cost. The Court doesn't have an official stenographer; this is private employment.

Mr. Robertson: It is ruled both ways in these cases.

The Court: I have never ruled on that point.

Mr. Robertson: Now, according to my recollection, the Court was going to announce at this conference its ruling on what portions of the minutes of the Executive Committee which were turned over to the Court the Court was going to allow, if any.

The Court: All right. Gentlemen, I have reviewed the minutes, which are voluminous, as you know—it was quite a task reading all of those minutes—and the Court has concluded not to grant Question No. 125 as asked for in the Interrogatories addressed to the defendant United Mine Workers of America, but will require the defendant United Mine Workers of America to answer the following question in page 6 } lieu of Question No. 125 as originally addressed to the defendant United Mine Workers of America:

“Furnish a copy of the minutes which include specific reference to District 50, United Mine Workers of America, or United Construction Workers, affiliated with United Mine Workers of America, of all meetings of the International Board of United Mine Workers of America held between the dates October 28, 1948, and August 4, 1949, and also since August 4, 1949."

Mr. Robertson: Could we agree here on the date when they will be furnished?

The Court: I don't think it is going to take too long, Mr. Mullen. I would suggest it could be done very easily within a week.

Mr. Mullen: As I understand, we are not to turn the minutes over to them, but we are—

The Court: Furnish copies.

Mr. Mullen: Certified copies of any pertaining to District 50 and to United Construction Workers?

The Court: Yes. I would say within one week from today.

Mr. Bryan: Will you give the dates again?

The Court: The same dates you had: October 28, 1948, to August 4, 1949, and also since August 4, 1949.

page 7 } Mr. Robertson: Now are you ready to go on to the next thing?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Robertson: You remember I stated I would undertake to prepare the order on these Interrogatories, bringing it down through our last pre-trial conference. I prepared such an order and Mr. Moore, Jr., and I have compared it for accuracy and I think it is substantially correct. I wanted Mr. Bryan to check it before I submitted it to the other side. He has not had an opportunity to do that and therefore he hasn't checked it for accuracy. That is why I have not submitted it to counsel for the other side. I suggest we leave a copy with the Court and with other counsel. I assume you will not want to enter it today before you have had an opportunity to check it for accuracy. As far as I know, it is accurate. How many copies do you want, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: I will take three, if you have plenty of them.

Mr. Robertson: All right. Now that is all I have on my list.

Mr. Mullen: Judge, when we were here the last time you asked if we wanted to take a non-suit in the case page 8 } brought here.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Mullen: I don't think Fred has ever told you—

Mr. Robertson: I can't hear you.

Mr. Mullen: The Judge asked if we wanted to take a non-suit. Yes, we want to do that. We had to elect between the one here and the one in the Federal Court. We will elect to take it here.

The Court: If you do that, you had better prepare an order.

Mr. Pollard: We will do that.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, Mr. Lewis has been summoned as a witness in this case—

Mr. Allen: By whom?

Mr. Mullen: By you—your side.

The Court: By the plaintiff.

Mr. Mullen: He was summoned for the 11th. When the case went over at our request we raised no question that the summons did not apply now; we raise no question about that.

Mr. Robertson: That is very generous. He sent word he would be here.

Mr. Mullen: Mr. Lewis is a very busy man. He is at this particular time really at the command of the executive officers of the United States Government. He is one of four labor leaders who, with a group of business men—Mr. Sloan, Chairman of General Motors; Mr. Fairless, of United States Steel; Mr. McCormick, of International Harvester; Mr. Brown, of Johns-Manville; William Green, Philip Murray, John L. Lewis and Mr. Hayes, President of the International Association—they have to meet all around the United States. In addition to that, he has to carry on this work of over 600,000 miners.

As an individual, he has no objection to testifying. What I wanted to see was if we couldn't stipulate as to what he would testify to be cause he is not a free agent at this time; he is being used in connection with preparation of the defense work and he is at their beck and call. There is nothing he could testify that has not already been covered in the Interrogatories. He knows nothing about this case whatever; never heard of it until suit was brought. I would like—and I think under pre-trial practice such matters are supposed to be entertained—I would like to ask counsel what they expect to prove by him to see if we can stipulate it.

Mr. Robertson: We won't agree to stipulate anything, if Your Honor please, and we will not state at this time what we expect to prove through Mr. Lewis. I would like to say this, that we tried literally for weeks and I think I am correct when I say months, to get personal service on Mr. Lewis at his home in Alexandria and couldn't get it. Finally, the officer nailed the summons on his door and my information is that he met Mr. Lewis on the street the following day and he acknowledged he had gotten it and said he would be here. Now I don't see where Mr. Lewis is above—of course, I have expressed the opinion in these conferences he wouldn't be here, and I don't know why he is entitled to any more consideration than any other humble citizen just because he occupies a seat of the mighty.

I am perfectly willing to have it understood if Mr. Lewis will come on call of say a day's notice, or whatever the Court thinks is reasonable notice, but I don't see why Mr. Lewis should be permitted just to bow himself out.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, may I ask Mr. Hopkins as to Mr. Lewis—the way he is tied up?

The Court: Certainly.

Mr. Hopkins: I will be glad, Your Honor, to state the situation in reference to Mr. Lewis as we know it.

In the first instance, I think it could well be repeated he has no knowledge of the facts in this case either before, during nor subsequent to the incidents that seem to have given rise to this alleged cause of action. All that he knows about it would be subsequent to the institution of the page 11 } litigation and that would be by hearsay in an administrative capacity, only. He could testify to no facts at all concerning this occurrence. Whatever matters are known to him would be those, and those alone, that are covered in the answers to the various interrogatories that have been propounded to the defendants here.

His position is such that his presence in Washington and other places is requisite, not only to the appropriate and proper administration of the organization that he heads, but to the individual members who constitute that organization, scattered in many jurisdictions. So his commitments administratively and his duties require as close attention as is possible to give, but in addition to that, as Mr. Mullen has stated to you, sir, his commitments not only to Government but to various leaders in industry are manifold, are constant, and are of uncertain date and duration.

That is evidenced I think, in the reference Mr. Mullen made to the fact that on last Wednesday evening he was committed and did attend, according to my personal knowledge and now proclaimed by the press, a meeting in New York at the Union League Club called at the behest of certain leaders in industry for the avowed purpose of public policy, that meeting being called under the auspices of Mr. Alfred P. Sloan, of General Motors, attended by Mr. Eric Johnson of the page 12 } moving picture industry, Mr. Wilson, of General Electric, Mr. McCormick of International Harvester, and Mr. Fowler, I believe, of the DuPont interests, and others, for the avowed purpose of undertaking to obtain agreements that would run to the welfare of the public policy of this country in these times that is obvious to all of us requires attention.

That epitomizes some of the commitments he has. In addition to that, Your Honor, from day to day there is a constant flux and turn of events in Washington that require Mr. Lewis' attention, both personally and his advice, in reference to matters governmental pertaining to the freezing of wages, the setting of prices, the institution and putting into effect of various governmental agencies controlling the internal affairs of domestic economy of this country, and from time to time, sometimes in public, very often in person, he is requested to attend such conferences, and very often on short call. He undertakes to respond and to give his time and talent as opportunity allows.

Now certain gentlemen may figure that his advice is not well taken, but I say to you, sir, that it is much sought and is well heeded in many high places. He has no desire to evade any mandate of this Court or any legal writ that has been served upon him, neither has he ever avoided the service or acceptance of any writ—any legal writ of any page 13 } Court. He does not desire to do that now. We merely assert that if he had knowledge of facts or was a pertinent witness here of matters that were not otherwise covered we would not be here today making this statement that I am now making to Your Honor because obviously if it were pertinent and not provable by any other source he would be willing, both personally and professionally, to come and give such evidence as this Court might see fit to accept, but such not being the case, as we know it here, but his commitments and his duties being otherwise, we respectfully submit justifies Mr. Mullen and counsel for the defendants to make respectful inquiry of plaintiff's counsel, through the Court, as to what they do expect to prove through this witness, what he can and would testify other than that which is already available to them in the answers to these various interrogatories.

That being so, we respectfully request and I would, sir, in support of Mr. Mullen, ask these gentlemen what is it they expect to prove over and above that which is available to them. If they can so state, and will so state, and if it is within the bounds of reason, I take it we would, speaking for the defendants here, undertake to arrive at that stipulation, and that is not only for the convenience of the witness Lewis, it is for the convenience of this Court. It runs to the pro-page 14 } priety of orderly procedure I am sure, as Your Honor recognizes, to shorten the trial, and it is for those reasons, and those reasons alone, not for delay and evasion, that we appear here today and make this request.

I think that epitomizes our position, Mr. Mullen.

Mr. Robertson: Now I don't know whether that speech wound up with a rhetorical question or an actual question, but you have the right to close and I want to be heard and I promise not to make any such speech as Your Honor has heard.

We have gotten far afield from the record. So I think I am justified in saying there are many people in the ordinary walks of life who think Mr. Lewis regards himself as above the law and it is common talk around Richmond that he will never be here to this trial because he wouldn't want to come. Now he is not above the law and, representing just a garden variety Virginia plaintiff, we don't think he has got any right, through his counsel or anybody else, to bow himself out in any such high-handed way as he is now trying to do. Who says his testimony here is not needed? Is he to judge that or the Court? Is his counsel to tell the Court that, or his counsel to tell counsel that, and say that he knows nothing about it?

I don't care whether he knows the facts or not. I dare say there is not a living man in America that knows page 15 } as much as he does about the entire relationship of these three defendants because he dominates and strides above all of them, if I may follow the press and some of the Court decisions, and to say he is so important that he can't attend a Court of this Commonwealth when he lives up here at Alexandria, when he is within two hours and a half automobile attendance from here, when he is within forty-five minutes airplane time, when he can be reached constantly by telephone, I think is as high-handed a proposition as I ever heard. We want him here available to us for cross examination as a hostile witness regarding the entire relations of these three defendants. That is all I have to say no matter what anybody else says.

Mr. Allen: I concur in exactly what you say. I might add this. With the greatest respect for this Court and every other Court of this Commonwealth, notwithstanding the late provision for pre-trial conference, it is a matter for counsel to stipulate or not stipulate on a subject and the Court has no power or authority under our practice to compel counsel to stipulate against their judgment. We would do it if we could in justification to our client, but if we did not feel that way about it, then we just don't think we ought to be required by the Court to stipulate.

Mr. Robertson: Let me add this, and I promise not to say anything more. I have no desire to make Mr. Lewis come here and sit through a trial that may last several weeks. I am perfectly willing to agree Mr. Lewis may on any reasonable notice come and be put on the stand and testify and leave, like we do under our practice all the time, but I am not willing to be put in the position where he is such a big shot he finds it inconvenient to come to this Court or he is so indispensable to our national economy that the whole thing will founder if he spends several hours in Richmond.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, we did not ask that his testimony not be taken. We asked them simply to see if we could agree to stipulate for the reasons that have been very fully stated here. Of course, Mr. Robertson has made a great many slurring remarks about Mr. Lewis during these conferences. He has no basis for them whatever. Nor does Mr. Lewis want to evade anything that is proper.

If they won't stipulate, of course, I know Your Honor can't force them to stipulate. It is a matter put up to them, I thought with courtesy to all, in a hope we could agree. Of course, we haven't been able to stipulate anything. I have made several propositions to stipulate and they have all been turned down.

I might say this, that really the man they want, I imagine, is the real administrative International officer, who would be much more familiar with the organization and with the matters they have asked about in these interrogatories than would Mr. Lewis and I was wondering if they would let him be substituted—Mr. Kennedy. He is the administrative officer.

Mr. Robertson: He wouldn't carry the weight Mr. Lewis would. You know that as well as I do.

Mr. Mullen: Yes, he would.

The Court: He is Vice-President, Tom Kennedy, isn't he?

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

Mr. Bryan: Do you agree to have Mr. Tom Kennedy here?

Mr. Mullen: I think Mr. Kennedy is going to be here.

Mr. Robertson: That wasn't the question. Will you agree to have him here?

Mr. Mullen: Do you want to trade Mr. Lewis for Mr. Kennedy?

Mr. Robertson: No.

Mr. Harris: Let's decide one question at a time, then.

The Court: Do you all care to comment on that?

Mr. Robertson: We won't agree. We just asked that question to show where all this cooperation was coming from the other side.

Mr. Bryan: I don't see how it is possible to stipulate in advance exactly what will be asked Mr.

Lewis. It will largely depend on the way the trial develops. It has been our experience from time to time that you will ask a witness a question about the inter-relationship between these defendants and the witness will simply say; "I don't know; you will have to find that out from Washington." The only way to avoid that situation is to have one of the top ranking officials or to have the top ranking official present.

The Court: Gentlemen, if counsel won't agree to stipulate I don't see it is anything the Court can do. If you all care to stipulate, it is satisfactory with the Court.

Mr. Mullen: What I would like to do would be to be able to fix a day that Mr. Lewis could be here so he could make his other engagements. I don't know how long this case is going to last. It is going to take maybe two weeks just to read their depositions and interrogatories and have objections made because there are already hundreds of pages of depositions and nearly every question has an objection to it. If we could fix a time and say we would have Mr. Lewis here—the case opens on the 22nd; have him here on Monday the 29th—

Mr. Robertson: We can't do that, Your Honor. For instance, I think Mr. Mullen is all wrong in his statement as how long it is going to take to read these depositions and these interrogatories and answers.

The Court: May I ask how many pages of depositions there are? I haven't looked at them.

Mr. Robertson: I haven't counted them; I should say three or four hundred, and I think that phase of the case, unless they string it out, is going to move much faster than Mr. Mullen said. I am unwilling just to take a guess at it and agree to that. I will gladly agree to give them reasonable notice.

The Court: How about two days' notice, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: That would be satisfactory.

Mr. Robertson: That is all right.

Mr. Hopkins: At least that much, if we can.

The Court: I will see how the trial is running and when we get into the trial we can then better tell.

Mr. Mullen: If you give us two days, that will be all right.

The Court: He can testify and depart.

Mr. Mullen: I have just referred to the summons; I assume this takes the place of his coming here on the 22nd?

Mr. Robertson: Yes, that is right.

The Court: That is agreed among counsel.

page 20 } Mr. Mullen: The second matter I think well to bring up is this. We have quite a number of witnesses to bring here. I think to put on their case in chief is going to be pretty long, as Mr. Robertson says. I know it took me several days to read what is already here. When it is read and commented on by you in the trial it will take a long time. We don't want the expense of having those men sitting here or disrupting their work. What we would like to see if Your Honor will not agree that when they put on their case in chief we will then have an adjournment for one day so we can bring our people here.

Mr. Robertson: We will agree to that.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Mullen: Now, if Your Honor please, we want to file some amended grounds of defense and would like to have a date fixed by which we can do it.

Mr. Robertson: If you have got them ready we would like to see them now.

Mr. Mullen: I do not. We didn't discuss it until—

Mr. Robertson: You are not putting us on notice for a request for a continuance, are you?

Mr. Mullen: No.

page 21 } The Court: The Court is very pleased with the cooperation received from counsel on both sides in expediting this matter.

Mr. Mullen: I don't mind telling you they are purely technical.

Mr. Robertson: What are they?

Mr. Mullen: Some reference to certain sections of the United States Constitution.

Mr. Robertson: They don't worry me.

The Court: Will you file them by Wednesday of next week?

Mr. Harris: Judge, what we plan to do, Mr. Combs has a brief on that subject; I catch the plane back to Alabama in the morning and we had planned for him to send me my brief and I will draft them and send them to counsel. Now he is sending it by air mail and I won't get it until Tuesday.

Mr. Robertson: Will you send me a copy of it at the same time so we can be preparing ourselves on it?

Mr. Harris: They will be tentative until Mr. Mullen approves it. I will send you a copy of it; I don't mind you seeing it.

The Court: What is the earliest time you can get it?

Mr. Mullen: We would like to have until next Friday or Saturday.

page 22 } The Court: How about Friday?

Mr. Mullen: We will do that.

Mr. Robertson: Of course, we are not agreeing they can file them. They can lodge them subject to all proper objections by the plaintiff and then the Court will rule whether they will be filed or not. I am not waiving any rights.

Mr. Mullen: I think any time prior to trial you can file amended grounds of defense if it doesn't take you by surprise.

The Court: It is in the discretion of the Court.

Mr. Robertson: It is largely in the discretion of the Court and we simply want to see what they do.

The Court: In other words, you reserve the right to object to the filing; may object or may not.

Mr. Robertson: I think I can cover my position, that I don't agree to anything that I don't say I expressly agree to.

Mr. Mullen: In other words, you reserve the right to object to the filing?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Harris: Judge, those defenses will not be merely on the Constitution, but also on any applicable Federal law. There are some Federal questions we want to raise under the Norris-LaGuardia Act and under the Taft-Hartley page 23 } Act and the Clayton Act, with some of the decisions that may be of importance.

Mr. Robertson: I would like—may save you some work—to call your attention to this fact, that it has been agreed of record in these pre-trial conferences that this case is governed so far as the substantive law is concerned by the law of Kentucky and so far as the procedural law is concerned, by the law of Virginia, and the stenographic record of these pre-trial conferences will show that fact. I mean it may save you some hours work if you bear that in mind.

Mr. Mullen: I don't understand that precludes us from raising any Federal question—

Mr. Robertson: I don't either.

Mr. Mullen: —and having it a part of the record. In fact, I think in several cases in the conferences we have raised such Federal questions.

Mr. Robertson: When are you going to get us the grounds of defense?

The Court: On or before Friday. Friday is the 12th. Can you gentlemen think of anything you can stipulate to shorten this trial any and save time?

Mr. Bryan: I have one question, Your Honor. We are having photo copies made of certain portions of the United Mine Workers Journal and other journals which page 24 } we think will help to prove our case. Will there be any question raised, Mr. Mullen, as to the accuracy of those copies?

Mr. Mullen: Not if we are given opportunity to compare them.

The Court: I thought that was agreed.

Mr. Allen: That was stipulated at a former hearing.

Mr. Mullen: Once more, I want to say right there those morgues, as they are called, of the newspapers have been in my office ever since we filed the answers and stated they were available for your inspection.

Mr. Bryan: That is the first I knew of that.

Mr. Mullen: The right is set out fully in the papers and that they were at my office and I wondered why you hadn't been there. That is why I brought it up.

Mr. Mullen: At the last hearing after they had objected—I gave notice at the last conference we had inasmuch as they had taken up our answers and asked the Court to say whether they were complete or incomplete, that I would do the same with regard to theirs. I have just a few objections to them and would like now to take them up. I furnished copies of those objections at the time it first came up.

page 25 } Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I don't object to Mr. Mullen stating any objection that he has got—as many, as often and as long as he wants to, but I understand and have understood and I think the Court has said here over and over and over again that except within the broad scope of the answers that the Court has already directed to be made, that the Court was reserving its rulings on all objections by all parties as to the competency of any question or answer or other testimony until the progress of the trial and all these questions and answers that the Court has up to this time ruled must or must not be answered, that they are all subject to the final ruling of the Court in the trial, and if you change your mind that you rule it all out or all in.

The Court: If I gather what Mr. Mullen is about to say, he is attacking the sufficiency of the answers, the same as Mr. Bryan did.

Mr. Mullen: Exactly.

Mr. Robertson: All right, sir.

The Court: All right, Mr. Mullen; go ahead.

Mr. Robertson: Will you tell me which ones you refer to?

Mr. Mullen: I have furnished you all with copies.

Now our first objection is to Answer 1(d).

Mr. Robertson: Which interrogatory is that?
page 26 } Mr. Mullen: Of course, you have your first answers and then further answers. This is the original one that you filed. Later on, it reaches the others.

The Court: How many do you have?

Mr. Mullen: It is very short.

Mr. Robertson: You are talking about the answers of Laburnum?

Mr. Mullen: To the interrogatories furnished.

Mr. Robertson: Is it headed this way: "Answer of Laburnum Construction Corporation to Summons of the Defendants to Interrogatories"?

Mr. Mullen: Correct.

Mr. Robertson: And it is 1(d)?

Mr. Mullen: 1(d) is the first one.

(Mr. Mullen read the question and answer.)

The first sentence answers the question; the rest of it is surplusage; doesn't refer to that contract. That contract was for a specific amount and nothing else and for a specific piece of work and they have gone outside of that and have put in some other argument.

The Court: Mr. Mullen, I think it was understood that the question of surplusage—that we would take that up at the trial. Is that my understanding?

Mr. Robertson: It is mine.

The Court: We went into one or two of these on page 27 } previous hearings and that was my recollection.

Mr. Allen: That is right.

Mr. Mullen: That is surplusage, if Your Honor wants to take it up later. The next is 1(f).

The Court: I believe that is the same—

Mr. Mullen: He again answers the question and adds a lot of surplusage by way of argument and additional matter in it.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Mullen: The same thing as to 1(h).

The Court: I see.

Mr. Mullen: The first sentence is the full answer to it; the rest of it is not. Next is 2(d).

The Court: It is surplusage marked in the column here.

Mr. Mullen: Yes, the first sentence answers the question; the rest of it is just trying to get in evidence they might not be able to get in any other way.

The Court: Then, if I can help you, the next one here is 2(f).

Mr. Robertson: I have a question mark after every one of those; they raised all of those questions before.

Mr. Allen: And you ruled just as you rule now.

Mr. Mullen: I beg your pardon; I haven't taken them up before. You have it because I furnished you with page 28 } a copy of my objections and we didn't go through them.

In 2(h) we have the same thing.

Now 8(a) is not responsive to the question.

(Mr. Mullen read the question and answer.)

That wasn't the question; we asked them if they were operating—

Mr. Robertson: It is the same old story of ruling on it when we get in the trial. Whether they were or weren't would be a question of law for the Court.

The Court: No, I think this is a little different from surplusage.

Mr. Robertson: All right, Your Honor.

Mr. Mullen: We were required to amend our answers.

The Court: In other words, you think that answer ought to be yes or no?

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

The Court: Do you want to address yourself to that?

Mr. Robertson: I am perfectly willing to answer it yes, we were.

The Court: It calls for a yes or no answer, as I read it.

Mr. Robertson: All right, the answer is yes, right now.

Mr. Mullen: You are going to answer that yes? page 29 } Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Mullen: Now 12(a) in the further answers.

(Mr. Mullen read the question and the answer.)

The question was who informed whom that the workmen were members of the local union of A. F. of L. Now in the course of it he says Mr. Bryan informed them, but just uses general terms as to others. Either he knows or doesn't know and he should so state in answer to that question. Our question was for specific names of those who told whom they were members of the A. F. of L. union.

Mr. Robertson: I think that has already come up in another phase of this litigation. I think that is an answer to the question. It pins the responsibility right square down on Bryan. It doesn't call the roll of our witnesses. I don't understand that we are required to do that and I understand it came up here, according to my recollection, in the other pre-trial conferences, that we didn't want to do that, among other reasons, for the fact that the pressure—and I speak by virtue of my personal knowledge of personal trips to the locality where this thing happened—we think that is necessary to protect these men against that and I don't know of any legal reason that he has a right to call for it in any more detail than here, certainly not before the time of the trial, and we have got that legal reason and that practical reason for not doing it.

page 30 } Mr. Mullen: We have been compelled to give the names of everybody you asked about, names of some 200 members of the local union of United Construction Workers.

Mr. Robertson: We gave you the names of all our workmen. You are having a witness conference out there in Kentucky today and you can question them.

Mr. Mullen: Why do you think we have it?

Mr. Robertson: I was just told so.

Mr. Mullen: I suppose you have some spies out there telling you everything that happens.

The Court: The Court is only concerned with the question here.

Mr. Robertson: I happen to know you have—not you but the defendants out there had theirs spying on us.

Mr. Mullen: I think if that is true—I don't know, but it would be kind of the kettle calling the pot black.

Mr. Robertson: It might be. Sometimes you have to fight fire with fire.

Mr. Mullen: This is important, who told whom your employees were members of the A. F. of L. union.

Mr. Robertson: I think if you will read the depositions you would find they are all answered in there. You haven't read them, have you?

page 31 } Mr. Mullen: I read part of them; I got sleepy

Mr. Robertson: Go ahead and read the other part and you will find it in there.

Mr. Mullen: That is all I have to say on that particular question.

The Court: Do you gentlemen have anything further to say?

Mr. Allen: Yes, let me say this. Our right to call for the membership in the union and locals and the officers of the union and things like that are different from the right to demand a list of witnesses. Under all the rules applicable in pre-trial conferences that we have now or every had in this country, no lawyer has been required to give the list of the names of his witnesses and it has been expressly ruled on in the Federal cases where the pre-trial conference has been in operation for ten or twelve years, that you can't make the other side give you the names and the addresses of its witnesses, and that is just what he is calling for: The names of the persons who told whom.

Mr. Robertson: We don't want you to put the heat on them out there and make them fade out.

Mr. Mullen: We are dealing with interrogatories now and the interrogatories have been argued by you so you could get any information you wanted under them. You have argued page 32 } that from time to time very fully and the question where you have alleged in your notice of motion that whom was told by someone that these employees were members of the local A. F. of L. union, we have a right in the interrogatories to ask who told whom that. That is an important question.

The Court: The Court will refuse to require the plaintiff to amplify that answer.

Mr. Harris: May we reserve an exception?

The Court: Of course.

Mr. Mullen: It is understood we are reserving all exceptions.

The Court: To all adverse rulings, as I understand.

Mr. Mullen: Now question 13(a). That was asked as to the name of the Kentucky State Officer to whom the plaintiff is alleged to have appealed for assistance. They answered that and went on with a long argument which undertakes to bring in hearsay testimony, among other things.

(Mr. Mullen read the question and answer.)

We submit that is not an answer to that question.

The Court: Read the question again.

Mr. Mullen: The question is what is the name of the Kentucky State Police Officer to whom the plaintiff allegedly appealed for assistance.

page 33 } Mr. Robertson: All that brings up the question whether or not it is surplusage.

The Court: He mentioned Howard, didn't he?

Mr. Mullen: Yes, but then tries to get in all that—

The Court: That is surplusage.

Mr. Mullen: They know they couldn't testify to that and they are trying to get it in indirectly.

The Court: I will pass on that along with the other questions.

Mr. Mullen: The final one is 14(a) in the original answers.

(Mr. Mullen read the question and answer.)

Now I will come back to the question; they haven't answered it.

Mr. Robertson: No, if Your Honor please, that comes back down to surplusage. That tells the story. That story is repeated in their own depositions which you attended the taking of. That is our answer to that question. That is all the answer we have got. If it is not in there, it didn't occur.

Mr. Mullen: It is not responsive to the question at all.

Mr. Robertson: It certainly is. Like some of your answers, we didn't like the answers.

page 34 } Mr. Mullen: Let's take each one up and see:
"What were the bids, if any, made by the plaintiff on such contracts?"

Mr. Robertson: Which contracts?

Mr. Mullen: Contracts for work which would have resulted in large profits to plaintiff; dealing with something speculative now.

Mr. Robertson: We have the Virginia decisions on that. It is not speculative and they made no bids other than those.

Mr. Mullen: I thought you said Kentucky law governed it.

Mr. Robertson: Under the Kentucky law, too.

Mr. Mullen: You haven't answered that question; "What were the bids, if any, made by the plaintiff on such contracts"?

Mr. Robertson: There weren't any except such as shown there.

The Court: Then it would be none, except as shown in the answer?

Mr. Mullen: The answer shows no bids. Your answer is you either made bids or didn't make bids.

Mr. Bryan: "At page 14 of the notice of motion for judgment it is alleged and further caused plaintiff to lose other contracts for work which would have resulted in large profits to plaintiff." I think that is the answer.

Mr. Mullen: I don't. Go further down. "What bids, if any, were made by the plaintiff on such contracts? On what basis were such bids made?"

Mr. Bryan: What other contracts?

Mr. Mullen: The contracts you claim you lost?

Mr. Robertson: That is our answer and the only answer we have.

Mr. Mullen: You haven't answered that.

Mr. Robertson: The Court can rule on it when we come to it. I can tell you no other bids except these.

The Court: May that be the answer to the question?

Mr. Bryan: What is that?

The Court: No other bids except those set forth in the answer.

Mr. Bryan: I would have to check my record to be sure that is absolutely correct.

The Court: Let the Court rule and this is the ruling of the Court, that the plaintiff answer that question.

Mr. Bryan: What question?

The Court: What were the bids, if any, made by the plaintiff on such contracts.

Mr. Mullen: If they did make any bids, on what basis were such bids made? He can answer that.

page 36 } Mr. Robertson: I told you, subject to correction, there was nothing else except as set out in that answer.

Mr. Mullen: I know that, but I want it on paper.

Mr. Robertson: I don't blame you.

The Court: The same ruling in regard to that question.

Mr. Mullen: "What contracts, if any, is it alleged defendants caused plaintiff to lose on which the plaintiff didn't bid?"

Mr. Robertson: Subject to correction, none except as shown in that answer.

The Court: Same ruling.

Mr. Mullen: That is all I have.

Mr. Robertson: When you make it look like we are quibbling I want to assure you we are not.

Mr. Mullen: I know you are not, but I want it in the evidence.

Mr. Bryan: I have one other thing. With further reference to these photo copies we were talking about I am not sure which copies you have in your office. We have had some copies made up probably you don't have in your office and can't be obtained anywhere except from either the Department of Labor Library or the Congressional Library.

Mr. Mullen: I have whatever is in existence.
page 37 } I have the bound volumes of those magazines you all called for. Whether they are complete, I don't know. I think perhaps you will agree that they are not complete.

Mr. Bryan: The point I am trying to make is we have photo copies of some things that you probably don't have at your office. Will any question be raised as to the accuracy of those?

Mr. Mullen: If you furnish them to us, we will have them examined at the same source you got them from.

The Court: As I understood at the previous hearing, you would have photostatic copies made and you would turn them over to Mr. Mullen and he would have them checked and, if accurate, there would be no objection.

Mr. Bryan: I just don't want to have any misunderstanding.

The Court: I think it would be well to get with Mr. Mullen the first of the week.

Mr. Bryan: It was suggested we have some reporter go to Washington and copy portions of the articles, but we didn't do that.

Mr. Mullen: We won't stand on photo copies. We will compare them, and we don't object to the accuracy—

The Court: But reserve the right to object to the admissibility?

Transcript of a pre-trial conference in the above styled case before the Honorable Harold F. Snead, Judge of the Circuit Court of the City of Richmond, on January 15, 1951.

Appearances: Mr. Archibald G. Robertson, Mr. George E. Allen, Mr. T. Justin Moore, Jr., Counsel for complainant.

Mr. A. Hamilton Bryan, President, of Laburnum Construction Company.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard, Mr. Robert N. Pollard, Jr., Counsel for defendants.

page 2 } Mr. Fred Pollard: Judge, at the hearing at which

I was not present on January 6th the defendants said they would like to amend their grounds of defense and the order of the Court was that it should be filed not later than the 12th of January, and it was filed by that time and copies were served on the plaintiff and the additional defenses are two short defenses which raise Federal questions, but which would not require any new evidence to be introduced by either party, and as I understand the rules of procedure as laid down by the Supreme Court of Virginia the grounds of defense can be amended in the discretion of the Court, and therefore we respectfully request Your Honor to enter an order permitting these defenses to be filed.

Mr. Robertson: If the Court please, the plaintiff opposes the filing of these additional defenses. The Court will recall it has been agreed of record by counsel for all parties that this case is controlled by the substantive law of Kentucky and the procedural law of Virginia and this is an attempt at this late date to inject into the case Federal statutes that are not properly in this case to change the theory of their defense and to confuse the issues and we think it amounts to a misjoinder of defenses, and we oppose it for all the reasons I have stated.

The Court: Unless you have something further page 3 } to say, I will allow them to file the additional grounds of defense.

Mr. Robertson: We note the exception to protect the record.

Mr. Allen: I think we should also object upon the ground that, irrespective of what view that you take of the merits of the defenses, they come too late; the pleadings have long since been made up and this case is scheduled to begin trial on Monday and is scheduled to require three weeks and we think that the filing of grounds at this time comes too late, and we think also that there is nothing in any of the grounds that is applicable to the facts of this case, and, of course, we note an exception to Your Honor's ruling.

Mr. Fred Pollard: Judge, I understood you to say you would permit the defendants to file these grounds of defense, but you would not rule at this time as to whether or not the defendants could rely on these defenses at the trial. If you are not going to let us rely on them, I don't see your purpose in allowing us to file them.

The Court: The Court may allow you to rely on them at the trial. The Court is not advised as to what pattern this trial is going to take and will, of course, reserve its opinion—

Mr. Fred Pollard: Then you will not allow us to page 4 } amend the grounds of defense?

The Court: I am permitting you to amend the grounds of defense. That does not mean the Court may not during the trial rule they are not applicable to this case.

Mr. Robertson: It is nothing to rule on now; there is no evidence here.

Mr. Fred Pollard: You are allowing us to amend the grounds of defense?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Fred Pollard: And all you are saying you don't know at this time whether or not it is a good defense?

The Court: That is true. I haven't passed on any of your defenses.

Mr. Fred Pollard: There is one part of the record at the pre-trial conference of January 6, 1951, I would like to bring to your attention. Beginning on page 22 Mr. Harris said:

“Mr. Harris: Judge, those defenses will not be merely on the Constitution, but also on any applicable Federal law. There are some Federal questions we want to raise under the Norris-LaGuardia Act and under the Taft-Hartley Act and the Clayton Act, with some of the decisions that may be of importance.

"Mr. Robertson: I would like—may save you some work—to call your attention to this fact, that it has been page 5 } agreed of record in these pre-trial conferences that this case is governed so far as the substantive law is concerned by the law of Kentucky and so far as the procedural law is concerned, by the law of Virginia, and the stenographic record of these pre-trial conferences will show that fact. I mean it may save you some hours work if you bear that in mind.

"Mr. Mullen: I don't understand that precludes us from raising any Federal question—

"Mr. Robertson: I don't either.

"Mr. Mullen: —and having it a part of the record. In fact, I think in several cases in the conferences we have raised such Federal questions."

Mr. Robertson: Are you trying to argue I have conceded some point there because I haven't?

Mr. Fred Pollard: Judge, I just bring this to your attention that the record speaks for itself.

Mr. Robertson: They can raise it now; they raise it by asking the Court to allow them to file the grounds of defense and I think the record shows it, and I don't think it is proper to say we are trying to say you are getting away with anything.

Mr. Fred Pollard: I am not trying to get away with anything.

Mr. Allen: As I understand it, Your Honor, will page 6 } withhold your ruling thereon. It may develop upon the trial from circumstances that may be shown and technicalities that may arise and complexities, and so forth, that the pleading came late. As I understand, you are reserving all of those decisions, as has become the practice now almost invariably in the Federal courts and in some cases in the State courts. You are allowing them to file them. As to what you are going to do with them later on, whether they are going to be permitted to rely on them on any ground is another question.

The Court: That is my understanding.

Mr. Fred Pollard: Judge, that is a different understanding from the one I just asked you about.

The Court: If I understood you correctly, Mr. Allen, you stated that the Court was permitting the defendants to file the amended grounds of defense and during the trial the Court would reserve the right to pass on whether or not they could rely on these grounds of defense.

Mr. Robertson: That covers everything under the sun.

Mr. Fred Pollard: And it is also my understanding by relying on them that these two additional defenses are in the same position as the original seven defenses.

The Court: The Court has not passed on any of page 7 <sup>1</sup> the defenses relied upon by the defendants and I am advised that in the original grounds of defense there were seven defenses set out—

Mr. Fred Pollard: There are eight.

The Court: Now the Court is permitting the defendants to file an amended ground of defense which includes two additional grounds. That makes ten grounds in all and the Court has not passed upon whether or not any of the grounds are good, but will do so when the proper time comes during the trial.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Bryan: I would like to take up this question in connection with the trial of the case. When the various depositions were taken the defendants always took the position that they were entitled to each have one representative present upon the trial, that there were three separate defendants. Of course, they are closely allied together—

Mr. Fred Pollard: That is a matter of proof.

Mr. Bryan: —in such a way it might be treated as one organization or one defendant. Now at the trial of this case I would very much like to have present in the courtroom a boy named Maynard Regan, who is the Chief Clerk. He will be a witness—

The Court: For whom?

Mr. Bryan: For Laburnum Construction Company, page 8 <sup>1</sup> the plaintiff, but he has done a lot of work in connection with helping with various papers and so forth and I would want somebody there in that capacity. He is the best man I have got for that. I think it would facilitate the trial and make it lots easier.

The Court: Do you gentlemen care to comment on that?

Mr. Fred Pollard: Yes, sir. We couldn't agree to that. Of course, we would be willing to limit ourselves to one representative if they would be willing to limit themselves to one.

The Court: The general practice is to allow one representative of each party to be present in court.

Mr. Allen: It is entirely within the discretion of Your Honor, as I understand the law, to determine whether under the peculiar circumstances this special assistant to Mr. Bryan should stay in court.

Mr. Robertson: We can adjourn and take time, if necessary, to get the papers together. I think it is a fair proposition, one representative to each side.

The Court: That is the general rule. If you gentlemen can agree otherwise, it is satisfactory to the Court.

Mr. Fred Pollard: Your Honor, I understand that each of the defendants is entitled to one representative.

page 9 { Mr. Bryan: You mean you expect to have three there?

Mr. Fred Pollard: I don't know what we expect to have. We insist we have the right to have three.

The Court: As presently advised, there are three defendants. I don't know what the evidence will prove, but there are three defendants as far as the record discloses and each defendant would be entitled to one representative.

Mr. Robertson: I submit without reference to either Mr. Bryan or Mr. Allen, that is the rule, I think. If they differ with me, I would like to have them speak.

Mr. Allen: I don't differ with Mr. Robertson on that, but I don't think this is the ordinary case. The record itself so far shows that the cooperation between these defendants and the connection is so close that it is almost one and the same.

Mr. Fred Pollard: Judge, I don't think it is proper for Mr. Allen to be up here arguing the case at this time.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, will you let me speak to my associates for a minute?

The Court: Yes.

(Mr. Robertson and his associates retired from chambers and then returned.)

page 10 { Mr. Bryan: I was just thinking about the mechanics of it; it would make it a whole lot easier to have somebody who knew about it.

Mr. Robertson: We are in accord; you will have three, we will have one.

Mr. Fred Pollard: Now I would like to bring this up. Inasmuch as there are three defendants, we would like to have the right—I don't know that we would do it—for each defendant to have its own counsel and, as such, each counsel would have the right to cross examine.

Mr. Robertson: If I was the Court I wouldn't rule on that until you get there. Whenever I thought the witness had been properly cross-examined, I would cut it off and when I thought he hadn't I would let it go on. After all, this is a garden variety of tort action.

Mr. Allen: But, Your Honor, we should certainly object to Mr. Robertson cross examining a witness that is put on by the United Construction Workers and then for Mr. Pollard to have the same right to cross examine that witness that we have. I don't think that that would be a fair way to conduct the trial.

Mr. Fred Pollard: If you want to drop two of the defendants, that is all right with us.

Mr. Allen: I think the Judge can pass on that when the time comes.

page 11 } Mr. Robertson: I think we are just setting up straw men to knock them down. When you get to the end of a fair cross examination and keep trying to go over old straw I think the Court will quit it and the counsel will suit it rather than irritate the Jury. I think we are making trouble out of nothing.

The Court: We all want to attempt to expedite the trial of this case.

Mr. Fred Pollard: I want to point out this. Say the cross examination of Mr. Bryan may take two days and may go into several hundred pages, I understand the law to be that only one attorney for the same party may cross examine. It may be we would like in planning our work for Mr. Mullen to cross examine on one phase, Mr. Harris on another and maybe I on another.

The Court: There would be no repetition?

Mr. Fred Pollard: No.

Mr. Robertson: I suggest you just defer your ruling on that and rule what is right when the situation arises.

The Court: That probably would be the advisable thing to do rather than rule at this moment, but Mr. Pollard has stated there would be no repetition, that your request may be that you cross examine on one point, Colonel Harris examine on another point and maybe Mr. Mullen would want to page 12 } cross examine on another point and there would be no repetition.

Mr. Fred Pollard: Yes, sir, there would be no repetition.

Mr. Bryan: You all represent all three defendants, don't you?

Mr. Moore: You are counsel of record for all three defendants.

Mr. Fred Pollard: So does Colonel Harris.

Mr. Moore: And it is so stated in the order of the Court.

The Court: I don't recall.

Mr. Robertson: Yes, sir, that is right; I told them to put it that way.

Mr. Fred Pollard: That is true, but each defendant is entitled to an attorney.

Mr. Allen: Not if he employed a firm of attorneys or two or three firms to represent that one client. We have run across that a lot of times.

Mr. Robertson: I still think you are making trouble over nothing.

Mr. Allen: I say to pass on it when the time comes.

The Court: You gentlemen may look into the matter and see if you have any authority and submit it to me at page 13 } that time. Anything that would be helpful to the Court will be appreciated.

Mr. Bryan: We don't want our witnesses harrassed by a series of cross examinations by a dozen lawyers.

The Court: Do you care to comment any further, Mr. Pollard?

Mr. Fred Pollard: No, sir. We would say in any cross examination we have no desire to create any repetition.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Robertson: It is very obvious—you can see what is coming up there. I can't remember the case, but I think Mr. Allen knows all the cases, and Mr. Moore. I think there is a case in the Court of Appeals that approves the practice of where there are several defendants of allowing one strike, and I think they put it on the ground I stated: Suppose you had five hundred defendants, would you allow five hundred strikes?

Mr. Allen: I know the Court of Appeals never recognizes but two sides of a case because I have had that experience.

The Court: As presently advised I don't think you will have any additional strikes. The defendants will have the same number of strikes as the plaintiff. That certainly has been the practice as far as I know. In other words, here we will have twenty men, it being a special jury. You page 14 } draw sixteen of those twenty or vice-versa—I don't think it is error either way—and then the plaintiff strikes two and the defendants strike two. That leaves twelve in the box to try the case. Unless you all can show me that the Court is in error there, I think that is the proper procedure

The Court: Gentlemen, the case you shall try today is one in which the Laburnum Construction Corporation is the Plaintiff, and the United Construction Workers, affiliated with the United Mine Workers of America, District 50, United Mine Workers of America and United Mine Workers of America are the Defendants. Your silence will indicate to the Court that your answer is no to each of the page 6 } questions propounded to you by the Court.

Are you an officer, director, stockholder or employee of any of the parties to this suit?

Are any of the parties in your employ?

Do you have any interest in this case?

Have you formed or expressed an opinion in regard to the issue in this case?

Are you sensible of any bias or prejudice to any of the parties in this lawsuit?

Do you know of any reason why you cannot give the Plaintiff and the Defendants a fair and impartial trial according to the law and the evidence of this case?

I take it, then, from your silence, that you and each of you stands indifferent to the outcome of this litigation. Any questions by counsel?

Mr. Robertson: None by Plaintiff.

Mr. Mullen: None by Defendant.

. . . . .

. . . . .

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: All right.

Judge, I think we ought to advise the Court of this before we go any further, and that is that Mr. Owens is an attorney and a member of the legal staff of the United Mine Workers, and anything that he knows about anything in these proceedings has come to his attention through the relationship of attorney-client.

Mr. Robertson: I would like to remind the Court that he has attended a number of these pre-trial conferences under a stipulation of record, and at each one he appeared as a spectator and not as counsel. We will cross that bridge when we come to it.

Mr. Mullen: We have also stated he was a member of the legal department, and has been working with us in page 16 } the case, and has been from the beginning.

Mr. Robertson: And was not counsel in the case.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: That is right.

(The jury was sworn by the Clerk.)

Mr. Robertson: I ask that the witnesses be excluded, except within the usual limits. We wish Mr. Bryan to stay in the courtroom.

The Clerk: All witnesses stand, please, and raise your right hand. All parties who are going to testify, stand up and raise your right hand.

Do you and each of you swear the testimony you are about to give in the case before the Court shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

(The witnesses answered "I do.") page 18 } The Clerk: Take a seat.

You gentlemen may leave the courtroom and come in as your names are called.

The Court: Except one representative of each party.

Mr. Robertson: In that connection, Your Honor, it is admitted in the pleadings here that District 50 is a part of the United Mine Workers of America, and that the United Construction Workers is a division of District 50. They are all parts of the same thing, and we think they are entitled to one representative.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, we feel that each defendant is entitled to a representative. We do not have in court anybody else. I mean, Mr. Owens is a member of the legal department of the United Mine Workers and has been working with us in this case all the time. He is not here as a witness on our part, but he is a part of the group of lawyers who have been working in this matter. I think he is a proper one to be summoned.

The Court: The Court rules tentatively that each defendant has the privilege of having a representative present in the trial.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, and gentlemen of the jury. This is a damage suit by the Laburnum Construction Corporation against three labor unions for $500,000 because all three unions ran Laburnum off a construction job in Breathitt County, Kentucky.

Laburnum Construction Corporation is a Virginia corporation with its home office in Richmond. It was organized in 1937 by members of the family of Mr. John Stewart Bryan and their associates and the president of that corporation today is Alexander Hamilton Bryan, A. Hamilton Bryan. He is also the principal owner of the corporation to an extent and in a degree and manner such that any disaster to that corporation is a disaster to him personally and his own fortunes.

Laburnum Corporation is not a large corporation as companies go in this country today. It is closely held and is a small ownership. It specializes principally in industrial construction, and it has a fine record of performance. It has done a tremendous amount of work for the Government around Norfolk, Portsmouth, the Ducktown Mine Depot, around Washington, at Newport News. It has done a tremendous amount of work for the big companies over at Hopewell, the Dupont Company outside of Richmond, and for other companies in Cleveland, Chicago, in Alabama,

For the last ten years it has averaged about $2 million worth of construction a year and, as I said, the company's fortunes are largely dependent upon the integrity and standing and performance of the people who own it and represent it and through whom it acts.

It is thoroughly qualified to do any kind of general construction work.

Now, the three defendants here: One of them is the United Mine Workers of America, of which John L. Lewis is the President. The United Mine Workers of America covers the entire United States and Canada, and therefore it calls itself an international union. The Supreme or final authority in that union is in its international convention, which meets periodically. Between conventions the top authority resides in what is known as the international executive board, which would correspond roughly to a board of directors. One member of that board—and his name is going to keep coming up and coming up and coming up in this case—is a man named Tom Rainey, who lives at Pikeville, Kentucky. The International Executive Board is made up of the principal officers of the corporation and of the principal officers of various districts. The United Mine Workers of America is divided into districts which comprise certain geographical area for convenience of administration, and there is a director page 21 } of each one of those districts. Then each district is divided up into regions. Then the top officer, as I have said, is John L. Lewis.

The United Mine Workers of America organized coal miners and other people who labor in industries incident to by-products of the coal mining industry, like some of the great chemical manufacturing companies. So much, for the time being. I might say that of these districts, the United Mine Workers has 31 districts, if the charters of any of them haven't been revoked, 31 districts, numbered from 1 to 31, so that they can divide up a geographical area and assign a district to it, like some districts in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Kentucky, some in Arkansas, some in Alabama. Then when they come along from 1 to 31 they jump to District 50. They leave a gap in there so that they can form some more districts later on if they want to and still keep up the numerical sequence.

Then when you jump over to District 50, which is a district just as much as any other district and is admittedly a part of the United Mine Workers and subject to the United Mine Workers, the parent organization, and that district includes all of the United States and Canada just the same as the parent company does, and the purpose of District 50 is to organize the unorganized into this District 50. It takes in every industry not taken in by the United Mine page 22 } Workers. It will organize carpenters, bricklayers, barbers, clerk's laundry men, anybody. It covers the whole field of American industry, and it is a part of the United Mine Workers. So when it comes to acting through its District 50, the United Mine Workers is in the field to organize all American industry everywhere, not just coal miners.

District 50 covers the United States and Canada, and it is divided into regions for purposes of convenience and administration, and one of those regions is region 58, which includes Breathitt County, Kentucky, which we are coming to talk about a little bit later.

Back in 1942 there was what is known as the United Construction Workers, which was hooked up with the CIO, and they had a row with the CIO and they pulled out and left the CIO, and they came over to join up with the United Mine Workers of America. They said, all right, come on in with us and we will make you a division of District 50, because before you got here your function was also to organize the un-organized and to cover all American industry. So come on over and become a division of District 50, and then we will be sitting pretty because we can organize all American industry either through District 50 or through the United Construction Workers, as we see fit.

There you have your three defendants in this suit: The United Mine Workers, the over-all organization, page 23 } District 50, admittedly a district of it, and the United Construction Workers admittedly a division of District 50.

As you can see there, they are all interrelated and interwoven, and I am going to show you as I tell you more of the facts involved in this case that they act through each other and are banned up with each other so you cannot untangle and separate the one from the other.

In Kentucky and West Virginia there is a coal company known as the Island Creek Coal Company and it has a number of associates and affiliates. One of those other companies is the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, and another one is the Spring Fork Development Company. The Island Creek Coal Company is the third biggest commercial coal company in America. It is the biggest commercial coal company in West Virginia, and I think in Kentucky. It, through its subsidiaries and associates, handles most of the coal that is shipped over the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad. It is such a tremendous company and its operations and activities are so far-flung that it has constantly engaged in construction work, and that construction work is carried on under a master plan which is developed in phases over a period of time.

During the two-year period from 1947 into 1949 the Laburnum Construction Company had built up a business connection and association with the Island Creek Coal page 24 } Company which was of tremendous value to it.

It was based on a record of business integrity and performance and personal friendship between men such as Mr. Salvati, the President of the Island Creek Coal Company, and Mr. Francis, the Chairman of its Board of Directors.

During that two-year period Laburnum Construction Corporation, with Mr. Bryan as its president, had done a number of contracts for Island Creek and subsidiaries. I think some dozen, maybe a little more, maybe a little less. They had done it to the satisfaction, completely, of Island Creek and its associate companies.

In 1947, on April 15, Laburnum Construction Company entered into a contract with the Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council of the American Federation of Labor providing that Laburnum would employ A. F. of L. labor. In this territory and in these circumstances that was the natural labor affiliation for anybody who was going to work with labor and not buck labor.

Along in October, 1948, after Laburnum had done this good work over a period extending at that time well nigh two years, and I may say it had been profitable to Laburnum, it had averaged them net about at the rate of $25,000 per year. The work of Island Creek and its other companies was increasing and expanding.

When you come to October, 1948, Island Creek page 25 } Coal Company determined to open up a mine in Breathitt County, Kentucky. I am going to describe that to you in a moment. I am going to describe it as a rough, rugged, violent country, so that Breathitt County is known in that section of Kentucky as Bloody Breathitt. I am going to show you some pictures and a sketch of this place in a moment. This place where they wanted to open up this new mine is roughly 100 miles southwest of Huntington, West Virginia. To get to it you go and get off the train at Huntington, you get yourself an automobile, you strike out through the mountains and the bushes southwestwardly from Huntington, you cross the big Sandy River into a place called Louisa, Kentucky. Louisa is a very small town. You go on from Louisa until you get to a town called Paintsville, a town of between three or four thousand people. You go on from Paintsville to Salyersville, the County Seat of Magoffin County. When you get there you have a town of about 12 or 15 hundred people. Then you keep on out into the hills and you pass a place called Royalton, which is two or three hundred people, and when these people got there the road got worse and more difficult as you kept going. Finally, you come to where they were going to open up this new mine, and they call it Evanston, Kentucky. They had to call it something, and I guess that is why they called it Evanston.

At the time they went in there to do the work page 26 } that I am going to tell you about in a moment the road was almost unpassable. There was no railroad, there was no telephone, there was no post office, there were no houses, there was nothing. When the Island Creek Coal Company and the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company opened up negotiations with Laburnum Company to open up that mine there the understanding and agreement was: This is a difficult job. It is in rough country. It is very hard to get your machinery and equipment in there. As a matter of fact, they had to blast out a place to get level enough to make foundations for the tipples. There is not going to be very much profit in it. But as a part of the inducement to do that work and in recognition of past performance, we tell you now that when you have finished this work we are going on and give you additional work, and you can count on practically all of our work in that territory and in West Virginia under our master plan.

So, Laburnum signed up a contract dated October 28, 1948, for the construction of a coal preparation plant at Evanston, Kentucky, which is down at the foot of a mountain where a few creeks come together. Here is the kind of operation it was:

I forgot to state that the C. & O. Railroad was also building a railroad in there to handle the coal from this mine, but that hadn't gotten there.

page 27 } This coal tipples or, as they call it, a coal preparation plant—I guess all of of us have seen coal tipples. Of course they get the slate out of the coal, and they have the way now to wash it and steam it and get the dirt out of it and run it around and get it in good shape to ship it to the consumer. This particular operation was a strip mine up on the top of this hill. I will show you a picture of it in a moment. They would strip this coal off up at the top of the mountain, dump it into a conveyor, and the conveyor would carry it down to the tipples where it was processed and loaded into the cars.

The length of that conveyor was about 1,500 feet, and the height of it up in the air about 600 feet.

Laburnum went to work very shortly after the contract of October 28, 1948 was signed, and in order to get its labor and to comply with its agreement that it had made in Richmond, it went to get its labor at the nearest union of the A. F. of L. that asserted jurisdiction in that kind of work, which was the carpenters union at Paintsville, about 45 miles away from the job site.

They got whatever laborers they could get from there. The A. F. of L. sent them in some other men from other locals more distant, and then because they couldn't get others they employed some unorganized labor, too, with the knowledge and consent and to the satisfaction of the A. F. of L.

At that time there was no A. F. of L. labor page 28 } union at Salyersville. I know it is difficult to follow me here, but it will clear up, I think, as we go along. Salyersville is only 25 miles from the job site. Paintsville is 45 miles from the job site. But the nearest place they could get the A. F. of L. labor was at Paintsville because there wasn't any union at that time at Salyersville, although after they started up they did form a local A. F. of L. union at Salyersville on May 9, 1949, but the one at Paintsville had already taken jurisdiction and kept jurisdiction.

As I say, Laburnum moved in and started work in this coal preparation plant shortly after the contract was signed on October 28, 1948. It got its labor from the local A. F. of L. union at Paintsville, and then on December 14, 1948, it signed up a contract with the local union in Paintsville carrying into effect in written form the practice that was already under way to the agreement of everybody.

You remember, these companies had told Mr. Bryan "If you will go in there and do this rough, difficult work at mine site No. 1, we will give you additional work." So, true to his commitment and carrying it out, the time came, I might say, when they were working in there, Laburnum had to build barracks for its men, had to put up a place for them to eat. There was nothing there at all. So the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company determined to build 25 dwellings page 29 } there for its men to live in, and pursuant to that over-all plan and over-all agreement it gave the contract to Laburnum to do it at cost plus 5 percent, and the tippie was cost plus 5 per cent.

Laburnum went to work on that job. Then pursuant to the over-all thing, they gave them a contract to build a telephone line 11 miles in to a place called Carver, Kentucky, which was the nearest place they could get a reliable telephone connection. Then they determined that the houses ought to have asbestos shingles on them to make them better and more weather-tight, and they gave Laburnum the contract for that. Then they determined that they would have to build a school there, and they gave Laburnum the contract for that.

Everything was coming along all right, everybody was satisfied, no trouble was anticipated, in there, until July 14, 1949, and at that time the different work at the coal preparation plant had gotten well along toward completion. The 25 houses were about complete. The telephone line had been put in, but the school house had just gotten well under way. They had done very little on that.

Mr. Mullen: We do not object, Your Honor, to the accuracy of the pictures. We reserve, however, the right to object to their offer in evidence.

Mr. Robertson: I have no right to introduce these pictures now, but I just use them to illustrate, and I am page 30 } going to ask the jury as I pass them to look at them, which will give you an idea of what that country was and what this work was. The first picture I hand you is a picture taken from up on top of the mountain where they were stripping the coal and laying down along the road that comes into that place.

The next picture I shall show you is the conveyor that carries the coal from the top of the mountain down to the tipple, and you are standing up at the top of the conveyor looking down toward the tipple.

The next picture, you are standing down at the tipple looking up toward the mountaintop.

The next picture shows a truck dumping coal into the con-veyor up on the mountaintop to let the coal go down to the tipple.

The next picture shows the tipple and the conveyor pretty well completed. You are down at the tipple looking up at the mountaintop.

These other pictures that I hand you are just showing various stages of the work while it was in progress.

(Counsel conferring.)

Mr. Robertson: In order that you gentlemen may visualize what is going to be talked about here all through this case, we have a sketch here entitled "Coal mine operations, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Breathitt Count, page 31 } Kentucky, scale 1 inch equals one-third of a mile."

Right there in that circle is No. 1 coal preparation plant. You will notice over here a road that says it comes from Salyersville, coming around and you get in there that way.

Here is a creek bottom coming around here, and that is where the C&O Railroad was building their road to get the coal out of there. It came along the creek bottom, followed the creek bottom on around, making this loop. It came up here, and they even built a tunnel to go through and go back and make a connection, I believe, at Salyersville.

Incidentally, it is very interesting to know that there was a race on between Laburnum and the railroad to see whether the railroad was going to finish and then they could not start to running coal on account of Laburnum being behind time, or whether it would be the other way. There was a friendly race on there, and Laburnum beat them, I think, by two days.
The plant wasn't completely finished enough to run coal through it by the time the railroad was ready to take it.

Here is your No. 1 preparation plant (indicating). Then you come back over here and see the road comes back over here, and there is the place called Evanston. That is where they built 25 houses, and they also built a store there. They gave Laburnum that proposition.

page 32 } Then there was another cole preparation plant down there, and then here is the school house that I told you about. Here is the school house. You come on up here and can cross back over the railroad and get over to the 25 houses and the store, and where they put in the post office. You come on up here and you get to the coal preparation plant, and here are Laburnum's barracks and offices and eating houses.

That is just the general layout of the thing.

In a few moments, gentlemen, it is going to become necessary for you to visualize the school, the tippie and back over to the 25 houses.

Everything was going along all right until July 14, 1949, which was Thursday. On that day, Mr. Bryan was in Richmond and a man named William O. Hart called him on the telephone from Pikesville, Kentucky, not Paintsville, Pikesville, Kentucky. Pikesville is a town of about 10,000 people. It is right near the Virginia line, just over the mountains out in southwest Virginia. This man Tom Raney, the member of the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers, lives in Pikesville. He has his office there in the Seward Building. He draws a salary of $1,000 a month for performing those duties. The regional offices of District 50 are also in Pikesville in the same building. And the regional offices of the United Construction Workers are also in Pikesville and in the same building. I think they all page 33 } use the same post office box. I am not sure of that. I think they all do. Some of them do, at least.

Mr. Bryan got this call, and this man said, "I page 34 } am William O. Hart, and I am field representative of the United Construction Workers; and my boss is David Hunter, Regional Director, who lives in Pikesville, and I am calling you from Pikesville. His boss is John L. Lewis. We know about this work that you are doing out in Breathitt County, Kentucky. We understand the Pond Creek Pocahtontas Company is intending to give a whole lot more work out there, some 500 houses, stores, school houses, and various things, running into real money and big work.

"I want to tell you, I am not so concerned about what you are doing now as I am about what you are getting ready to do, and I just want to tell you, you are in United Construction Workers territory, and you are in United Mine Workers territory, and you can't work out here unless you use United Mine Workers and United Construction Workers labor. If you don't do it, we are going to run you off the job and run you out of Kentucky. You can't work in our territory without using our men, and we don't recognize the A.F. of L. in our territory."

He said, "After all, we would be doing to you just what we did to the Beckett Construction Company and the Link-Belt Construction Company over in Wheelwright, Kentucky. You had better come along now and sign up with us and use our men, or get out."

Mr. Bryan told him of this contract he had with page 35 } the A. F. of L., and said, "I am under contract with them. I am not bucking organized labor, but I have this commitment, and I can't do what you say."

He said, "Well, that is it: You either do it or get out."

Mr. Bryan understood from him, he said, "I am acting under orders from David Hunter," and I think he said it at that time. It doesn't make any difference. If he didn't, he said it later. We are going to give you the evidence on it. "I am acting under orders from David Hunter, and also under orders from Tom Rainey."

Mr. Bryan discussed the situation with him, and Bryan understood that Hart wouldn't take any action, and wouldn't try to run them off the job without a further talk with him to see what could be done to try to get out of this jam that he was being put in.

As soon as he hung up the phone, Mr. Bryan telephoned the Superintendent out on the job in Kentucky. He said he didn't know anything about that. Mr. Bryan told him, "Well, watch the situation closely; watch out for developments. If anything happens, let me know."

Then Mr. Bryan called up the top office of the A. F. of L. in Richmond and told them what Hart had said, and asked them to see if they couldn't save him in that situation. page 36 } The evidence will show they couldn't do it.

He also called up the appropriate top man in the A. F. of L. in Washington and told him what happened, and asked if he couldn't save the situation. The evidence will show that they couldn't do it.

So, from Thursday, the 14th of July, until the following Friday, the 22nd of July, Mr. Bryan followed the thing closely by telephone, kept in touch with the superintendent out there, kept in touch with the labor people in Richmond and Washington, and once during that week went out to the job site on some other matter, and of course made inquiry about this while he was there, and apparently everything was getting along all right, and there was no reason for feeling alarmed.

On Friday, the 22nd of July, he was back in Richmond, and during the day he got a telephone message from his superintendent, Delinger, saying, "I am reliably informed that William O. Hart is coming here next Monday, the 25th, with a number of men sufficient to run us off the job, and he is going to run us off the job. I am just giving you the information."

Mr. Bryan had just come from out there. He had seen no sign of any trouble. He was incredulous. He believed that the superintendent had just gotten jittery. He told him to watch the situation and let him know of any developments. He kept in touch with him by telephone over that weekend.

page 37 } Nothing happened over the weekend, and nothing happened during the day Monday the 25th. There was a weekend in there from Friday the 22nd to Monday the 25th.

About 7:30 at night on Monday the 25th, Delinger telephoned him again from out in Kentucky, and he said, "My information is that Hart is coming here tomorrow with 100 or more men, or whatever number of men is necessary to stop our work and run us off the job, and I want you to come out here."

It was too late to catch a train that would put him there in time. Bryan looked up a man named Tony Meli, and got in the company truck and drove all night until they got to Huntington, about 7:00 o'clock or so in the morning.

You see, Bryan had understood from Hart that Hart wouldn't take any drastic action without communicating further with Bryan. So when Bryan got to Huntington, he undertook to telephone Hart at Pikesville, and the information was, "Hart is not here, but you can speak to his boss, David Hunter." You remember, David Hunter is the Regional Director, both of District 50 and of United Construction Workers.

So Bryan got David Hunter on the phone and told him of this telephone conversation he had had with Hart back on the 14th of July, and told him of this last report he had gotten, that Hart and these men were going to be on the job site about noon that day, the 25th, and asked him to get a message to

Hart to hold up and not do the thing until Bryan page 38 } could get there and talk to him.

David Hunter said, "Well, I will try to get the message to him."

Just to tell you right now, so that you know what the outcome of that was, both David Hunter and Hart subsequently admitted to Bryan that Hunter gave him the message, and Hart said, "It is too late; all my plans are made and I can't stop. I am going to it."

Then Bryan started out through the country I have described to you, to the job site. When he got outside of Huntington, his truck broke down. There were several hours delay there in getting transportation, and he didn't get to the job site until 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

When he got there, the men had all quit work. The superintendent was there. A man named Ragen, his field clerk, was there. But the men who were doing the work on the tipple, and down at the school house and over at the 25 dwellings, had left. Everything was still and quiet and at a standstill. That was what reported to Bryan by his men on the job. They said that Hunter and a crowd of men—I mean that Hart and a crowd of men came there and ran them off.

In order to keep the continuity, I am going to tell you what happened there from 12 o'clock on to the time that Bryan got there. He didn't see it, but we are going to have the people here, or their depositions, to tell you in their own page 39 } words what happened. I know you want to know right now.

On that Monday, the 25th, the men went to work there, I think probably 30-odd altogether, down at the school house and at the bottom of the mountain. The men at the top of the mountain are not involved in this thing at all. They went to work in the regular way, and there was a foreman and about 6 men working down here at the school house. The school house is right on the side of the road, and the woods come down right to it. You can sit in the woods and throw a rock over on the school house.

Along about the time these men were stopping for lunch, here came a crowd of people up the road in automobiles and jeeps, and one thing and another, led by Hart, variously estimated to be anywhere from 50 to 100, a nondescript group of men, some of them drunk, some of them carrying guns, a sufficient number there so that these 6 or 7 men working on that school house didn't have a ghost of a chance to buck them.

They came up there and told them virtually the same thing, Hart and also the men, "You are out here in United Mine Workers territory. You are in United Construction Workers territory. You haven't joined up and you can't work here. You have got to quit right now, or else."

They said also, "You know about Beaver Creek over there. They are rough over there. We will bring whatever page 40 } number of men over here is necessary, 100 more, 300 more, whatever it takes; and if you don't get off, we will throw you off and do whatever is necessary to put you off."

Some of the men said they were drunk, cursing, calling them everything you could think of. I think one man would run up against another one and show him he had a gun under his shirt. The men were outnumbered, and they quit. They began to gather up their tools and to get ready to leave there.

Then Hart said to this mob that he was leading, "Come on, we will go down to the tipple." Here is the school house down here, and the tipple is up here about a half mile, I think (indicating).

He left enough there at the school house to be sure they had them outnumbered so they couldn't work, and the balance of them started on to the tipple. As they went, these fellows back at the school house could hear shots. When they saw they couldn't work, they said, "Well, we will go on down to the tipple."

When they got down to the tipple, they were pulling the same thing: drunk, cussing, threatening, telling them they were in United Mine Workers and United Construction Workers territory. "You can't work here. You have to join up with us or get off this job."

page 41 } The fellows would show them their cards, and they said, "We don't care anything about that. We don't pay any attention to the A. F. of L. out here. This is our territory."

The threats and reports and the rumors were that they would be lying out in the bushes there in the hills and shoot them. They would get up on top of the tipple and drop something down on them. They would beat them up. They would do whatever was necessary to get them out of there.

There were a few laborers there who had made application to join one of the A. F. of L. unions, and this gang with Hart would just get two or three of them and say, "Come along, now, you are going to sign up."

Some of them just by brute strength and compulsion made them sign, and some of them didn't.

Finally, a lot of them got into the tool house there at the job, and there were some of the leading A. F. of L. officials in there, a man named Subins, I believe; a man named Arnett; a man named Merk Preston. They got in there, and some of these men resented what Hart was saying, and what he was doing. They almost came to a free-for-all shooting match there in the tool house, but the older men there succeeded in quieting them down.

The net result of it was that they were threatened, intimidated, and scared until they left. They pulled the whole thing in about a half hour, I think, down there at the tippie.

When Bryan got in there at 3 o'clock, everything page 42 } was closed down and gone, in the way I have told you.

Also, when Bryan got there—I believe this is the day but, gentlemen of the jury, it is hard for me to get all these facts in sequence—that day when Bryan got there, they had put out a picket, something about a strike, United Mine Workers. Bryan pulled it down and threw it over in the bushes. I think it was that day. If it wasn't that day, it was another day.

While he was on the job there, Hart told these men who he was; that he was working for the United Construction Workers, and he was working under orders from David Hunter, the Regional Director, and he was working under orders from Tom Raney, a member of the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America.

After Bryan got to the coal preparation plant, about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when everything had quit and his men reported to him what was there, there was no use staying there any longer. So he started over to the 25 dwellings. When he got to the railroad crossing there was an automobile there, and they stopped and they got out to speak to each other. Bryan asked if they knew where he could find Hart, and one of the men said he was Hart. There were three men there with Hart. Two of them were good and stinking drunk. They went back about as far as from here over to the window, page 43 } and pulled up the windows and locked the automobile and came over, and Bryan got into a talk with Hart. He reminded him of the telephone conversation back there on the 14th of July, when Hart had made these threats. He reminded Hart that he was going to let him hear from him again before he undertook to stop the work.

Hart said, "I didn't understand it that way, that I was under any obligation like that."

He told him about the telephone message he tried to get to him from Charleston that morning. Hart said, "Yes, I got the message from David Hunter. It came too late. I had made all my arrangements; I was acting under instructions, and I had to go ahead."

Bryan said, "Why did you run my men off this job that way in any such highhanded way as this?"

Hart said, "Well, you know so much about it, I don't think I will answer any more of your questions. I don't want to answer your questions." He said, "I will tell you one thing. I bet you $500 you will not finish this job in Kentucky. You are in United Mine Workers territory, and you can't work out here and buck the United Mine Workers. Nobody else has ever been able to buck them, and get away with it; and you can't do it, either."

Bryan said, "I won't take your bet, but I resent what you are doing to me, and I am not going to take it lying page 44 } down, and I expect to hold you responsible for it."

The interesting point of that is that they were put on notice right then that they might get into this lawsuit. Before we get to the end here, we are going to show you that some reports that Hart made in the routine course of business have mysteriously disappeared.

Then Hart, in the course of this conversation, told him also, he said, "You are not the only one. We have run other people out of our territory out here, and you are just getting what they got. You haven't any right to complain."

Hart, in the course of that conversation, said, "And if we ain't got what it takes to run you out of here, if necessary we will shut down the whole doggone Pond Creek Pocahontas operation of mining coal, if that is necessary, to put you out of here."

There was nothing more he could do there. Bryan went on back to Paintsville. That is where the local union was, through which he hired his carpenters. They had a union meeting that night, of the A. F. of L., and Bryan went to the meeting. Bryan made a talk to the meeting. The purpose of the meeting was for these men to determine whether or not they would go back to the job site the next day and try to work.

Bryan did everything he could to induce them to go, and tried to appeal to their pride and manliness. Somebody spoke up and said, "You don't know anything about it. page 45 } You are a city man from Richmond. We have lived out here in these hills, and we know what we are up against. You don't. Do you want to see somebody get killed?"

Finally, somebody spoke up and said to Bryan, "If we go back tomorrow morning and go to work, will you put on carpenters overalls and lead us across the picket line?"

Bryan said—they had him on the spot, and Bryan said, "Yes, I will."

They said, "All right, we will go."

One of the older men there, a fellow named, I believe, Burke Preston—I may fall into some minor inaccuracies here—said,

"Well, if we go over there, everybody ought to pack not less than a 38."

Bryan said he didn't want to do that. He didn't want to go over there and get somebody killed; that they would work it out some other way.

They agreed to meet at Salyersville the next morning, which would be Tuesday the 26th, and go up there together through the woods and the wilds, for self protection. That meeting was the night of the 26th. The union meeting was the night of the 26th.

On Wednesday morning, the 27th, they met at Salyersville as planned, and went out to the job site. Bryan, I believe, went, along with his superintendent, Delinger, and this man Tony Meli.

page 46 } They got to the job site, and there was a picket sign. We have it here and will show it to you and let you take a look at it. It was stuck up in a nail keg, something about "Picket Sign—On Strike," or something. Bryan pulled it down, and we have it here to show it to you. Some of these men who have testified in this case by deposition will say that when Bryan walked over there and pulled that picket sign down, they never expected to see him come back alive. The men were all milling around, the same thing about getting shot from the hill or getting a lump of coal dropped on their heads from the tippie, or the mob coming there.

Finally, Bryan said, "Come on, let's go to work." He got a group of them and went on down to the tippie with them, just a few hundred yards from where they were at the office, and they went to work.

He went back up to the office to get some more, and by the time he got up there, these fellows were so nervous and scared they quit and came on back, too.

Then a fellow arrived on the scene named H. G. Robinson, no kin to me. He was the same kind of field representative as Hart. He was giving them the same talk. The question was, whether they were scared to go back to work or not. They had a man there, Taffl, a man named Jack Parish, and he finally said, "You will just get somebody killed here and I am not going to ask them to do it. I don't think they ought to work."

page 47 } There was a report they would have 100 men there within an hour to stop them if they undertook to work.

They all quit. After they shut down there, Bryan and his superintendent drove back to Salyersville. Bryan's object was to keep the men at work on the job. He went to a State Trooper there in Salyersville, the man on duty in that territory, named Homer Howard, and tried to get him to go out to the job just for the moral support of police protection. He refused to go. They couldn't get any police protection.

So that night, Wednesday night, Bryan left his superintendent there at Salyersville and said, "You stay here and watch developments, and let me know what happens, and also try to get some men to go back out there tomorrow." Bryan went on back in to Huntington.

The next day, Bryan was called up by one of the International A. F. of L. officers who had heard about all of this trouble and had gone over to Salyersville to see about it, talking about what could be done and what the danger was. This fellow, named Freeman, said, "I am not going to order our men to go over there and be targets. Did you know that your man Delinger's life had been threatened?"

Then Delinger got on the phone and told Bryan that one of the leading businessmen there in Salyersville had come to him page 48 } as an emissary from these defendants and told him if he went back on that job site after July 31, which was a Sunday, his life wouldn't be any good. Delinger told Bryan over the phone right then, "I want to be relieved."

Bryan said, "All right, come on back to Richmond."

He came back to Richmond and has never been out there since.

That night, Friday night, the 29th—I think it page 49 } was Thursday night, the 28th, Bryan came on back to Richmond. He was in Richmond on Friday. He was attending to other Laburnum Construction Company business. He was consulting with his lawyers. He was over in Hopewell making arrangements for a man named Veltry to go out to the job site and succeed Delinger.

On Saturday, July 30, Bryan was in Louisville and Lexington, Kentucky, trying to get police protection, trying to get some sort of court action that would protect him out there in the bushes so he could go back to work Monday morning, and he couldn't get either.

Sunday Bryan spent the night in Ashland, Kentucky. I believe, and started back to the job site. He got to Paintsville and he ate breakfast with a man named Starr, who was one of his carpenters and one of the leaders in the union, and tried to induce Starr to go back to work and get some men to go back to work. Starr just didn't make any bones about it. He said "I am not going back to work. I am scared to go back to work, and I don't think you are going to get anybody else to go back to work because they are scared to go back to work."

Then Bryan went on over to Salyersville and wanted to go out to the job site. There was a man there, a sort of labor leader in Salyersville named Charlie Williams. He page 50 } went with him. A man named May, I believe, also went with him. They got over to the job site and went down to the school house first, and there was a picket up there, a picket sign, and Bryan pulled it down. We have it here and will show it to you. They went on back up to the office and there was another real fancy colored picket sign, red, white and blue. Bryan pulled it down. We have it and will show it to you. What I have told you about the strike so far, you know just as much about a strike as I do or we do.

While Bryan was with Charlie Williams he offered him a job as assistant to this new superintendent, the man Veltry. Charlie said, "I will take it under consideration." So when they started to leave out there at the job site that Sunday afternoon—I just want to get these things in sequence here and not get myself confused—as they were going on back, finally that night at Salyersville Charlie Williams came to Bryan and said, well, he wouldn't take that job as assistant to Vestry, that it made his wife nervous, that he had so many other things to attend to that he couldn't take that on. It was perfectly obvious that he was scared to take it on.

Then on Monday, August 1, Bryan went back to the job site, and there were some of the men back there that morning. Then it was the same old thing, the same old threats, the same thing, scared to go to work because of page 51 } what would happen to them. One of the A. F. of L. men named Robert Poe, who was a labor leader there at Salyersville local which had been set up at that time, was circulating around among the men seeing if he could get them to work.

Then Hart showed up again. You see, Hart is the real leader. Hart was talking, saying he was going to run them off, repeating the old threats and everything, and Bryan said to him, "What about this meeting Sunday, yesterday, at Tip-top," a place out in the mountains, "that you all had to try to plan what you are going to do to me?" Hart didn't make any bones about it. He said, "Yes, we had a meeting there yesterday, about 250 men there. We made up what we are going to do. We are going to run you out of here, if necessary, and we will bring a thousand men here if necessary. We will bring whatever here is necessary and whatever roughness is necessary to run you off here."

Then they had run another fellow off at Wheelwright, Kentucky. Bryan learned through him that maybe if he would get in touch with a man named Thomas Davis, who was higher up than David Hunter, he could get this thing composed. Thomas Davis is an assistant chairman of the organizing committee of District 50. David Hunter worked under him. So Bryan got him on the phone and told him all the trouble and everything, and asked him to call the thing off. Thomas Davis said, "I can't do it and won't do it. It is page 52 } against my instructions. As a matter of fact, I am very sympathetic to people in your position, but you are just caught between two big unions, and you have to take the consequences." He refused to call off either David Hunter or Hart. He said, "We don't recognize the A. F. of L. out here.

About that time this man Robert Poe had been circulating among the men and reported to Bryan that he couldn't get them to go to work. They were just scared to go to work and wouldn't go to work.

Then the thought occurred to Bryan that maybe he could call a meeting of a lot of the A. F. of L. men at Salyersville the next day, which would be Tuesday, August 2, and see if he could do anything there. He asked Hart, what about it, would he attend a meeting like that. Hart said, "Yes, I will attend a meeting like that, provided you don't try to put your men back to work between now and then." Bryan said, "All right," and arranged a meeting for the next day to be held at Salyersville on Tuesday, August 2.

The Court: Mr. Robertson, let's recess for five minutes.

(Brief recess.)

The Court: All right, Mr. Robertson.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I regret that my statement is so long, but I am getting along toward the end of it, and I think it will make it easier to follow the page 53 } testimony when it comes in if we have an over-all statement of our points.

If Your Honor please, and gentlemen of the jury, they had this meeting at Salyersville on Tuesday, August 2, and it was attended by quite a number of A. F. of L. officials, some of high rank, some of the International officers, some of the local and some just garden variety members. The purpose of it was to see if they could get men back to work. Bryan was there with his superintendent and his field clerk, and Bryan made another talk—I certainly think the facts in this case are going to show that Bryan had the guts—Bryan made another talk to try to get the men to go back to work, and they had a lot of backing and talking and backing and talking. Bryan tried to appeal to their pride. Bryan tried to appeal to the feeling that they ought not to let a crowd run them off the job that way. He tried to appeal to their self-interest and keep a good job with good pay and regular work. He kept on telling them that nothing was going to happen. Finally, they just got tired of it and they said, "Well, you just don't know what you are talking about. You are a city man from Richmond. We were born and raised in this territory out here and we know doggone well what will happen to us if we go back there. We know what we are talking about and you don't, and that is it, and we are not going back. We are not going out there and get killed."

page 54 } They wouldn't go.

In the meantime, David Hunter hadn't come over. They had asked Thomas Davis to come over and he wouldn't come over. Hart, the leg man, was out there, but they said they didn't want to talk to him. Bryan went out and apologized to him for having to come and then not anybody talking to him. All right, Hart said "Well, that is all right. That doesn't make any difference to me. My position is the same still. Just tell them back in there if it takes a thousand men to keep them off the work, I will have them there. I will have whatever is necessary to keep them off the job."

He said, "What's more—You see here is what made it so difficult too. He said, "What's more, if it is necessary to run you off the job, we will close down the Pond Creek Pocahontas Coal Mining operations, close everything they have got."

There was nothing more they could do. Bryan went on in to Huntington, and the next morning he went to the officials of the Island Creek Coal Company, the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, and the Spring Fork Development Company, and told them what he was up against, that their men were scared to work and that they had been run off the job, and that was that. They said, "If you can't do the work, there is nothing to do but cancel the contract."

They cancelled it that afternoon, cancelled both page 55 } contracts, and followed it up with a letter. They cancelled it verbally the afternoon of the third, which was Wednesday, and on Thursday they followed it up with two letters canceling it, which we will put in evidence here to show you.

Even then Bryan tried to do something about it. He called up David Hunter over in Pikesville and finally arranged to go over and have a meeting with him. He went over there and had a several hours' conference with him. David Hunter went into quite an explanation of the organization, the United Mine Workers District 50, the United Construction Workers, and how they were interwoven and worked with each other. In the course of that conversation Bryan reminded David Hunter of the telephone conversation he had had with him there from Huntington on Monday or Tuesday morning, July 26. That was the time that Hunter said, "Yes, I remember that. I got hold of Hart and got the message to Hart, but Hart made all the arrangements to run you off and it was too late and we could not stop." He said, "I will tell you another thing, Hart could bring 6,000 men over there to run you off if necessary."

Then there came up in the course of that conversation, discussing the whole matter somewhat in detail, as I have done with you here this morning, and there came up a discrepancy—Bryan thought Hart had done something on one date, David Hunter thought he had done it on a different date. David

Hunter said "There is no use talking about that, I page 56 } can settle that, I can settle that, here are my files."

He made reports on everything he did. He pulled a drawer open and referred to a file he had in the form of reports, and written records of everything that Hart did every day.

Bryan said, again, remembering what he told Hart before, "I am not going to take it lying down. I am not going to take any such treatment as this without a fight. I don't know whether I am going to sue or not, but I tell you right now I am not going to take it and I am going to hold you responsible for it."

Of course David Hunter said "That is up to you."

So he was put on notice that day of what is happening here this day, and in the meantime those files which Bryan saw of his have disappeared.

Then again on May 15, 1950—that was the end of that work there—Bryan thought that Laburnum, if they could help it they didn't want to be run clear out of the West Virginia and Kentucky coal field, and that there might still be an opportunity. He was doing one job out there that hadn't quite been finished. I think that was over in Mingo County, West Virginia. They hadn't run him off that one. So he decided he would have another talk with David Hunter. He went to see him on May 15, 1950. They went over the whole thing, and Bryan said, "I am finishing up that school house. You page 57 } have left me alone over there." It was not the school house down at the job site. I am not sure it was a school house, but it was an entirely different job over in West Virginia. He said, "I want to do some more work there if I can. I understand that there is a concern named the R. H. Hamil Company that you ran out of your territory because they weren't United Construction Workers, United Mine Workers. I don't want to go over there and take a job if you are going to run me out. I want to see if you and I can't fix it. I never had any trouble in all the work I have been doing in these years with all these different contracts with Island Creek Coal Company until you came in there and organized the Breathitt County and that territory in there. I don't want to take a job and then be run out of it like Hamil was and like I was over in Breathitt County. What about it?

Hunter told him the same thing over again. He said, "This is United Mine Workers territory, it is United Construction Workers' territory. We don't recognize A. F. of L. over here. We don't care what contract you have got with them or whether you would be breaking that contract if you signed up with us. You can't work out here unless you use our labor and sign up with us. If you try it we are going to run you out again just like we did the last time."

Bryan said to him, "If you and Hart would talk to Tom Raney"—that is the fellow you remember of the page 58 } International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers who lives in Pikesville—"If you will talk to Tom Raney and tell him what is what, and you and Tom Raney tell them to lay off me, that would be the end of my troubles."

He said, "Yes, that might be so, but we are not going to do it. It is against our instructions and we are not going to do it. If you come back here and try to work out there without using our men we are going to run you off the job, and Hart will bring in 6,000 people to run you off if necessary."

Bryan told him again on the 15th day of May, 1950, he wasn't going to take it and that they would hear from him later. They were put on notice then that he wasn't going to take it lying down and now the files have disappeared.

From that day to this Island Creek and its companies have told them, "Don't bid any more. We have the highest regard for you. We have the greatest sympathy for you, but we can't run the risk of the United Mine Workers coming down on us and shutting us up. If you are in any such situation as that you just can't do any more work for us. We don't invite you to bid any more and we tell you in a friendly, nice way don't bid any more on our work."

They haven't had any more work from Island Creek Coal Company from that day to this.

In their defense they deny, of course, that they page 59 } said or did anything wrong. As far as I can tell, it will be an absolute question of veracity between Bryan and some of their men. They deny that Hart, Robinson, David Hunter, and Tom Raney were authorized to do what they did in a way that made their unions responsible. We say we are going to show you, we say in the grounds of defense, that are filed in here, "You admit that Hart and Robinson and David Hunter were the agents of the United Construction Workers and were also the agents of District 50 of the United Mine Workers, but you deny that anybody was the agent of the United Mine Workers of America, and therefore they had nothing to do with it at all." We say, "We are going to show that all three of you are in the same boat from the facts that I have already recited here and other facts, and we are going to introduce photostatic copies of proceedings at your international convention which were afterwards approved by your International Executive Board and published in your official newspaper where you said in effect—not about this particular thing but about anything—organizing the unorganized. 'We are with you boys. You are doing a fine job. Go to town. We are back of you financially, morally and every other way.'"

"you are all parts of the same thing and you are all three liable to us."

Now I come to the end of my opening statement here. I hope you won't think I am always this long. It is page 60 } the longest opening statement I have ever made since I have been practicing law, but I think it has been necessary.

As I said in the first sentence, we are asking for $500,000 damages, and that would be divided into two items: compensatory damages and punitive damages. Compensatory damages, as the word implies, are damages to compensate or satisfy or make whole and save from money loss Laburnum Company for the wrong that has been done to it.

What is the wrong that has been done to them? As the evidence will show you here? They had a business relationship there that was netting them $25,000 a year and that would go on indefinitely. If you run it out to 10 years, it is $250,000. If you run it out to five years, it is $125,000. They had gone along with these two jobs there and were well toward completion. The actual damages on those jobs amounted to only $2,000 or $3,000. They destroyed their business relationship. They destroyed those future earnings. They damaged their reputation. They have made it so now if they go into the field to compete with anybody to do any kind of construction work in either Eastern Kentucky or West Virginia, they won't even ask them to bid, the third biggest coal company in America, because of what they have done to them. They have run them out. So much for the compensatory damages.

Now, the punitive damages: The theory of page 61 } punitive damages, means just exactly what the words say, to punish somebody. If a person has done something wrong, wilfully, maliciously, wantonly, with malice and insolence and cruelty and threats, the jury may give damages against them as the law says to keep them from doing the same thing in the future, as an admonition that they can't do it and get away with it, and also as an example to others that here is what you may expect if you do these things.

Of course, I don't have to tell you that a $5 punitive damages doesn't mean anything to the United Construction Workers or District 50 or the United Mine Workers of America. When we have finished this case and have put in the testimony that I have reviewed here, we are going to ask you gentlemen to give us the full amount we are suing for because we think you are going to agree with us that no such insolent and wicked thing can be done here in this country without the perpetrators of it being held responsible for it.

The Court: First, gentlemen, I have two letters here that were delivered to me today, addressed to the Court, both letters dated January 17, 1951. The first letter:

"Dear Judge Snead:

"I hereby respectfully request the permission of the Court to withdraw whatever appearance, if any, I have made in the above case as counsel for District 50 United Mine Workers of America.

"Respectfully yours,

YELVERTON COWHERD."

Then the second letter asks permission to withdraw his appearance as counsel for United Construction Workers.

I just wanted to call that to the attention of you gentlemen.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, I would like to bring to the attention of the Court this fact: At our last pre-trial conference here when Colonel Harris was not present, the Court requested counsel for the different defendants to state who each one was representing. I understood at that time that the firm of Williams, Mullen, Pollard & Rodgers was representing all of the defendants. I have understood throughout these pre-trial conferences that Colonel Harris was representing all three defendants. I was sitting in the courtroom during the lunch hour and the young lady who is reporting this trial for the newspaper asked Colonel Harris whom he page 84 } was representing in here, and I understood him to say that he was representing United Mine Workers. I couldn't understand whether he said he was or was not representing the other two defendants. It seems to me that there might be some maneuvering there for position about examining witnesses or argument of the case. I don't know whether there is or not, but before you let counsel withdraw I would just like to have it known here who is representing whom, which is what the Court asked at the last pre-trial conference.

If Mr. Mullen's firm is representing all three defendants and Mr. Harris is representing all three defendants, then I personally have no objection to Mr. Cowherd withdrawing, but I don't want to be maneuvered into any position here where it may be argued that they are inadequately represented here by counsel.

The Court: As I recall, you gentlemen stated at the last meeting of counsel that you would inform the Court today as to your position, and I think this is the proper time to receive your statement. Mr. Mullen?

Colonel Harris: May I state, since he mentioned my conversation with the young lady, that I saw Mr. Robertson sitting right there within a few feet of me and I purposely talked loud enough for Mr. Robertson to hear every word that I said. There was no effort to keep him from hearing. On the contrary, I tried to talk loud enough so that he would page 85 } hear everything that was said. There was no secret about it.

Mr. Robertson: I didn't say I didn't hear you. I said I couldn't understand what your position was. I still say that.

The Court: That is what we are here for now, to find out what his position is and what the position of all counsel is.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, our appearance has been entered for all three. Our plan is that Colonel Harris and ourselves would represent for cross examination purposes United Mine Workers and United Construction Workers, and Mr. Pollard will represent District 50. That is for the purpose of examination and cross examination.

The Court: Let me get that straight, please. You want to examine—

Mr. Mullen: Either Colonel Harris or myself will examine the witnesses or cross-examine witnesses for United Mine Workers and United Construction Workers.

The Court: United Mine Workers. In other words, there would be just one counsel on one witness.

Mr. Mullen: One counsel on one witness, yes. But Mr. Pollard would speak for the District 50 and would want the right to cross-examine for District 50.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I think they have a right within their group of counsel as long as there page 86 } is only one lawyer who examines or cross-examines one witness, to proceed as they choose, but I submit that they have not answered the question. Mr. Mullen has stated very frankly here before that his firm represents all three defendants. I asked Mr. Harris to say that and he went in a huddle and he hasn't said it yet and I ask the Court to ask how many defendants is he representing and if so who are they.

Mr. Mullen: I beg your pardon. I just said that we all three had been entered as appearing for all three counsel.

Mr. Robertson: All three counsel?

Mr. Mullen: All three defendants.

Mr. Robertson: Is one of the lawyers for all three defendants?

Mr. Mullen: Entered of record, yes. Each defendant has the right, certainly, to have a spokesman for it. Colonel Harris and I will speak for the United Construction Workers and the United Mine Workers in examining or cross-examining. Mr. Pollard for District 50.

Mr. Robertson: They have a perfect right to do that.

The Court: In other words, if I understand you correctly, just one attorney will take a witness on cross examination, is that right?

Mr. Mullen: Suppose I take a witness on cross examination, Colonel Harris will be barred from cross page 87 } examination, but Fred for District 50 could ask some questions if he wants to.

Mr. Robertson: I don't think that is proper, Your Honor. Counsel are just trying to take a double shot at it and I don't think they have any right to do it.

The Court: I am wondering if you gentlemen could not confer when you have a witness. I would like to be reasonable about that. Let counsel cross-examine the witness. Could you do that? I will be reasonable about the time. If you want to confer on any questions that you want to ask.

Mr. Pollard: Can we recall the witness whenever we want?

Mr. Robertson: I don't think you can make any such bargain as that, do you?

The Court: It all depends on what takes place. I wouldn't like to bind myself one way or the other on that. It is within the discretion of the court.

Mr. Harris: I didn't understand the question.

The Court: Whether or not he could recall a witness. I think that is within the sound discretion of the Court.

Mr. Pollard: Judge, it seems that each defendant is entitled to counsel and each defendant is entitled to cross examination.

Mr. Robertson: And they have lawyers there to page 88 } do it, but they have the same group of lawyers representing all three defendants, and they have not got a right to take two cracks at it any more than I would have that right.

The Court: One moment, Mr. Robertson. If you gentlemen represented different defendants, but as I understand it you all represent the same defendants.

Mr. Pollard: But for purposes of the trial of the case Mr. Mullen and Colonel Harris would represent two of them and I would represent one of them.

Mr. Robertson: That is what they have said and that is what they have entered as counsel on the record.

Mr. Allen: As I recall, you filed an answer here, a joint and several answer, and all of you, as I recall, signed that answer as representing those several defendants.

Mr. Pollard: That is correct, sir.

Mr. Allen: They could assign you to examine or cross-examine the witnesses for District 50, but I don't think you should be permitted to cross-examine a witness put on by District 50 by them, or that you should be permitted to cross-examine a witness that they have cross-examined, whom we put on the stand.

Mr. Pollard: Wouldn't we have had that right if there were separate attorneys representing each one of them?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Allen: If you had separate and distinct defendants. page 89 }

Mr. Pollard: We have separate and distinct defendants.

Mr. Allen: With distinct separate issues and rights, for instance, like a man in a three-cornered collision and the plaintiff sues everybody involved in the collision. Their rights are entirely different. They employ separate and distinct counsel. They don't sign the same pleadings and don't represent themselves as representing all the defendants.

The Court: If you gentlemen could confer, I would be very reasonable in that respect as far as time is concerned. I won't pass on the matter definitely at the moment, but I understand your request.

In other words, you would have the right under your theory, to cross-examine further the witness after either Mr. Harris or Mr. Mullen cross-examine for United Construction Workers and the United Mine Workers of America.

Mr. Pollard: That is correct, sir. I would have the right to cross-examine the witnesses put on by the United Construction Workers and the United Mine Workers.

Mr. Robertson: I say, Your Honor, that is contrary to every rule of practice I have ever seen followed in any trial court in Virginia that I have ever been in.

Mr. Mullen: We have a complicated situation here. Three defendants—page 90 } Mr. Robertson: All with the same group of lawyers.

Mr. Mullen: All right. Three defendants certainly have the right, each individually, to question a witness.

Mr. Robertson: Yes, and they can pick anybody they want and go to it from beginning to end. They can pick any one they want, any witness, and go to the full extent of the law, but they can't be shifting it around now like a kaleidoscope spitting on their hands and taking a fresh hold every time a different one thinks he has a new idea.

The Court: In other words, you want to cross-examine witnesses put on by United Construction Workers and also United Mine Workers as well as the witnesses put on by the Plaintiff.

Mr. Pollard: I don't say that we would, but I should certainly think we are entitled to that right, Your Honor.

Colonel Harris: Judge, it seems to me that if each defendant has a right to be represented and for his lawyer to conduct examinations and cross examinations, the defendant should not be held to forfeit that right because two or three of them agree on the same lawyer. That would require, every time that you had three or four defendants, that they get entirely different lawyers in order not to forfeit their right of cross examination.

page 91 } Mr. Robertson: Judge, you are familiar with the the Virginia practice just as much as I am, and you know that what Colonel Harris is suggesting is just not done in the Virginia practice. They go and get a whole group of lawyers, and then they have a right to agree among themselves who is going to take each particular witness, either on cross examination or examination, and he must complete it. He is representing all three when he does that. That is what they have said of record and that is what they have repeated here verbally.

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, the right of cross examination is based on hostility, adverseness, and the person who puts the witness on the stand, it is supposed to be his witness and he is supposed to be adverse to the other side. There is no hostility or adverseness as between these defendants, and to permit Mr. Pollard to cross-examine witnesses put on by the United Mine Workers or the United Construction Workers would violate every principle relating to cross examination of witnesses.

Mr. Robertson: It is just to try to maneuver it to there he can ask leading questions, tell the witness what to say and repeat the story. It is perfectly obvious, Your Honor. I am not saying it is with any improper intent, but that is what it amounts to. He would tell the story and then he would ask leading questions. It is too obvious to discuss.

page 92 } The Court: I will take that under advisement. We won't reach that this afternoon.

Do you have a witness to put on now?

Mr. Robertson: Yes, sir. I have two or three exhibits. I was going right ahead with Mr. Bryan as my first witness. He will be quite a long witness. We won't finish him this afternoon.

The Court: That will give me time to think this over before cross examination begins.

Mr. Robertson: Do you want to start this afternoon? It has been suggested to me that we might start tomorrow morning.

The Court: I think we ought to get along as fast as we can. Gentlemen, I will grant Mr. Cowherd permission to withdraw as counsel in the case.

page 93 } (The following proceedings were had in open court.)

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, plaintiff offers in evidence copy of Constitution of the International Union, Mine Workers of America, Washington, D. C., effective November 1, 1948, adopted at Cincinnati, Ohio, October 11, 1948, and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1.

The Court: It will be marked.

(The document referred to was received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1.)

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I wish to read Article 20, which appears on page 77, entitled "District 50," as follows:

"Section 1. District 50, United Mine Workers of America, subject to the jurisdiction and regulation of the International Executive Board, is hereby created and set up under authority of the International Union and may adopt by-laws and rules not inconsistent with this Constitution."

Plaintiff offers in evidence copy of Rules of District 50, United Mine Workers of America, March 15, 1949, District 50, United Mine Workers of America, 900—15th Street, N. W., Washington 5, D. C., and asks that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 2.

page 94 } (The document referred to was received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 2.)

Mr. Robertson: Plaintiff offers in evidence copy of the Rules of the United Construction Workers, affiliated with United Mine Workers of America, March 15, 1949, 900—15th Street, N. W., Washington 5, D. C., and asks that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 3.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON BRYAN, was called as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiff, and having been previously duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, is your name Alexander Hamilton Bryan?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you sign your name A. Hamilton Bryan?

A. That is correct.

Q. Where do you live?

page 95 } A. I live in Richmond.

Q. How old are you?

A. Forty-two.

Q. Have you lived in Richmond all your life?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your present connection with Laburnum Construction Company?

A. I am President of the company.

Q. How long have you been president?

A. Since 1942.

Q. Is that a Virginia corporation?

A. Yes.

Q. Where is its home office?

A. Richmond, Virginia.

Q. Who is the principal owner of the corporation—

Colonel Harris: We object to that as immaterial, if the Court please.

Mr. Robertson: I think it is highly material, Your Honor. It shows what his ownership of the corporation is, and what interest he has in it. It shows his bias. It shows his interest. It shows his motive in everything that is going to follow here as to what he has done.

Colonel Harris: They can't put a witness on and then show his bias, if the Court please.

Mr. Robertson: We certainly can, under our page 96 } practice, Your Honor. That is not a matter of cross-examination. We can show here just what his connection is. Just let them have the whole works, tell the story.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Robertson: Repeat the question, please, Mr. Reporter.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

(The pending question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: I am.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What percentage of the entire corporation would you say you own, approximately?

A. I own all the common stock, and some of the preferred stock.

Q. Could you put it in proportion, two-thirds, one-third, I mean of the whole ownership?

A. I could if I had a little time to think about it.

Q. Do you own over half of the whole company?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. When was the company organized?

A. In 1937.

Q. By whom was it organized?

Colonel Harris: We object to that. It is immaterial. There is no question of who organized it, and that wouldn't throw any light on the issues in this case.

The Court: I will sustain the objection.
page 97 } Mr. Robertson: All right, sir.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Is the Laburnum Construction Corporation prepared to do general construction work?

A. Yes, we perform all types of construction work with the exception of road construction and bridges.

Q. Do you specialize in any particular type of construction?

A. Yes, we specialize on industrial work in connection with chemical plants. We have performed a great deal of work for the du Pont Company, the Solvay Process Division of Allied Chemical and Dye Corporation, the General Chemical Division of Allied Chemical and Dye Corporation.

It is not just building construction work, but includes work of almost all crafts and trades, electrical work, piping work, millwright work, carpentry work, heavy rigging work, and work of that nature.

Q. Could you name some of the localities where the Laburnum Construction Company has done work?

Colonel Harris: We object to that as immaterial. The history of Laburnum as to the places where it has worked in times gone by is not material.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, of course I have no right to cut off any objection, but it looks to me page 98 } that this is just the beginning of an attempt to interrupt the telling of this story. Of course, it is perfectly admissible, and any experienced lawyer is bound to know it is admissible. You have to show that this company was qualified to do the work and set itself out to do the work and did do work, in order to demonstrate what damage has been done to it.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Colonel Harris: We ask an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Could you name some of the localities where you have done work?

Colonel Harris: Do we have to repeat our objection, Judge?

The Court: You may make your objection to this line of questions.

Colonel Harris: All right, sir, thank you.

The Witness: We worked in Detroit, Chicago, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Kentucky, Mobile, Alabama, down in Georgia, North Carolina, and practically every section of the State of Virginia.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What would you say was the approximate aggregate volume of construction work which your Company has done, in dollars, during the last ten years?

page 99 } Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, we object to that. We asked, in interrogatories, questions concerning the financial consideration and gross amount of business and profits of the Laburnum Construction Company, and they objected to the answer, and you ruled in their favor, that they did not have to answer it. Since we couldn't get that information on interrogatories and they objected to giving it, they certainly should not be allowed to give it on trial now.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, of course it is all right with me to argue this in the presence of the jury, and I am going right to the argument. I speak from memory, but I do not understand that any such thing as that happened. It is very vivid in my memory that the Court has not ruled, up to this moment, on the admissibility or inadmissibility of any testimony whatsoever. I understood that they wanted to get the net worth of the Laburnum Company, and the Court refused to do it. We wanted to get the net worth of the United Mine Workers of America, and the Court refused to let us get that. All of that was tentative, subject to a final ruling at the trial.

We are not asking any net worth now. I asked him approximately how much was the aggregate volume of construction work they had done in the last ten years. I want to show whether it is a fly-by-night or a substantial company, because when I get to what they have done to them, I page 100 } think that is very material on how much they have hurt them.

If I were doing a $50 a year business and you ran me out of Kentucky—

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, approximately how much aggregate construction work has your company done over the last ten years?

A. Over $20,000,000 worth of work.

Q. That would be at the rate of $2,000,000 per year?

A. That would be a fair estimate of the average.

Q. Are you personally responsible for any of the obligations of the company?

Colonel Harris: We object to that, if the Court please.

The Court: What is the purpose of that question?

Mr. Robertson: To show what I stated in my opening, that any disaster to the company is a disaster to him.

The Court: The plaintiff is the Laburnum Construction Company?

Mr. Robertson: That is right, sir.

The Court: I will sustain the objection.

. . . . .

. . . . .

Q. Now, Mr. Bryan, there has been introduced in here as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1, the Constitution of the United Mine

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Workers of America. I am not going into it in any detail now, but I just want to ask you a few general questions about it.

Have you studied that Constitution?

A. I have made a detailed study of it.

Q. Have you also studied the official publication of the United Mine Workers of America, the newspaper that it puts out?

A. I have been to the Library of the Department of Labor in Washington, and have personally examined every issue of the United Mine Workers Journal, as far back as 1896.

Q. Have you, at my request, made various photostats which will be introduced here later, or had such photostats made?

A. We have had photostats made of portions of approximately 350 periodicals.

Q. Who is the President of the United Mine Workers of America at this time?

A. John L. Lewis.

Q. Is the United Mine Workers of America divided into districts?

A. Yes, the United Mine Workers of America page 102 } has districts numbered consecutively from 1 through 31, with the exception of Districts 24 and 25. Those districts represent employees who are coal miners and who work in and around the mines. Then there is another district known as District 50, which represents employees in practically every line of endeavor except for coal mining.

Q. Do those districts from 1 through 31 have specific geographic limits?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What, if you know, are the geographical limits of District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America?

A. District 50 has no geographical limitations. It includes the entire United States and Canada.

Q. It includes everything that the United Mine Workers of America includes in territory?

A. That is correct.

Q. Then what classes of laborers are organized within District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America? I mean, what different industries?

A. When District 50 was first organized, on or about September 1, 1936, it represented gas and coke workers. After that, it represented, besides gas and coke workers, chemical workers. At that point it expanded, and it represents at this time all sorts of employees. I have studied copies of the

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

District 50 News, and also the News, which are page 103 } the official publications of District 50. They list a tabulation each two weeks, each time the publication is published, they list a tabulation of the various bargaining agreements made. I have in my file a list of those.

Speaking right now from memory, some of those industries are as follows: bakers, barbers, hospitals, city employees, taxicab drivers, store employees, clerical employees, railroad employees, employees of dairy operators, almost everything you can think of.

Q. Has District 50 got any slogan that you know, under which it acts, to express the purposes of District 50?

A. "Organize the Unorganized."

Q. Who is the Chairman of the Organizing Committee of District 50?

A. A. D. Lewis.

Q. What kin is he to John L. Lewis, if any?

A. Brother.

Q. Who is the Secretary-Treasurer of District 50?

A. Kathryn Lewis.

Q. What kin is she to John L. Lewis, if any?

Mr. Mullen: We object, Your Honor, to what kin any one person in this may be to another. That has no possible bearing on whether a tort was committed down in Breathitt County. Your Honor has already ruled he couldn't ask that question in interrogatories.

Mr. Robertson: Excuse Me. You haven't page 104 } ruled anything finally, Your Honor. It was perfectly definitely understood between the Court and every counsel in the case that anything that has been ruled heretofore was tentative, and the Court was going to rule in the trial as it saw fit.

We have already shown that the Chairman of the Organizing Committee of the national concern is Denny Lewis, John L. Lewis' brother. I am going to ask the next question whether he was appointed or elected.

We are also entitled to know what the connection of Kathryn Lewis is with John L. Lewis, showing how these things are bound up and what the probabilities are or the improbabilities are that they are working in cahoots with each other.

The Court: Gentlemen, suppose you all step out in the hall a few minutes.

(The jury was temporarily excused and left the court room.)

The Court: Do you want to address yourself to that question, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, the question of kinship of any officer in these organizations to any other officer in them certainly has no bearing on whether that organization has committed a tort. It is asked clearly for the purpose of prejudice. They are trying to raise prejudice page 105 } through John L. Lewis by showing that his brother and his daughter are in there. It is an exceedingly improper question, and intended for an improper purpose.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, the intention of it is to bring out the facts and to get every advantage that I am legally entitled to from them, for this plaintiff.

They have denied all agency here. When you come along to Hart and David Hunter and Robinson and Thomas Davis, they admit that they are agents of the United Construction Workers, they admit that they are agents of District 50; they deny that there is any connection at all between any of these actions that were done, between the Construction Workers and the United Mine Workers or District 50 and the United Mine workers.

If Your Honor please, what we are trying to do is to show that they are all just interwoven and intertangled and are acting, as I said, in cahoots.

Your Honor doesn't have to isolate yourself from common sense and human experience. Do you mean that if you were John L. Lewis and appointed your brother to District 50 chairmanship, that that would have nothing to do with it? If you were John L. Lewis and you appointed your daughter Secretary and Treasurer, and that they are not elective offices but that they are appointive offices, by you, and one is your brother and one is your daughter, and they are beholden to you for their jobs, and they page 106 } are members of your family, that that has nothing to do with the interrelationship of these three defendants?

Mr. Pollard: Your Honor, Mr. Bryan is not the page 107 } proper person to prove kinship as to the parties under discussion. Anything he knows about it is hearsay.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, that of course is just quibbling and it is not in accordance with the law.

General reputation and all. He got it out of all those official publications. He does know it.

Mr. Mullen: He is not testifying from his own knowledge.

Mr. Robertson raised the question of agency. If Your Honor please, the question of agency as between these three organizations is to be determined from the constitution and the charter and contracts between them. It is for the Court to construe those. They are written constitutions. They are contracts. The courts have held that they are contracts, and you determine the relationships, agency or nonagency by the construction of those by the courts.

Mr. Robertson: We might just as well go to the mat on that right now. There couldn't be any more unsound statement of law made in a courtroom. Do you mean to tell me that these three union people by drawing up a written thing and acting in accordance with that can limit their agencies and show what their legal consequences are when they employ people and put them out into the field and hold them out as their agents—I don't care what there is written to make a statement to the Court that because they have a paper writing, a self-serving instrument, that that is a measure of their legal liability, that that is the measure of their agency? There is no such law in the land. I say again when we show the interrelationship and the intertangle of this thing and show that the two top officers, one of whom has the chief administrative control is appointed by his brother, John L. Lewis, and draws his pay at the will of John L. Lewis, subject to being overridden if they want to by the International Executive Board and the International Convention, and then his own daughter gets in there and she handles the money as treasurer, and she is appointed by her father and holds her job at his pleasure and draws her pay at his will—that that has nothing to show the interrelationship of these things?

. . . . .

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, that may be true as between the different unions as between themselves, but not as to third persons. When you show what the situation is, you are setting it up in one way on paper and acting in an entirely different way in practice. We have prepared a trial brief here, Your Honor, which we thought would be helpful to the Court. I don't know of any more appropriate time than now to pass it up to the Court, and we will be glad to give counsel on the other side a copy of it. I am going to ask Mr. Moore, who has looked up the law on that, to address himself to that proposition here.

Mr. Allen: May I say just a word here, Your Honor. It is shown all through this record that the object of District 50 was to organize the unorganized. As I recall this record shows, the interrogatories and the documentary evidence here, that the only organizing committee that District 50 has is the organizing committee supplied by the international union consisting of a chairman or president, and A. D. Lewis, appointed by John L. Lewis, and the Secretary of the organizing committee is Kathryn Lewis. If you go back to the very beginning, which Mr. Mullen mentioned here this morning, that District 50 was first organized or the organization of it began on February 8, 1936. At that meeting Mr. John L. Lewis said this, and I am quoting his words. It is in the documentary evidence here:

"If we take in these men—and our Constitution now permits it—there is a question involved as to the conditions under which they shall become part of our organization. I doubt if the organization will want to just issue charters of local unions, giving them the same rights and privileges of men working around a coal mine, participating in elections and conventions and things of that kind. I rather think the course of good judgment would be to keep the United Mine Workers, the heart of it, always like it is, without being subject to being torn down by any subsidiary, collateral organizations. Such expansion as we do in these things might be done on the basis of giving them a semi-autonomous organization—autonomous within their own group, perhaps, with a designated right of the International Union occupying a qualified position in that organization, because of the responsibility of our organization and the necessity of having to comply with our policies. In other words we can work out a reasonable, practical scope and plan of organization. While they might be a part of our organization they would not of necessity be the same part of the organization as the basic membership, because these plans are in every state in the Union.

page 112 } "They would in reality be members of our organization, although functioning in a different classification and in a little different orbit, with semi-autonomous rights—I say semi-autonomous, because I think if the United Mine Workers of America is going to be responsible for them, the United Mine Workers of America should have something to do with their policies.

“I think an entirely practicable program could be worked and followed up in a way that it would not involve the expenditure of any substantial sum of money, and perhaps permit what revenue might be received from them to diverted for a time into organizing purposes. We might have to assist them a little in the beginning, but they have developed some very good talent, some bright young men.

“Board Member Livett: In the absence of any detailed plan, after hearing President Lewis enunciate the policy and ideas of the formation of the organization and always having in mind safeguarding of the autonomous rights of the United Mine Workers of America, I move that the resident Executive Officer be empowered to issue charters to these Federal Local Unions in a form and manner prescribed by and agreeable to the Resident Offices.

“The motion was seconded and after a brief discussion was adopted by unanimous vote.”

So it shows there has been no absolutely autonomous union created out of District 50. It shows page 113 } it was part of the Mine Workers. It shows that it had no organizing committee except that supplied by the United Mine Workers of America, and Mr. Lewis appointed the chairman of the organizing committee, who was his brother, and he appointed a secretary-treasurer who was his daughter.

All of that goes to show the closeness of the relationship, the agency, and the fact, as we contend, that they are just arms of the same institution. I think it is admissible.

The Court: I will allow the question. Do you want to say something further, Mr. Harris?

Colonel Harris: On the question about kinship. I want to call Your Honor's attention to what has happened heretofore on that question. That was Question No. 78 in the interrogatories propounded by the Plaintiff to the United Mine Workers of America. Question 78 reads as follows:

“What is the relationship by blood or marriage between John L. Lewis and A. D. Lewis, and what is the relationship by blood or marriage between John L. Lewis and Kathryn Lewis?”

We objected to that question, and in the hearing before

Your Honor on October 12, 1950, according to the transcript of proceedings which I have in my hand, this took place:

page 114 } "Mr. Pollard: 78. "What is the relationship by blood or marriage between John L. Lewis and
A. D. Lewis, and what is the relationship by blood or marriage between John L. Lewis and Kathryn Lewis."

Mr. Mullen: That is plainly for the purpose of prejudicing the jury. It certainly is objectionable, too."

We were arguing our objections, and Mr. Robertson then stated to the court: "I will agree that will come out."

"The Court: All right. Delete 78."

"Colonel Harris: That is withdrawn. No ruling.

"The Court: Yes."

We argued the question of law and admissibility to Your Honor, and we submit that they agreed with us when they withdrew the question that our objection was well taken. Now they come back and ask the same question of this witness from the stand. We think the consistency of counsel and the consistency of the proceedings in this court establish that they are not entitled to ask that question.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, we might as well clear the ground on this and not have all this quibbling and backing and filling.

Your Honor, I am sure, knows just as well as I do and every counsel in this case knows that time after time after time in these pre-trial conferences when these questions came up the Court said, "I am ruling tentatively when I page 115 } make a ruling and I reserve my right and I am going to rule as I see proper during the course of the trial as the pattern of the trial develops."

That thing shows now that I withdrew the thing because I elected to withdraw it, and it shows that Your Honor made no ruling on that at all, that I voluntarily withdrew it. They cannot fairly come here and say that I bound myself not to do anything. I have learned a whole lot in further study. I don't remember the date of that thing. I have learned a whole lot from further study. Every counsel in this case knows that this case is wide open all through this trial for anybody to make any objections that they see proper to make here or to urge anything that they see proper to urge here. That was understood all the way through. I understand that the Court ruled that the question will be allowed for what it is worth.

The Court: I will hear from Mr. Mullen if he has something to say.

Mr. Mullen: No, I haven't anything further to say, Your Honor. I think the case is perfectly clear on the question of how agency is determined in these union cases. It has been so held not only in intra-union matters, but as to outsiders in cases I have cited there.

The Court: Did any of those cases you cited a moment ago include outsiders suing the union concerning a contract?

Mr. Mullen: I will be glad to give the Court page 116 } a copy of it.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor wants to go into that now, Mr. Moore will address it. I don't know that it has anything to do with the question.

The Court: We will pass it by and I think I will pass this question by overnight. I won't allow him to answer the question tonight. But I will take it under advisement.

Mr. Robertson: Until tomorrow, subject to Your Honor's ruling, I am not going to ask him anything about kinship. I have already asked him whether they were appointed or elected and if they were appointed, by whom.

The Court: And just leave out kinship.

Mr. Pollard: Your Honor, this whole line of questions of course is hearsay, and rather than have to bring it up at the end of each question we might as well thresh that out right now. I think we ought to put the other side on notice.

The Court: I think that should be decided and determined, too, since you have raised the point. I think I might just as well let the jury go on home. What do you think about it, gentlemen?

Mr. Pollard: That is the only thing I have to page 117 } say. Everything Mr. Bryan has said so far is hearsay. We haven't objected to it.

The Court: But you are objecting now to further questions.

Mr. Pollard: To anything further along this line of testimony.

The Court: What do you have to say about that, Mr. Robertson? The objection on ground of hearsay?

Mr. Robertson: I say the hearsay rule has nothing to do with it. I am trying, Your Honor, to clear as much ground as we can so we can move along here. I don't want to quibble and make a lot of objections that have no merit in them if I can help it. When I think that something is entitled to go in here and they can put it in, I will not object to it.

What do we have here? Mr. Bryan says that he has studied those three pamphlets in detail. He says that he has made an exhaustive study of the official publications of these different unions. He says that these questions that he has given are biased on those publications. I say to Your Honor that before the trial is over, we will produce photostats of them and substantiate what Mr. Bryan says, but independently of that when he says that what he has done is based on a study he has made, it is admissible in evidence.

page 118 } Mr. Pollard: Your Honor, he has the documents, and they are the best evidence.

The Court: Where are the documents? Why not offer the documents?

Mr. Robertson: Because they don't come into the trial in an orderly way at this time.

Mr. Pollard: We can't just suit Mr. Robertson's convenience and allow Mr. Bryan to testify as to hearsay.

Mr. Allen: If it please Your Honor, I may say there is an rule of evidence where documents which are voluminous and lengthy, as they are here, interrogatories—I suppose there are several hundred interrogatories with the answers to them, with just dozens of exhibits and copies of these Mine Workers journals, the District 50 news—Your Honor will remember that they were called for in the interrogatories and these gentlemen answered that they had them. All of those documents have been studied and read carefully by Mr. Bryan, and the Courts hold that where documents are voluminous in that sort of way and they are offered in evidence, you understand, and are there for anybody to examine, anybody who has made a study of them and knows what is in them can help the jury along by telling the story in a chronological way as it is told in the complicated and voluminous documentary evidence.

Mr. Greenleaf lays that rule down and Mr. Wig-page 119 } more lays that rule down. There is no authority to the contrary so far as I know. It is done all the time by accountants, all the time. They are permitted to get on the witness stand even in a criminal case and testify to the substance of what is in documents.

Mr. Pollard: Mr. Allen is speaking of the Shop-book rule which was reviewed by our Supreme Court in the Dupont case which was decided in November, but that applies to records of a corporation where they have been gone over by the CPA and where he has conferred with officials of the company and the documents have been sworn to, that they are the documents of the company. We have no such condition here in the evidence that Mr. Bryan is attempting to bring in.

Mr. Allen: I am not talking about any Shopbook rule, if Your Honor please. I am talking about an entirely different rule involving putting before the jury the facts that are found in a lot of documentary evidence. How would we ever get to the end of this case to dump before this jury these constitutions and these hundreds and hundreds of interrogatories and hundreds of pieces of documentary evidence? The jury would never be able to read them or understand them. When that is the case, a man who has read them and studied them and condense what is in them and give it to the jury in a short fashion is permitted to do it.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, that refers page 120 } only to experts. Public accountants, yes. That refers to figures. In the first place, you don't know whether these voluminous papers are admissible. They haven't been passed on. Certainly if they have a bearing on the case, we are not going to let a witness on one side testify what is in them from his point of view. If they are to be introduced, the whole thing has to go before the jury. They have not been introduced here. You would have to take each one and go through it and see whether it is proper evidence to be introduced here. That was all likewise determined in the pre-trial conference. Until that is done and they are put in, I don't think there is any question which can be asked about them.

page 121 } Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I just picked one at random. I can get it out of a hundred. I have here a copy of the United Mine Workers Journal for November 1, 1948. I can bring them on down to date. In every issue, published twice a month, they put down there, "Official Roster of the United Mine Workers of America"; and down here we get to District 50 and there are shown A. D. Lewis, Chairman, Organizing Committee, United Mine Workers of America; Kathryn Lewis, United Mine Workers Building, Washington, D. C., Secretary-Treasurer.

Mr. Bryan is prepared to swear that that is a photostat of an original record which he has himself examined and picked it out and had it photostated. If they want to stick us to the letter of the law rather than the spirit of it, to delay us, we can pull it out and there it is right now. He is prepared to swear to it.

The Court: You are offering that in evidence?

Mr. Robertson: Yes, I will offer it in evidence when the jury comes in.

Mr. Allen: May I say here, too, of course we have a statute which provides for certified copies of documents obtained from public officers like the Department of Labor, but that is only an additional method of proof. It avoids the necessity of calling a witness. When you produce a certified copy, it just speaks for itself and you don't have to put page 122 } anybody on the witness stand even to identify it.

The common law method of proof of a document by compared or examined document is still in force, and it has been distinctly so held in Virginia. We can put Mr. Bryan on the witness stand and hand him as many of these documents as we please, as we think are admissible, and as many as Your Honor will admit, and say, "Mr. Bryan, did you go to the Department of Labor? Did you read this?" "Yes."

"Did you examine it and compare it? Is it an accurate copy of the original?" That is all the law requires.

Mr. Moore: May it please the Court, I would like to say that is found on page 12 of that trial brief, the point Mr. Allen was just making, if Your Honor would care to see the authorities which establish that.

Mr. Robertson: May I make one further statement, Your Honor? I am offering Mr. Bryan as an expert on these constitutions and rules, and as an expert in his knowledge of these official publications. I am prepared right now, if the Court wants to find out whether he is an expert or not, to examine him in detail as to what study he has made of them.

Colonel Harris: We respectfully submit that Mr. Bryan has never been a member of the United Mine Workers, he has never been an administrative officer, he has never worked for the United Mine Workers; and any information that he has page 123 } is a conclusion that he reaches. It is purely hear-say and invades the province of the court and jury in this case. If you could take a plaintiff and put him on the stand and say, "We have a long mass of documents," under the law of Virginia, we could make an affidavit and get them. We didn't do it. But we will circumvent all the customary rules of getting documents and put an interested party on the stand to offer his conclusion and thereby take away from the jury and away from the court the construction of the documents. He merely gives, as one general substitute, his opinion as if it were evidence in the case. We submit that it is not admissible and is not the proper way to prove documents or the contents of documents and is not a subject of expert testimony; and if it were, he is not an expert.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please—

The Court: Let us have the jury. Bring in the jury.

(The jury was summoned and returned to the courtroom.)

The Court: Gentlemen of the jury, it seems that I will be conferring with counsel a little longer. It is 25 minutes after 4. I am not going to delay you further. I think I will excuse you for tonight. Be back tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. In the meantime, don't discuss the case with any outsiders and don't read any newspaper articles about this case during the trial of the case. I don't mean page 124 } don't read the newspapers, but if you see something about it in the newspaper, you had better skip it, because you will get firsthand information right here, and you are bound by the law and the evidence in this case. You are excused until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, of course any expert merely gives his opinion. It is absurd to say you have got to be a member of the union in order to be an expert about the union. You might just as well say that Senator Byrd was no expert on any phase of the law because he is not a lawyer. My suggestion is that Mr. Bryan take the stand and that the Court ask him questions about what study he has made about these constitutions and rules and regulations and what studies he has made about the official publications of these unions; or if the Court prefer, we will do it. Mr. Bryan has spent hours and days and weeks in these studies, and I say without any qualification that he is a highly expert witness on them.

Mr. Mullen: All the study by a man on the evidence in his own case doesn't make him an expert in the case.

Mr. Robertson: That goes to the weight of it, not to the admissibility of it.

Mr. Mullen: Outsiders who are experts can page 125 } testify as experts. Otherwise, it is purely hearsay and purely opinion by one who is not qualified as an expert to make them.

The Court: What would be the objection to offering the documents to substantiate what he is saying?

Mr. Allen: That is exactly what we are going to do, Your Honor. I think these gentlemen have missed the point in the case. Mr. Bryan is not going to testify to anything that is not in these various and sundry hundreds of pages of documents, but the rule of evidence that I am talking about permits him in unfolding his case to testify to things that are in the document which we will put in. If he doesn't do that, the case will be botched, and you will be stopped here, there, and yonder, and we will never be able to unfold the case.

Talking about an expert, of course there is a variety of opinion as to what an expert is. I don't know whether Mr. Bob Pollard was in the case or not, but I took a farmer in a condemnation case and proved he was an expert in his own case, and we got along all right. All a man has to do is to testify that he has special knowledge of the thing from study or experience or practice, and that makes him an expert. This man had special knowledge of real estate values because he had done some trading in real estate, although he was only a farmer. Judge Pollard let him testify as an expert against government experts who testified in the case, and the jury accepted his opinion as an expert rather than that of the government expert. It just depends on how much page 126 } the man knows about the subject as to whether he is an expert or not. -

Colonel Harris: What experience has Mr. Bryan had in organizing unions and administering unions, in drawing contracts between unions? He hasn't had any.

They say that the records are voluminous in the interrogatories. Who made them so? They asked voluminous questions. Then they come into court and say, "Because we ask a lot of questions that will take up a lot of time, we ask you to relax the rules and let us put a plaintiff on to summarize all the documentary evidence in the case."

I have never heard of any such procedure as that. The problem for the court and for the jury could always be removed, and all the trial lawyer would have to do would be to tell his interested client, "Go spend two or three months reading, and then I will put you on and prove your case with one general question to you."

There are restrictions about proving documents. There are predicates that have to be laid. In Virginia, if you want them, you have to make an affidavit about them. We submit that what they are trying to do is a mere device to escape all the rules of evidence, and I challenge them to cite to this Court a single case from Virginia or any other jurisdiction where they put a plaintiff on and allowed the plaintiff to summarize all the documents that he had asked the page 127 } defendant to furnish.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, let's get back down to what we are doing, and don't let us have all these rhetorical challenges like Hart's $500 bet. We haven't done any such thing. We have said that Bryan has studied these things enough to have expert knowledge on them and that he is entitled to state generally, here and there, in response to a specific question, what it provides. He can refer you to the section of it if he wants to.

The Witness: May I state, Your Honor, what I have done?

Mr. Robertson: Wait one minute.

The Court: I would like to see some authority on experts on documents. I know you have experts on real estate values.

Mr. Robertson: You have experts who have studied the law and come in here and tell you what the law of Virginia is. Your Honor, I could come up and get on the stand and testify as an expert to the law of Virginia. How good or how poor I was would go to the weight of my testimony. But if I can do that, anybody else can read these things and come along and talk about them for whatever it is worth. That goes to the weight of it.

The specific thing that we are up against right now is that we asked him, "Was Denny Lewis Chairman of page 128 { the Organizing Committee of District 50?" "Yes."

"Is he a brother of John L. Lewis?" "Yes."

"What is your authority for that statement?" "The official publication of the union, which I have studied and read, and which I will hereafter put in evidence."

"Was Denny Lewis appointed or elected?" "He was appointed by John L. Lewis."

"What is your authority for that statement?" "These publications which I have studied and spent weeks on, and which we will put in here later to substantiate what I say."

"Is Kathryn Lewis John L. Lewis' daughter?" "Yes."

"Was she appointed or elected?" "Appointed."

"What is your authority for that?" "The same thing."

Mr. Mullen: The best evidence—

The Court: You are not offering those publications at this time?

Mr. Robertson: No, sir.

Mr. Pollard: Your Honor, we have to make a distinction between these three rules or constitutions that have already been introduced, and these newspapers. What is in the newspapers is hearsay itself. Instead of bringing the original newspaper, they have just photostated something. They say it is the official publication of the union, but they haven't proved that. Everything they talk about is hear- page 129 { say.

The Court: I understood it was agreed that if it was identical to the official publication, a photostatic copy would be accepted, subject to certain rights of the defendants to object to the admission on other grounds.

Colonel Harris: That is right.

The Court: Wasn't that the agreement?

Mr. Mullen: That was the agreement, Your Honor, to object to it. As to the accuracy, it was to be submitted to us in time to examine them. Between 300 and 500 documents were submitted last week. We had two days to go to Congress and all and examine them. It was a physical impossibility. Your Honor had said two weeks before. You told him to get together with me at once. So, we haven't had a chance to check them for accuracy, nor was it pointed out what particular article they wanted to put in evidence.

Mr. Allen: Mr. Mullen, may I ask you a question?

Didn't you agree in the answer to the interrogatories that this District 50 News was the official organ of District 50? Didn't you agree also that the United Mine Workers Journal was the official organ of the United Mine Workers Union? When we called for the District 50 News, certain copies of them, you agreed to furnish them; and when we called for the Mine Workers Journal you said you had all of them except one or two copies that we called for. You page 130 } said you had them.

Mr. Mullen: You have the interrogatories as to what these documents were. You have your questions in the interrogatories. You can use them there. We handed you certain documents that you called for, yes, but with the understanding that Your Honor had not passed on the admissibility.

Mr. Allen: Of course not.

Mr. Mullen: You have the point of the admissibility of all these documents before you get to the point of asking him anything about them.

The Court: You gentlemen consider it overnight and see what you can find. Would it be satisfactory to meet, say, at 9:30 in the morning? We will meet in chambers at 9:30 in the morning and see what we can find. Court will adjourn for the day.

(Whereupon, at 4:35 o'clock p. m., a recess was taken until 9:30 o'clock a. m. the following day.)

Hearing in the above-entitled matter was resumed, pursuant to recess, at 9:45 o'clock a. m., before the Honorable Harold F. Snead, Judge of the Circuit Court of the City of Richmond, and a Special Jury, on January 23, 1951.

Appearances: Archibald G. Robertson, George E. Allen, T. Justin Moore, Jr., Francis V. Lowden, Jr., Counsel for the Plaintiff.

A. Hamilton Bryan, President, Laburnum Construction Corporation.

Also Present: Robert N. Pollard, Jr.

PROCEEDINGS.

(The following proceedings were had in Chambers.)

* * * * *

Mr. Pollard: What question would you like to take up first?

The Court: The relationship, since that was mentioned.

Mr. Pollard: The objection there is first that Mr. Bryan isn't qualified to testify as to that.

The Court: I believe there were two points, were there not, the relationship and hearsay?

Mr. Robertson: Yes, sir.

Mr. Pollard: What we are prepared to discuss page 133 } is that they are trying to put in accumulative evidence. Mr. Bryan is trying to testify to a mass of records.

Mr. Mullen: Summarizing their language.

Mr. Robertson: We are not pressing that at this time, Your Honor. What we are saying here now is that it is a matter of common knowledge, the relationship between these two people.

The Court: Let me ask you this: I gather from your statement you are not going into the question of what is in those various records at this time.

Mr. Robertson: No, sir; but what I am going into is just to get the issue clear here on that, that there is a well recognized exception to the hearsay rule, if somebody is kin to somebody, if you say you are your father's son or I say you are your father's son, I don't have to go into a long proof to show whether or not you are of legitimate birth. The same thing with Mr. Pollard or Mr. Mullen or me.

The Court: I might shorten this argument a little bit. I have given that matter some consideration overnight, and unless I can be shown to the contrary, that is my belief, that it can be stated in evidence.

Mr. Pollard: Judge, it is neither material nor relevant.

The Court: When it comes to the question of agency, the courts give quite wide latitude on what may be page 133-A } introduced into evidence.

Mr. Moore: May I add one thing which shows this very clearly, right on the point, from 2 Corpus Juris, speaking of the relationship of the parties. It says: "The relationship of agency can not be inferred from mere relationship or family ties unattended by conditions, acts or conduct clearly implying agency, but proof of certain close relationships such as those of husband and wife, parent and child, brother and sister, is usually entitled to considerable weight when taken in connection with other circumstances as tending to establish the fact of agency."

Agency as to third parties is always a fact to be drawn from the acts and circumstances surrounding the case. We believe clearly the Court is correct in that ruling.

Mr. Pollard: That may be, sir, but so far as Kathryn Lewis is concerned, she is an employee of the International Union, and it does not show any agency between the International Union or any other union with respect to her.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, she is hired by her father and holds her position and draws her pay subject to his pleasure.

Mr. Pollard: Yes, but she is in the same union that he is.

Mr. Robertson: That doesn't make any difference.

Mr. Pollard: That is the reason it ought not to page 134 } be admissible.

Mr. Bryan: She is a higher official in District 50.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, the very item that he read there shows that it has no application to this case, nor do the cases that they cite here. These are all cases in which there were no written instruments. In Bloxom v. Rose, which they cite, it is impossible to lay down any effective rule whereby it can be determined where agency shall be sufficient to establish agency in any given case. This question must be determined in view of the facts in each particular case. Whatever form of proof is relied on, however, must have a tendency to prove agency and must be sufficient to establish it by a preponderance of the evidence. It may be said in general terms, however, that whatever evidence has a tendency to prove agency is admissible even though it is not full and satisfactory, it is the province of the jury to pass upon it.

That is spoken of where there is no written instrument. In that case of father and son, the son was in the Army. The father made a lease for property owned by the son. It was denied that he had a right to do it. The claim was agency. They went on to show that he had deposited money to the son's account, collected money, drawn on it, had sold crops, and so forth from the son's property. All of it was a page 135 } case where there was no written instrument.

(Off the record.)

Mr. Mullen: The second case they cite, we have the same thing, a real estate agent claimed that he was an agent to sell the property. There was no written agreement. They therefore undertook to put in evidence showing that he was an agent by outside evidence because there were no written instruments to be construed.

In Laird against Billing Company, we have exactly the same thing. There a man travelling for a wholesale concern sold a bill of goods. After he made out the order he wrote on it, "subject to approval at the home office," and the home office didn't approve it. The party to whom he sold took the position that he was an agent to make sales, not merely to solicit orders. They introduced evidence as to his prior dealings.

In one of the cases where there is a written instrument do they permit outside evidence. It must be construed by the Court. That is the case that I read to you yesterday. There are several of those cases. There is another case in which a man was sued because they interfered with his barge line by strikes. He claimed that the local union was an agent of the international union and that in as much as the international union's constitution provided that there shall be page 136 } no strikes without approval of the international union, that this man on whom there was the question of service, the president of the local union was served the summons and there was an attempt to hold the international union on it. It was held that it could not be done, that they had to construe the constitution, and they ruled whether or not he was an agent, and he was not an agent for that purpose.

Mr. Pollard: Judge, just one other thing here. It might be proper to show the family relationship of Kathryn Lewis and John Lewis if they were trying to prove that she was his agent, but this suit is not against Kathryn Lewis, and it is not against John L. Lewis. It is against the two unions, and their relationship is not relevant in an attempt to establish agency between the unions. It may be relevant to establish personal agency between the individuals.

The Court: What have you got to say about that?

Mr. Moore: Judge, we would like to show you how far off the point the case cited by counsel for the Defendants yesterday is. The case they relied on chiefly was Green v. Obergfeil, 121 Federal (2d) 46. You must keep in mind from the very beginning there is a great difference of what is agency when the matter arises between the principal and the agent. That is when you look at the contract between the two of them, but where a third party is involved the principal and the agent can call each other anything they want to. If their page 137 } acts and circumstances show they were in fact agents, then the jury may find they are agents, even though they specifically say they are not agents.

In the case they cited it was strictly one of these intra-union affairs. It was a suit by the International Union of the United Brewery, Flour, and so forth, workers, against the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. It was a plain jurisdiction dispute, as they call it in the labor law, over who should have jurisdiction over the drivers of brewery trucks. The brewery workers were under the A. F. of L. first, and they complained they had exclusive right to organize these brewery truck drivers. The teamsters union came under the A. F. of L. domination later, and they claimed that the drivers naturally would come under their jurisdiction. The A. F. of L. executive council issued a ruling saying that the drivers should come under the teamsters jurisdiction. The brewery Workers refused to abide by that decision and sought an injunction in the district court of the United States to prevent the A. F. of L. executive council from making such a transfer as this.

It is interesting to note that there were not outside parties involved. The employer of the brewery truck drivers was not involved. It was strictly between these unions.

There the Court of Appeals dissolved the injunction, holding, first, it was "a labor dispute within the meaning of the Norris-LaGuardia Act, and therefore no injunction would lie," and then the Court held that this was an intra-union affair and the court would not interfere with intra-union affairs unless some injustice was shown. The real question was whether the A. F. of L. council acted within the rights of the contracts it had with the brewery union and the teamsters union in making this decision. The court held that if that council had acted within its rights, no party was aggrieved. Therefore they said the only time you can get to the courts is when you show one of these contract provisions has been violated.

That has absolutely nothing to do with where a tort has been committed against a third party. He is claiming that the two parties are agents for each other.

The second case, as Mr. Mullen said, it was simply a question of whether or not service on a member of an international union was service on the union. Of course the courts held that it was not. And that is not involved in this present case.

Mr. Mullen: Service on the local union was page 139 } service on the International Union. That was the question. That was an outside party, a third party.

Mr. Moore: This is what the headnote says, Mr. Mullen:

"Service of process on the president of a local Longshoremen's labor union who was not an officer or representative of the international labor union, was held insufficient to give the court jurisdiction,"—

Mr. Mullen: That is exactly what I said.

Mr. Moore: —"In an action against the international union under the Clayton Antitrust Act."

Mr. Mullen: But it is based on the construction of the Constitution as to the relation between the international union and the local union. The Court also cited the Coronado case, and said that an action could not be brought into court against an international union on service to the local union. That was service on a third party.

Mr. Moore: It is exactly the question of service of process. The court also said the third party had made out a good cause of action. Here we are not involved with service of process. They have all appeared.

Mr. Robertson: It is a novel proposition to me, Judge. We are charging the commission of a tort by Hart, acting within the scope of his authority for all three of these page 140 } defendants, and it is a novel proposition to me that they come along here and say that under the written contract between us, you are out of court. I might just as well come along and say that the private instructions to a motorman not to hurt anybody made the transit company immune when he ran over somebody and killed him. I have never heard that proposition put out yet.

Mr. Mullen: You have introduced these three written instruments, and certainly ever since I have known anything about the law, where you have a written instrument like that, it is up to the court to construe it or put in evidence to change it.

I think Mr. Bryan is not involved in this discussion.

Mr. Allen: That is only a part of evidence. We are going to introduce not only the written instruments that have been introduced, but certain of the interrogatories which deal with their answers, and we are going to introduce documentary evidence of proceedings at their convention, and statements by the president of the international union contained in the United Mine Workers Journal, all sorts of documentary evidence to show that these men were acting within the scope of their employment.

Certainly when Hart admittedly went there to do what Mr. Mullen says he went there to do, they can't deny page 141 } that he was acting within the scope of his employment then, but if on that mission he exceeded his authority or instructions, and what-not, on the same principle referred to by Mr. Robertson here, they would be liable for his tortious acts. Nobody has ever disputed that.

Mr. Robertson: Haven't they confused the point? Of course, we put in the three booklets, and if the book says one thing and we come before Your Honor and it develops there is a dispute here as to what the meaning of it is, and there is no ambiguity in it, then it is a question for the Court to construe those written instruments.

That is not what we are here for now. We say that this man went out there acting within the scope, we say, of both his actual and ostensible authority.

Mr. Mullen: But he was only an employee of the UCA.

Mr. Robertson: It remains to be seen. We say he is an employee of all three. You have admitted he was the agent of two of them, in your answer signed by all counsel, and I can get it out and read it. You have admitted he was the agent of the United Construction Workers, and you have admitted that he was the agent of District 50. You have denied that he was the agent of the United Mine Workers, and that is what we are going to prove here.

Mr. Allen: When it comes to the question of page 142 } whether he is the agent of the United Mine Workers, you go back to the power of control, not what they actually—

Mr. Robertson: Excuse me once more. When you get him in—I think this is a jury question if we didn't go any further. They have admitted that the United Construction Workers is a part of District 50, and that District 50 is a part of the United Mine Workers. Our contention is that we have a jury question right there; that when they say that these are too smaller parts of the whole, and when this thing can act only through its instrumentalities and members and agencies, then it is a jury question as to whether they were doing it or not.

When we get back to District 50, we have already got it back to the United Mine Workers.

Mr. Moore: The case of agency is a fact. It is always a jury question. The contract may be part of the circumstances, but it certainly is not all of the circumstances.

The Court: Do you have anything else you want to say, Mr. Mullen?

Colonel Harris: I thought Mr. Pollard's statement, Judge, was most important, that it is not a question of proving agency of Kathryn Lewis for John L. Lewis. They are trying to prove the agency of one union for another. It seems to me that that distinction and difference is one that we page 143 } can't overlook.

The Court: What about that point?

Mr. Allen: Let me answer that. This is a complete answer.

Mr. Robertson: Let me say one thing. Judge, these labor unions, all the cases say, while they are not incorporated, they partake of the nature of a corporation. They can act only through their agents and officers and smaller units. We say John L. Lewis, the top man in charge of the whole thing, appointed his own daughter the Secretary and Treasurer of District 50, the biggest district in the whole thing. That is admissible to show the close interrelationship and how they were hooked up together.

The Court: The relationship between District 50 and the United Mine Workers?

Mr. Robertson: That is right.

Mr. Allen: Now, let me finish what I was going to say. I will go back to this premise: It is admitted in this record that District 50 is co-extensive, geographically and jurisdictionally, with the United Mine Workers. It reaches all over the United States exactly as the United Mine Workers does, and up into Canada like the United Mine Worker does.

To connect the United Mine Workers with District 50, in view of that set-up, you go back and inquire who page 144 } has the power of control over District 50. There isn't any question about the fact, from the constitutions and rules and all this other documentary evidence and interrogatories, that the United Mine Workers has the power of control over District 50. It exercises it by the President of the United Mine Workers appointing the Chairman of the Organizing Committee of District 50, namely, A. D. Lewis. It exercises it by the President of the United Mine Workers appointing the Treasurer of District 50, namely, Kathryn Lewis.

The Virginia cases—Booker v. Musselman, 152 Va. 293,

Ideal Steam Laundry v. Williams, 149 S. E. 479 and 153 Va. 176, and a number of others, Southern Stevedoring Co. v. Harris, in 58 S. E. (2d) 302, and Nolde Bros. v. Chalkley, 35 S. E. (2d) and 184 Va. 553—they all say it goes back to the power of control. If you have the power to control the party, then you are responsible for that party's actions. It is a jury question here, under all this documentary evidence and anything that may be said, as to whether that agency exists by virtue of the several things we have referred to.

Mr. Mullen: Even if he is correct that he can show the power of control, the power of appointment, that is one thing. You say he appointed the administrative officer or Chairman of the Organizing Committee, whatever you wish to call him, and Kathryn Lewis, and by reason of his appointment showed control; but the fact that she was kin to him had page 145 } nothing to do with it. You are basing it on the power of control by appointment, not by kinship. The kinship has nothing whatever to do with it. It is solely, I think, to prejudice the jury.

Mr. Robertson: May I ask you one question?

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

Mr. Robertson: Would you seriously argue that if you were the president of the United Mine Workers of America, and District 50 comes along and you appoint your own son and daughter in there to hold office at your pleasure, and draw their pay at your will, that that has nothing to do with influencing and showing the relationship?

Mr. Mullen: Not the mere kinship, no. Appointment is the matter you are arguing about, and it is the matter Mr. Allen was arguing about.

The Court: Gentlemen, I overrule the objection, and we will proceed now. Of course, you want to note your exception to the Court's ruling.

There is one other question that I was going to consider, and I have not come to any conclusion on it yet. I failed to get whether Mr. Harris, during the pleadings, had represented himself to be counsel for all of the defendants or one. I do not know whether we went into that yesterday or not. Did we, Mr. Harris?

Colonel Harris: We didn't conclude it. On the page 146 } pleadings, I think that both Mr. Mullen and I represented all three defendants; but in the distribution among ourselves, Mr. Pollard represents District 50 and Mr. Mullen and I represent the International Union and the UCW.

The Court: I will not try to decide that at this time.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Please let the record show that we except to the Judge's ruling allowing the question to be asked.

Mr. Mullen: Judge, concerning the interrogatories, studying overnight, I ran into a typographical error, and we would like to file amended answers to Question 83 in the Answer of the United Construction Workers to the interrogatories.

Mr. Robertson: Let's see what it is.

Mr. Mullen: And to 85.

The Court: It is a typographical error?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Addressed to District 50.

Mr. Mullen: It is plainly a typographical error. I know just how it was made.

Mr. Robertson: I can't get the sense of it from reading it now. I will ask the Court to hold the ruling in abeyance until I can compare them.

The Court: Counsel tells me it was a typographical error, and I will let you make your objection. I am sure page 147 } it was, if Mr. Mullen tells me it was.

I will not pass on it at the moment, and give them an opportunity to pass on it.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: May we lodge that with you?

The Court: Yes, surely.

(The following proceedings were had in open court.)

Mr. Robertson: Mr. Bryan, will you come back to the stand, please, sir?

Whereupon,

ALEXANDER HAMILTON BRYAN,
the witness on the stand at the time of recess, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION (continued).

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, toward the conclusion of your testimony yesterday, you testified that John L. Lewis is President of the United Mine Workers of America, and that A. D. Lewis is the Chairman of the Organizing Committee of District 50. Is A. D. Lewis also known as Denny Lewis?

A. That is correct.

Q. What kin is Denny Lewis to John L. Lewis, if you know?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. Denny Lewis is John L. Lewis' brother.

Q. Who is the national highest ranking executive officer of the United Construction Workers, if you know?

A. Denny Lewis.

page 148 } Q. Who is the Secretary-Treasurer of District 50?

A. Kathryn Lewis.

Q. What kin, if any, is Kathryn Lewis to John L. Lewis?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, we would like to make the objection that you have already ruled on. We would like the record to show that our objection runs to this entire line of testimony.

The Court: Very well.

The Witness: Miss Kathryn Lewis is John L. Lewis' daughter.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Was Kathryn Lewis elected to her position, or appointed to it by her father?

A. She was appointed by Mr. John L. Lewis, with the approval of the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America.

Q. Who is the Secretary-Treasurer of the United Construction Workers?

A. Mr. O. B. Allen is the Comptroller of the United Construction Workers.

Q. Do you know whether or not he was appointed by John L. Lewis?

A. He was appointed by Mr. Lewis with the approval of the International Executive Board.

Q. Was Denny Lewis appointed by John L. Lewis as Chairman of the Organizing Committee of District 50, or was he elected to that office?

A. He was appointed by Mr. John L. Lewis, with the approval of the International Executive Board.

Q. Who has the power to discharge him, if you know?

A. Mr. John L. Lewis, as President of the International Union, has the power to suspend or remove from office any appointed employee, subject, however, to the approval of the International Executive Board.

Q. If you know, who has the power to suspend Miss Kathryn Lewis?

A. Mr. John L. Lewis can suspend or remove her from office, again with the approval of the Board.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. If you know, who has the power to discharge the gentleman that you said was the Comptroller of the United Construction Workers?

A. Mr. John L. Lewis, subject to the approval of the Board.

Q. Mr. Bryan, under date of April 15, 1947, did you execute a contract with the Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council regarding the employment of A. F. of L. labor by Laburnum Construction Corporation?

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * *

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Is that the executed original of the contract you have mentioned?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Robertson: Plaintiff offers this contract in evidence and asks that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 4.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 4, and received in evidence.)

Mr. Robertson: I don't think it is necessary to read it at this time, Your Honor.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, in your opening statement here, a contract between Laburnum and the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, dated October 28, 1948, has been mentioned. I will come to that contract in a moment.

Prior to the execution of that contract, had Laburnum done any construction work for Island Creek Coal Company or any of its associated or subsidiary companies?

page 151 } Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Objection, Your Honor.
It is immaterial and irrelevant.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, the Court ruled yesterday that this line of testimony is admissible to show the business relationship that had been built up between Laburnum and these companies, and the value of it.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor made no such ruling yesterday.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Mullen: Note an exception, please.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We note an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. The question, Mr. Bryan, was whether, prior to October 28, 1948, Laburnum Construction Company had done any construction work for Island Creek Coal Company or any of its associated or affiliated companies.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, I would like to know what the plaintiff is reading from. I don't think that is proper.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, there is quite a list of these contracts here, and we are going, in due course, to introduce them, one by one. We can take only one step at a time. At my request, Mr. Bryan has made a memorandum of these contracts in order that he may mention them now, as to which ones they are. Of course, he page 152 } could lay that aside and do it from his memory.

I think in fairness to the witness, he has a right to refer to a record in a matter of this sort, to call the roll of the contracts he had before October 28, 1948.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: It is not the established practice in Virginia, Your Honor, and the cases say it is not allowed.

Mr. Robertson: I take issue with that.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: I don't see why Mr. Bryan should be privileged in that respect.

Mr. Robertson: I take issue with that, Your Honor. It is in accord with the established practice in Virginia; and when they get on the stand, if they get into a complicated sequence of events which it is impossible for anybody to hold within their memory, they have the same right Mr. Bryan has, and I have no right to object to it.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, it is provided in Paul v. Miller, 17 Gratt. 187, that a witness cannot read from a memorandum; that he cannot bring a memorandum on the stand and read from it; that he has to testify from memory; that prior to his examination he can refresh his memory, but he cannot read from a memorandum or record of answers to be made, brought on the witness stand. That never has been changed in Virginia. That is the law.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, my understanding is that the entire matter is within the discretion of the Court as to what is necessary in a given situation to advance the interests of justice and to help in the proper trial of the case. I am going to ask Mr. Allen to address himself to that.

Mr. Allen: If it please Your Honor, Mr. Robertson is exactly right in that statement. The case referred to by Mr. Mullen does not prohibit the practice we are following here. It is true a witness will not be allowed to read the memorandum to the jury, but the universal rule is, not only in Virginia, but Mr. Wigmore lays it down in Volume 2, pages 826-829, and in his New Wigmore Code at pages 37 and 40 of 2 Wigmore, that the witness will be permitted to take any memorandum with him to the witness stand, whether it is made by himself or somebody else. The question is: Does it refresh his recollection? He looks at it. Then he raises his head and testifies. He looks at it and then he testifies. He is testifying from his own recollection, refreshed by the memorandum. That is the universal rule.

It is largely within the discretion of the jury; and if they want to see the memorandum he is using, Mr. Wigmore says they have a right to look at it, and not only that, they have a right to call for the documents he is talking about. We have them, and will produce them. One of the requisites of that rule is that the documents must be in court.

page 154 { The Court: You expect to produce those documents.

Mr. Allen: Yes, sir.

The Court: You have checked and you have gotten that list from the documents.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: Objection overruled.

Mr. Mullen: An exception noted.

Mr. Pollard: Note an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I will ask you, Mr. Bryan, to refresh your memory from the memorandum you have there and then testify from your memory as refreshed.

A. Do you want me to name the contracts?

Q. Yes, sir. I do not at this time want to go into any detail of them. We are going to produce them later, but at this time we just want to mention it and get the broad outline of what the facts of the case are according to our contention.

A. Prior to October 28, 1948, we had been awarded these contracts by Island Creek Coal Company and its associated and subsidiary companies. Contract dated September 6, 1947, with the Pigeon Creek Development Company for the construction of 53 prefabricated dwellings at Delbarton, West Virginia. A contract dated June 29, 1948, with the Island Creek Coal Company for the construction of two page 155 } store buildings, one at the Brookside Subdivision near Delbarton and the other at the Valley View Subdivision near Logan, West Virginia.

Q. I am going to ask you what was the money value, the money amount of construction in each contract, if you will.

A. In the first contract mentioned for the construction of the 50 prefabricated houses, the money value was $95,631, including extra work which was awarded. In the case of the two store buildings at the Brookside Subdivision and the Valley View Subdivision the amount of the work was $66,486.05.

On September 19, 1948, we were awarded another contract by Island Creek Coal Company for the construction of an appliance warehouse near Holden, West Virginia. The amount of that contract was $40,898.89.

On October 21, 1948, we were awarded another contract by Island Creek Coal Company for the construction of a building known as Store No. 15 near Holden, West Virginia. The amount of that contract was $34,313.31.

They were the contracts which were awarded to us prior to October 28, 1948.

Q. Do you know what the total volume of construction was in those contracts?

Mr. Pollard: Excuse me.

page 156 } Mr. Robertson: In dollars.

Mr. Pollard: Your Honor, to save the Court's time we would like to have an understanding with the Plaintiff that when we make an objection it will apply to the entire line of testimony so that we won't have to keep repeating it.

The Court: That is understood.

Mr. Robertson: I understand you are objecting to everything we offer.

The Witness: It would be necessary, Mr. Robertson, to add up those figures. I do not have a sub-total. The total amount of all the work which we performed for Island Creek Coal Company, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company and its subsidiaries amounted to $651,192.84 over a 28-month period.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. That would include all work in Breathitt County, Kentucky?

A. That is correct.

Q. What was the sum total profit to Laburnum on that work?

A. The total net job profit which we made on all of those contracts, 12 or 13, amounted to $58,714.26. That work was over a period from September 6, 1947, until the end of 1949, 28 months roughly.

Q. At my request, have you made a computation to show what the average profit per year would be on that work?

A. Yes, sir. Based on a total net job profit page 157 } of $58,714.26 for work performed over a period of 28 months, the average earnings per year would be $25,163.28.

Q. Mr. Bryan, who is the president of the Island Creek Coal Company?

A. The the present time the president is Mr. R. E. Salvati.

Q. Do you know whether or not he is president of the associated and affiliated companies of Island Creek Coal Company?

A. He is also president of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company. Island Creek Coal and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company have a common management.

Q. Do you know whether or not he is president of the Spring Fork Development Company?

A. Spring Fork Development Company is a wholly owned subsidiary of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company. I don't think Mr. Salvati is President of that subsidiary. Somebody else is.

Q. Are you personally acquainted with Mr. Salvati?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he a friend of yours?

A. I regard him as a friend.

Q. Who is the chairman of the board of directors of Island Creek Coal Company?

page 158 } A. Mr. J. D. Francis.

Q. Are you personally acquainted with him?

A. Yes, sir. He was the president of those two companies before Mr. Salvati became president.

Q. Is Mr. Francis a friend of yours?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before you entered into this contract of October 28, 1948, what was the relationship between Laburnum and Island

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Creek, Pond Creek, and Spring Fork Development Company? What I am driving at is, had those contracts been worked out in satisfaction and harmony, or had there developed friction and differences?

A. There had never been any difference that I knew anything about. As far as I know, the management of the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, and the Island Creek Coal Company were pleased and satisfied with the work which we had done. In September, 1948, we received a letter from the Island Creek Coal Company asking us to take charge of their building program in West Virginia in connection with the construction of stores, churches, community buildings, beauty shop, lunch rooms, a great deal of work.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Now, Mr. Bryan, I am coming in a moment to this contract of October 28, 1948. Simultaneously with the execution of that contract did you have any conversations with Mr. Salvati regarding it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the general import of those conversations?

Mr. Mullen: We object to that as conversation between people who are not parties to this suit.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, it is the same old matter in a slightly different aspect. One of the vital elements of our case here is that Laburnum had built up an exceedingly valuable business connection and had done work to the satisfaction of Island Creek Coal Company to such extent that when they entered this contract of October 28 and as part of the inducement to undertake that contract on account of the difficulties of the situation, they were promised and given assurance that they would have all the work in this territory and it all goes to the value of the business connection that Laburnum had built up and to the extent to which they had been wronged and damaged if these unions broke it up.

tion concerning any contracts it may have had with Island Creek Coal Company, and it limits its alleged losses to the state of Kentucky. Any other evidence should not be allowed to be brought in, sir.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, Mr. Pollard is a god enough lawyer to know that we don't have to allege our evidence and every bit of our evidence in the notice of motion for judgment. They called for an itemized statement of our losses in this $500,000, and they have got it. We said we were out there to follow this master plan, and that we had it practically within our hands and had the promise and assurance of it, and they broke it up. They have had fair notice, and they have had the particulars of it, you remember, in these interrogatories. They made us itemize it.

Colonel Harris: May I add an objection, if the Court please. As I understand the cases, when a man comes in and wants to get damages on account of any contracts that have been interfered with, it must be with relation to existing contracts. If it is not with relation to existing contracts, the claimed damages are too speculative and remote and contingent, and he does not allege that he had existing contracts. He had an expectation of getting some contracts in the future, but he had not got them. We submit that under page 161 } the decisions that is not a recoverable element of damages, and testimony on what he expected to get is not admissible.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, this sounds to me like—

The Court: What is your authority?

Mr. Robertson: It is in your memorandum there, the trial memorandum that I passed up yesterday. I am saying it sounds to me like Colonel Harris hasn't read it. The whole point is—I am fully aware it is in the memorandum that Your Honor has the original of, and they had a copy of it overnight. It sounds to me that you haven't read it.

Colonel Harris: You didn't give me one.

Mr. Robertson: I gave your side one and you are all representing the same crowd.

Mr. Mullen: I haven't found it in there, and I read it.

The Court: We will recess for five minutes, gentlemen.

(Brief recess.)

page 162 } (The following proceedings were had in chambers.)

The Court: Suppose you proceed first, Mr. Robertson, because you are familiar with it.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, I turn first to page 14 of the notice of motion for judgment to see whether our allegations are broad enough to cover our proof. I am aware it is quite a long sentence, but I don't think I have to get up to the middle of it.

"—and did actually—"

Mr. Pollard: Where are you starting?

Mr. Robertson: About the middle of page 14 of the notice of motion for judgment, talking about "the said actions were willful, malicious, illegal and unwarranted and intended to and did actually greatly damage and injure the Plaintiff in and about its property and reputation and caused Plaintiff's work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, to be stopped and its said contracts to be cancelled, and further caused Plaintiff to lose other contracts for work which would have resulted in large profits to Plaintiff."

There is no limitation there to Kentucky.

I haven't finished yet and don't interrupt me, Mr. Pollard. I haven't finished.

The Court: We all want to be friends here. It is hard enough without getting upset. Let's all go along as coolly as we can.

Mr. Pollard: Mr. Robertson is the only one page 163 } who is getting upset.

The Court: It is tough on all of us, I can tell you.

Mr. Robertson: "—and caused Plaintiff's work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, to be stopped and its said contracts to be cancelled, and further caused Plaintiff to lose other contracts for work which would have resulted in large profits to Plaintiff."

As I said in my opening statement, this is the third largest commercial coal company in the United States and the largest one in the coal fields of West Virginia. Of course we were out there in the whole field, and there is no such limitation as they argued in the courtroom a moment ago to Your Honor.

If Your Honor please, I am coming to the long memorandum here in a moment. We are all familiar with the rule which prohibits the recovery of speculative and remote and contingent profits, but we are also familiar with the rule, Townsend v. Atlantic Coast Railroad, Atlantic Realty Company, which went up from Petersburg, and there is another one, the Forbes case is one of them, which say that when you have an established builder who has built up a business relationship that has resulted in actual profits over a long enough period of time to show stability of operation and stability of profit and to show that the concern is soundly on its feet and soundly operated so that it has made these profits in the past and it has formed this business connection which so far as we can see would continue into the future, and you can show what the volume of work would be and what normally could be expected to result from it, it is admissible in evidence to show the measure of the loss from any illegal destruction of that business connection.

Now we come to page 13 and 14 of the trial brief. On page 13 there is the heading compensatory damages: "Compensatory or actual damages are by definition the damages in satisfaction of loss or injury sustained as a result of the wrongful acts of the defendants. Compensatory damages include all damages other than punitive damages."

Then quoting from 15 American Jurisprudence: "That the destruction or interruption of a business, or an injury thereto, by the wrongful act of another is a proper element of damage, provided, of course, it is the natural and proximate result of such act, and the injured person is entitled to recover for such damages as to the natural and proximate result of the wrongful act complained of."

"In the present case, the Plaintiff will show loss of profits from both existing and future contracts, damage due to the interruption of Plaintiff's business in Kentucky and damage to Plaintiff's reputation, all directly caused by the tortious acts of the defendants."

"The leading Kentucky case allowing these elements as proper elements of compensatory damage is American Bridge Co. v. Glenmore Distilleries Company, 32 Ky. L. R. 873, 107 S. W. 279, (1908). In that case, Glenmore was reconstructing an old distillery plant so as to make it a new and up-to-date plant. The American Bridge Co. contracted to build a larger tower which was an essential part of the new plant. Glenmore was out of business until the new plant was in operation. The defendant bridge company did not complete the tower in the specified time and Glenmore sued for damages for interruption of its business and loss of profits. The lower court awarded Glenmore $10,950 which judgment the Court of Appeals of Kentucky affirmed and stated at 107 S. W. 284:

"The profits which the court permitted the jury to award the appellee are not so speculative in their character as to preclude their recovery. The most conservative men invest countless thousands of dollars in the building and operation of distilleries in this state, and profits can as certainly be expected from their operation as from any other class of manufacturies;—’ ”

“The Glenmore case was cited and approved in the later Kentucky case of Carson-Muse Lumber Company v. Fairbanks, Morse and Co.

“The Plaintiff in the present case will prove page 166 } these elements of compensatory damage by the degree of proof which is required by Virginia law as set forth in the leading case of Forbes v. Wyatt, 143 Va. 802 (1925). The Forbes case was an action by a tenant against his landlord for damages due to the failure of the landlord to deliver certain premises on the day provided in the lease. The plaintiff was in the storage business and claimed damages for estimated profits based on the past results of his business. The court allowed the plaintiff to recover these future profits, stating at page 809.

“As a general rule the expected profits of a commercial business are too uncertain, speculative, and remote to permit a recovery for their loss. However, the loss of profits from the destruction or interruption of an established business may be recovered for if the amount of actual loss is rendered reasonably certain by competent proof; but in all such cases it must be made to appear that the business which is claimed to have been interrupted was an established one, that it had been successfully conducted for such a length of time, and had such a trade established that the profits thereof are reasonably ascertainable.’ ”

I cite those other cases.

“Since the Kentucky law allows damages for the interruption of business and loss of future profits as a matter of substantive right, and the plaintiff can prove such page 167 } damages by evidence which will meet the Virginia procedural requirements, plaintiff will be entitled to these items as elements of compensatory damages.”

I don't know whether Mr. Moore or Mr. Allen want to say any more there or not.

Mr. Allen: If it please Your Honor, the rule about recovering speculative profits is based, first, upon the assumption that you have suffered no actual damages that can be proved with reasonable certainty. It is based upon the further proposition that the business concern which it is claimed has been damaged was not an established business to the extent that you could expect reasonable profits from it.

Just picking up your digest here, which is not brought up to date, I was trying to run down some cases I had in mind. I find the old case here of Dangerfield v. Thompson, and Peshine v. Shepperson, in 17 Gratt 742, and they say: "Certain wrongful acts will necessarily injure the business of a person whose rights are violated, and when such is the case the jury may consider the injury to plaintiff's business in assessing damages and in such a case will ascertain the damages, the nature and the extent of the merchant's business, whether profitable or not, are proper subjects of inquiry."

There is a later case right up here in Law and page 168 } Equity Court No. 2 a few years ago in which Mr.

Golden represented the plaintiff, Golden and Golden. The case went to the Court of Appeals and it involved the damages of a mercantile business. A man was operating a grocery store and somebody else did something that violated his rights in connection with the operation of that store. The question was whether he could recover the profits that he would have made if his business had not been interrupted by this defendant. The court went on to say that you could take the man's past experience and the profits that he earned in the past and judge by that, that the jury had a right to have all that put before them to determine whether it was reasonable and proper to allow for profits in the future. There had been an established business and because there had been an established business and the man had shown that that business was interfered with or broken up, therefore he could recover the profits that he could reasonably have made if his business had not been interfered with. I think that is the latest case in Virginia, and they there went into the types of evidence that are admissible, and the door is just wide open.

Mr. Moore: I just want to clear up the conflict of laws point. Damages as a general rule are a matter of substantive law. Our main point is that Kentucky will allow these damages for the interruption of business, loss of page 169 } business, and damage to reputation, but of course the degree of proof is procedural and governed in this case by the law of Virginia. We simply say under the Kentucky law we are entitled to it and I think that Glenmore case shows that. Under the Forbes case, that sets forth what degree of proof you need. We feel that we can satisfy that degree of proof to make these profits what the case calls reasonably ascertainable.

Colonel Harris: If the Court please, the gentlemen in their argument confuse two things. They have put on evidence up to this time of what the annual profits of the plaintiff were. That is a past fact. We can check on that and see if the figures are correct, and a jury in many jurisdictions is allowed to take the evidence of past profits and from that to calculate what he can reasonably expect to make from that business. That is one thing. That isn't the thing that we are objecting to at this moment. What we are objecting to is that he departs from that and wants to be allowed damages for contracts that he expects to get. He hasn't got any contract. He has a hope and an expectancy.

There have been many cases on the recoverability of profits in lawsuits, and from my jurisdiction there are three separate and distinct cases, and they discuss the right to recover profits on existing contracts. In Kentucky there are page 170 } many cases on profits. For instance, in the case of Hines v. Denny, 227 S. W. 567, 190 Kentucky 416, the Court said: "The law regarding the recovery of damages for loss of commissions or future profits, whether resulting from a breach of contract or arising out of a tort, is also well settled in this as in other jurisdictions. In all cases the damages claimed must be such as are directly and proximately caused by the breach or injury and also such as in the contemplation of the parties could reasonably have been anticipated. Moreover, the damages claimed should be capable of being definitely ascertained. Where they are so speculative and dependent upon numerous and changing contingencies that their amount is not susceptible of actual proof, no recovery can be had." Citing 13 Sykes 36: "As already intimated, the evidence in this case as to the loss of commissions by appellee is based upon too many contingencies, is too general and indefinite to admit of a proximately accurate ascertainment of the character or amount of the damages claimed, and was wholly insufficient to show that they were or are of such a character as could have been contemplated by the parties, for it was not made to appear that the servant of the railroad company who received the appellee's baggage or any who had it in charge or by whom it was lost knew that it contained samples or the use that the appellee intended to make of it. We have frequently held that damages page 171 } of the character here claimed are peculiarly conjectural and speculative, and hence not recoverable."

Then in another case, Weick v. Dougherty, 139 Kentucky 528, 90 S. W. 966, 28 Kentucky Law Reports 930, 3 LRA New Series 348.

Mr. Allen: What is the last citation?

Colonel Harris: 3 LRA New Series 348. In this case the court said: "The instructions given by the trial judge correctly advised the jury as to the law of the case, except that one of them authorized the allowance to appellee of damages for the loss of profits in his business as a huckster alleged to have been caused by the negligence of appellant in permitting the destruction of his wagon. The jury should not have been allowed to consider such loss of profits in estimating appellee's damages, nor should he have been allowed to introduce evidence upon that question. This is not the character of case in which damages can be recovered for loss of profits. In an action to recover damages for injury to property by reason of the negligence of the defendant the plaintiff can not recover anything by reason of his inability to instantly supply himself with other property in lieu of that injured or destroyed. Such damages are too remote to be the subject of judicial ascertainment."

He wants to show the analogy of that case. He wants to show that he has lost profits because he could page 172 { have obtained contracts and to show what they were, but he didn't have a contract. Whether he gets the contract depends on too many contingencies.

In the first place, the company may call for bids. He may not be the low bidder. In the second place, the company may find that it is losing money on its operation and may decide to cease that operation. In the third place, something like a war may come along and make a shortage of materials, and the company doesn't give him a contract because they see they are going to have difficulty in carrying out their program.

There is a difference, clearly, it seems to me, between speculating on what a man might get by way of specific contracts and allowing a recovery on contracts which he actually had. No man ever knows until the contract is made whether somebody else is going to hire him.

In another Kentucky case there was a jockey who sued. That is the case of Tucker v. Horn, 103 S. W. 717, 31 Kentucky Law Report 806. In that case the Court said:

"We think the court erred in authorizing the jury to find for the plaintiff anything on the score of what he might have made by riding outside mounts. In the first place, it is neither alleged in the pleading nor established by the evidence, except in his own opinion, that Earl Horn would have been employed by outside parties to ride for them. Secondly, page 173 { such damages—"That is the question of whether he would have been employed. "Secondly, such damages are entirely too remote and speculative in their nature to be susceptible of being legally established with the certainty to authorize the recovery, and a jury are not permitted merely to guess away the defendant's property. Prospective profits are not ordinarily recoverable in actions for breach of contract. It is difficult to lay down any general rule on this subject, and usually the cases are permitted to stand or fall upon the particular facts of each. Sometimes the question becomes so close as to make it one of great difficulty to say whether or not any given item of damages for breach of a contract is or is not too remote and speculative to authorize a recovery.

"But in this case it seems to us entirely unreasonable that a jury should be allowed to say at haphazard—" And that is what it would be in this case, a jury allowed to say at haphazard—"who might or might not employ the infant plaintiff to ride their horses during the contract period. Undoubtedly it is true that employees who have no jockey entering a given race will sometimes be engaged by other owners who are in need of riders, but that this will happen is entirely problematical."

That he would get the contracts is entirely problematical.

"In the case of Koch v. Godshaw, 12 Bush 318, page 174 { it was held that the prospective profits of conducting the business of a bakery were too remote and speculative to be recoverable as damages for breach of the sale of a bakery establishment. The case at bar comes within the principle thus announced. The outside mounts were merely collateral to the main contract sued on, and it must be uncertain whether or not Earl Horn would ever have been employed to ride an outside mount, his chance of such engagement is entirely too remote and speculative to constitute the basis of recovery for the breach of a main contract."

There was another Kentucky case of Turpin v. Jones, 227 S. W. 465, 189 Kentucky 635, in which the court held that a sharecropper that could not recover of the landlord by way of damages "conjectural profits they might realize from the cultivation of the land."

I mean the same conclusion is reached on a similar state of facts in the case of Smith v. Phillips, 29 S. W. 358, 16 Kentucky Law Reports 615. And in the case of Owens v. Durham, 5 Dana 536.

In the more recent case of the Kentucky Utilities Co. v. Warren Ellison Cafe, 231 Kentucky 558, the court discussed loss of profits as damages and said:

"It is true that lost profits are a proper element of damage only when such loss is the direct and necessary result of the defendant's acts or in cases involving a breach of contract where the loss of profits may reasonably be supposed to have been within the contemplation of the parties when the contract was made as the probable result of its violation. It is always necessary, however, before there can be a recovery to show profits with reasonable degree of uncertainty."

You can't get a reasonable degree of uncertainty, if the Court please, out of the initial uncertainty whether he would ever have the contract.

The Court: Do you have any Virginia authorities there, Mr. Harris?

Colonel Harris: I briefed this from the standpoint of Kentucky because the Kentucky law as to the recoverability, the damages recoverable, governs in this case. The Virginia law is not the law to be applied. We stipulated, and it was also the doctrine of conflict of laws—we stipulated in this room that the Kentucky law governs the substantive rights of the parties, so a Virginia decision would not be the controlling decision on the recoverability of profits as an element of damages, if the Court please. The Kentucky law, it seems to me, would not under any circumstances allow the jury to guess at haphazard, allow entirely speculative recoveries to be made. For instance, there was a federal case of E. H. Taylor, Jr. and Sons v. Julius Levin, 274 Fed. 275. That went up from the Western District of Kentucky. The page 176 } court said:

"It is true that value of this whiskey did thereafter continue to increase, and that Sherwood, who bought it from Taylor, and Taylor who thereafter repurchased part of it from Sherwood, made large profits, but this can not affect the measure of damages. If profits are inherently too speculative for recovery, the fact that they happened to have materialized before the trial does not change the rule."

In that case the profits at the beginning and at the breach, at the wrong, were inherently speculative. By the time they got to trial you could look back on the past and see what those profits actually would have been. But the point of view that the law took was, what was the nature of them at the time the wrong was done, and if it was speculative and contingent and remote and he didn't have existing contracts, if the Court please, we are violating the fundamental rules of substantive law as to the recoverable damages. We submit that the plaintiff can not show his expectations of getting contracts.

Mr. Pollard: Your Honor, I have a Virginia case, and I think it is certainly the latest case on the subject and probably the leading case.

The Court: What is it, please?

Mr. Pollard: It is the case of E. I. Dupont de Nemours and Company against Universal Molded Products Corporation, 191 Va. 525, decided November 27, 1950. It goes into an extensive discussion of the law, and the case is 56 pages long. What happened in this case was that the Universal Mold Products was building radio cabinets, and Dupont sent its engineers down and recommended a specialized formula with a specialized procedure of application to the cabinets for finishing. Without notice to the company, Dupont changed the formula because it was unable to get some of the ingredients of the original formula. The evidence was clear that it caused some several thousand cabinets to peel or blister and they were all rejected by the radio manufacturers. During this period of business interruption caused by Dupont's breach of warranty the company lost $100,000 a month, and in the lower court there was the recovery of over $500,000 for Universal Molded Products. The Court of Appeals reversed the case.

Mr. Robertson: I have talked that case over with Coleman Andrews. He was one of the witnesses in it.

Mr. Pollard: He was one of the witnesses for Universal Molded Products, I believe, Mr. Robertson.

"While Dupont might have seen some damage would result from the supply of unsuitable paint materials, it is difficult to understand how it could have reasonably foreseen the paint finishing failures on the occasions mentioned would probably cause an interruption of normal operation of the Universal plant for 6½ months, and the consequent loss of approximately $100,000 per month."

The court says:

"Under the peculiar facts and circumstances in this case it is our view that the only practical way of ascertaining with reasonable certainty the extent of the liability of the defendant is to measure it by the amount of the reasonable cost of refinishing all cabinets shown to have been defective because of the failure of the paint finishing materials furnished by Dupont."

So all of the damages that the Supreme Court says should have been allowed was the actual cost of refinishing the cabinets and the damages for loss of business were so speculative and remote and could not be determined that they were all thrown out. The only thing that the company was entitled to was the actual cost of refinishing, which is about one-tenth of what was allowed. My recollection is that it was fifty-some thousand dollars.

Mr. Moore: That was a suit on a contract, page 179 } wasn't it?

Mr. Robertson: Do you have anything to say, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: The Court never made it clear. It said it was a suit for a breach of warranty. It sounds like a contract, but it could be either one. It never said whether it was a tort or a contract.

The Court: Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: Your Honor, the objection that brought on this argument was to the question that was asked as to whether the plaintiff had had any conversation with Mr. Salvati. I objected to it on the ground that conversations with third parties were not admissible in evidence. That is the law.

I was also struck by the way they laid their damages in this Notice of Motion. They said, "Willful, malicious, illegal and unwarranted, and tended to and did actually greatly damage and injure the plaintiff in and about its property, and reputation, and caused plaintiff's work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, to be stopped and said contract to be canceled, and further, caused plaintiff to lose other contracts for work which would have resulted in large profit to the plaintiff."

You can't lose what you don't have. We did page 180 } not have any contracts for other work. They expected and hoped to get contracts for other work. Their Notice of Motion isn't sufficient to cover expectations. It specifically states that it caused them to lose contracts; and you can't lose a contract unless you have a contract.

They had no contract in this. They were hopeful of it. There were a thousand different things that could interrupt and prevent them from getting it.

I think maybe it will be shown that the work was done a great deal cheaper than they thought they could do it. So I don't think even their Notice of Motion is sufficient. I don't think that they have a right to show by conversation with third parties, alleged promises to give contracts.

I was struck by the Law Governing Labor Disputes and Collective Bargaining, by Teller, who has this to say bearing on what has been said here:

"In tort actions generally malice is a ground for imposing exemplary damages. In cases involving alleged malicious prosecution, malicious abuse of process, and malicious actions for the enforcement of civil rights, malice means any motive other than that of a desire to bring the accused to justice. Malice under such circumstances does not mean ill will; the existence of an ulterior motive is sufficient to show malice, as where a party utilizes the machinery of page 181 } the criminal law for the purpose of coercing the payment of a debt or the delivery of property.

Malice is also quite frequently employed in connection with assault, battery, and false imprisonment, yet in none of these torts does malice play any part in the ultimate facts necessary to establish a cause of action. In connection with third party interference with contractual relationships malice has been said to mean 'the intention to appropriate to one's self the promised advantages which another has secured by contract'."

Under that theory, the malice would have to be shown through showing that Hart intended to appropriate to himself the benefit of the contract that they had with Pond Creek and also the other cases hold that he must have intended to injure the plaintiff.

There was no desire to injure the plaintiff, but a desire to keep their jobs there. All these men who came there with him had jobs, and they were not trying to injure the plaintiff and were not trying to take jobs away from the workmen there.

The Notice of Motion itself is insufficient.

The Court: What about the conversation with third parties?

Mr. Robertson: Will you hear me through on this thing? I will be as short as I can, Judge.

I am not going to take the time of the Court to reply to any such thing that Hart is not responsible for page 182 } his actions unless he appropriated some gain to himself.

I don't know why we are talking about malice here at this point. I don't know that there is anything about collective bargaining in this case at this time.

In the Bristol case—I haven't read the cases recently. I have had quite a discussion of it with Coleman Andrews, one of the experts in the case, and I understand that in that case they were claiming the loss of all profits from the business over a period of time. We are not doing that. We don't say that we are claiming here anything from operations anywhere in the United States with any other people except Island Creek and its subsidiaries, and we show definite contracts there.

Your Honor asked Mr. Harris a fair question, and that was: did he have a Virginia decision to sustain his position? And he never answered it, and he never cited one. Mr. Pollard came up with the Bristol case, which I have shown you is different from this case.

About recovery of future damages, it doesn't make any difference; we do not have to get into any difficulty here about whether the Kentucky law or the Virginia law controls in that phase of the case, because the rule is the same in both States.

As is said in all these cases which have been read here, it is a question of reasonableness, and it is a page 183 } question of the facts of each individual case. We are not engaged here in a horse race. I think he used a very unfortunate illustration, because if you get into a war, they are going to need all the coal they can dig from under the ground, and get to industry.

Everything they said goes to the weight of the evidence rather than to the admissibility of it.

If Your Honor please, one of the elements, the very heart of our case, is that they, through their unlawful acts, broke up our connection with the Island Creek Coal Company and its companies, and destroyed that business relationship; and under these decisions that we have here, and that Mr. Allen has referred to, anything that throws light on that is admissible.

What do we have here? We can only prove one phase at a time, of course. Now, they are getting ready to execute the contract of October 28. They are having discussions of that contract, both before and after it is executed; and the purport of those discussions is both before and after, everything that was said before was repeated after, but it is a part of the consideration of the contract, just like you say "For $10 and other good and valuable consideration," or whether you say it or not, if there is another consideration you are entitled to show it.

The other consideration here, as I have already page 184 } indicated in my opening statement, that Salvati said to Bryan, "I realize all the difficulties of this coal preparation plant in Breathitt County, and as an inducement and as a part of the consideration for your undertaking that, here is what you are going to get in the future." So Bryan went ahead and executed the contract; and in the future it came right along just like Salvati had said it was going to come along. They gave him the contract for the 25 houses; they gave him the contract to put the asbestos shingles on. It has been kind of thrown out here in the opening statement that it was a shoddy job and therefore they had to put shingles on it. It was built the way the contract called for. There is no reflection on Laburnum on that. They gave them the school house. I think they gave them a store building. My memory is not clear on that at the moment. They gave them some repairs to another coal plant, or an addition to it, or for the laying of the foundation of another one.

We have here—they have already seen it—Salvati's deposition in the case.

In the orderly presentation of our case, we propose now to show incident, surrounding, attendant to the execution of the contract of October 28, or before and simultaneous and afterwards, as additional consideration to it, he said, "If you will do this rough and difficult work out there, I will give you these other works."

page 185 } When Bryan finishes, we are going to put Salvati on the stand, or his deposition on the stand, where Salvati under oath said, "Here was our master plan that we intended to carry out. Here was over $600,000 worth of work already authorized that I wanted to give you and have you do it."

Then we are going to come along and show that contract after contract after contract, they were asked to bid on by Island Creek, they did bid on it for Island Creek, and they did not get the jobs. Island Creek told them frankly, "The reason we can't give them to you, we are afraid we will get in bad with the United Mine Workers ourselves, and they will shut us down. Therefore, don't bid any more, because that is the situation we are in, and there is no use in your going to all that work when we cannot give you the contracts."

As I said here in the beginning, each case stands on its own facts, and it is a matter largely within the discretion of the Court as to whether or not the expected contracts are reasonable. I didn't count the contracts he named, some 8 or 10 of them. They had been done highly satisfactorily. They had resulted in profits of $25,000 a year in a period of 28 months. Here were additional contracts promised to them. They were invited to bid on them. They did bid on them. The testimony is perfectly overwhelming.

page 186 } I don't know what they are going to come in with. The testimony from our side is perfectly overwhelming that the reason they didn't get them was because they had run them out of there, and because they were afraid that they would pull down a strike of the United Mine Workers on the Island Creek Coal, and the fat would be in the fire for them. There is no question of collective bargaining anywhere in this case.

I am going to ask Mr. Allen and Mr. Moore to go on from there.

The Court: Who closes this argument?

Mr. Robertson: We led it, so I would think we closed it.

Colonel Harris: You asked a question of me a while ago that I want a chance to answer.

The Court: You go ahead, and then let them close.

Colonel Harris: You asked me if I had any Virginia cases, Your Honor, and I stated to you that I had briefed from the standpoint of the Kentucky law, but I went through the Digest from beginning to end, as well as I could, and I listed some Virginia cases and made a note that they were to the same effect as the quotations I have given you.

For instance, the case of American Oil Company v. Lovelace, 143 Southeastern 293, 150 Va. 624, Paragraph 5 of that opinion, which says: "Profits may only be re-page 187 } covered where they can be ascertained with reasonable certainty."

Other cases from Virginia which support our side are a milling company case from 171 S. E. 681, 161 Va. 642, and in another case of Cricorian v. Dailey, 187 S. E. 447, 171 Va. 16. I didn't quote from them because I didn't expect to have to argue. As I recall and as I have noted, they are like the Kentucky cases.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, Mr. Robertson has referred to the situation of the Island Creek Coal Company and its subsidiaries. Pond Creek Pocahontas Coal Company is not a subsidiary of Island Creek Coal Company.

Mr. Robertson: It has the same management, I will tell you that.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Thank you for interrupting me, sir.

Mr. Robertson: You are welcome.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: So whatever contracts Mr. Bryan may have had or may have expected to get, or whether he had done work in the past for Island Creek Coal Company, has nothing to do with this case. The part of the Notice of Motion which Mr. Robertson read says, "has caused plaintiff's work in Breathitt County * * * to be stopped and its said contracts to be cancelled, and further caused Plaintiff to lose other contracts for work which would have resulted in large profits to Plaintiff." He says "other contracts for work which would have resulted in large profits." page 188 } It doesn't say other contracts that he could have gotten. It said other contracts that they have got.

To carry it further, the Notice of Motion says that the United Mine Workers, the said District 50, and the said United Construction Workers, each jointly and severally ratified and approved and confirmed the acts of the said William O. Hart and his mob against the plaintiff at Breathitt County, Kentucky, for the purpose of wilfully, maliciously and unlawfully attempting to destroy the Plaintiff's business and to prevent the Plaintiff from continuing lawfully to work within the State of Kentucky * * *."

So when we get outside the State of Kentucky, it again becomes immaterial and outside the scope of the Notice of Motion.

To show also, when Mr. Bryan testified, he testified that he had made so much money, and it worked out to about $25,000 a year, and that he had had a gross business of $20 million over the last ten years.

I would like to call your attention to these questions which we asked in our interrogatories, and which were not answered by the Plaintiff, and which they objected to answering and which you ruled that they did not have to answer:

Question 18 asked by the Defendants: "What page 189 } was the total dollar volume of work performed by the Plaintiff in the State of Kentucky in 1949 and in each of the five years next preceding 1948?"

Mr. Robertson: I answered that.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: You never served a copy on the defendants.

Mr. Robertson: I don't know about that, but it is answered, and it is up here and the Court ruled on it. It was answered.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: "What was the value of the good will on Plaintiff's balance sheet as of December 31, 1949?"

"What was the net profit before taxes of the Plaintiff in 1949 and in each of the five years next preceeding 1949?"

"What is the net worth of the Plaintiff?"

"Furnish a copy of the Plaintiff's balance sheets for 1948 and 1949."

This is the same line of questions to which he is now testifying. If we couldn't get it before trial by interrogatories, and they objected to giving it then and you ruled they didn't have to give it, certainly he ought not now to be allowed to testify to it, because we haven't had a chance to prepare our case on that part of the matter.

Mr. Robertson: I am going to let these other page 190 } gentlemen answer.

Mr. Mullen: May I say one word, Judge?

There are two things I want to mention. First, Mr. Robertson says that this contract made in October, 1948, that a part of the consideration thereof was the promise to secure this other work, and therefore they have a right to show that. The contract itself expressly negatives that. It states that there are no understandings, no other agreements, nothing except what is expressed in this contract.

Mr. Robertson: Read what you are quoting. Read the statement in the contract that you are referring to. You don't have to read it. When you are through there, I can tell you what it is.

Mr. Mullen: I know what it is.

Mr. Robertson: Your Honor, the fee under this contract—

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Please let us finish, will you, Mr. Robertson?

Mr. Mullen: "This agreement constitutes the entire contract between the parties, and there are no understandings, representations, or warranties of any kind not expressly set forth herein."

He has said that a part of this contract, a part of the consideration for this contract was this promise to give them additional work. It is negatived by their own page 191 } contract.

The second thing is, I go back to the question and the objection I made that started this, and Your Honor has asked them, and they have not answered it, how they could bring themselves under an exception to the rule that conversations with third parties are not admissible. They have not answered and have not attempted to answer that.

Mr. Robertson: Are you through?

If Your Honor please, he didn't read the other part of the contract that the fee there is limited under that contract to $12,000, and by any side agreement or anything else they couldn't get anything additional to that. That is what they meant there, and that is what the contract says. There was the promise of future work.

We might just as well go to that, too, as to how we get around that it was a statement to a third person. It is an exception to the rule and it does not apply here. It is an element in our damages, just as Mr. Mullen indicated in his opening statement that he was going to talk about what happened at the meeting at Tiptop.

The Court: I want to know how you get around that. You say it is an exception.

Mr. Robertson: I say it is an exception. I say it is an element of our proof, and that we can show it is a part of the consideration.

page 192 } Mr. Fred G. Poliard: That is a new one.

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, I think that these gentlemen on the other side are arguing entirely beside the question here, and the cases cited by them show that they are. The real issue here is not the recovery of profits as such, because they were prohibited from getting future contracts.

In the first place, the questions which Mr. Robertson asked—

Mr. Robertson: I knew I had one thing, and then I won't interrupt you any more.

Salvati promised the $600,000 worth of work to Bryan at cost plus 5 per cent, regardless of anything else.

Now, go ahead.

Mr. Allen: I was coming to that.

The questions were designed to bring out the fact that Salvati had already agreed to give a good deal of this additional work.

In addition to that, you can read the Notice of Motion from beginning to end, a dozen times, and if there is anything in it, there is this in it: These people, by tortious wrong, not merely the violation of a contract but by a tort and an aggravated tort, destroyed a business connection. We have a right to show what that business connection was and leave it to the jury to say what it was worth if it could have been maintained.

page 193 } You asked Mr. Robertson about the hearsay rule in reference to Salvati, in Mr. Bryan's talking with Salvati. I think the hearsay rule can be completely satisfied there by asking Mr. Bryan questions something like this:

"What have you to say with reference to the connection established, and what you reasonably expected to do under it?"

He need not go ahead and report verbatim conversations with Mr. Salvati or anybody else, but he can certainly give the connection, the assurances, without quoting words, and the situation which had developed and grown up there between his company and Mr. Salvati's company and the subsidiary of Mr. Salvati's company.

As I say, it goes right back to the destruction of an established business which had been going on with those people for some two years or more, and in which these gentlemen admit substantial profits were made, an average of $25,000 a year. The business was broken up, the connection was destroyed.

In telling about that connection and what it was and what the prospects were under it, the matter of these contracts comes in incidentally. It is just one of the ways of bringing in and telling the jury the whole story of what has happened to this Plaintiff as a result of this aggravated tort which was committed against him.

The Court: Do you contend he can tell what page 194 } Mr. Salvati told him?

Mr. Allen: Judge, you ask me frankly, and I am going to answer you frankly my own opinion about it.

According to the authorities, it is better, from our viewpoint, you understand, to let him give the description of the situation without quoting the words of Salvati and reporting conversations back and forth between him and Salvati. He can say he was assured of this and so; that he had been working for those people for two years; that his work had been entirely satisfactory, so satisfactory that not only a friendly relation had been built up between them, but a business relationship that was highly regarded by those companies. He can say, "I went into this business with the understanding that that relationship would continue, and that as a result of that relationship, other business would come."

He can tell the story like that, under the rules of evidence, without quoting verbatim anything that anybody said. I think that is absolutely permissible.

Mr. Robertson: I thought you were through, Mr. Mullen.

Mr. Mullen: I wanted to ask a question. He brought up a new matter now. He proposes to follow a different plan and have him testify as to what were his expectations.

That matter we are not considering. That is page 195 } just as inadmissible as the other.

Mr. Moore: Suppose it arose this way: suppose it arose that a third party induced a breach of an oral contract between A and B. In the trial of the case to determine the amount of the damages, you certainly would have to get to what was the essence of that contract. Under the rule that they are advocating, neither A nor B could come in and say what the contract was, because whatever conversation they had about the contract didn't take place in the presence of a third party.

From the point of speculative damages, you don't have to read many of these cases to find that the real heart of it is to show if there is an established business, then you can recover these future profits. The cases that Mr Harris cited, the case of the huckster, the second a jockey, and the third a sharecropper, I can't think of three more uncertain classifications than those. Mr. Bryan has done exactly the opposite. He has shown that he has had this $20 million business over the last ten years, $2 million a year, and I think he has laid the groundwork to show an established business, as set forth in these cases.

The Court: As the question is asked, I will sustain the the objection, but will allow evidence along the line that Mr. Allen suggested.

Mr. Robertson: I want to try to conform to page 196 } the ruling of the Court, Your Honor. I will go in there and say, "Incidental to your execution of the contract of October 28, were you assured by Mr. Salvati that you would be awarded additional work?"

The Court: Don't refer to any conversations.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: He can't do that. The contract has been put in evidence.

The Court: Leave out Salvati's name.

Mr. Robertson: That is all right.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We might as well straighten that out right now. He is introducing, then, parol evidence to go beyond the contract he has already introduced in evidence.

Mr. Robertson: All right, it is an addition to it.

Mr. Allen: As a matter of fact, we have the agreements for other contracts.

Mr. Mullen: If you ask that, can't I come back with the same point as something showing a conversation with a third party?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: If you allow testimony about any other agreement he had with Salvati, you are letting him introduce parol evidence in contradiction to the contract which already has been introduced in evidence. This contract says that this agreement constitutes the entire contract between the parties and there are no undertakings, representations or warranties of any kind not expressly set forth herein.

.. 10.7

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

So he would be introducing parole evidence.

The Court: It is related to that contract, is it not?

Mr. Allen: The parole evidence rule has no place in this case on that issue.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We note an exception.

Mr. Mullen: We note an exception.

page 198 } (The following proceedings were had in open court:)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, when you were on the stand before you mentioned a contract of October 28, 1948 between Laburnum and the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company. At about the time of the exclusion of that contract with them were you given any assurance of future construction?

Colonel Harris: Do I understand that our agreement gives us an objection to this question on all the grounds that we have previously asserted?

The Court: That is true.

Mr. Pollard: And runs to the entire line of questions.

The Court: It runs to the entire examination of this witness.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Do you remember the question?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Answer it, please.

A. At the time we executed the contract with Pond Creek Pocahontas Company dated October 28, 1948, it was agreed with Pond Creek Pocahontas Company that Laburnum would perform additional work in Breathitt County amounting to approximately $600,000 and that the work would be performed on a basis of cost plus a fee of 5 per cent.

page 199 } Q. Mr. Bryan, basing what you say upon the experience you had had with Island Creek Coal Company, the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company up to the time of the contract of October 28, 1948, what have you to say to the temporary or permanent character of your business connections with those two companies?

A. It was a permanent connection.

Q. What have you to say generally regarding the value of that connection?

Colonel Harris: May we offer an additional ground to that, that it calls for an unauthorized opinion and conclusion and speculation of the witness.

The Court: I will overrule the objection. Go ahead.

Mr. Pollard: We except.

The Witness: Based on our experience in doing work for Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Island Creek Coal Company and their associate and subsidiary companies, we had earned approximately $25,000 per year net job profits from those operations. Pond Creek Pocahontas Company had agreed that we were to perform additional work amounting to approximately $600,000 in Breathitt County alone. Island Creek Coal Company had said they wanted us to handle their building program in West Virginia. Both of those companies continuously have worked in and around the mines. It never stops. There is no telling how much money we might have been able to earn—

Colonel Harris: We object to that as argumentative on the part of the witness taking the place of the lawyer.

The Court: I sustain the objection.

Colonel Harris: Will Your Honor exclude that argument?

The Court: Yes. Gentlemen of the jury, you will disregard the statement made by Mr. Bryan.

The Witness: Estimating $25,000 is a conservative figure for what we might have made from our operations with that group of companies in East Virginia and Kentucky.

Mr. Mullen: No objection to this document.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I hand you a paper entitled "Construction Agreement between Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Kentucky Division, Huntington, West Virginia, and Laburnum Construction Corporation Richmond, Virginia, subject, Construction of Coal Preparation Plant at Number 1 Kentucky Mine, Breathitt County, Kentucky, October 28, 1948, Copy No. 3," and ask you if that is an executed copy of the contract of October 28, 1948 that you have mentioned.

A. Yes, it is.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the contract in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 5.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 5 and received in evidence).

page 201 } Mr. Robertson: I don't think it is necessary to read that contract at the present time, Your Honor.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, approximately how soon after the execution of that contract on October 28, 1948, did Laburnum go to work on the job in Breathitt County, Kentucky?

A. Almost right away, the first day of November 1948.

Q. Where did you get your labor?

A. Are you referring to any particular class of labor?

Q. I am referring to your carpenters.

A. In line with our practice as contemplated by the agreement which we had with the Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council, we got in touch with—

Colonel Harris: Judge, may we object to that statement. The question was very simple, where did you get your labor.

The Court: Suppose you answer the question and be as specific as you can, Mr. Bryan.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, you have a right to say where you got your labor and then state your reason or the circumstances under which you did get it.

A. We got in touch with the business agent of Paintsville, Kentucky, carpenters local union No. 646, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. Did you get labor from that local?

page 202 } A. We got carpenters and millwrights through that local.

Q. Were other classifications of labor furnished you from other locals of the A. F. of L?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what they were generally and what local sent them to you, if you recall.

A. We got in touch with the Charleston, West Virginia, Iron Workers Local Union, and they referred to us riggers, structural iron workers.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Was that A. F. of L. labor?

A. Yes, sir. I don't recall the number of the local union right now. I have it in my files.

Q. Did you get any other labor through any other locals of the A. F. of L.?

A. We got in touch with the plumbers and pipefitters local union at Lexington, Kentucky, and made arrangements for pipefitters to be referred to us. We also got in touch with the electricians local union at Lexington, Kentucky, and made arrangements for electricians to be referred to us.

Q. Were all those locals A. F. of L. locals?

A. They were all affiliated with the A. F. of L.

We also were in touch with the laborers local union at Lexington, Kentucky.

Q. Were the locals that you contacted the locals with appropriate jurisdiction and the nearest locals, page 203 } so far as you know?

A. As far as I know, they were.

Q. At that time was there any A. F. of L. carpenters local at Salyersville, Kentucky?

A. When we started work in November 1948 there was no carpenters local union at Salyersville.

Q. Do you know whether it is or is not a fact that an A. F. of L. carpenters local was subsequently established at Salyersville on May 9, 1949?

A. I don't remember the exact date, but during May, 1949, the carpenters local union affiliated with the A. F. of L., known as Local No. 697, was chartered at Salyersville, Kentucky.

Q. When you first commenced work out there, do you know whether or not any of the laborers you employed were not organized in the sense that they were not affiliated with any local of any kind?

A. The closest local union for the laborers was at Lexington, which is about 150 miles away from the job. We employed local labor near the job site, with the approval of the business agent of the Lexington Laborers Local.

Q. You have stated that Laburnum commenced work upon this coal preparation plant very shortly after it signed this contract of October 28, 1948. Will you describe to the jury page 204 } the location where this coal preparation plant was built, indicating what kind of country it is, how built up or otherwise it is, and was at that time?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. The first time that I went to the job site it was either in the latter part of September or the first part of October, 1948. We drove in an automobile to a place called Lambert, Kentucky.

Q. Where did you start from?

A. Mr. Menk, who was the General Engineer of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company drove us from Logan, West Virginia, over to Paintsville and from there to Salyersville and from there to a little store known as Lambert, and from there we may have gone a few miles further where the car had to be abandoned. We were met by a jeep and taken in a jeep four or five miles further into the wilderness to the job site.

Q. Approximately how far is it from Paintsville to the job site?

A. Along the road which is now used Salyersville is about 25 miles from the job site and Paintsville is about 18 miles east of Salyersville.

Q. If you got off the train at Huntington, West Virginia, and go to the job site, what is the best way to go?

A. The only way to go that I know of would be either on a bus or in an automobile. We usually rented a U-Drive-It car and would drive down there.

Q. How far is the job site, approximately, from page 205 } Huntington?

A. 85 or 90 miles.

Q. If you were going from Huntington to the job site, would you go first to Paintsville or near Paintsville?

A. You would drive from Huntington southwardly along the road leading to Williamson, West Virginia. Then you come to a turn off from that road, and you go over to Louisa, Kentucky, which is just across the Big Sandy River from West Virginia. From Louisa you drive about 30 or 35 miles to a little town—you wouldn't even call it a town. It is just a crossroads. You turn to the left and go to Paintsville, and you turn to the right and you go about 15 miles to Salyersville.

Q. How far is that cross road from Paintsville?

A. I would say about three miles.

Q. How far is it from Paintsville to the job site, approximately?

A. Along the highway it is about 43 miles.

Q. And approximately how far is it from Salyersville to the job site?

A. About 25 miles.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. If you left Salyersville to go to the job site, would you pass through a place known as Royalton?

A. Along the road now used, you do.

page 206 } Q. How big a place is Royalton?

A. A couple of hundred people.

Q. Has the location of the road been changed since you first went out there?

A. The road has been considerably improved now.

Q. Is it on the same location, substantially the same or substantially a different location?

A. I think it is the same substantially, the same location, but it has been widened and improved. The road which branches off from the road going past Royalton and which leads over to the job site has been improved and its location has been somewhat changed.

Q. On the first occasion that you went out there, describe what was at the job site when you got there.

A. There was nothing at the job site where the tipple was to be built. There were one or two shacks that Pond Creek Pocahontas people had put up for its people to stay in in getting the work under way.

They were at the location, the place called Evanston, which is about a mile from the tipple.

Q. How big a place at that time was Evanston?

A. Just two or three houses out in the mountains.

Q. Were there any telephone communications to Evanston on the job site?

A. At that time there were none.

page 207 } Q. Was there any railroad in there at that time?

A. There was no railroad in Breathitt County.

Q. Was there any post office out there?

A. There was a post office at Royalton.

Q. Was that the nearest post office?

A. There may have been the post office address between Royalton and the job site but I don't know of any.

Q. What would you say was the general character of the country right there at the job site? Was it on the plains or in the mountains or at sea or what?

A. There were steep mountains thickly covered with trees. It was just wild and desolate. That is the only way I can describe it.

Q. Was the job site down along a small creek or was it up above the creek?

A. There was a little creek there.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Do you remember whether or not you had to blast out a level place for the foundation of the tipple?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. What kind of coal operation was this as compared with either digging in the ground for it or stripping it off the surface.

A. This was a coal preparation plant to service a strip mine operation. A strip mine operation involves getting the coal off the top of the mountain and dumping it page 208 } in a place called a head house at the top of the mountain, where it was taken down a long conveyor about a thousand feet in length known as a rope and button conveyor. From the rope and button conveyor the coal would be taken into the coal preparation plant, where it would be washed and sorted and screened according to size and made ready to be dumped into the coal cars when the coal cars were there.

Q. How was the coal stripped and brought to the head house and delivered to the conveyor to take it down to the tipple?

A. A contractor named Daniels had some enormous shovels up on top of the mountain. The coal would be blasted out. I might say first that the overburden would be removed, all the trees cut down and you get down to the seam of coal.

Q. You mean you would lay back the dirt from over the coal?

A. That is right. Then these huge shovels would scoop the coal up—

Colonel Harris: Judge, aren't we taking a lot of time on a matter that doesn't concern the issues of the case?

Mr. Robertson: To describe the nature of the work, the difficulty of the work. I am coming right along to it. One of my very next questions is going to be how much above the tipple was this head house at the top, just describing a wild, difficult situation out there.

page 209 } The Court: Let us not go into too much detail.

Mr. Robertson: I don't expect my friends to think it interesting. I think it is to the rest of us.

Colonel Harris: I might say that I think we ought to try the lawsuit and not go afield. It is going to take a long time anyway.

Mr. Robertson: You remember that the next time we go back in the Judge's chambers, will you?

Mr. Mullen: You did all the talking.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

The Witness: The coal would be put into big trucks and hauled to the head house and dumped into the head house and then taken on to the conveyor by them.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Do you know how much higher the head house was than the tipple?

A. Six or seven hundred feet.

Mr. Robertson: These are the same pictures that I used as illustrations in the opening statement, but I don't think it is necessary at this time to take the time of the jury to examine them again, since Colonel Harris is in a hurry, but I do want to introduce them so they will be in the record.

Colonel Harris: Judge, I am not in a hurry. I just don't want to waste time.

Mr. Robertson: I think we understand each other.

Mr. Mullen: No objection.

page 210 } The Court: Do you want to file those as one exhibit or separate exhibits, Mr. Robertson?

Mr. Robertson: Judge, I would think probably separate because they are likely to get separated anyway. I can do it very quickly.

The Plaintiff offers in evidence ten different instruments, five of which are individual photographs, and the others of which are one or more photographs attached to cardboard and ask that these exhibits be marked respectively Plaintiff's Exhibits 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, and 16.

The Court: Mark them now.

(The photographs referred to were marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, and 16 respectively and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, will you continue with the blueprint that I used to illustrate my opening statement to the jury. Are you familiar with that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that blueprint correctly show the layout there of the coal preparation plant and the little hamlet of Evanston and the school house?

A. Yes, sir.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

page 211 } Mr. Robertson: I offer the sketch in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No.
17.

Mr. Mullen: No objection.

(The blueprint referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 17 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, what kind of equipment did you have to take to the job site for the execution of this contract of October 28, 1948?

Mr. Harris: May we have an objection to that question, Judge, as going too far afield?

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I am going to show the difficulties of this job and the reason why in undertaking this job he was given assurances of other jobs.

The Court: I will overrule the objection. Go ahead.

Mr. Mullen: Note an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I think we can shorten it a little, Mr. Bryan. At my request have you made a tabulation of the equipment which was there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Without going through all the items, name what heavy equipment you had there that you would class as page 212 } heavy equipment.

A. We furnished a guide derrick with a 100-foot boom and a 150-foot mast which would be used to lift the heavy timbers into place for the tipple and also the heavy machinery such as a washer which would be installed in the tipple. We furnished a 3-drum hoist, a gasoline engine, a double-drum hoist gasoline engine. We furnished a number of concrete carts, electric drills, jackhammers, vibrators, log saws, wheelbarrows, skill saws.

Q. Did you have any trouble getting that equipment up there?

A. The roads were in terrible condition. Most of it was shipped out of Richmond, consigned to us at Carver, Kentucky.

Q. How far was that from the job site?

A. I think it was four or five miles, I am not positive about that.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. How did you get it from Carver over to the job site?

A. It would be hauled on trucks when you could get over the road.

Q. Did you have to get any of it in there with a bulldozer?

A. After the bad weather set in during the winter, the roads were just a quagmire.

page 213 } Q. At my request have you made a tabulation of the equipment you took in there on that job and given an evaluation of it?

A. Yes, sir. This list shows the construction equipment—

Colonel Harris: May we object to the question of the evaluation of the equipment, Judge. There isn't any claim that the equipment was destroyed. I don't see how it possibly can come in.

Mr. Robertson: There is no claim that they took any equipment away from us. I think it is relevant, your Honor, the value of the equipment, certainly showing some indication of what kind of equipment they got in there. If I went in there with $5 worth of equipment or one wheelbarrow, $2.50, that would be one thing. If I went in there with $16,000 worth of equipment it would show that I was operating in a more stable and dependable way.

The Court: I will allow the witness to go ahead.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Is that the list?

A. I prepared a statement showing the construction equipment, office equipment, and camp and commissary.

Q. What is the value of it?

A. It amounts to a total of $16,047.90.

page 214 } Q. I notice that that tabulation is entitled "Statement of Construction Equipment, office equipment, and camp and commissary equipment furnished by Laburnum Construction Corporation in connection with job for Pond Creek Pocahontas Company in Breathitt County, Kentucky, under contract dated October 27, 1948." Is that date the 27th there or should it be the 28th?

A. What is the date of the contract, the 27th or the 28th? Whatever the date is.

Mr. Robertson: It is the 28th (showing the contract to the witness).

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

The Witness: That is a typographical error. It ought to be the 28th.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Will you change it to the 28th?

A. Yes, sir (witness writing on document).

(Document exhibited to Mr. Mullen.)

Mr. Mullen: I believe Your Honor has already ruled it can go in.

The Court: I haven't ruled.

Mr. Mullen: I object to its going in. It has no bearing on this case.

Mr. Robertson: I offer it in evidence, Your Honor, for the reasons I have already stated.

The Court: I will overrule the objection.

Mr. Robertson: I offer it in evidence and ask page 215 } that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 18.

Mr. Harris: Exception.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 18 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, you stated that soon after you started to work under the contract of October 28, 1948, you contacted the carpenters local at Paintsville and arranged with that local to furnish you carpenters and millwrights, I think you said. Did you subsequently enter into a written contract with the Paintsville local carrying that arrangement into written form?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Mullen: No objection.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I hand you a contract dated December 14, 1948, which purports to be signed by Laburnum and the union, and ask you if that is the contract to which you referred.

A. This is a copy of our agreement with Paintsville Carpenters Local No. 646.

Q. An executed copy?

A. An executed copy dated December 14.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the contract in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 19.

page 216 } (The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 19 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, pursuant to the assurance you were given for other work when you undertook the contract of October 28, 1948, were you awarded by the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company a contract to build a telephone line?

A. Yes, sir; we were awarded a contract by Pond Creek Pocahontas Company to construct a telephone line extending eleven miles from Carver, Kentucky to the job site. That is the distance Carver is from the job. I had forgotten that.

(Document shown to Mr. Mullen.)

Mr. Mullen: This is the same one you heretofore furnished us, a copy of it?

Mr. Robertson: I think so.

Mr. Mullen: No objection.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I had you a construction agreement dated December 8, 1948, between Laburnum Construction Corporation and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, entitled "Construction agreement, construction of approximately 11 miles of telephone line from Carver, Kentucky to Camp No. 1 at No. 1 Kentucky Mine, Breathitt County, Kentucky," and ask you if that is an executed copy of the contract you have mentioned.

A. Yes, it is.

page 217 } Mr. Robertson: I offer the contract in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 20.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 20 and received in evidence.)

Mr. Robertson: I don't want you to stop and go back to your records at this time, but do you remember approximately what the money was involved in that telephone contract?

The Witness: Yes, sir; I can tell you. It was $4,591.55.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Was that done on a cost-plus basis?

A. Cost plus 5 per cent.

Q. Also pursuant to this assurance of additional work, did the Spring Fork Development Company award you any contract there at Evanston, Kentucky?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the contract which has been mentioned here for the construction of 25 dwelling houses?

A. That is right.

(Document shown to Mr. Mullen.)

Mr. Mullen: No objection.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I hand you what appears to be an executed copy of a contract dated December 15, 1948, entitled "Construction agreement between Spring Fork Development Company and Laburnum Construction Corporation, Richmond, Virginia, subject: Construction of 25 dwellings near No. 1 Kentucky Mine of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Breathitt County, Kentucky, Copy No. 2," and ask you if that is an executed copy of the agreement to which you referred about the construction of 25 dwelling houses?

A. It is.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the agreement in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 21.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 21 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What was the amount of money involved in that contract?

A. The cost of the work up until the time it was stopped on July 26, 1949, amounted to $41,282.05.

Q. Was that on a cost-plus basis?

A. That work was on a basis of cost plus 5 per cent, with a ceiling of $2,500 on the fee.

Q. Something has been said about your 25 dwellings being subsequently covered with asbestos shingles. How did that happen?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. The 25 dwellings were constructed out of green lumber furnished by Pond Creek Pocahontas Company.
page 219 } The cost of that lumber is not reflected in the figures which I gave you. After the dwellings were put up, the lumber dried out and some cracks appeared in the walls. Anyway, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company thought that it would be better if they were covered with asbestos shingles.

Q. You did that work. Were you given extra compensation for that work?

A. That was work which we were to get started on during August. We had been instructed to proceed. Pond Creek had purchased the asbestos shingles. But we never started on it because of the trouble which happened on July 26.

Q. Was that commitment for putting on the asbestos shingles a written commitment or a verbal commitment?

A. No, that was just a verbal commitment. It was a part of the additional work which it had been agreed we would handle.

Q. What was the estimated cost of that?

A. I have it here, I think. My recollection is now that it was about three or four thousand dollars. I have it.

Q. You can get it later.

A. I can't recall offhand. It wasn't a big job.

Q. Also pursuant to that assurance of additional work were you awarded any contract for the construction of a school house out near the job site?

A. Yes, sir.

page 220 } Q. What was that?

A. The Pond Creek Pocahontas Company wanted to have a school house constructed for children to go to who lived at Evanston. We were instructed to construct the school house. We commenced work during July, 1949, but did not complete it because of the interruption which occurred in our work on July 26.

Q. Have you got there the figure of the estimated cost of the school house, or will you have to get that?

A. I will have to get that.

Q. Do you remember whether that was on a cost-plus basis?

A. That was on a basis of cost plus 5 per cent.

Q. Now take the date of July 26, 1949, which was the date that Plaintiff claims the work was stopped, how near completion was the coal preparation plant at that time, in what per cent would you say, if you can estimate it?

A. I would say the coal preparation plant was about 95 per cent complete, based on the work that we then knew about.

Q. Was it in operation?

A. Yes, sir. The coal preparation plant went into operation during the month of June.

Q. I believe you said, and it has been mentioned here, that the top fee that Laburnum would get out of the page 221 } building of that coal preparation plant as originally contemplated was $12,000.

A. That is correct.

Q. Was that fee paid in full?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the C. & O. Railroad also build a railroad in there to take care of the coal that would come out of this mine?

A. Yes, sir. That was the only way to get the coal out.

Q. Was the tipple ready for the railroad or did the railroad have to wait for the tipple when they got ready to load the coal?

A. It was a sort of a race between ourselves and the C. & O. to see who would get the work done first. Of course the C. & O. was very anxious to have coal to ship as soon as it got the tracks in. The Pond Creek Pocahontas Company wanted to be able to ship coal as soon as the tracks were in. Neither side wanted to hold up the other.

Q. Who got ready for operation first, the railroad or Laburnum?

A. We were ready to ship coal about two days before they got the tracks completed in to the tipple.

Q. Who was the contractor building the railroad?

A. Codell Construction Company, I think.

Q. Was there another contractor doing work there for crushed stone for roadways around through the work?

A. Codell Construction Company was doing page 222 } some work on the railroad and was digging the shaft and slope for the No. 2 mine of the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company. Allen Codell had a job on what they called the rock crusher. He was crushing stone to be used in connection with the work.

Q. My own memory is not clear on this. Up to July 26, 1949, had you been given any work for any addition or enlargement or repair of coal preparation plant No. 1?

A. There had been talk about installing a heating plant at the No. 1 mine, and we had been requested to work up figures on that and to make suggestions as to how they could thaw out the frozen coal in the wintertime.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. That was as far as that had progressed on July 26?

A. They had made some study of it and were prepared to make recommendations. They had said that we were to do that work.

Q. Prior to July 26, 1949, had you had any discussions with Island Creek or Pond Creek Pocahontas about the foundation of any other mine tippie?

A. We had been instructed to install concrete foundations for the No. 2 mine. They now call it the No. 3 mine.

Q. Now I hand you a photograph marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 9 and ask you if that shows substantially correctly the coal tippie with the conveyor and head house as it had progressed toward completion about July 26, 1949.

A. This is a picture of the tippie after it was page 223 } completed. At the time our work was stopped in July 26, 1949, a lot of the aluminum siding had not been put on.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I have come to a phase of this testimony which is on July 14, 1949, which begins our controversy with Mr. Hart. I don't know whether you want to adjourn or start in on that after recess.

The Court: Let us adjourn until 2:15.

(Whereupon, at 12:45 o'clock p. m. the Court recessed until 2:15 o'clock p. m. the same day.)

page 224 } AFTERNOON SESSION.

(2:15 p. m.)

Colonel Harris: Judge, before we resume the direct examination, this morning when I asked about having the objection to questions along the same line, I inadvertently left off the word "exception," as I recall. Of course, what we wanted was both the objection and the exception to everything.

The Court: Let the record show that.

Colonel Harris: Thank you, sir.

Whereupon,

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON BRYAN

the witness on the stand at the time of recess, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION (continued).

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, there are a few questions that I failed to ask you this morning which I should ask you before we get to questions about July 14.

During the progress of the work at the job site in Breathitt County, what arrangements did you make to house and feed the men who were working for you?

Colonel Harris: We object to that, sir. We don't see the materiality of that.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I think we might as well—

The Court: What is the materiality of it?

page 225 } Mr. Robertson: The materiality of it, Your Honor, is to get the whole picture before us of the isolated, dangerous condition of this work, and the surroundings out there, and how those men were shut in there, and they had to live in these barracks and eating houses in those hills. I want so say, Your Honor, I think Your Honor knows me well enough to know that I am not stalling to prolong this case or to drag it out. I am just as anxious as anybody else to keep it moving and to press forward toward the conclusion of it.

We are suing here in all earnestness and good faith for the biggest lawsuit that I personally have ever been in, and we can't belittle it and pooh-pooh it by trying to hasten it and hurry it and hustle it to deny us an opportunity to put all the details that we think are necessary to paint this picture to the jury. I am doing that in good faith, and in all sincerity.

The Court: Counsel for the defendants have a right to object at any time, and the Court will rule.

Mr. Robertson: I am saying when you get the number of men that this crowd had out there, out in the bushes out there, 100 miles or so from Huntington and out in the kind of country that they were in out there, and then got them herded up into a barracks and a bath house and an eating house page 226 } and a commissary there, and everything, they were just isolated out in the mountains and at the mercy of the United Mine Workers. That is the materiality of it.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, I would like to ask that

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson's remarks be stricken, because he is just arguing the case on a lot of stuff that hasn't been put in evidence. It is entirely improper.

Mr. Robertson: We can't put it in but step by step, Your Honor.

The Court: Under the circumstances, I will allow the question to be answered.

Colonel Harris: Will you note an exception?

Mr. Robertson: Do you agree that it is a continuing one to this entire line of testimony?

Colonel Harris: That is agreeable, with the approval of the Court.

The Court: That will be all right.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, while this work was under way at the job site in Breathitt County, Kentucky, what did you have to do to feed and house the men who were working for you?

A. There were no facilities at the job site whatsoever. Under our agreement with Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, they were to reimburse us for the cost of barracks, mess halls, bath houses, and other temporary buildings which page 227 } we were to put up to provide for our workers.

On the other hand, the cost of kitchen equipment, cots, bedding, refrigerators, and other things like that, which were necessary to have in order to take care of these men and to feed them, we had to furnish, and of course, we charged the men something for board, $2 a day, to take care of the cost of food and other things.

During the winter months, particularly, it was impossible for the people to go back and forth every day. They had to live in these barracks and to eat in the mess halls. We engaged cooks and bought the food and did everything that was necessary to take care of them, just like you would have to do if they were living in your home. Of course, it was rough, but we did the best we could.

Q. Did you build the barracks there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many men did it accommodate?

A. I think we had facilities to take care of close to 100 men.

Q. Did you build a mess hall?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that to take care of substantially the same number?

A. Yes, sir.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

page 228 } Q. Did you build a bath house for them?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. What wages did you pay your common labor?

A. Ninety cents an hour.

Q. Was that to the satisfaction of the A. F. of L., with which you are dealing?

Colonel Harris: We object to the question of whether the A. F. of L. was satisfied or not, if the Court please. It is wholly immaterial whether the A. F. of L. was satisfied or not.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, here is the materiality of it: We were under a contract, as has been shown here, with the A. F. of L. to employ A. F. of L. labor. I think it goes to whether we were supposed to work in harmony to the extent that we could with the A. F. of L. They have already said here in the opening statement, I think, or intimated that they were going to develop here that we were chisling our laborers and not paying them what they ought to get, and that they were thoroughly dissatisfied with it, so much so that they were having these meetings with Hart and organizing a strike to get $1.50 an hour. That is the materiality of it. We are showing that they were getting 90 cents an hour and thoroughly satisfied.

The Court: I will overrule the objection.

Colonel Harris: Will you please note an exception.

The Witness: May I state how the 90-cent rate page 229 } came into being?

The Court: No. Just answer the question.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Was that rate of 90 cents an hour satisfactory to your common laborers, so far as you know?

A. We never had any complaint.

Q. Did you ever hear any complaint about it until you heard Mr. Mullen's opening statement here yesterday?

A. No.

Q. What rate were you paying your carpenters?

A. $1.75 an hour.

Q. Was that satisfactory to the A. F. of L. people?

A. That was the rate which was agreed on between our company and the Paintsville Local 646.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Was that rate satisfactory to your carpenters, in so far as you know?

A. We never had any complaints.

Q. What was the rate for your common laborers for overtime?

A. They were paid time and a half.

Q. Was everybody on the job, rated as carpenters or laborers, paid time and a half for overtime?

A. Carpenters were paid time and a half for overtime during the week, and I believe for work performed on Saturday. Work on Sunday, I think they got overtime.
page 230 } I would have to check that—I mean, they got double time. I am not positive.

Q. In your position as the President of Laburnum Construction Company, was it ever reported to you at all that any of your laborers wanted the United Construction Workers to represent them?

A. I never heard the United Construction Workers mentioned in connection with the job at Kentucky until July 14.

Q. As President of the Laburnum Company, did it ever come to your attention during the progress of the work that your laborers were contemplating a strike against Laburnum Company?

A. We never had any complaints from the laborers whatsoever.

Q. When was the first time any such intimation as that came to your attention?

A. It never did come to my attention.

Q. You heard Mr. Mullens' opening statement yesterday, did you not?

A. We never had a strike.

Q. I mean, did you ever hear anything about a strike until you heard his opening statement yesterday?

A. That is the first time I heard it. I wasn't thinking about that.

Q. As you became more intimately acquainted page 231 } with Breathitt County, Kentucky, did you learn whether or not it was commonly spoken of in Eastern Kentucky as "Bloody Breathitt"?

A. The first time I went to the job site, I heard it referred to as "Bloody Breathitt," and heard it referred to as "Bloody Breathitt" repeatedly afterwards.

Q. Do you know how it got that name?

A. Its reputation for violence and killings.

Q. There is going to be some reference here later to Beaver

Creek. Do you know what the reputation of Beaver Creek is for being law abiding and peaceful or otherwise?

A. Beaver Creek has a reputation for being a very rough section on Beaver Creek in Floyd County, Kentucky. It has a very bad reputation for violence in connection with labor disturbances, shootings and killings.

Q. How far is Beaver Creek from the job site, approximately, if you know?

A. I would say about 25 miles over the mountains.

Q. Is Wheelwright, Kentucky, located on Beaver Creek?

A. Yes.

Q. About how far is Wheelwright from the job site?

A. By road it is a pretty good ways. You go to Salyersville and then to Paintsville, and then to Prestonsburg. Prestonsburg is about 15 miles from Paintsville. Then you would go about 10 or 15 miles from Prestonsburg down to Beaver Creek.

Actually, by skyline it is much closer to Breathitt page 232 } County than is indicated by the road.

Q. About how big a town is Wheelwright, if you know?

A. That is where the Inland Steel Company has a big tippie. It is a small town, a coal town.

Q. Do you know a man named William O. Hart?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who is he? What is he?

A. William O. Hart is a field representative of the United Construction Workers and District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America.

Q. What was your first contact with him?

A. On July 14, 1949, at about 11 or 11:30 a. m., we received a telephone call in Richmond from Pikesville, Kentucky. Mr. Hart was on the telephone, and I talked to him.

Q. Did he tell you who he was?

A. Yes, sir. He said that he was a field representative of the United Construction Workers and District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America, and that he worked under Mr. David Hunter, who was Regional Director of Region 58 of the United Construction Workers and District 50, with headquarters in Pikesville.

Q. Did he tell you whether or not his own, Hart's territory and Hunter's territory, included Breathitt County, Kentucky?

A. He didn't say that at that time, but he did page 233 } say that he was calling us about the work which we were performing for Pond Creek Pocahontas Company in Breathitt County.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Did he tell you what the purpose of his telephone call was?

A. Yes. As I said, he said he was calling about the work which we were performing for Pond Creek Pocahontas Company in Breathitt County, and that he understood that Pond Creek Pocahontas Company had awarded to us a lot of additional work, including about 500 dwellings, some stores, and other buildings. Mr. Hart said that we were working in United Mine Workers territory, and that he was going to take over our work.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told Mr. Hart that he was correct; that Pond Creek Pocahontas Company had awarded to us a lot of additional work in Breathitt County.

Mr. Hart said that he had just closed down, or rather, United Construction Workers had just closed down a job which the Beckett Construction Company and the Link-Belt Company were performing for Inland Steel Company at Wheelwright, and that unless we recognized United Construction Workers, they would do the same thing to us on our work in Breathitt. Mr. Hart said that he thought we might like to discuss the matter with him and negotiate an agreement with United Construction Workers.

I told Mr. Hart that we had an agreement with various A. F. of L. local unions and the Richmond Building Trades Council, and that I didn't see how we could make an agreement with United Construction Workers.

Mr. Hart then said that he was intending to organize all of our workers, including the carpenters, electricians, pipefitters, iron workers, millrights, laborers, and everybody else.

He said that if we didn't make an agreement recognizing the United Construction Workers, he would close down our job.

Q. Did he tell you that before you told him about your contract with the A. F. of L., or after that?

A. He told me that afterwards.

I told Mr. Hart that I didn't see how we could make an agreement with his organization; and he said that he intended to organize all of our workers; that he was thinking mainly about the additional work which was going to be performed in Breathitt County.

I told Mr. Hart that I just didn't know what we could do, but that I would think about it. I asked Mr. Hart please to let me hear from him again before he did anything. Mr. Hart said that he would do it.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. In that conversation, did he say anything to page 235 } you about anything of your laborers being dissatisfied with their wages or working conditions?

A. No. He simply said that we were working in United Mine Workers territory, and that we had to recognize his organization. If we didn't do it, he would close the job down.

Q. Did he say anything to you about a strike by your laborers?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he make any distinction between United Construction Workers and United Mine Workers? Whose territory did he say you were in?

A. He said we were working in United Mine Workers territory. At that time I wasn't very familiar with the set-up except that I had, of course, heard of the United Mine Workers.

Q. At the time of that telephone conversation on July 14, who was your superintendent on the job site in Breathitt County?

A. Mr. C. M. Delinger.

Q. Who was your field clerk out there?

A. Mr. Maynard C. Ragan.

Q. After Hart telephoned you as you say he did, what did you immediately do that same day?

A. I immediately telephoned Mr. Delinger, and page 236 } I asked Mr. Delinger if he knew anything about United Construction Workers organizing our employees on the job in Breathitt County.

Q. What did he tell you?

A. Mr. Delinger said that he didn't know anything about it. I then told Mr. Delinger about the conversation which I had had with Mr. Hart.

Colonel Harris: We object to that, the conversation between him and Mr. Delinger, if the Court please.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, my suggestion is—I am quite willing to argue it here before the jury, but we are going to get into a field now whether it comes in as reports gotten by Mr. Bryan in the regular course of his employment or in the discharge of his duties as president of the corporation. We have it covered in our trial brief, and I suggest that we have it out in the absence of the jury.

The Court: The Court will now recess for a few minutes, gentlemen.

(Short recess.)

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

(The following proceedings were had in chambers.)

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, Mr. Bryan is on the stand now and under examination. I don't know whether we have any objection to his producing those papers or not. I haven't had time to confer with him. We have no objection to revealing any proper information pertinent to page 237 } this case, but I just ask the Court to defer your ruling on that until I can confer with Mr. Bryan after he gets off the stand this afternoon.

The Court: I thought maybe we might adjourn, say, about 4:30 and come in and take up this other matter, and we can act on this at the same time, rather than go into it at this point.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: That will be entirely satisfactory.

Mr. Robertson: Now, if Your Honor please, who wants to open and close on this testimony that is offered now? We are offering the testimony and they are objecting to it.

The Court: You go ahead.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, the whole basis of our case is that we were run off the job out there by intimidation and threat. They have indicated in their opening statement that they are going to claim that our men were organized by Hart or were in the process of being organized by Hart as members of the United Construction Workers, during this critical time of this whole case; that they were dissatisfied with their wages; and that Hart had brought that knowledge home to Bryan; and that the real trouble here was that Laburnum wouldn't pay these men fair wages; that they resented it; struck; set up a picket line; and that other laborers were going to respect the picket line and refuse to cross page 238 } it because it was a peaceful, legal picket line, and it was a matter of honor between unions not to ignore a picket line.

That is a fair statement of what Mr. Mullen laid down in his opening statement.

That being the field within which he chooses to pitch the battle, we are entitled to take the offensive and go to it. We are entitled to show that we knew nothing about this UCW organization; that we knew nothing about any threatened strike; that we knew nothing about any dissatisfaction with wages. And we have already shown that in Bryan's version of the telephone conversation.

Now, we are entitled to show that he is the president of that corporation, charged with the responsibility of running the business. According to what Mr. Mullen has intimated in his opening statement and entirely also independently of that, when Hart made that telephone conversation to him, it was up to Bryan to do something, not sit there inertly and let nature take its course. It was up to him to take all action necessary to defend the legal rights and interests of Laburnum. How else could he do it but by communicating with the superintendent on the job? As the head of this company, which can act only through its agents, we are entitled to show what he said and what he did and what his agents said and did, and what action he took there on that particular day to try to safeguard this situation and find out what was what.

Following right along the same line, I think, of course, that they have the right to take the same broad scope. I think that unless they stultify themselves and go back on what they have already said, they have made it just as manifest in their opening statement as it can be made at that stage of the case, that they propose to bring in what happened and was said and done at these union meetings where they said that our laborers were being organized, and somebody took charge and called for a strike vote, and that they were doing this, that, and the other. I think they have a right to do that. I think it goes to the very heart of the whole case.

I think that whatever came to Bryan's knowledge, it was his duty to receive and get and act upon as president of this company, and it is properly admissible in evidence here; and also it is properly admissible in evidence here for him to tell this jury what he did and what instructions he gave and what he said and what actions he took for the reasons that I have already stated, and also so that this jury can determine: Were you really in a jam and were you honestly trying to work out a solution the best way you could, or was it just a sort of flim-flam proposition, and this strike proposition and chiseling your men out of wages and all, and now you are trying to magnify it into a case against these three unions?

page 240 } The Court: Wasn't there an objection to a question about a conversation Mr. Bryan had with his superintendent?

Mr. Robertson: Yes, sir.

The Court: I think that is the question, whether or not that is admissible.

Mr. Robertson: I think I covered that. I claim it is admissible. I thought that was what I was addressing myself to.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: What have you gentlemen to say?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: It is pure and simple hearsay, Judge.

Colonel Harris: There were two things that occurred to me, Judge. One is that it is hearsay; and the other is that it is a self-serving declaration. They have practically proven that Bryan is the alter-ego of the Laburnum Construction Corporation, over our objection. Now he is making evidence. If he comes in and violates the hearsay rule and can testify as to what he said to somebody else, it seems to me that absolutely the world is their parish and there are no rules of evidence.

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, you have to approach the question from this standpoint: Beyond per-adventure of doubt, we have a right to show what happened following that telephone call. If the Court be of the opinion that page 241 } Mr. Bryan can't repeat verbatim conversations, undoubtedly we have a right to ask him, "Mr. Bryan, what did you do?"

"Well, I called my superintendent."

"What did you learn?"

"Well, I learned that he had received no information at that time, of any efforts on the part of Hart to close the work down."

"Well, did you give any instructions on the subject?"

"Yes. My instructions were to let me know if anything turned up."

There can't be any doubt about that. It is nothing on earth but a part of the history of the case, just exactly as we have in every personal injury case, and a doctor is permitted to take the witness stand and tell what the plaintiff said to the doctor when the plaintiff came to see the doctor to receive treatment.

The Chairman: Do you contend that Mr. page 242 } Bryan can tell what his superintendent told him?

Mr. Robertson: I think he can, yes, sir. It is in the regular course of business.

Mr. Allen: I am inclined to the view that we can get at the same result in a way that in my opinion will not be questionable, that Mr. Bryan can tell—he will have to do a little thinking instead of repeating, trying to tell verbatim conversations—he will have to do a little thinking and say what he did. He can say that he called him. He can say that he got information thus and so. He can say that he gave instructions. He can cover the field pretty much in that way just about as well as he can by repeating verbatim conversations.

The Court: I don't think he can repeat conversations.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: I have no desire to repeat the conversations, Your Honor.

The Court: I think the objection is good. I sustain the objection. There may be some other way you can get it. I don't think Mr. Bryan can state what conversation he had with this or that man in his employ, but he can say what he did as a result of this conversation with Mr. Hart.

Mr. Robertson: That is all I want to do. If I understand Your Honor's ruling he can say that "I called my page 243 } superintendent and made inquiry as to whether any attempts to organize hour laborers in the UCW had come to his attention," and his answer is that they had not.

I had another thought there. "Then I instructed him to keep close watch on the situation and advise me if anything developed." That is all I am driving at

Mr. Pollard: Your Honor, it is a little belated, but I raise the question of the propriety of Mr. Bryan being in here in this hearing with you in as much as he is the witness on the stand.

Mr. Robertson: I think that is within the discretion of the Court, and I don't see any use—I would think that this Court, and I will ask Mr. Mullen on that—that this Court knows Mr. Bryan, and I don't see any reason to affront Mr. Bryan in that way. I don't see anything improper here. Their people are coming in here. I see Mr. Owen in here and I don't know whether he is going to be a witness or not.

Mr. Pollard: We are discussing what he has said and how he can say it. It tells the witness how to answer.

The Court: I think your objection is good when we discuss Mr. Bryan. When he is not being discussed—

Mr. Pollard: I agree with that.

The Court: It would be all right. But I think as long as we are talking about what can and can't be said page 244 } with respect to Mr. Bryan he should not be here.

Mr. Robertson: I will ask Mr. Owen to go out too. He is not a lawyer in the case. He was sworn as a witness and I will ask that he go out.

The Court: The Court rules require him whenever the time comes to discuss anything that he testifies that he leave. He may stay just as Mr. Bryan, but when the time comes for us to discuss matters—

Mr. Robertson: I don't know what he is going to testify to.

The Court: You have summoned him as a witness.

Mr. Robertson: I know what I am going to ask him.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: If you inform the Court that there is anything being discussed that might affect Mr. Owen, I will excuse him.

Mr. Robertson: I don't want to whisper to the Court and tell the Court something I won't tell them and I don't care to disclose my hand to them.

The Court: I mean in this conference here. If we discuss anything in our conference that might affect his testimony we will excuse him.

Mr. Mullen: Mr. Owen is not going to be a witness put on by us. He is a lawyer.

Mr. Robertson: You have said over and over again that he was not here as a lawyer.

page 245 } The Court: Let us go on with the other subject. We will take that up when we get to it.

Mr. Robertson: It is the end of the subject as far as I am concerned. I think I understand the Court's ruling.

The Court: Is there anything that you visualize coming up in the next two or three minutes that we can dispose of right now?

Mr. Robertson: I think this question is coming up. It is coming up, first, of course with us. That is going to be the matter of a labor union meeting at Paintsville on the night of July 26 and all that was said there about the danger of going back to the work. I think it is admissible as throwing light on whether or not these men were actually in fear of going back. I gather from Mr. Mullen's opening statement that he proposes exactly the same kind of testimony in his union meetings where they say our laborers were organizing and preparing to strike.

Mr. Mullen: I would like to confer with my associates on that.

The Court: All right. Will you confer now so it will save us from recessing again. I don't like to recess too often. I don't think it helps either side to do it too often.

Mr. Robertson: In reference to that conference, I say as far as I am concerned you can throw the door wide open and tell everything that happened there provided the same rule is applied to both of us.

Mr. Mullen: The point you are making is that you want to be able to tell just what occurred and was said at that meeting at Paintsville when Mr. Bryan was present urging these men to go back, and it is assumed we would want to tell what happened in these other meetings that we have referred to.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: That is right. In all fairness to you I think it is relevant all the way around. I think it goes to the very heart of the case on both sides.

Mr. Mullen: Let me confer with my associates.

(Counsel for defendants withdrew for separate conference, after which they returned to Chambers and the following proceedings were had:)

Mr. Mullen: Judge, we don't see how we can cover that question until we come to see what the evidence is that they propose to offer. If it is a lot of conversation and so forth, we don't see how ahead of time we can accept that.

Mr. Robertson: I will ask the question and ask the Court to rule on it when we get to it.

The Court: Is that what you prefer to do?

Mr. Mullen: I don't see how we can do anything else.

page 247 } (The following proceedings were had in open court:)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, there is one question I failed to ask you. How was that rate of 90 cents an hour for laborers, with time and a half or overtime determined?

Colonel Harris: We object, if the Court please. It is immaterial.

The Court: I overrule the objection. I think I passed on that a while ago.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

The Witness: That was the rate which Pond Creek Pocahontas Company was paying to its laborers at the job site when we went there. We investigated what laborers, that is, common laborers in that section were getting at the time and found it to be from 60 to 75 cents an hour. 90 cents an hour was the rate approved by the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company. As a matter of fact, it had the right to approve all the wage rates which we used for all classifications of labor. Afterwards, the matter of the wage rate was discussed with the business agent of the laborers local union in Lexington, and we understood that it was satisfactory.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, after Hart phoned you on July 14, which was a Thursday, did you telephone Delinger, your superintendent on the job?

page 248 } A. Yes, sir.

Q. What instructions, if any, did you give him?

Colonel Harris: We object to that as hearsay and a self-serving declaration by the Plaintiff.

The Court: I will overrule the objection.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

By Mr. Roebtson:

Q. Don't repeat any verbatim conversation between yourself and your superintendent, but just state what instructions, if any, you gave him.

A. May I say what I called him about?

Q. Yes.

A. I called Mr. Delinger about the telephone conversation which I had just had with Mr. Hart, in which Mr. Hart said that he was going to close down our job unless we recognized United Construction Workers. I wanted to know what had been done about organizing our laborers at the job site by United Construction Workers.

Q. What did you learn?

A. I learned—

Colonel Harris: May we have the same objection and exception.

The Court: The same objection and exception will follow through to this line of question.

The Witness: No efforts had been made as far page 249 } as our supervisory officials at the job site knew, about efforts of United Construction workers to organize any of our employees.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Did you give any instructions as to what should be done with reference to the miners?

A. Yes. I instructed Mr. Delinger to watch the situation closely and to keep me fully informed. I also gave instructions for him to make an effort to arrange for the laborers to be taken in to the Salyersville Carpenters Local Union or Paintsville Carpenters Local Union as carpenter apprentices or carpenter helpers.

Q. And those were with what national organizations?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. Affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. After you had telephoned Delinger on July 14, did you communicate with the Richmond office of the A. F. of L., the Carpenters Union?

A. No. I called Mr. Jack Joinville, President of the Richmond Building Trades Council.

Q. That is what I meant. Was he the chief officer of the Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council with which you had the contract of April 15, 1947?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was your purpose in calling Mr. Joinville?

A. To report to him the conversation which I had just had with Mr. Hart about our job and about the United page 250 } Construction Workers.

Q. Did you request Mr. Joinville to do anything to compose the situation?

A. Yes, I asked Mr. Joinville for suggestions and I asked for their help in case trouble occurred.

Q. Did he express a willingness to be helpful if he could?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Was he able to help and compose the situation or not?

A. It was suggested that I get in touch with Mr. Herbert Rivers, Secretary-Treasurer of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor in Washington.

Q. Did you get in touch with him that day?

A. I called Mr. Rivers that day.

Q. What was your purpose in calling him?

A. To make a report about the pending trouble with the United Construction Workers, to tell him about my conversation with Mr. Hart, to ask for their help.

Q. Were they willing to be helpful if they could?

A. Yes, I was asked to keep them informed.

Q. Were they able to compose the situation and prevent the trouble which developed thereafter?

A. No.

Q. Mr. Bryan, the next date that I am going to call to your attention is Friday of the following week, which page 251 } was July 22. What generally happened in this situation during the week between July 14 and July 22?

A. On July 18—I will have to get my calendar—July 14 was a Thursday. July 18 was the following Monday. On the night of July 18 Mr. E. I. Hathaway, who is a vice president of Laburnum, and I, left Richmond on the C. & O. night train for Huntington. We arrived in Huntington the next morning on July 19, got a U-Drive-It automobile and drove down to Salyersville, arriving there in the afternoon, but too late to go to the job site.

The next morning Mr. Hathaway, Mr. Delinger and I went out to the job site. We went over the entire job. Everything seemed to be going smoothly. There had been on interference from the United Construction Workers. I discussed with Mr. Delinger the matter of the United Construction Workers, and after that we returned to Huntington, took the train on the night of the 20th, and got back to Richmond on the morning of the 21st.

Q. While you were at the job site did any report come to you that the laborers were dissatisfied with their rate of pay?

A. No. The report came that the laborers were going to make application or had made application to become members of the Salyersville Carpenters Local No. 697.

Q. Was there any report made to you that they page 252 } were going to join the United Construction Workers?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was any report made to you of any of your laborers attending any United Construction Workers meetings?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any report made to you of the danger of any kind of strike among your laborers or any of your other employees there?

A. It was reported to me that some United Construction Worker organizers had been to the job site to see some laborers, but that the laborers had all decided to join the Salyersville Carpenters Local 697.

Q. When you were not at the job site during that week between July 14 and July 22, did you keep in touch with the job site by telephone?

A. Oh, yes. I was in touch with the job site daily.

Q. With reference to Hart, did you receive any telephone call from your Superintendent Delinger on July 22, which was Friday?

A. I don't know whether I called him or whether he called me. We were in touch with each other almost daily. If it wasn't with Mr. Delinger, it would be with Mr. Ragan, who was there at the office most of the time. But on July 22 I did have a telephone conversation with Mr. Delinger.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. In that telephone conversation did he make page 253 } any report to you as president of your company regarding Hart?

A. Mr. Delinger said that he had been informed—

Mr. Pollard: I object to that, Your Honor. It is hearsay.

Mr. Robertson: Don't repeat the direct quote.

The Court: I sustain the objection.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Don't go into the conversation but just state the substance of what you learned from Delinger, what report Delinger made to you.

A. That on the following Monday, which would be July 25, 1949, the United Construction Workers would come to the job site with a large group of men for the purpose of stopping the job, stopping our work and closing down the job.

Q. In that conversation did your superintendent request that you come to the job site immediately?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go that day, the 22nd?

A. It was impossible for me to return at once to Kentucky. I had other things to do, and I didn't think that anything was going to happen.

Q. Did you give any instructions to Delinger or Ragan as to what they should do regarding the situation over the week-end?

A. Yes. I gave instructions that they should page 254 } watch the situation closely and keep me informed of any developments.

Q. Did you get any further report about that situation between Friday and Monday?

A. I may have had some telephone conversations. I am not positive. I know I did have a conversation on Monday, but I am not sure about over the week-end.

Q. In that conversation on Friday the 22nd, what was reported to you about what time Hart was expected the following Monday?

No, I don't think there was any time. It was just that they were coming to the job with a large group of men to stop the work and close down the job.

Q. On Monday, July 25, did you have a further telephone conversation with your superintendent, Mr. Delinger?

A. Yes, we had a telephone conversation. I wanted to know if the United Construction Workers crew had come to the job and had closed it down, what had happened.

Q. What information did you get along that line?

A. That nobody had come to the job.

Q. Do you know about what time that conversation occurred?

A. I think it was in the morning.

Q. Then did you have any further telephone conversation with Delinger later that day?

A. Mr. Delinger called me at my home at about page 255 } 7:30 p. m. that night while I was at the supper table.

Q. What did he report to you in that conversation?

A. That the next day, July 26, at noon, the United Construction Workers were coming to the job with a large group of men, that they would be armed, and that they were coming to stop our employees from working and to close down the job.

Q. Did he make any request that you come to the job site?

A. He begged me to come that time.

Q. Did you go?

A. I told Mr. Delinger that I would do my best to get there.

Q. Then what did you do toward getting there?

A. It was too late to take a train which would get me to Huntington in time to get to the job by noon. I made inquiry to find out if I could get a plane that would fly me out in that section. I couldn't make arrangements that night. There were no commercial lines that I could use, and I couldn't charter a special plane. My automobile was out of commission. It wasn't running well. I went to see one of our superintendents named Tony Meli and asked if he would go with me, that we would go in a company truck, that we would drive all night and see if we couldn't get there by noon.

Q. Did you go by truck?

page 256 } A. We left Richmond a little bit after ten and took turns driving and got to Huntington the next morning at about seven o'clock.

Q. When you got to Huntington did you make any attempt while you were in Huntington to communicate with Hart?

A. We stopped at a gas station to fill up with gas, and while there at the gas station I placed a telephone call to Mr. Hart over a pay station. I was in Huntington and I placed the call for Mr. Hart in Pikesville. I was told that Mr. Hart was out, but that I could talk to Mr. David Hunter, Regional Director.

Q. Did you talk to Mr. Hunter?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. Yes, I talked to Mr. Hunter.

Q. Now tell what you said to Mr. Hunter and what Mr. Hunter said to you.

A. I told Mr. Hunter who I was, and I told him that I had been informed that Mr. Hart planned to lead a large group of men to our job in Breathitt County for the purpose of stopping our work and closing down the job. I told Mr. Hunter that I was trying to get to the job site because of the situation just as fast as I could and that I would appreciate it if he could get a message to Mr. Hart not to interfere with our men until I had an opportunity to talk to him at the job site.

page 257 } Q. Did you tell Mr. Hunter of the conversation you had with Hart on July 14?

A. I think that I did.

Q. What did Mr. Hunter say in response to your conversation with him and request to him? What did he say to you?

A. Mr. Hunter said that he would try to get a message to Mr. Hart.

Q. Then did you start on out toward the job site?

A. Yes, sir. We started toward the job site a little bit after that.

Q. What happened?

A. We got about 10 or 12 miles from Huntington and the truck just stopped running. We had plenty of gasoline. We didn't know what the trouble was. We finally got a mechanic, who said that something had happened to the distributor and that he could fix it very easily but that it would be necessary to go to Huntington to get a new distributor. So he started back to Huntington and we expected him back in anywhere from a half hour or so, 45 minutes. The mechanic just never did come back. We were expecting him any minute. We couldn't leave the truck. We didn't know what to do. Finally we just gave up on the man and telephoned to Huntington and made arrangements for somebody to come out and pull the truck back to Huntington to have it repaired. We also made arrangements to get a U-Drive-It car

page 258 }

so we could continue on to the job site.

Q. What time did you actually get to the job site?

A. We finally got a U-Drive-It car a little bit after noon, between 12 and 12:30. I called the job and informed them that we were having car trouble and we would get there as soon as we could. We finally got to the job between about 2:30 and 3 o'clock.

Q. After you got to the fork of the road, one fork going to Paintsville and the other fork going to Salyersville, after you went to Salyersville and went through Royalton and got out toward the job site, did you meet any considerable group of automobiles coming back in the opposite direction toward Salyersville?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Objection. It is immaterial, Your Honor.

Mr. Robertson: We are just going to show that part of Hart's crowd was leaving the job site. We are going to connect it up.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

The Witness: After we left Royalton headed toward the job site we passed from 15 to 18 automobiles, jeeps and trucks, all filled with men and all headed in the opposite direction from the way we were going.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. How many men would you estimate were in that group?

A. From four to five in a vehicle. There must page 259 } have been—if there were 15, and multiply it by 5, it would be about 75.

Q. Did you ascertain afterwards who those men were?

A. They were the United Construction Workers crowd led by Mr. Hart, who had been to the job site and who were then going away again.

Q. When you got to the job site was Delinger there?

A. He was there.

Q. Was your field clerk, Maynard Ragan, there?

A. Yes.

Q. Were your carpenters and laborers there or had they left?

A. On July 26 we had men working at four locations on the job. Some were working on top of the mountain at the head of it. Most of the men were working on the tipple. About seven or eight men were working on the school house. We had one painter apprentice who was working on the 25 houses.

And the men on the head house at the top of the mountain were still working.

Q. I don't believe they were ever involved in this matter at all, were they?

A. Mr. Hart and his crowd never went there. The men on the school house had all stopped working. The painter apprentice was still working. He had not been—page 260 } nothing had been done to him. Everybody on the tipple had stopped working except maybe one or two.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Did you make inquiry of Delinger and Ragan as to why the work had stopped and come to a standstill?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the report that you received?

A. I received the report that about 12 o'clock noon a group of men estimated at from 75 to 100 persons had come to the job site, headed by Mr. Hart, that they had stopped our people from working at the school house and at the tipple, and had stopped the employees of Allen Codell. As far as our own workers were concerned, they had been threatened, intimidated; that a lot of the crowd were drunk; that a lot of them were armed; that our employees were outnumbered, and that they didn't have any choice; that Mr. Hart and his crowd said that all of our people had to joint the United Construction Workers or stop work.

Q. Mr. Bryan, did Laburnum have an office there about where your bunkhouse and eating house are shown on this sketch?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how far would you say it was from your field office there down to the tipple?

A. I would say it is about 300 or 350 yards.

Q. How far would you say it was from the page 261 } school house to the tipple?

A. To go from the tipple to our little office and camp, which consisted of barracks and messhalls and bath houses, would be about 350 yards, and then you would go up the road about a mile to Evanston where the 25 houses were located and the Pond Creek Camp, and then you would continue further up the road about a quarter to a half mile to the school house.

Q. When you reached the job site there around 2:30 on the afternoon of Tuesday, July 26, did you go to the school house?

A. The first place I went was to the office to see Mr. Delinger. I don't think that we went to the school house that afternoon. We may have later on.

Q. Did you go down to the tipple while you were there or just to the office, if you recall?

A. I am not positive that we went to the tipple. I think that we did. I think that I just talked mostly to Mr. Delinger and Mr. Ragan at the office to get the details on what had happened, but we may have gone down there.

Q. After you had talked to Delinger and Ragan there at the office what did you do?

A. We talked at the office for some time.

The Court: What did you do after you talked to him? That is the question.

The Witness: Mr. Delinger and Mr. Meli and page 262 } and I got in a truck and drove back from our office toward the Pond Creek camp.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Is that where the 25 dwellings were?

A. That is right.

Q. On your way over there did you meet Hart?

The Court: What is that question?

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. On the way over there did you meet Hart?

A. Just before you get to Pond Creek camp we crossed over the railroad tracks, and at that point there were three or four men standing on the side of the road by a parked car. They waived at us. We drove the truck in to the Pond Creek camp, which was just across the tracks, parked the car, and then I walked back to these three or four men. I asked if they knew where Mr. Hart was. One of the men said, "I am Mr. Hart." So I introduced myself and told him that I would like to talk to him some. He had with him three men, I believe, or four men. Two of them had on buttons showing that they were United Construction Workers stewards. Some of these men had obviously been drinking. They were not what you would call falling down drunk or anything like that, but they were not sober. Mr. Hart and his men rolled up the windows of this parked automobile and locked the doors, and Mr. Meli page 263 } and Mr. Delinger and I and Mr. Hart and these fellows with him walked away from the car maybe about 10 or 12 feet to talk.

Q. Mr. Bryan, did you say anything to Hart about your efforts to reach him that morning from Huntington?

A. Yes. I told Mr. Hart that I was very sorry that he had decided to come to the job with a large crowd of men and stop our people from working. I told him that I had tried to reach him early that morning a little bit after seven o'clock by telephoning him in Pikesville from Huntington, that I had been told that he was out, but that I could talk to Mr. Hunter. I told Mr. Hart about my conversation with Mr. Hunter and that I had asked Mr. Hunter please to ask Mr. Hart not to interfere with our workers until I could talk to Hart at the job site. I told Mr. Hart that Mr. Hunter had said he would try to get a message to Hart. Mr. Hart said that he had received the message, but that he had already made all his plans and arrangements and couldn't stop them.

Q. Did you say anything to him or—page 264 } Colonel Harris: We object to the witness reading from a document. I notice he keeps looking at a document and then turning the pages.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, the witness is referring to a memorandum which was prepared at my request, for the purpose of refreshing his memory and guiding his memory in telling the sequence of these events. We had all that out this morning; that he cannot testify by reading his memorandum, but he has a perfect right to guide his memory by a memorandum and refer to his memorandum to refresh his memory, and keep the thing in sequence, and then testify from his memory as refreshed, and it is perfectly obvious that is what he is doing here. Mr. Allen covered all that this morning.

Colonel Harris: I respectfully submit that a man would not need anything to refresh his recollection on any such happening as Mr. Bryan is relating. A man would remember, if things like that had happened; he would remember it. He wouldn't need to write it out and come here and read it to the jury.

The Court: Are you referring to dates there, Mr. Bryan, or do you have it all written out?

Mr. Robertson: He has a full memorandum, if Your Honor wants to see it.

Colonel Harris: He has it all written out.

page 265 } Mr. Robertson: He is not testifying from the memorandum.

Excuse me. I didn't mean to interrupt you. Are you through?

Colonel Harris: Go right ahead.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, my friend is just simply not right, and I speak from bitter experience when I say that it is humanly impossible to keep the sequence of these dates and hours and different people that you meet, when and where, and on the particular dates, without some thing to guide your memory, just like—I hadn't finished—just like I guided my opening statement by notes I had here. I challenge anybody in this court room, Mr. Bryan or anybody else—you cannot keep the sequence of these dates and hours in mind without something to guide your memory. That is why the law permits you to do precisely what Mr. Bryan is doing.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

It seems to me, Your Honor, that the real purpose of my friend here is to break in on this story and destroy the effectiveness of the testimony.

Colonel Harris: My purpose is to protect the rights of the defendants that I represent, and there are rules of law governing the trial of lawsuits that the experience of the Anglo-Saxon world has developed in hundreds of years. This witness sitting up here and telling this account to the jury, doesn't have dates written down alone there. He has a narrative account that he keeps looking at, and on the pages are words underscored in red pencil so his eye can catch them.

I ask the Court to look at the page he has open right there now. He is not referring to dates.

Mr. Robertson: The Court is perfectly welcome to do it.

The Court: May I see it?

Mr. Robertson: I challenge everything he said. We are strictly within our rights in doing what the law says we ought to do.

(Court examining document.)

Mr. Robertson: We would be glad to give Your Honor a copy of the thing here, if you want it. I have one here to guide my memory.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, I think the defendants are entitled to a copy of that, and for the purpose of the record, we would like it to be copied in the record.

Mr. Robertson: You can't have it except under a court ruling.

The Court: Mr. Pollard has the floor, Mr. Robertson.

Go ahead, Mr. Pollard.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: I would like for you to page 267 } rule that we are entitled to examine it and have it copied in the record.

Mr. Robertson: We would be very glad to do that at the conclusion of this witness' testimony, if you want it, Your

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Honor, and they are welcome to it for all purposes of cross-examination if they want it. But I call to Your Honor's memory that under Robinson v. Commonwealth, they have no right to call for it at this stage.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, I have the law right here, decided in Fant v. Miller, 17 Gratt., which is still the law.

The Court: I guess we had better not discuss this in the presence of the jury.

Gentlemen, we will recess for a few minutes and go in chambers.

(Short recess.)

page 268 } (The following proceedings were had in chambers:)

The Court: I would like at least some authority for your position, Mr. Robertson. It does appear that his testimony is written down in narrative form.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I could bring you the authorities. We have them here. I will let my associates take that up, but just let me before that say this:

I happen to know how Mr. Bryan handled this situation, that while these events were transpiring he made very full notes on them at the time. You might call them notes in the field. He wouldn't make them out there while he was talking to Hart, but when he would get back to the hotel that night he would write them down. He made up a memorandum. He has that now to guide his memory. When he came to write those things up in permanent form they came to this (indicating), at my suggestion and at my initiative.

What we are doing here now, Your Honor, is not reading any statement into the record. If you have watched Bryan, he hasn't been reading this thing and testifying from that. You have seen the way he has referred to it to check his memory. I have mine underscored, too—

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: To lead him on.

Mr. Robertson: Don't interrupt me, please.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Excuse me.

Mr. Robertson: Not to mis-question him on page 269 } something. He has a perfect right to do it, and there is no sanctity in whether it is written out in a full sentence or whether it is a skelton outline. The question is whether he is referring to it as a guide to his memory. I won't offer the affront to Your Honor's intelligence to say that he is using it there to remind him of the vivid occurrence there, the substance of the conversations between him and Hart, but he is using it to safeguard and check his memory on the date and the hour and to give him the cue as to what transpired there at that time, which is exactly the reason the law allows him to do it. We are doing precisely what we have a right to do and what I submit is our duty to do if under oath we are going to keep this thing as accurate as we can.

I thought we had that out this morning and that it was settled under Mr. Allen's argument this morning.

Mr. Allen: May it please Your Honor, Mr. Wigmore, who we all know is the greatest authority on evidence in this country, in the Second Edition, Second Volume, begins a discussion of this subject at paragraph 758 under the title "Present Recollection Revived." After some discussion he says this, quoting from another case:

"Where the object is to revive in the mind of the witness the recollection of the facts of which he once had knowledge, it is difficult to understand why any means should be excepted to whereby that object may be obtained. Whether page 270 } in any particular case the witness' memory has been refreshed by the document referred to, or he speaks from what the document tells him, is a question of fact open to observation, more or less according to the circumstances. If in truth the memory has been refreshed, and he is enabled in consequence to speak to facts with which he was once familiar, but which afterwards escaped him, it cannot signify, in effect, in what manner or by what means these facts were recalled to his recollection. Common experience tells every man that a very slight circumstance, and one not in point to the existing inquiry, will sometimes revive the history of a transaction made up of many circumstances. * * * Why, then, if a man may refresh his memory by such means out of court, should he be precluded from doing so when he is under examination in court?"

Then he has a title, "Writing not made by Witness himself."

"That the paper was not written by the witness himself is therefore no fault in it. The witness may or may not, in a given instance, with propriety make use of it; but the aid may equally be a legitimate one even though another person prepared the writing."

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Then quoting from another case he says:

"If upon looking at any document he can so far refresh his memory as to recollect a circumstance, it is sufficient; and it makes no difference that the memorandum is not written by himself, for it is not the memorandum that is the evidence but the recollection of the witness."

Wigmore continues:

"This concluding expression of Lord Ellenborough's concisely states the principle, and has become a classic phrase in judicial quotation. Occasionally, the paper has been required at least to have been written under the witness' direction, or to be known by him to be correct; but this is generally due to a confusion of this subject with the subject of past recollection."

He goes on here and says, "Write not Original, but a Copy." He says that doesn't make any difference.

"That the paper is a copy, not an original, is also no essential fault. The only question is whether in fact it is genuinely calculated to revive the witness' recollection; and for this purpose a copy may conceivably be entirely satisfactory. The radical difference of principle between this use and that of a copied record of past recollection is plain; there is here no necessity of accounting for the original in any way."

Then he cites another case here:

"(the witness refreshed his memory as to the contents of a return by looking at the copy of it in the declaration): 'It was competent for him to use the declaration or any other paper for the purpose of refreshing his memory upon the subject.'"

Quoting from another authority, he said:

"(the witness used a newspaper report): 'It is well settled that he is permitted to assist his memory by the use of any written instrument; and it is not necessary that such writing should have been made by himself, or that it should be an original writing, providing after inspecting it he can speak the competency of the testimony.'"

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Then citing another case:

"(the witness, testifying to the amount of damage, used a copy made recently by K. from a copy of original contemporaneous memoranda; the other papers having become defaced): 'This kind of evidence is open to more or less suspicion, because * * * it may lead him to suppose he recalls facts when he really does not. But this affects the credibility rather than the competency of the testimony.'"

Wigmore continues:

"That the paper was not drawn up about the time of the events is not a fault. The recollection may be equally refreshed by a recent note as by some contemporaneous record. It might, in fact, be argued that there was less danger of reliance upon the record itself and more probability of actual refreshment where the paper was one confessedly having no value as a contemporaneous record of past recollection."

page 273 } The newest work of Wigmore out is a small book which contains his Code of Evidence. That was out in 1942. There he has the rule succinctly stated.

(Off the record.)

Mr. Allen: I think that is sufficient to show the rule. As I stated this morning, the case cited by Mr. Mullen deals with just reading the memorandum to the jury. A witness can hold the memorandum in his hand, he can look at it, refresh himself, and raise his head and testify. That is what the witness is doing. The witness is not reading the memorandum. As a matter of fact, the witness did make a contemporaneous memorandum of all these things. Every trip that he made out there he made it as he went along.

The Court: Anything else?

Mr. Moore: No, I have nothing.

The Court: Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, I have been watching the witness for some time, and it is very evident that he has a running written story and uses it. The matter is settled by the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia in 17 Gratt., page 196, in the case of Fank v. Miller, and it has not been overruled or changed. The headnote says: "A witness ought not to write his deposition or his answers beforehand, nor ought they to be written for him beforehand by counsel or any other person, but he ought to answer the questions orally and page 274 } from memory as they are propounded to him." The full statement of the Court on that is:

"A witness may be permitted to use such short notes as he brings with him to refresh his memory, but not the substance of his deposition; nor may he transcribe such notes verbatim. Thus the law is laid down in 2 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1062. A witness ought not to write his deposition or his answers beforehand, nor ought they to be written for him beforehand by counsel or any other person, but he ought to answer the questions orally and from memory as they are propounded to him. Parties or their counsel may, orally or by writing, previous to the examination, direct his attention to the facts in regard to which he is intended to be examined, and he may refresh his memory in regard to such facts by examining books and papers, and make memoranda from them and otherwise, especially of dates and amounts, and use such memoranda, for the purpose only of refreshing his memory, at the time of giving his evidence. The memoranda themselves are not evidence, and, a fortiori, what he says of their contents is not, unless he remembers the facts after his memory is refreshed."

Mr. Robertson: That is exactly what we are doing here. There is no quarrel between us and that case. He is guiding his memory about these dates and hours and is testifying from his memory as refreshed. I think I have page 275 } tried enough cases, Your Honor, to know that that is permissible and is done all the time.

The Court: Is the following verbatim that statement?

Mr. Robertson: No, he is not following it verbatim.

Mr. Mullen: As he goes on he turns over the page and it shows he is following it very closely.

The Court: I think it is all right and proper if he is just glancing at it and refreshing his memory; but if he is reading it as a deposition—

Mr. Robertson: Mr. Harris is looking over his shoulder, and he doesn't like what he is saying. Your Honor, watch him.

Mr. Allen: Your Honor can have a copy of it and can tell whether he is testifying.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Colonel Harris: For the last fifteen or twenty minutes Mr. Robertson has been using the memorandum to lead the witness, and the witness has the narrative account to respond to the lead. Mr. Robertson has been looking at a narrative form. He says he can't remember it, and he says that he wouldn't stultify himself by telling Your Honor that Mr. Bryan has to refresh his recollection on these vivid acts, but he has been turning page after page. When he started off on page 2 and I got where I could sort of look to see what the document was, he turned it up like that (indicating) so it would be impossible for me to see what he was page 276 } reading from. It was never contemplated so far as I know, and in nearly four decades of court room work I have never seen a witness allowed to bring in something that he and somebody else have concocted and get up on the stand and, using language that is probably more graphic than his own, read a narrative account. It is the contemplation of the law, as I understand it, that the jury must pass on the credibility of the witness, that they are entitled to form an opinion of him from his method and manner of testifying, and that he is supposed to hear questions and give answers from his brain. All he can do with reference to documents is to refresh his recollection. What is happening is that the substance of that thing, in my judgment—although that is a guess because they wouldn't let me see it, but watching what he is doing, he is giving Your Honor and that jury not what he remembers but what is written down there for him.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, that is simply not the fact.

The Court: Go ahead, Mr. Mullen.

Mr. Mullen: Mr. Robertson is holding one copy and asking questions from it, and he is following it in his copy and answering.

Mr. Robertson: I do it in every case I try.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Mr. Robertson, we were supposed to finish before you butted in.

page 277 } The Court: Go ahead, Mr. Pollard.

Mr. Mullen: I have finished. I rely on this case which I have quoted. I think it is clear and simple.

The Court: Does that case hold that you can't refresh your memory?

Mr. Mullen: It says:

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

"A witness ought not to write his deposition or his answers beforehand, nor ought they to be written for him beforehand by counsel or any other person, but he ought to answer the questions orally and from memory as they are propounded to him. Parties or their counsel may, orally or by writing, previous to the examination, direct his attention to the facts in regard to which he is intended to be examined, and he may refresh his memory in regard to such facts by examining books and paper, and make memoranda—"

That is beforehand.

"—from them and otherwise, especially of dates and amounts, and use such memoranda, for the purpose only of refreshing his memory, at the time of giving his evidence. The memoranda themselves are not evidence, and, a fortiori, what he says of their contents is not, unless he remembers the facts after his memory is refreshed."

Mr. Robertson: If you will just let me know when they are through, I will go ahead.

The Court: We will let you know.

page 278 } Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We would like an opportunity to examine that memo.

Mr. Robertson: You won't have it.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We ask that Your Honor rule on that.

Mr. Allen, the judge has asked you all to wait until we are through.

Mr. Allen: I am in favor of what you said, if you will listen. I think you have a right to see it if you want to see it, under Mr. Wigmore's rules.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: You and Mr. Robertson had better get together on it, then.

Mr. Allen: Let me read the rule. It will take but a minute. You are entitled to what Mr. Wigmore says you are entitled to. These rules in the new book are in condensed form.

"For the purpose of refreshing and improving a dormant recollection, a witness may use any artificial aid which under the circumstances is appropriate and does not seem improperly suggestive. In particular any writing may be used subject to the following provisions:

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

"The writing is not required to be one made by the witness himself.

"The writing is not required to be an original.

"The writing is not required to have been made freshly after the time of the event.

page 279 } "The writing must be shown to the opponent on request.

"The writing is not a part of the testimony.

"The writing does not become a part of the witness' testimony, and therefore the party offering the witness is not entitled to read or show it as evidence to the jury, but he is compellable to show it to the jury on the request of them or the opponent pursuant to" another rule which he cites.

If you demand to see it, then you have a right to see it.

Mr. Robertson: If they are through, let me say one thing to show that they don't know what they are talking about. I am perfectly willing for them to look at it. We have no secrets in here. But I am not going to give it to them. To show you that they don't know what they are talking about, when Bryan was out in the field and got these reports there that afternoon, we have here six pages of what was reported to him that had happened, reported by these men, which he wrote out in detail. I turned all of those over and didn't ask him anything about it at all. The reason I didn't do it is that I knew I would precipitate a fight as to whether it was hearsay or not, and I am going to have those men here, either in person or by deposition, to prove it. So, I am not even following the thing slavishly myself.

If they want to take it and read it and give it back to—

The Court: Under the rule laid down by Wig-page 280 } more it looks as if they are entitled to see it.

Mr. Robertson: They can see it and then give it back to me.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We would like the copy that Mr. Bryan is using.

Mr. Mullen: Wigmore has some very strange theories that our courts do not follow.

Mr. Allen: These are rules, though.

The Court: I understand he is not to read from that paper. He can refer to it as he testifies.

Mr. Robertson: That is right.

The Court: The Court rules that he can't read that paper.

Colonel Harris: Judge, we want that paper to take home with us, and we want to go through it and take the transcript of his testimony and see if it is word for word and in how many places it is word for word with that memorandum, with that narrative form of his testimony. The whole purpose of testimony and of cross-examination would be destroyed if every witness who came in could reach in his inside pocket and pull out a narrative and start reading it.

Mr. Robertson: Your Honor, let me tell you this. They are at perfect liberty to look at Mr. Bryan's copy or any other copy of it now. They are not at liberty to take it page 281 } away from here. When we finish examining this witness and before they cross-examine him, we are perfectly willing to give them a copy of this thing. They can make any use of it they want and put it in evidence if they want to.

The Court: They are entitled to see it now.

Mr. Robertson: We offer it to them now, but we are not going to say they can take it home. They can see it now. I don't understand those rules to say you can take it hom and take it out of the possession of the party.

The Court: Does it say there to furnish them a copy, Mr. Allen?

Mr. Allen: It says, "The writing must be shown to the opponent on request, as provided on Rule 93(a), Article 5." Let's see what that is.

Mr. Robertson: Of course, this is a contemporaneous note.

Mr. Allen: It says in Article 5: "An expert who has made a report based on written information furnished by the co-operation of several persons and used for a common purpose, such as a * * * hospital attendant, may testify by introduction of the report, subject to the right of either party to cross-examine the persons who have furnished any of the information."

Nobody furnished this information to Mr. Bryan. He got it himself. It is his own.

page 282 } The Court: As I understand it, Mr. Bryan prepared this statement himself.

Mr. Robertson: That is correct.

Mr. Lowden: At the time. This was not prepared recently. It was prepared within a week's time of the happening.

The Court: I understood that he made notes.

Mr. Robertson: That is right.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Judge, these are not the notes.

The Court: But this is made from the notes taken at the time, as I understand it.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: That is right.

Mr. Lowden: When he got back to his office.

Colonel Harris: We are entitled, when the time comes, to develop who wrote them, who went over them and criticized them and deleted and blue-pencilled, and all that. We can't do it just by glancing at it and then handing it back and saying, "Thank you."

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, if they want to see it, they are welcome to see it now. When we have finished with Mr. Bryan we will very gladly give them a copy of it to make whatever use they think proper on cross-examination.

Colonel Harris: We don't want it merely for cross-examination, if the Court please.

Mr. Allen: Wigmore notes that all the courts page 283 } don't agree that they have a right to see it, but most of them do.

The Court: I think so.

Mr. Robertson: We don't object to their seeing it.

Mr. Robert N. Pollard, Jr.: In all the testimony that he has given so far, when he has used this memorandum there has been no distinction between what he remembers and what has jogged his memory by the memorandum. So, the jury can't test his credibility. They don't know what he testifies from memory and what the memorandum has refreshed.

The Court: You can cross-examine him as to that and bring that fact out.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Couldn't he lay the memorandum aside and call for it when he needs it?

The Court: I think I have ruled that he can't read that memorandum.

Mr. Robertson: He is not reading it.

The Court: If he wants to refer to it, to a sheet, to a word here and there, a date that reminds him of certain events, I see no objection to that.

Colonel Harris: Will Your Honor inform Mr. Bryan of your ruling when you get back on the bench?

Mr. Robertson: I would be very glad to do it in the presence of the jury and to caution Mr. Bryan and tell the jury about it.

page 284 } The Court: All right. I will do it.

(The following proceedings were had in open court:)

The Court: Mr. Bryan, in regard to the paper you have in your hand, the Court rules that you cannot read from that paper. You may refer to it to refresh your memory and then answer the question, but do not read what is written on the paper.

The Witness: All right.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Before I come back to the conversation you were having with Mr. Hart, may I ask whether during these occurrences you made notes? I don't mean right while you were talking with Mr. Hart, but contemporaneously with the occurrence did you make notes from which that memorandum was subsequently prepared?

A. Each night I spent most of my time writing up what had happened that day.

Q. The ruling of the Court, as I understand, is that you may refer to the memorandum to refresh your memory as to dates and hours and personages and occurrences, and then not to read the memorandum but to testify from your memory as refreshed.

We had reached the point where Hart and his associates, two of whom were partially drunk, had locked the car and had come over, and you and Hart were engaged page 285 } in a conversation. I think you had told him of your effort to reach him that morning, and he told you that before he got your message all his arrangements were made and it was too late to stop.

In that conversation did you remind Hart of your conversation on July 14 about your hearing further from him before he did anything? Did you say anything to him about that?

A. He started off and said something to me. He said that he had called our office in Richmond about two weeks before and had said that if we didn't recognize United Construction Workers he was going to close down our job. Mr. Hart said that he hadn't heard any more from us, and so he decided to close the job down. He said that we were not the only people whose job had been closed down, and we didn't have any reason to complain.

Q. Did he name any other job that he had closed down?

A. Not at that time. He did in a conversation on July 14. He mentioned the job of the Link-Belt Company and Beckett Construction Company at Wheelwright.

Q. While you were talking to him on the 26th down at the railroad crossing did he say anything to you about your bucking the United Mine Workers?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Colonel Harris: Judge, I believe that is leading, if the Court please. I think we are entitled to have him page 286 } ask what happened.

The Court: I think that question is leading. I sustain the objection.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Go ahead. You have a right to refresh your memory from the memorandum, and then testify from your memory as refreshed. Take it up there and tell what happened, what was said by you and Hart to each other throughout that conversation at the railroad crossing.

A. I told Mr. Hart that I had understood in my conversation on the telephone with him on July 14 that he would get in touch with me again before he did anything. Mr. Hart said that he didn't understand it that way. I then asked Mr. Hart why he had brought a large group of men to our job for the purpose of closing it down. Mr. Hart said that we were working in United Mine Worker territory and that we could not continue to work unless we recognized United Construction Workers. I told Mr. Hart that almost all of our employees were members of A. F. of L. unions, were members of local unions affiliated with the A. F. of L., or had made application to become members of those local unions, and that I didn't see how we could make an agreement with the United Construction Workers without breaking our agreements with the A. F. of L. unions.

I told Mr. Hart that we were already using page 287 } union labor and that I didn't see why he didn't direct his efforts to trying to organize the workers of people who were not using union labor.

Mr. Hart's response to that was that our laborers were not organized. I told Mr. Hart that all of our laborers had made application to become members of the Salyersville union as carpenter helpers. Mr. Hart told me, he said that made no difference to him, that we were working in United Mine Worker territory and he was going to take over, and that we could not continue to work unless we recognized his organization. He said it would be necessary for us to recognize United Construction Workers and to pay laborers at the rate of $1.36 an hour and to pay carpenters at the rate of $1.86 an hour.

page 288 } I asked Mr. Hart why it was that he had brought a group of men to the job and had threatened and intimidated our workers. Mr. Hart said to that, he said

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

"You already seem to know so much, I don't see why I should answer your questions." He then went on and said, "I bet you $500 right now that you will never finish your job unless you use United Construction Workers men."

I told Mr. Hart that I was going to finish the job and I wasn't going to use United Construction Workers men.

He said to that, he says, "Nobody has ever been able to buck the United Mine Workers yet, and you can't do it, either."

I told Mr. Hart that I didn't know about the other people, but that I was going to hold him and the United Mine Workers responsible for what they had done to us, and I didn't mean maybe. I told him that I expected to have men back on the job the next morning if I had to go to work myself. I told Mr. Hart—Mr. Hart's response to that was that he made some jeering remark about I had never done a day's lick of work in my life and then he went on to say that our men would be afraid to work and that if they did try to work he would have men there to stop them. He also said that if our men tried to work he was going to stop the coal company people from working and close down the mine operations.

I told Mr. Hart that I didn't think he could do page 289 } that. But he said, "Just wait and see. I have already made arrangements. I can do it."

We had it out pretty hot and heavy. I wasn't mad, as Mr. Mullen said in his statement, but I tried to be as firm as I could.

Q. After you finished your conversation with Mr. Hart what did you do?

A. We went over to the Pond Creek office and talked to Mr. Haslam, their mine superintendent.

Q. Did you inform Mr. Haslam of the remark that Hart had made about shutting down the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company mining operation?

Colonel Harris: Am I correct in assuming that our objections and exceptions cover questions of that kind?

The Court: Is there any question about that?

Mr. Robertson: No, sir.

The Court: Very well.

The Witness: I told Mr. Haslam what Mr. Hart had said.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. You have no right to tell what Mr. Haslam said back to you, except the substance of his response.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. I don't see how you can tell the substance of the response without telling what he said.

Q. On cross examination they can let you say page 290 } anything you want, but I will leave it at that.

After you had talked to Mr. Haslam, did you return to Paintsville that night?

A. We intended to stay at the Carpenter Hotel in Salyersville. Tony Meli and Cecil Delinger and I went back to Salyersville and had supper. Then we went over to Paintsville to a meeting of Carpenter Local Union 646, which had been called for the special purpose of discussing and considering what had occurred at our job site that afternoon.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, we have arrived at the point where we are going into the union meeting. I think that is going to precipitate another row between Colonel Harris and me. You said you were going to adjourn at 4:30. It is 4:26 now. I don't know whether—I am perfectly ready to go ahead. I don't feel tired. It is all right me just to keep right on.

The Court: I believe that the jury would probably like to adjourn at this time, and we will adjourn until tomorrow morning, gentlemen, at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 4:25 p. m. the jury was excused and the following proceedings were had in Chambers:)

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, as I understand, Mr. Fred Pollard's request is that they be shown extracts from our records showing in substance that we did $20 million worth of construction, approximately, in the page 291 } last ten years. We have here a booklet which has been prepared entitled "Laburnum Construction Corporation, Richmond, Virginia, Construction Record." It doesn't purport to cover everything. There are a number of small operations that are not included in there. I think it shows what they want. Mr. Bryan is prepared to make oath to its substantial correctness either now or tomorrow as preferred, and in the meantime there it is.

The Court: Suppose you take it.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We will examine it and see if that is what we want.

The Court: All right. We will just hold this in abeyance, the subpoena duces tecum.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

(Off the record.)

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, we would like to ask the Court to let us have until tomorrow morning the memorandum which Mr. Bryan is reading from.

Mr. Robertson: I don't think there is any such ruling as that.

Mr. Allen: I didn't hear you.

The Court: I don't know that I should let you have the entire memorandum at this point. It may be that the Court could order a copy of the memorandum according to the testimony so far. I am not advised on that.

Mr. Allen: You mean the memorandum he is page 292 } testifying from and refreshing his memory with?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: After he has finished his testimony our problem is that it would take quite some time to examine it. If we could have a short adjournment for the purpose of examining it before we cross-examine Mr. Bryan it would satisfy our needs.

Mr. Robertson: We told them we would give them a copy of it. We told them we would give them a copy.

Mr. Allen: I think they have a right to it before we cross-examine, to look at it. I have insisted on that right myself in cases and the Judge has given me the right.

The Court: I will rule that you will be entitled to that memorandum before cross examination and that you have ample time to review it before cross examination.

Colonel Harris: Is that satisfactory with you?

Mr. Mullen: That is entirely satisfactory with me. I wouldn't give a cent whether I ever see it or not.

(Whereupon, at 4:50 o'clock p. m. the Court recessed until 10:00 o'clock a. m. Wednesday, January 24, 1951.)

ALEXANDER HAMILTON BRYAN

the witness on the stand at the time of adjournment, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION (continued).

(Counsel conferring.)

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, I would like to have—

Mr. Robertson: I haven't offered it yet. You have had it overnight.

Mr. Mullen: But I had some other things to do overnight, too.

The Court: What is the situation, gentlemen?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: I will develop that right now, Your Honor.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, I hand you a booklet entitled, "Laburnum Construction Corporation, Richmond, Virginia, Construction Record," and ask you what that is?

A. It is a list of the various jobs that we have performed from May, 1942, to December, 1949.

I should correct that. It is not all of the work, but the major jobs.

Q. What total volume of construction does it show during that period?

A. $20,253,965.49.

Q. Was that data compiled under your supervision and direction?

A. Yes, sir. I personally compiled a large portion of it.

Mr. Robertson: I offer it in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 22.

The Court: Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, there may be objection or there may not be objection, I can't say. I haven't had a chance to read it.

Mr. Robertson: I would suggest that I just offer it.

The Court: The Court will withhold decision.

Mr. Robertson: Mark it, please.

(The book referred to was marked for identification Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 22.)

The Court: I have marked it, and will withhold admitting it into evidence.

Q. Mr. Bryan, your field clerk at the job site on July 26, 1949, was who?

A. Mr. Maynard Ragan. His title was Chief Clerk.

Q. When you got to the job site on the afternoon of Tuesday, July 26, did Mr. Ragan give you a picket sign?

A. When I got to our office at the job site on July 26, 1949, Mr. Ragan handed to me a placard, a piece of cardboard, sometimes called a picket sign, which had been placed on a barrel just outside of our office, which Mr. Ragan had taken down—

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: I object to that, Your Honor, as hearsay.

Mr. Robertson: It is a report Mr. Ragan made to him in the ordinary course of business. We are going to follow it up with Ragan himself when we get to it. It is admissible as a report made to the President of the Company by his Chief Clerk on the job.

The Court: I will allow him to answer.

(Object exhibited to Mr. Mullen.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Is that the picket sign which Mr. Ragan delivered to you on the afternoon of July 26?

A. Yes. I marked it "7/26/49—AHB."

Q. Read it, please, out loud.

page 297 } A. "UWA Pickett Line." The word "picket" is spelled "p-i-c-k-e-t-t." "Contractors—Laburnum."

Mr. Robertson: I offer the picket sign in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 23.

Mr. Mullen: Read the answer after you have marked it, please.

(The picket sign referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 23 and received in evidence.)

page 298 } By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Now, Mr. Bryan, on the afternoon of Tuesday, July 26, when you left the job site and started over to the 25 dwellings and met Mr. Hart at the railroad crossing and had the conversation with him about which you testified, were any of your men with you, present during that conversation?

A. Cecil Delinger and Tony Meli.

Q. When you left the stand yesterday you had testified that after talking with Mr. Hart you went to the Pond Creek Pochontas Company office there at the 25 dwellings and reported your conversation with Mr. Haslam, the top Pond Creek man at that place. I think you testified that you and Mr. Delinger and Mr. Meli then went to Salyersville and ate supper and then that the three of you went on to Paintsville.

A. That is correct.

Q. When you got to Paintsville what did you do?

A. A special meeting of Paintsville Carpenters Local No. 646 had been called for the purpose of discussing and considering what had occurred at our job that afternoon. The meeting was held in the Town Hall at Paintsville at 8 p. m. Mr. Meli, Mr. Delinger and I went to the meeting.

Q. Was there a man at that meeting named Monroe Sublett?

A. Monroe Sublett was president of the local page 299 } and he called the meeting to order.

Q. Did you and Mr. Delinger and Mr. Meli go to the meeting?

A. We had asked if we could attend the meeting and were informed that we could, and we went.

Q. About how many men would you say attended that meeting?

A. About 50.

Q. Did you make a talk at the meeting?

A. The president, Mr. Sublett, asked me if I had anything to say, if I cared to say anything, and so I got up and went to the front of the meeting and made a talk.

Q. I am going to ask you to tell the jury the substance of what you said.

A. I told the group that we had an agreement with the Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council and with various A. F. of L. Unions, and that we used A. F. of L. labor on all our jobs throughout the country. I told them that we had worked in Chicago and Detroit, as far south as Mobile, that we had worked in Ohio and Pennsylvania, North Carolina and Georgia, and that the work which we had in Breathitt County, Kentucky, was the first job that we had ever had in Kentucky. I told them that I sincerely appreciated the efforts of all our people, our employees, in helping to make the job a success. I said that I had done my best to page 300 } try to get to the job by 12 o'clock noon that day and had driven all night from Richmond and would have been there if it hadn't been for the fact that we had a car breakdown. I said that based on my experience with the United Construction Workers that afternoon I didn't care to make an agreement with that organization or to use any of the men. I told them that I thought that what had happened that afternoon was nothing short of disgraceful, first in what the United Construction Workers did in coming to the job in force and in threatening and intimidating our workers, and next in what our workers did in letting themselves be bullied and bluffed without making an attempt to keep the jobs that they had. I told them that I told Mr. Hart—I mentioned the conversation that I had with Mr. Hart that afternoon—I told them that I told Mr. Hart that I expected to have the men on the job the next morning and that I hoped all of our people would return to work, that I was then trying to make arrangements for police protection at the job and hoped that I could do it, and that I thought it was of the utmost importance that all of our people return to work the next morning and to keep on working until they were made to stop work and not just stop because of some threats that might be made.

In short, I did my level best to try to persuade those people to return to work.

Q. What was the reaction of the meeting to your talk?

A. The business agent, Mr. Bert Preston, got page 301 } up and in effect he said that I just didn't know what I was talking about, that the United Construction Workers meant business, and he knew it, that we didn't have any police protection, that our people were defenseless, were hopelessly outnumbered, that if he hadn't stopped the argument in the toolhouse between Johnnie Arnett and Mr. Hart that afternoon guns would have been used and some of our people would have been shot and maybe killed. He said that the people—

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: I object to that, Your Honor. He is now testifying to what Mr. Preston said and not what was reported to him. It is hearsay.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, as shown in our trial brief, what he is saying here is relevant and admissible on the question of putting the men in fear and whether or not they were actually afraid to go back or whether there is a subterfuge here to make out like they were afraid when they weren't. Also, Your Honor will recall that Mr. Mullen in his opening statement said they were going to show everything that happened at these United Construction Workers meetings that we know nothing about. We submit that everything that transpired at this union meeting this night is relevant certainly on two grounds: One, the jury in all the cir-circumstances of the case can make up their minds whether they think that those utterances were in truth made or whether it is just a story out of Mr. Bryan's imagination, and second, whether or not, along with everything else in the case, it tends to show whether these men quit the job because they were scared or whether they quit it for some other reason.

The Court: The Court is of the opinion that the utterances in this connection are admissible.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: An exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Go ahead.

Mr. Mullen: Note an exception, please.

The Witness: That the people in Breathitt, Knott and Floyd Counties, Kentucky, had the reputation for shooting on the slightest provocation, and that experience had shown they would do so. That Mr. Hart and the United Construction Workers had excited those people in the hills and that in his opinion they would shoot at our workers, hide in the hills and shoot at our workers using high-powered rifles, or would shoot at them from ambush along the roads leading to and from the job site.

Mr. Preston said it was too dangerous to go back to work and advised against it.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Did he say anything to you that they would put you on the spot about leading them?

page 303 1/2 A. Well, after Mr. Preston finished talking there was a general discussion. Some of the people thought they should go back to work and some of the people thought it was too dangerous. Finally Mr. Sublett, president of the local, sounded for order and asked me a question: "Mr. Bryan, will you put on a pair of carpenter overalls and lead us across the picket line tomorrow morning?" I told him, Mr. Sublett, "Yes, I certainly will." Mr. Sublett said, "I think we ought to go back to work."

After that, a vote was taken, and it was agreed unanimously, I think, that the men would return to work in the morning. It was agreed that we would meet at Salyersville,

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Kentucky, at a gas station across the street from the Carpenter Hotel at six o'clock, so we would go to the job together.

page 304 } Q. After that decision was reached, did Mr. Bert Preston have anything to say about whether the men would go back armed, or not?

A. After the vote was taken, Mr. Preston got up and said, "Anybody who goes back to the job ought to carry not less than a .38." I got up and advised against that. I said I didn't want any of our men to be hurt; that if there was a display of guns, we could stop and go home, and please not to carry any guns; that we would try to settle our differences another way.

Q. What was the purpose in meeting the next morning at Salyersville?

A. We all wanted to go to the job together in a group. We couldn't get in the same automobile. There were too many. We went in a kind of caravan, one vehicle behind the other.

Q. That was on Tuesday night, the 26th. Did you meet at Salyersville the next morning, Wednesday, the 27th, as planned?

A. Yes, sir.

We had carpenters, iron workers, electricians, quite a crowd of men who met there.

Q. How many men would you estimate were there, altogether?

A. Twenty-five or thirty.

page 305 } Q. How many conveyances did they use to go from Salyersville to the job site?

A. That would be just a guess; I don't know.

Q. Did they pretty much stay together on the way over there?

A. They sort of went off intermittently, and gradually all caught up with each other, one behind the other. There might have been ten cars, I don't know.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Mullen's opening statement Monday?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In that statement, you will recall that he said that Mr. Hart was not at the job site on Wednesday, the 27th, because he had duties elsewhere. Is that correct or incorrect?

A. I didn't see Mr. Hart at the job site when we got there. In fact, I didn't see him that day at all.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Who was with you when you reached the job site in your conveyance, if you remember?

A. I went out with Tony Meli, and perhaps Cecil Delinger was in the car. I am sure I was with Tony.

Q. About what time did you get to the job site?

A. About 7 o'clock, maybe a little bit before; it took roughly an hour to drive from Salyersville to the job.

Q. State what the situation was when you got there at the job site?

page 306 } A. We found a picket sign on a barrel or rock near the office, and I went over there and pulled the picket sign down and threw it over in the bushes.

Q. Was that a different picket sign than the one which has been introduced here?

A. Yes, that was another picket sign.

Q. Have you got that picket sign?

A. No. Unfortunately, I threw it over in the bushes and just didn't ever get it again. I looked for it afterwards. I forgot to get it again that day. I was busy doing other things. When I went back to the job site again, I couldn't find it.

Q. When the whole group arrived there at the job site, about how many of your men were there, altogether, would you say, that is, leaving out yourself and Mr. Delinger and Meli and Maynard Ragan?

A. About the same number as went; around 25.

Q. Then what did you do when you first got there, after you pulled down the picket sign and threw it over in the bushes?

A. There wasn't any picket line there.

Q. Let me interrupt you there one minute.

At any time during any of the period about which you have testified or will testify, were there ever any men walking a picket line?

page 307 } A. There never was a picket line.

Q. After you pulled the picket sign down, tell what you did.

A. I didn't put on overalls, because there wasn't any picket line. I did pull the picket sign down and threw it in the bushes. Then I said, "Come on, boys, let's go to work." So I led a group of about 7 or 8 men down to the tippie.

Q. How far was that?

A. Between 3 and 4 hundred yards.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. All right, sir. When you got down there, did those men go to work? What did they do, and what did you do?

A. There were two men sitting on a pile of lumber, who were spotters for the United Construction Workers. The men went into the carpenters' shanty and got their tools, and some of them went on to work. I went back to the office, where there were some more men, and by that time Mr. Harvey J. Robinson, who was another field representative of District 50 and the United Construction Workers, had gotten to the job. Also, there were some men with Mr. Robinson. Mr. Monroe Sublet, the president of Local 646, was there. He was talking to Mr. Robinson. Some of our men had not gone down to the tippie. They seemed to be rather nervous.

I said, "Come on, let's go down to the tippie; I am not going to pay you for standing around," and the men page 308 } wouldn't go. I asked them again to go.

Q. In the meantime, what about the men who were already down at the tippie, that you had taken down there?

A. They had gone to work, as far as I knew. I had left them and they had gone to work, and I had come back up to the tippie to get another batch of people. I couldn't persuade anybody else to go down there with me, so I went back to the tippie to see what was happening.

When I got there, I found that most of our men had stopped work, if not all, and they were gathered together in the carpenters' tool house.

Q. Let me interrupt you there one moment. At that time, was the tippie in operation? Were they putting coal through the tippie?

A. The tippie was running that morning. At that time, it was a 3-day week affair, but they were running then the first three days of the week.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the actual delivery and processing of coal in the tippie? Did Laburnum have anything to do with that?

A. No. Our men were putting siding up on the sides of the tippie, and were doing some final adjusting work in connection with it. The tippie was in operation.

Q. Was that operated by United Mine Workers?

A. Yes. The employees of Pond Creek were page 309 } members of the United Mine Workers.

Q. Operating the tippie?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. Running the tippie and processing the coal.

Q. How high would you say that tippie was, from the ground up to the top where the coal was delivered into the tippie?

A. I would guess 100 feet, that is, from the top of the tippie to the ground. Where the coal came into the tippie, it wasn't that high, I don't think.

Q. I mean, about how high was it from the ground to where the coal came into the tippie?

A. It was a good ways up. I couldn't—

Q. If you were working up where coal came into the tippie, and I was working down near the ground, would it be difficult for you to drop a piece of coal on me?

A. No.

Q. When you got down there to see what the men were doing, what did you find the situation to be?

A. They were all coaggregated together in the tool house. I walked in, and the steward, Jack Patrick, was there. I said, "What's the matter, why aren't you working?" Jack Patrick said, "I am steward on the job."

Colonel Harris: We make objection and reserve an exception to all this line of testimony.

The Court: Objection is made to this question.

Mr. Robertson: I understand there is a con-page 310 } tinuing objection to this line of testimony, Your Honor.

Colonel Harris: And a continuing exception.

The Court: There is a continuing exception.

The Witness: He said the job was unsafe, in his opinion; and that he had ordered the men to stop work.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Go ahead.

A. I said, "Why have you stopped work? You thought it was all right to go to work last night. What has changed your mind?"

He said some of the people up in the coal tippie had said they were sympathetic with the United Mine Workers, and that if these men knew what was good for them, they would get out; and if they didn't, there would be 100 men there within an hour to stop them.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

I said, "I don't see anybody except those two men sitting over there on a pile of lumber."

They said that I just didn't understand; that I was from the city and didn't know the ways of Eastern Kentucky; that they didn't want to be targets. Some of the men said they had their wives and children to think about. Some of the men said that they were afraid people would hide in the hills and shoot at them with a rifle, and that they had had enough; that they didn't want to work under those conditions, and nobody could make them. They weren't going to work; that it was too dangerous.

Q. What did you do then?

A. The men left and went on home. That was about 10:30 in the morning. Mr. Delinger and Mr. Meli and I went on back to Salyersville.

Q. About what time did you get to Salyersville?

A. Oh, 11:30 or a quarter of 12.

Q. Do you know a Kentucky police officer named Homer Howard?

A. After we got back to Salyersville we had lunch, and I was standing on the sidewalk in front of the Carpenter Hotel and this man was pointed out to me in a police officer's uniform, and said, "That is Homer Howard, a State Trooper." I was taken over there by Mr. Delinger and there introduced to Mr. Howard.

Q. Did you try to get Mr. Howard to go to the job site for police protection?

A. I talked to Mr. Howard and told him about what trouble we had had and asked him if he would go out there to the job site and try to help us out. I told him I would like to have State Troopers for protection, that even if we had but one, his presence at the job would help the morale of our men. I asked him to go.

Q. Did he consent to go or decline to go? Just say what he said to you and what you said to him.

A. Mr. Howard said he wouldn't go, that he had orders not to take part in any labor dispute except on express instructions from the Governor of Kentucky.

Q. Did you discuss with him the danger of anybody getting shot out there at the job site?

A. I did.

Q. State what the conversation was between you and him.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, I understand the continuing objection runs to this too.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Robertson: We understand.

The Witness: I asked Mr. Howard if he thought there was any danger of our people being shot by persons hiding in the hills and using high-powered rifles, and Mr. Howard pulled up his pants leg or sleeve and showed me some of his own bullet wounds.

Q. Did he say whether or not he had been present at any shooting affairs in these circumstances?

A. He said he knew there was danger, that he had not only seen them shot but had picked them up after they were shot.

Q. Then did he show you the bullet scars where he had been shot himself?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he ver go to the job site, I mean for protection, during the period of time that we are talking about, as far as you know?

A. As far as I know he didn't.

Q. Did any other police officer go there as far as you know and give any protection?

page 314 } A. No.

Q. Did you and Mr. Meli go to Huntington that night or stay at Salyersville?

A. After we talked to Mr. Howard, Tony and I got in the truck and drove to Huntington.

Q. What happened to Mr. Delinger?

A. Mr. Delinger continued to stay in Salyersville. I gave instructions to him to keep his ear to the ground and to see if he couldn't get together some carpenters who wouldn't be afraid to work, and we would make another try at it the following morning, which would be August first.

Q. That was Wednesday night, July 27. Do you know a man named W. P. Freeman?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who is he?

A. He is an international representative for the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. Where were his headquarters in July, 1949, if you know?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. The United Brotherhood had its headquarters in Indianapolis. Mr. Freeman lived in Louisville.

Q. Did you have a telephone conversation with him during the day of Thursday, July 28?

A. Yes.

page 315 } Q. Where was he when you phoned him?

A. I was in Huntington and received a telephone call from Salyersville and talked to both Mr. Freeman and Mr. Delinger. I don't know which one placed the call, but it was a joint call.

Q. How did Mr. Freeman happen to be in Salyersville, if you know?

A. He was there to investigate the trouble.

Q. What was your telephone conversation with him?

A. I asked Mr. Freeman to please make every effort to get our carpenters to go back to work, that I would appreciate anything he could do to help us.

Q. Did he agree to make the effort or not?

A. Mr. Freeman said that he didn't blame our carpenters for not wanting to be targets, that it was too dangerous out there in his opinion, that is, in Breathitt County, and that neither he nor his union were going to require those men to go back to Breathitt County and expose themselves to danger.

Q. In that telephone conversation did he mention any threat that had been made against the life of Delinger, your man on the job?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, does our objection still run to this line of testimony?

The Court: I understand it does.

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

page 316 } Mr. Fred G. Pollard: An exception?

The Court: An exception.

The Court will recess for five minutes. I would like to see counsel in my office.

(The following proceedings were had in Chambers:)

The Court: Gentlemen, I would like to hear from counsel for the defendants in regard to this line of questioning as far as hearsay is concerned.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Mullen: I think it absolutely violates the rule of hearsay, Your Honor. I think it also violates Your Honor's ruling that he should not give specific and exact language as the result of reading the memorandum.

I would think in every way it violates the ruling. Take the last question. He is undertaking to ask something really third-hand. He is undertaking to ask what this representative of the A. F. of L. said somebody had told Delinger or said to Delinger.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: That is fourth-hand.

Mr. Mullen: It is all through this. They have done exactly what Your Honor ruled they couldn't, namely, that they couldn't give the conversations. They have been giving them right along.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, this is not the first case I have tried where this thing has come up. My firm and I handled the matter in the trial before the National Labor Relations Board where there was a dispute between the Home Beneficial Life Insurance Company here in Richmond and an union, and that transcript ran to more than 3,000 pages. The taking of testimony consumed more than 30 days. The same arguments that they are making here came up time after time after time again. That case was carried right on up to the Supreme Court of the United States and the correctness of those rulings letting in the same sort of testimony that we are letting in here, was sustained by every court right on up through.

I was in charge of the injunction proceeding hearing in the Virginia Oak Leaf Tannery case at Luray, where Judge Crosby sat, and the same arguments that were made here were made everywhere through that case. You remember, that was a case where every device known to counsel was used to upset the rulings of the trial court. They forced Judge Ford to disqualify himself. They came before our court of appeals and sought a writ of prohibition to prevent Judge Crosby from sitting in the case. They tried to run me out of the case as counsel. Those things were all denied and the case was appealed to the Supreme Court of Virginia. All these points made here were made and all said the trial court had ruled correctly in a case of this sort. Then petition was presented to the Supreme Court of the United States and certiorari was denied.

page 318 } I am not trying to evade or dodge any ruling of the court. I am trying to comply with its rulings, and I am trying at the same time to develop my case just as fully as is permissible under the law.

The whole idea of this thing is that our men were intimidated and threatened and put in fear illegally, and were illegally run off the job. Whatever tends to show that, in my opinion, is admissible in evidence, and whether it is true or not goes to the weight of the evidence. What I gathered from Mr. Mullen's opening statement was that that was his understanding of the law when he announced what he was going to do. He may have changed his theory, but I do what I am doing advisedly. Of course, whatever wide latitude I follow, I throw the door wide open for them. I think that under the brief that we have filed here and under the law, just as I stated in there, this evidence and this testimony is admissible because, one, as to whether or not it is truthful, and two, and the real guts of the whole thing, whether or not all these facts and circumstances tend to show that these men were put in fear and that that was the reason they stopped, or—and here will be the issue when their case goes in—or is this a mere pretext and the work was quit because they were being chiseled on their wages and that they were already striking and under the etiquette between unions they wouldn't cross page 319 } picket lines and that this whole thing about the fear is a smoke screen to make out like something existed that didn't exist.

That is my theory of this phase of the case, Your Honor, and I am going to ask these two gentlemen here to continue.

The Court: Mr. Allen?

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, I think the testimony is admissible upon the ground that it shows the state of mind of these people and the state of mind of their superiors in the union who control them. It isn't admissible necessarily to prove particular facts, but evidence that is admissible on any ground can't be kept out.

We have to prove a state of mind on the part of these workers. We have got to prove a state of mind on the part of those who control these workers, their superiors in the union above them. I don't know how you are going to prove the state of mind of anybody without proving utterances on the subject that is pertinent. We have to prove that these people through fear, intimidation, failed to go back there to work, and if we fail to prove that, then our case goes out the window.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

How are we going to prove it? How are you going to prove the men were afraid unless you prove it by a statement that he is afraid? He didn't go back to work. They attribute that to something else. So you have to go into the page 320 } man's mind, as I see it, and I don't know any other way to get in his mind. You have got to go into the mind of the superiors in the union who control these men.

Even in criminal law when you have to go into the man's mind and prove what is in his mind, you can prove all sorts of utterances made by the man.

page 321 } The Court: Then you feel that these various conversations that Mr. Bryan has had with different people, quoting them is admissible as evidence?

Mr. Allen: That is right, sir. What would be the difference—there can't possibly be any objection to Mr. Bryan's using his imagination, his descriptive powers, so to speak, and describing the situation of fear. Then these gentlemen would come back on cross-examination and ask, "What did you base that on?" He would have to say that he based it on the utterances of the people. There is nothing else on earth that Mr. Bryan can base his testimony of fear and intimidation upon except the utterances of these people.

The Court: Mr. Moore?

Mr. Moore: I would just like to add that the Court ruled in a similar manner to the way Your Honor has ruled in this case, in the case of Harkins v. United States, that we cite in our trial brief, which was also a case involving fear and intimidation such as this, and the witness was allowed to testify to facts told him showing that fear and intimidation, along the same lines that Mr. Allen was just talking.

The Court: Mr. Harris?

Colonel Harris: May I add a word?

As I get this testimony, it is hearsay based on hearsay.

Mr. Bryan is testifying to what somebody else page 322 } told him as to what the men felt.

For the moment let us assume, and merely for the sake of argument, that they have to prove a state of mind. Then the proper way to prove it is not by hearsay, but to take the deposition of or put on the stand the man who has the state of mind. It seems to me that they are just throwing the rules of evidence behind them and paying no attention to them, in their effort to get all kinds of testimony before this jury.

As I see it, we can't throw away the rules of evidence. We have to go ahead on the accepted rules and the law that governs.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, what is the difference—they have already put the Court and us on notice that they are going to tell about these United Construction Workers meetings, as I think they have a right to do, where none of the representatives of the Plaintiff were present, about what was said, the orders that were given, and this, that, and the other.

This man Freeman, for instance, which is the one we are talking about right now, is one of the high ranking men in the A. F. of L. I think it would be a very legitimate argument to say, "Why didn't you get in touch with some higher ranking man and ask him to order your men back to work?" The answer is that, "I was in touch with him and he page 323 } wouldn't order them back to work."

Mr. Mullen: That isn't what he asked. The last question was: "Did Mr. Freeman tell you that somebody had told Mr. Delinger that he was going to threaten them, or something of that kind?"

Mr. Robertson: No; wait a minute.

Mr. Mullen: Yes, that is your question.

Take another one that just occurred to me. "Did Mr. Jack Patrick tell them that somebody on the tippie told some of the men that they were in sympathy with the Mine Workers, and they were liable to get hurt if they went to work?" If that isn't third-hand hearsay, I don't know what is.

We don't know what the circumstances were in those cases that Mr. Robertson talked about. We don't know what the questions and the rulings were. They have given the substance of what happened in those meetings, and all that. They have gone now far afield, and have gone into what is clearly condemned by the laws of evidence.

Mr. Robertson: Just so the Court may know what I am developing, I don't remember the precise wording of the question, but I think I asked him: Here is Freeman out there investigating the situation, trying to ascertain the facts and trying to solve the difficulties. He goes and talks, as of course he should do, to Delinger, the superintendent in page 324 } charge of the job, and in the course of his talk with Delinger, Delinger tells him that his life has been threatened. If that isn't relevant, I don't know what is. That is what I am trying to develop, that came out in that telephone conversation. And when I get to Delinger, I am going to put Delinger on the stand and have Delinger testify how his life was threatened.

Mr. Mullen: There is another objection. You can't relate a telephone conversation unless you can identify that the man on the other end was the man he represented himself to be.

Mr. Robertson: Bryan said he knew him.

The Court: Do I understand you to say that these same points were passed on in the case that went to the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: What was the style of that case?

Mr. Robertson: Virginia Oak Leaf Tannery—that was an injunction case. There was no jury in that case. But the evidence was all admitted by Judge Crosby, and every ruling he made was upheld as substantially correct by the Supreme Court of Virginia, and a writ of certiorari was refused by the Supreme Court.

Mr. Mullen: Did you have third-hand conversation page 325 } tions in that?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Mullen: I think it would be advisable to get the case and see what is in it.

Mr. Robertson: There is a 3,000-page transcript in it, if you want to read it.

The Court: I will allow these gentlemen to continue, and it is understood that you all have the same objection and exceptions.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: To all the testimony that has been made today?

The Court: The Court may rule differently later on, but I want to see how the case develops.

Colonel Harris: Judge, when you say "the same objection," some of this is hearsay and other is hearsay on hearsay, as Mr. Mullen said; it is hearsay thrice removed. We would want both those objections added.

Mr. Robertson: It is all right with me.

The Court: It is understood that you have done so. I just wanted to talk with you gentlemen about that point and hear some argument on it.

Mr. Robertson: We had it back and forth in all those other cases.

Mr. Mullen: We don't know what happened in those cases.

Colonel Harris: The decision wouldn't be 3,000 page 326 } pages long. Where is the decision?

Mr. Robertson: The decision would be very brief, because the writ of error was refused.

The Court: While we are in here, gentlemen, we might take care of this order that the Court indicated on yesterday it would enter today. This is an order allowing the filing of amended answer to Question 85 addressed to District 50, United Mine Workers of America, and amended answer of United Construction Workers to Question 83.

Mr. Lowden: I didn't check them both, but it looks as if in one of those there isn't any change that I could see. I looked at it about five times, and what the change is, I can't find.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: That is correct, but I think it is immaterial whether we filed it or not, as to one of them. Since we have already filed it, we might as well leave it filed.

May I take up one other thing?

The Court: All right.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Yesterday, we filed an affidavit for a supoena duces tecum—

The Court: Is it necessary that that be passed on right now? Do you anticipate any argument on the proposition?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Just this, that the Plainpage 327 } tiff gave us a statement of what we wanted, through sometime in 1949, and we would like to have that brought up through 1950, and that would be satisfactory.

Mr. Robertson: I think if you look in that, it is brought up to '50.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: No, sir, it is not.

Mr. Robertson: I will check that up. If it is not brought up, we will bring it up, of course.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Then I would like to file a further affidavit.

Mr. Robertson: Can we read it later?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Yes.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, I have my mind on this—

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: I just want you to have a copy of it.

Mr. Robertson: I will read it later.

The Court: I will enter this order.

(The following proceedings were had in open court.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, in the course of that conversation with Mr. Freeman, did Mr. Delinger come to the phone?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Did he make any statement to you about any threat against his own life?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

page 328 } A. I told him that I understood that his life had been threatened, and asked him if it was correct, and he told me what had occurred.

Q. What did he tell you had occurred?

A. That the night before, a prominent businessman in Salyersville had come to see him as an emissary on behalf of some other people, and delivered a message to Mr. Delinger that under no circumstances should he return to that job site after Sunday, July 31. If Mr. Delinger wanted to go out of Kentucky under his own power, he had better not go back to the job.

Q. After what date?

A. July 31, which was Sunday.

Q. Did Delinger tell you what he wanted to do about it?

A. He said he wanted to be relieved of all further duties, and to be replaced; that he didn't want to go back up there.

Q. What instructions did you give him?

A. I told him to report to our Richmond office and I would replace him.

Q. So far as you know, has Mr. Delinger ever been back to Kentucky since he left out there prior to July 31, 1949?

A. Let's see. That was on Thursday. Mr. Delinger went back to the job to get his clothes, and then he went page 329 } back to Richmond. He has never been back since, so far as I know.

Q. That was on Thursday, July 28?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you return to Richmond that night?

A. I went back to Salyersville, and then came back and went to Richmond that night.

Q. Why did you go back to Salyersville?

A. I was informed there was a storekeeper at Royalton, Kentucky, who might help us get some carpenters together who would go to work on Monday, August 1st. So Mr. Meli and I drove from Huntington, first over to Salyersville, where we saw Mr. Ragan and Mr. Delinger, and then we went to Royalton to find a storekeeper named Salyer. We couldn't find any storekeeper named Salyer, so we talked to a carpenter who had been working for us, named Homer Salyer. We told him about our plans to try to resume work on the following Monday, August 1st, and asked Homer Salyer to try to get together some carpenters.

Q. Did he agree that he would undertake to do that?

A. He said he wanted to go back to work, and that he would try to talk to some of the boys around Royalton and try to get them together for us.

Q. That would be to go to work Monday, August 1st?

A. That is right.

Q. Then after you had made that effort at page 330 } Royalton, did you go back to Huntington and catch a train back to Richmond that night?

A. Yes. Tony and I drove back to Huntington in a company truck. I took the train that night to Richmond. He drove the truck back.

Q. Where were you on Friday, July 29?

A. I had to come back and go over to the Solvay Process Plant in Hopewell, and of course, I was also in Richmond doing some things; and while in Richmond, I talked to Louis Veltry, who was another one of our superintendents, and told him that I wanted him to replace Mr. Delinger on the job in Kentucky, and please to be out there not later than Sunday, July 31.

Q. Where were you on Saturday, July 30?

A. I took a plane from Richmond about 7:00 o'clock and flew to Louisville, and was in conference with some lawyers out there about this trouble.

Q. While in Louisville, did you make any effort to get police protection at the job site?

A. I talked to them about it, and they advised that it was highly unlikely that any arrangements could be made.

Q. Where were you on Sunday, July 31?

A. After leaving Louisville, I drove with some lawyers over to Lexington, and there took a train and went to page 331 } Ashland, and spent the night; and took the 6:00 o'clock train the next morning out of Ashland for Paintsville. I arrived at Paintsville around 9:30 or 10:00.

Q. Where did you get breakfast in Paintsville that morning?

A. Mr. Ragan, our Chief Clerk, drove over from Salversville to get me, and took me first to the home of Henry Starr. He was the general carpenter foreman for us on the job.

Q. Did you eat breakfast with Ragan and Starr at Starr's home in Paintsville?

A. Henry Starr and his wife were eating breakfast, and they gave me some breakfast. Maynard Ragan had already eaten.

Q. Did you try to get Starr to go back to work the next morning, Monday?

A. I asked him to go back.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. What was his reaction to that request?

A. He said he was afraid to do it, and he didn't think any of the other Paintsville carpenters would do it.

Q. Then after you finished breakfast, what did you do?

A. Mr. Ragan drove me to Salyersville, and then he had to leave. He and his wife were going some place.

Q. Do you know a man named Charlie Williams?

A. Charlie Williams is a contractor in Salyersville. I had met him out there, and I got to talking to him.

Q. After you got to Salyersville that Sunday—what time did you get out there to Salyersville?

A. I got in Salyersville about noon, 11:30.

Q. Then did you go from Salyersville to the job site?

A. I told Charlie Williams I wanted to go to the job site, but didn't have a car, and asked him if he could make arrangements for me to do it. He said he thought he could. So he got a fellow named May—I don't remember his first name—who was a carpenter and had worked for us. He asked Mr. May if he would drive out to the job site and take us. So we all went out there.

Q. At about what time did you get to the job site?

A. I think we left Salyersville about 1:00 o'clock and must have gotten to the job site about an hour later, around 2:00.

Q. Did you go to the schoolhouse when you got out there to the job site?

A. The first place we went was to the schoolhouse.

Q. Was there anybody there?

A. Nobody was there, but there was a picket sign.

Q. What happened to the picket sign?

A. I took the picket sign down and took it with me.

(Object exhibited to Mr. Mullen.)

Q. Is that the picket sign that you have mentioned?

A. (examining) Yes, sir.

Q. Read it out loud, please. What is written on it?

A. Faintly, in pencil: "District 50 UMW of A, Local 778-A—Picket Line." The word "picket" is again spelled with two "t's".

Mr. Robertson: I offer this picket sign in evidence, and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 24.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

(The sign referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 24 and received in evidence.)

(Jurors examining Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 24.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, where did you go from the schoolhouse?

A. We went up toward the tippie and past our office.

Q. How far would you say it is, in fractions of a mile, from the schoolhouse to your office?

A. Between a mile and a quarter and a mile and a half.

Q. When you got to the office, was there anybody there?

A. We didn't see a soul at the job site at all. There was another picket sign at the office.

Q. What happened to that?

A. I took it down and took it with me.

page 334 } By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Is that the picket sign which you took down there at the office that Sunday afternoon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Read it out loud, please.

A. It is a large multi-colored sign in red and black. The top line: "On Strike." The next line: "Local Union No. 778-A." The next line: "Carpenters." The next line: "Helpers and Laborers." "District 50 UMW of A."

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: He didn't read that entirely correct, Your Honor.

The Court: You may check it.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: There is an arrow for "Carpenters" that brings it down in front of "Helpers," so it is "Carpenters Helpers." He read it as "Carpenters, Helpers and Laborers."

Mr. Robertson: I will introduce it in evidence.

He also didn't mention that it is on cardboard or that it is in crayon instead of an oil painting.

The Court: The jury will observe what it is.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the picket sign in evidence, and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 25.

(The sign referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 25 and received in evidence.)

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: I believe the jury can see this page 335 } if I hold it here, rather than passing it around.

page 336 } By Mr. Robertson:

Q. After you had looked over the situation at your office, did you go on down to the tippie or not?

A. Yes, we went down to the tippie and walked all through it.

Q. And nobody was there?

A. I didn't see a soul.

Q. Then what did you do?

A. I got in the car and drove back to Salyersville. We drove back towards Salyersville, and on the way we passed a car headed in the opposite direction. We stopped and the other car stopped. In the other car was Robert Poe, business agent of the Salyersville Carpenters Local No. 697, and—let's see—Fred Howard was in the car and Elmer Howard. Either Elmer Howard or Ed Howard. I was told it was Elmer Howard, but afterward I learned it might have been Ed Howard. They were two brothers of Homer Howard, the State Trooper.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Robert Poe regarding the United Construction Workers meeting which had been held at Tiptop or Carver that day?

A. Mr. Poe said that he had just returned from a meeting at Tiptop, that there were about 250 persons present, that Mr. Hart had conducted the meeting, that at the meeting there was discussion about our work and the work of page 337 } the Codell Construction Company, which had also been stopped, and that arrangements were being made to have persons act as stewards at the job site the next day. Mr. Hart had made a speech and had called for volunteers for people to act as stewards.

Q. Did you make any arrangement that afternoon for Poe to come to the job site the next day in an effort to get the men to work?

A. Since the Pointsville Carpenters Local looked like it wouldn't do anything about supplying men, I turned to Robert Poe, the business agent of the Salyersville Carpenters Local and asked him to please get some carpenters, and Bob Poe said that he had made an effort in that direction and was trying to get some Breathitt County carpenters to go to report to work the next morning.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. While you were with Charlie Williams during the day Sunday did you explain to him that Delinger was leaving and Veltry was going to replace him as superintendent on the job?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you offer Charlie Williams any job as assistant to Veltry?

A. Yes, I told Mr. Williams that Mr. Delinger had gone back to Richmond and he was being replaced by Mr. Veltry. I asked Charlie Williams if he would like to be an page 338 } assistant to Mr. Veltry.

Q. What response did you get from him?

A. He said he might take the job. He would like to think about it, though.

Q. Then after you left Robert Poe where did you go?

A. We went back to Salyersville. I just stayed around there, around the hotel that afternoon, and later on Charlie Williams came to see me and said he thought he had better not take the job. Then that night about 7:30 Louis Veltry got into Salyersville. He drove in in his truck.

Q. Did Charlie Williams tell you why he decided not to take the job?

A. He said it made his wife nervous.

Q. Did Tony Meli come back out to the area or did he stay in Richmond?

A. Tony came back. He left Richmond on the afternoon of Sunday, July 31, and drove a truck all night. He got to Salyersville about 5:30 the next morning, Monday, August first.

Q. Now state what happened on August 1, Monday morning.

A. Louis and I drove out in his truck together. As we passed through Royalton on the way to the job there were a number of men standing around, including Homer Salyer and Fred Howard. Homer Salyer got in the car with us and drove page 339 } out. Fred Howard came along later with somebody else. We must have gotten to the job at about seven o'clock. At the job we found a number of carpenters standing around.

Q. Let me interrupt you one minute. When you got to the job had any picket signs been put up to replace the ones you had pulled down?

A. I didn't see any picket signs that morning.

Q. Was there anybody walking the picket line?

A. Oh, no. There never was any walking of picket lines.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. All right, go ahead.

A. Some of the carpenters there were new. So we took them in to a barracks building which was across the road from the office to talk to them. Louis Veltry was a member of the Staten Island Carpenters Local and he asked these men if they were A. F. of L. carpenters and they all looked at each other's card and got to know each other. Then we sent these men from the barracks building one or two at a time over to the office, where Mr. Ragan would get them to make out history records and get them signed up so that they could start to work.

As time went on the men appeared to get nervous. They were in little groups. They seemed to want to go to work, and yet nobody wanted to take the lead. Mr. Veltry and I did our best to persuade them. They wanted a leader, as I said, and there wasn't anybody there. They wouldn't accept us. They were looking for a union man. Then they said they would like to wait until Robert Poe got to the job at about ten o'clock. They understood he would be there at ten, and they would like to wait until he appeared. So we decided we would wait until Mr. Poe arrived.

At about that time I placed a telephone call for Jack Joinville, the President of the Building Trades Council in Richmond, to make a report to him on what was happening. While I was talking to Mr. Joinville, I think Mr. Poe came at about ten o'clock with Mr. Patrick—that is the way it was—and Mr. Patrick was a man in the Salyersville Local. Whether he was an official or not I don't know, but anyway he was with Mr. Poe. Mr. Poe said that he thought he had some carpenters who would go to work and he would go out and talk to the men.

After that my call to Mr. Joinville came through, and at about that time Mr. Hart arrived on the job. I told Mr. Joinville about our trouble and asked Mr. Hart if he would like to speak to Mr. Joinville. So Mr. Hart got on the phone. Of course I didn't hear what Mr. Joinville said, but I did hear Mr. Hart tell Mr. Joinville that we couldn't do any more work unless we used United Construction Workers men.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Hart there at that time about the meeting that Poe had mentioned at Tiptop or Carver? Are Tiptop and Carver the same place?

A. I think so.

Q. Did you have any talk with Hart about the meeting there at Tiptop that Poe had mentioned to you the day before, on Sunday?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. Yes, we had quite a talk there. Apparently Mr. Hart had gotten word that we were making arrangements to go back to work, and he was very emphatic in his statements that we could not go back to work unless we recognized his organization and used his men. I told Mr. Hart that I understood that they had had a big meeting at Tiptop the day before, about 250, people and that he had made a speech to the meeting and made arrangements to have people act as stewards and to stop our job again. Mr. Hart said, yes, he had had that meeting and that he was in a position to get as many people as he needed to stop it.

Q. Was that a nice, even conversation with Hart, or did both of you get mad?

A. Well, at the time I talked to Hart about the meeting at Tiptop, I talked to him some outside the building, and I had quite a talk with him inside the building. While we had the discussion inside the building we got a little hot under the collar.

Q. Do you know a man named Thomas Davis?

A. I talked to Thomas Davis on the phone that day. What happened is that after I talked to Hart I placed page 342 } a call for Jimmy Codell at Winchester, Kentucky, to see what he was doing about his men, and through him I learned of Mr. Tommy Davis as being a person who had David Hunter's superior. I went out and asked Mr. Hart if he knew how I could reach Tommy Davis, and Mr. Hart went and got an official paper of District 50 and United Construction Workers and said that Tommy Davis' name was listed there and gave his address and telephone number, and said I could get him on the telephone.

Mr. Robertson: I am going to introduce the whole thing, Mr. Mullen, and call attention to the place where it shows Hart's telephone number. That is the only part that is relevant.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, if the only part relevant is the telephone number, it is improper to put in a whole newspaper in evidence in the record.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I brought it here—of course if I had brought one sheet they would have said that looked might fishy. I will just get him to read the relevant part of it and won't offer it if they object.

Mr. Mullen: That will be all right.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Is that the paper that Mr. Hart gave you?

A. Yes, it is a paper entitled "The News, of-page 343 } ficial publication of District 50 and United Construction Workers, UMW of A," between the word "The" and the word "News" there is a seal, "United Mine Workers of America, organized January 25-90," which is the abbreviation for 1890.

Q. What is the date of that issue?

A. Volume 2, No. 14, dated July 20, 1949.

He handed me this whole newspaper.

Mr. Robertson: Do you object to the first page going into the record to show what it is? I would rather leave it out than wait for you to read it all. I haven't read what is on the first page. I would rather forego introducing it than to read it.

Mr. Mullen: No, I don't mind the first page going in.

Mr. Robertson: We will tear that off, then.

The Court: Do you want to introduce that in evidence?

Mr. Robertson: I will introduce the two pages together as one exhibit, Your Honor.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I call your attention to page 9 of that issue of the News and ask you what that is entitled.

A. Page 9 is a statement of names and addresses under the heading "Addresses of our regional offices." Then there is a list of numbers under the word "Region," there being three columns of those, and opposite each number for page 344 } the region there is the name of a town and the name of a man, with his address and telephone number.

Q. Does it give the name and telephone number of Thomas Davis?

A. I will have to find it here. Just a minute (examining document). Opposite Region 31 there are the following words: "Kingsport, Tennessee"—I am sorry. Take that out. "Knoxville, Tennessee, Thomas Davis, 932 North Central Avenue, Telephone 3-4195."

Mr. Robertson: Do you object to that page?

Mr. Mullen: No.

Mr. Robertson: I offer page 1 of that issue of The News and page 2, the back of it, page 9 and page 10 and ask that they together be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 26.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 26 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What was Mr. Thomas Davis' connection? What is his union affiliation, if you know?

A. He is the regional director of Region 31 of the United Construction Workers, and District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America, with headquarters in Knoxville, Tennessee. Mr. Davis is also one of four assistant chairman to Mr. Denny Lewis, Chairman of the Organizing Committee of District 50.

page 345 } Q. What is his function as one of the assistant chairmen of the Organizing Committee of District 50?

A. He acts as a coordinator of regions in the southeast, including Region 58.

Q. Does that include Breathitt County, Kentucky?

A. Mr. Hunter said it did.

Q. Is Thomas Davis the boss of David Hunter?

A. He was described to me as being David Hunter's superior in the organization.

Q. Did you succeed in getting Thomas Davis on the telephone that Monday morning from the job site?

A. I called Mr. Davis at Knoxville and found that he was over at Kingsport, Tennessee. The call was transferred there, and I got him.

Q. What was your conversation with him?

A. I told Mr. Davis that I had a talk with Jimmy Codell, whose work had been stopped by these same people, and that Jimmy Codell had told me that Mr. Davis was going to issue instructions to David Hunter and to Mr. Hart not to interfere with our employees, meaning his employees and the employees of Laburnum. I asked Mr. Davis if he wouldn't tell Mr. Hunter and Mr. Hart to leave us alone. Mr. Davis said he wouldn't do that. I said, "We already are working A. F. of L. labor, organized labor. We have agreements with A. F. of L. unions." Mr. Davis said, "We don't recognize the A. F. of L."

page 346 } I told Mr. Davis the A. F. of L. is a pretty big organization. Mr. Davis said, "and so are we." He said,

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

"We don't recognize the A. F. of L. any more than they recognize us."

Then Mr. Davis said that he felt sorry for people in our position, that we were just being caught in a fit between two big unions.

I told Mr. Davis that I was trying—that it occurred to me that it might be a good idea to have a meeting between some A. F. of L. officials and officials of the United Mine Workers and the United Construction Workers, and Mr. Davis said that he thought that was a good idea. I asked him if he couldn't meet me over in Salyersville the next day. He said he was busy and couldn't do it. He said it was a good idea to have the meeting and that he thought that I ought to invite David Hunter to come. I said I would try to do that. That is as far as I got with Mr. Davis.

Q. After you had that conversation with Thomas Davis, did you talk to Hart about the proposed meeting at Salyersville the next day?

A. Hart was sitting out in the bushes with some men, and I went outside and told him that I had just finished talking to Tommy Davis and that I was going to call some A. F. of L. people in Lexington and ask them to come over to Salyersville for me the next day at the Carpenter Hotel, page 347 } at ten o'clock, and that Mr. Davis had suggested that Mr. Hunter be invited to come to the meeting, that I would like to have him come. I told Hart I wanted him to come. I said "We will all get together here and see what we can do."

Mr. Hart said that he would come and that he would give the message to Mr. Hunter. I did not telephone Mr. Hunter, but relied on Mr. Hart to get the message to him.

Q. What was the upshot there that morning of Poe's efforts to get the men to go to work?

A. Robert Poe came back in the office and said that he thought that some of his men would go to work that afternoon after lunch or the next morning. I told him that we would like to start signing the men up. I asked Mr. Poe if he had some people who were capable of acting as Carpenter foremen. He wanted to know how many foremen we needed and I told him we wanted about three, depending on the number of men we had. He said that he would go out and talk to the men again.

After that, Mr. Poe came back and said that the men had taken another vote and that they didn't want to go to work and that he didn't think he could get his men to go to work until after the trouble with the United Construction Workers was straightened.

Mr. Hart at the job that day left no doubt in anybody's mind that he was going to have people to stop any men from working who tried. For the first time that morn-page 348 } ing he said that if we would recognize them for the laborers, we would work.

Q. Did he say anything about what he was going to do if you declined to recognize his union and use United Construction Workers Labor—what he was going to do then if you worked other men?

A. Before July first he had always taken the position with all of our men—

Q. You say July first?

A. I mean before August first it had always been his position that all of our people would have to become members of the United Construction Workers. At the meeting—when I talked to him on August first he then said that if we would recognize them for the laborers, others could work, but that if we didn't nobody could work.

The Court: Gentlemen, at this point let us recess for five minutes.

(Brief recess.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, after the men finally decided that they would not go to work on Monday, August first, did you go through with your arrangements for the meeting you have mentioned at Salyersville for the next morning, Tuesday, August 2? I don't think it is necessary to go through the details of everybody you called up and everything, but did you page 349 } arrange the meeting?

A. Yes. I called Lexington and asked for the business agent of the laborers local, if he couldn't come over and bring as many A. F. of L. officials and representatives with him as he could.

Q. Did the meeting take place as planned on Tuesday, August 2, at the Carpenter Hotel in Salyersville?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. Did Mr. Thomas Davis come to the meeting?

A. No.

Q. Did Mr. David Hunter come to the meeting?

A. No.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Did Mr. Hart come to Salyersville and make himself available for the meeting if wanted?

A. Yes, he came and was outside the Carpenter Hotel. He said he would come in any time we wanted to see him.

Q. Have you got a record of who attended that meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Robertson: I ask that the witness be permitted just to state from that who was there. I don't think he can possibly remember it without referring to his records.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Refer to your records, please, and state who was at the meeting and what their official capacities were.

A. John Humphrey, Business Agent, Labor-page 350 } ers Local Union 189, Lexington.

Q. Virginia?

A. Kentucky.

James Lockhart, Consultant and Conciliator, Laborers International Union.

C. M. Deatherage, Business Agent, Plumbers and Fitters Local Union No. 452, Lexington, Kentucky.

Joseph S. Daly, Business Agent, Painters Local Union No. 768, Lexington, Kentucky.

Buryl Travis, Business Agent, Operating Engineers Local Union No. 181, Lexington, Kentucky.

J. Roger Jones, Assistant Business Agent, Electricians Local Union 183, Lexington, Kentucky.

W. P. Freeman, International Representative of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Indianapolis, Indiana.

R. T. Baxter, President, Building Trades Council, Lexington, Kentucky.

Robert Poe, Business Agent, Carpenters Local Union No. 697, Salyersville, Kentucky.

Henry N. Arnett, President, Carpenters Local Union No. 697, Salyersville, Kentucky.

B. E. Preston, Carpenters Local Union No. 646, Paintsville, Kentucky.

P. L. Trumble, Vice President, Carpenters Local Union No. 646, Paintsville, Kentucky.

C. H. Patrick, Carpenter Foreman, being a page 351 } member of Local Union No. 646, Paintsville.

M. F. Sublett, President, Carpenters Local Union No. 646, Paintsville, Kentucky.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Representing us were: Mr. Meli, Mr. Veltry, and myself.

Q. Now, Mr. Bryan, tell us what happened at that meeting. Just as you have described the other meeting that happened on the night of the 26th at Paintsville, will you tell us what happened at this meeting?

A. The meeting lasted for about two hours. We discussed the whole situation, and Mr. Freeman, Mr. Baxter—was the president of the building Trades Council in Lexington—thought that we ought to take steps to bring an injunction suit. That matter was discussed. I told them—

Colonel Harris: May I interpose an additional objection. I don't think we have. That is immateriality, and relating the conduct of third persons who are in no ways connected with any of the defendants and for whose statement or conduct none of the defendants is responsible.

The Court: Very well.

Colonel Harris: Also, as Mr. Pollard suggests, on the grounds that it is unauthorized expression of opinion.

The Court: Very well.

Colonel Harris: May we have that as a continuing objection?

page 352 { The Court: That will be included in your objection and exception, yes, sir.

By Mr. Robertson:

A. All right, go ahead, Mr. Bryan.

A. I pointed out that we used A. F. of L. men on all of our jobs and had agreements with A. F. of L. unions, that I thought the men ought to go back to work.

Mr. Freeman wanted to know why I didn't do anything about it to stop the trouble. I said I had done everything that I could do. Then he said, "What do you want, do you want somebody to be killed before you do something, before you try to bring an injunction?"

The result was that they just said it was too dangerous out there and they were not going to advise their men to go back to work. I told them if they wouldn't get men to go back to work I would try to get other men to go back to work. Then after the meeting had been in progress for about 45 minutes I found that Mr. Hart was there, outside. So I asked the crowd, the group, if they would like to talk to Mr. Hart. They went into a kitchen—we were seated in the dining room at the Hotel. They went back into the kitchen and talked. They came back and said they had no business to talk to Mr. Hart about.

After that I went outside to see Mr. Hart and told him what the A. F. of L. business agents had said, and Mr. page 353 } Hart said he didn't have anything to talk to them about. I told Mr. Hart I was sorry that I had wasted his time.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Did Hart say his position regarding whether you could or could not work there was the same or different from what it had been?

A. He said his position was unchanged, that we could not go to work out there again unless we recognized United Construction Workers and made an agreement with the United Construction Workers and used his men, that if necessary he would bring a thousand men there and hold a picket line.

Q. After the meeting was over there on August 2 did you return to Huntington?

A. Yes. Mr. Meli and I drove back to Huntington.

Q. Did you report the results of your efforts to get the men back to work to the Island Creek Coal people and the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company people and the Spring Fork Development Company?

A. Yes. I told them everything that had happened, what I had tried to do to get the men to go back to work, and about the conversations and about the meeting at the Carpenter Hotel in Salyersville.

Q. I forgot to ask you one question: When you talked to Hart there at Salyersville at the time of the meeting on August 2 did he say anything about closing down the page 354 } Pocahontas Mine operation if necessary to keep your men off the job?

A. Yes, he did. He said that if we went back to work he was going to close down the mine operations by stopping the United Mine Workers men from working for Pond Creek.

Q. Did you report the whole situation to the three companies that I have mentioned?

A. You mean Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Island Creek—

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I made as full a statement as I could. I felt that I should do it.

Q. Do you remember whether you made that report to them on August 2 or on August 3?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

It was on August 3 because we didn't get back to Huntington until well along into the afternoon of August 2. I spent the night there and then went over to the Pond Creek offices the next morning.

Q. In consequence of what you told them about your inability to get men back on the job, what action, if any, did they take on your contracts for the work there at the job site?

Colonel Harris: We object to that on the additional ground that it calls for an unauthorized opinion of this witness. He uses the phrase in the question "in consequence of" and this witness wouldn't be the one to tell the motives, page 355 } but it would be the people who took the action.

The Court: You can ask the question whether he did get a reply to his report.

Mr. Robertson: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. After you told them that did you get any reply from them verbally to your report?

A. I was told that a Mr. Foster, a labor relations man for Pond Creek and Island Creek was down in Mingo County and would not be back until the afternoon, and that they wanted to talk to him about it. Later on in the afternoon I was told by representatives of Pond Creek and Island Creek that the situation out in Breathitt County had become so tense that they wanted to stop our work.

Q. When they gave you that—

A. That they were going to stop our work.

Q. When they gave you that information what instructions, if any, did you give Veltry as to what he should do?

A. I called Louis up after that and told him—

The Court: Louis who?

The Witness: Veltry.

—that Pond Creek had said they were going to stop our job, stop our work. I said I wanted a letter, that they had a right to terminate the contract if they wanted to, but I wanted a letter doing it and they said they would page 356 } give it to me the next day. I told Louis to try to get some men to get together the tools and equipment so that they could be moved to Richmond.

(Document exhibited to Mr. Mullen and Colonel Harris.)

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Colonel Harris: We want to add the additional ground to this letter that it is a self-serving declaration invited by the alter ego of the plaintiff subsequent to the alleged commission of the wrongs complained of.

The Court: Let the record show that objection and exception.

Colonel Harris: That is in addition to all the other grounds of hearsay of course.

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Robertson: I seem to have misplaced the original. I will use a copy.

The Court: Isn't the original attached to the notice of motion for judgment?

Mr. Robertson: No. I think Mr. Bryan gave me the original this morning with a photostat attached to it. I can use a copy and substitute the original later just to keep from delaying the proceedings.

Mr. Mullen: We don't raise any question about the copies, Your Honor.

The Court: All right.

page 357 } By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Is that the letter that Pond Creek Pocahontas Company wrote you that you have mentioned?

A. It is a letter dated August 4, 1949, from Pond Creek Pocahontas Company to Laburnum Construction Corporation, signed by Mr. R. E. Salvati, President.

Mr. Robertson: I offer this letter in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 27, and I will substitute the original.

Colonel Harris: May we have the same objection and a continuing objection and exception to all documents long this line?

The Court: That is understood.

(The letter referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 27 and received in evidence.)

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I would like to read this letter to the jury. Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Huntington, West Virginia, R. E. Salvati, President, August 4, 1949, Laburnum Construction Corporation Richmond, Virginia, attention Mr. Hamilton Bryan, President.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Did you reply to that letter on the same date?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. I hand you what appears to be a carbon copy of your reply and ask you if that is your reply?

A. Yes, sir; this is the reply from us to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company dated August 4, 1949, signed by me.

Q. Mr. Bryan, on August 4, 1949, did you receive a letter from the Spring Fork Development Company through its president, W. A. Ogg, substantially in the form of the letter you have already read from Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, the letter from Spring Fork Development Company also terminating its contract?

A. Yes. This is a letter from Spring Fork Development Company to us, dated August 4, 1949, terminating our contract for the 25 dwellings.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the letter in evidence, and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 29.

Q. On August 4, did you reply to that letter substantially as you replied to the letter you received from Pond Creek Pocahontas Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you what appears to be your reply to the Spring Fork Development Company, and ask you if that is a copy of your reply?

A. Yes, this is a copy of our reply to Spring page 362 } Fork Development Company, dated August 4, 1949.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the reply in evidence, and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 30.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, when the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company and the Spring Fork Development Company told you on August 3 that they were going to cancel your contract, and you required them to give you a letter to that effect, did you stay there in Huntington until you got the letter, or did you come on back to Richmond and get the letter later?

A. No, I stayed in Huntington.

Q. And got the letter while you were in Huntington?

A. On August 4.

Q. And replied to it while you were in Huntington on August 4?

A. That is right. I wanted to be sure they were going to pay us for moving our tools out.

Colonel Harris: We move to exclude that answer as not responsive to any question, if the Court please.

The Court: Gentlemen, disregard the answer. It was not responsive to the question.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, of course, I know he has a right to say that, but that is utterly trivial.

page 363 } By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Why did you stay in Huntington?

A. I wanted to be sure to get the letter, and I wanted to be sure to have it understood that they would reimburse us for the cost of moving our tools and equipment away.

Q. What instructions, if any, did you give your new superintendent, Veltry, about getting your tools and equipment off the job?

A. I told him to get together some men and make arrangements to have railroad cars come in to get the guide derrick, and the cots and blankets and stoves, and saws, and all the rest of the stuff we had out there, together, and send it back to Richmond.

Q. Did Veltry move out, pursuant to your instructions?

A. Yes. He hired some carpenters. He had two iron workers, four or five carpenters. He had a half a dozen or so laborers who had worked for us before.

Q. Did he report to you whether the United Construction Workers, or any of the defendants, made any objection to those men working?

A. Yes. A couple of days after he started to move the equipment out, he said that a representative of the United Construction Workers had told him he couldn't do that. Mr. Veltry protested, and said that surely no objection would be made to Laburnum moving its tools and equipment away. He said he never heard any more.

Q. On August 5, did you go to Pikeville, Kentucky, and have a conference with David Hunter?

A. I was in Huntington on August 5, and telephoned Mr. David Hunter at about 1:00 o'clock. Mr. Hunter was in Pikesville. I asked Mr. Hunter if he could see me that afternoon or the next morning. Mr. Hunter said that the next day, August 6, he had to go to Winchester, Kentucky, to see Jimmy Codell, but that he would see that afternoon. He said that if I left Huntington at about 1:30, I ought to be able to get to Pikesville around 4:30, and he would wait for me and I could see him in his office?

Q. Did you go to Pikesville and see him?

A. Yes. I went to Pikesville and got there at approximately 4:30.

Q. I am going to ask you what building his office was in?

A. His office was in the Soward Building in Pikesville. It is spelled S-o-w-a-r-d, I think.

Q. Do you know whether the United Mine Workers of America maintain an office in that same building?

A. At that time, the office of District 50 and United Construction Workers was on the third floor of the Soward Building, and the office of United Mine Workers was on the second floor. At the present time the offices are in the same building and are all on the second floor.

The United Mine Workers' offices are in the front of the building, and immediately next to those offices is the office of Mr. Hunter, District 50, and United Construction Workers.

Q. State what occurred when you had your meeting there on August 5 with Mr. Hunter? How long did the meeting last, approximately?

A. The meeting lasted from about 4:30 to almost 8:00 o'clock.

Q. Now, just tell what you said to him and what he said to you and what happened during the meeting.

A. I will have to refer to this memo a little bit on that. It was a right long conference.

I told Mr. Hunter that we always had dealt with A. F. of L. unions, and had never had any agreements with the United Construction Workers. It seemed to me that the United Construction Workers was organized somewhat differently from the A. F. of L. unions. I asked him if he would explain to me about the United Construction Workers, and how it operated. I asked Mr. Hunter if it was correct that the United Construction Workers was a part of the United Mine Workers of America. Mr. Hunter said that it was.

I then asked Mr. Hunter to explain to me how the United Construction Workers was connected with the page 366 } United Mine Workers of America and District 50, what the set-up was.

Mr. Hunter proceeded to do that. I was asking him questions from time to time about it.

Q. Just go ahead and give what his explanation was of the set-up.

A. Mr. Hunter said that the United Mine Workers of America was an organization that consisted of 31 groups or divisions known as districts, in connection with coal; and also of another group or division, known as District 50, in connection with everything except coal. He said that United Construction Workers was a part of District 50 which handled the construction business. Mr. Hunter said that John L. Lewis was the International President of the United Mine Workers of America, and of all its districts, including District 50, and that under John L. Lewis there was an Executive Board or Policy Committee. Some of the information, I might add, that Mr. Hunter gave, I don't think is exactly accurate, but I am telling you what he said.

Mr. Hunter said that on the International Executive Board were the Chairman of various districts. He said that Mr. A. D. Lewis was the brother of John L. Lewis, and that he was the Chairman of the Organizing Committee of District 50; that Mr. A. D. Lewis was on the International Executive Board.

Mr. Hunter said there was a man in Pikesville page 367 } named Tom Raney connected with the coal handling districts, who also was on the International Executive Board. He said that there was a Comptroller, a man named Mr. O. B. Allen, who was the Comptroller of District 50.

I don't remember whether he said Mr. Allen was on the Executive Board or not.

Mr. Hunter said that under Mr. A. D. Lewis, as Chairman of the Organizing Committee of District 50, were four Assistant Chairmen. He gave me their names.

Q. Do you have the names there?

A. Yes.

Q. Give them, please.

A. Thomas Davis, Frank Barnhart, a Mr. Moffet—I didn't get his first name—and a Mr. Brett.

During my talk with Mr. Hunter, I was making notes continually.

He said that Mr. Davis was the Assistant Chairman serving as coordinator of the various regions in the Southeast. He said that he, that is, Mr. Hunter, as the Regional Director of District 50, and United Construction Workers of Region 58, worked under Mr. Davis. He said that Region 58 comprised two counties in West Virginia, Logan and Mingo Counties; two counties in Virginia, Wise and Buchanan; and ten counties in Kentucky, Breathitt County and nine others.

Mr. Hunter said that as the Regional Director page 368 } of Region 58, he had charge of all activities of District 50 and the United Construction Workers in Region 58.

Mr. Hunter said that in a United Construction Workers local union, the construction people were usually by themselves, but that this was not always true; that sometimes they would have barbers and taxicab drivers, laundry employees, and other people, in a union with construction men.

Q. Let me interrupt you there a minute. Did Mr. Hunter say whether or not William O. Hart and this man Robinson were field representatives working under his orders?

A. Yes, I think he did a little later on.

Q. All right, sir. Go ahead.

A. I asked Mr. Hunter about the wage rates for construction people, and whether or not the barbers and taxicab drivers would have anything to say about the wage rates for carpenters; and he said that no, on that phase of it, it was separate.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, if I may break in now, I have found the original letter.

The Court: You may do that afterwards, when we recess for lunch.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. When you entered into these discussions of wage rates and contracts, did Mr. Hunter turn over any data to you?

A. Yes, sir. I asked Mr. Hunter if he would page 369 } let me see a copy of the form of agreement which was used by the United Construction Workers with contractors. Mr. Hunter gave me a copy of the form, and I read it aloud, paragraph by paragraph, with him. We discussed the various paragraphs.

Q. Did he also give you, with that, a list showing various classifications of employees and the form of a membership application card, and a recognition agreement, and tabulation of wage rates (exhibiting document to Mr. Mullen)?

Mr. Mullen: No objection.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Did he turn over to you various data while you were there in his office?

A. Yes. He gave me a conformed copy of the agreement which he used with contractors. He gave me a copy of a membership application form and check-off authorization used in connection with United Construction Workers. He gave me a form of agreement which he asked contractors to sign, and other people to sign, recognizing the United Construction Workers as the bargaining agent for employees pending the execution of a more formal agreement.

He also gave me a copy of the construction wage rates used by United Construction Workers in Region 58.

Q. Is the data which I have handed to you collectively, the data which he gave you there that afternoon and evening?

A. It is, with this exception: Mr. Hunter also page 370 } gave me a copy of the Rules of District 50, revised March 15, 1949, but with that exception this is what it was.

Q. Were the Rules that he gave you of District 50, a copy of the same rules that have been introduced in evidence here as an exhibit?

A. I haven't compared them word for word, but I assume that they are. Both of them were dated "Revised March 15, 1949."

Mr. Robertson: I offer all of the data which Mr. Bryan has mentioned, with the exception of those Rules, in evidence, and ask that it collectively be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 31.

(The documents referred to were marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 31 and received in evidence.)

Mr. Robertson: Judge, I am sorry, but I am going to have to go through this data in great detail.

The Court: I think we had better have something to eat. We will recess, gentlemen, for lunch, and be back at 2:15.

(Whereupon, at 12:50 o'clock p. m., a recess was taken until 2:15 o'clock p. m., of the same day.)

Whereupon,

A. HAMILTON BRYAN

the witness on the stand at the time of recess, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION—continued.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, there is a question I failed to ask you before lunch. You stated when you and Hart were at the job site on Monday, August first, you were discussing the proposed meeting for the next day at Salyersville and you asked him would he come to the meeting. Did he make any condition about coming as to whether you would work or not work if he came?

A. Mr. Hart said that he would come to the meeting but that he wanted it understood that we would not attempt to perform any more work until after the meeting.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Did you accept that condition?

A. I said we would not try to perform any more work. I knew we couldn't, actually.

Q. I will give you back this data which has been introduced here as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 31. When we adjourned for lunch you were discussing Mr. Hunter's explanation to you of the organization of the three defendant unions.
page 372 } Will you take up where you were discussing that and continue your discussion of what he told you there and what happened in that conference?

A. When we adjourned for lunch I think that I had just said that Mr. Hunter gave me a mimeographed copy of a form of agreement which was used by United Construction Workers in making agreements with contractors in Region 58. The agreement or form of agreement that Mr. Hunter gave to me has been offered in evidence. I discussed the form of agreement with Mr. Hunter extensively. In fact, the agreement was read aloud paragraph by paragraph and we discussed different portions of it. Mr. Hunter showed to me an executed copy of the agreement which United Construction Workers had made with the Beckett Construction Company of Huntington, West Virginia, dated in June, I believe, June 20, 1949. The agreement was executed by Beckett Construction Company, had been signed by Mr. Hunter as regional director on behalf of the United Construction Workers and had also been signed by Mr. Denny Lewis to indicate the approval of the National organization. The agreement signed with the Beckett Construction Company was very similar to the form of agreement which Mr. Hunter gave to me except that the agreement with the Beckett Construction Company contained a "no-strike" clause and also contained a no-suit clause. In other words, the contractor agreed not to bring any sort of suit against United Construction

Mr. Hunter and I then discussed the matter of the wage rate of $1.36 an hour for laborers in Breathitt County. I told Mr. Hunter that in my judgment the wage rate of $1.36 an hour was preposterous, that my investigation had shown that the most that those laborers had received in the past was about 60 or 75 cents an hour and that our wage rate of 90 cents an hour was the most which they had ever received before we came there.

I told Mr. Hunter that I thought it was a mistake to start out with such a high wage rate, that it would be much better to have a wage rate lower than $1.36 an hour and then have something to build on, to have some increases from time to time.

Mr. Hunter agreed with me. He said he thought I was right, but that the Beckett Construction Company had already agreed to a rate of $1.36 an hour and that there wasn't anything that United Construction Workers could do about it.

After that we discussed the matter. Mr. Hunter said the State Highway Department in Kentucky had approved a wage rate of $1.35 an hour. He showed me some papers that indicated that to be correct. Later I questioned him and he said that it turned out that that was the wage rate around Lexington and Louisville, which was a very different proposition from that in Breathitt County. It also developed page 374 } that Mr. Hunter was confused about rates between wage rates for skilled classifications for labor and for unskilled classifications of labor. In other words, $1.35 an hour wage rate apparently was not the same thing as what we were talking about in Breathitt County.

After that, we discussed what seemed to be some advantages of the United Construction Workers arrangement. I asked Mr. Hunter if, for example, a carpenter could be used to tie reinforcing steel, which work is normally done by a reinforcing iron worker under A. F. of L. agreements. Mr. Hunter said yes, that that could be done under the United Construction Worker arrangement, that there would be no question of any jurisdictional disputes, but that while the man was performing the work of tying reinforcing steel, that is, the carpenter, he would have to be paid the wage rate for reinforcing iron workers. I told Mr. Hunter that I thought that was a good arrangement and one that had a lot of advantage to it.

The next item that we discussed was the United Construction Workers requirement about seniority lay-offs. I told Mr. Hunter that I thought that their requirement on the matter of lay-offs would just lead to constant turmoil. I don't recall that Mr. Hunter made any comment about it.

The next question that came up was on the matter of the clause which prevented the contractor from bringing a suit against United Construction Workers. page 375 }

I told Mr. Hunter that I didn't see any good reason why the contractor should be required to agree in advance that he wouldn't bring suit against the United Construction Workers, that if the contractor was done a wrong, the contractor should be able to bring a suit. Whereupon Mr. Hunter said that the United Mine Workers didn't like to be sued, didn't like to get into court, that the last time they were in court the United Mine Workers had been fined a million dollars and John L. Lewis had been fined $20,000.

After that, I told Mr. Hunter that for many years we had worked with A. F. of L. unions and we had agreements with A. F. of L. unions in the Building Trades Council, and that I just didn't see how we could make an agreement with his organization without breaking our agreements with the A. F. of L. unions. Mr. Hunter made no comment that I recall at the moment. He said he thought we should be able to make an agreement for the laborers and that the United Construction Workers people would work peacefully alongside of A. F. of L. men, that that had been done in connection with work at Wheelwright.

I said I just didn't think that that would work out.

Q. Did you discuss with him what Hart had done and what your contacts had been with Hart?

A. Yes, we discussed that, too. I told Mr. Hunter page 376 } ter that I was sorry that Mr. Hart had led this big crowd of men, 75 to 100 people to our job and had threatened and intimidated our employees, that Mr. Hart had called our office in the middle of July, on July 14, and had said that we would have to make an agreeemnt recognizing the United Construction Workers, or he would do it, and that we had not gotten in touch with him, that I didn't know how we could make an agreement with his organization, but that I had understood from Mr. Hart that he would get in touch with me again before he did anything, and the next thing I knew Mr. Hart planned to lead this big crowd to our job. I had gotten in a truck and driven all night on July 25 to try to get to the job site, and just missed it because of car trouble, and when I did get there all the damage had been done.

Mr. Hunter's comment on that was that he was sorry, too.

Q. Did you remind him of your telephone conversation with him when you called him at Pikesville from the service station in Huntington?

A. Yes, I did. I reminded Mr. Hunter of the fact that I had placed a telephone call for him, rather for Mr. Hart, and had been unable to reach Mr. Hart on the morning of July 26, and I finally talked to Mr. Hunter and had asked him to relay a message to Mr. Hart to the effect that I was trying to get to the job as soon as I could and please to ask Mr.

Hart not to interfere with our men until he talked page 377 } to me.

Mr. Hunter said that he remembered the conversation and that he had told Mr. Hart, that he had given my message to Mr. Hart.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Did he say whose order Hart was working under on that occasion?

A. Yes. I told Mr. Hunter that I discussed the matter with Mr. Hart, and Mr. Hart said that he was working under orders and that I assumed that Mr. Hart was working under Mr. Hunter's orders. Mr. Hunter said that was correct.

Q. Did you say anything to Mr. Hunter about what you proposed to do to protect yourself in the circumstances?

A. Yes, I did. I told Mr. Hunter that we had been badly damaged. I told him that I was very mortified, that the coal company had taken our contract away from us. I told him that I didn't like one bit the fact that he had arranged to have about 100 mountaineers go out to the job site and threaten and intimidate our people and cause our work to be stopped, and that I expected to hold him and the United Mine Workers responsible for what had happened.

Q. Did he state whether or not he had heard that you might sue him?

A. Yes, he said he had already heard that we might bring a suit against him.

Q. What did he say along that line?

page 378 } A. I don't think anything much was said along that line except that he commented that he had already heard that we might bring a suit against them.

Q. Did he have anything to say about the Taft-Hartley Act?

A. Yes, in the course of the conversation we discussed the Taft-Hartley Act and we discussed the Virginia Right to Work law. I asked Mr. Hunter whether he liked the Taft-Hartley Act and he referred to the Taft-Hartley Act as a slave law that didn't give the United Mine Workers any protection. I said, "Why doesn't it give you protection? It protects everybody else?"

Mr. Hunter said it didn't protect the United Mine Workers because he and the other officials were good American citizens and were not communists and there was no reason why they should have to make an affidavit to that effect. With reference to the Virginia Right to Work law, he said that was the most vicious labor law of all and that with a law like the Virginia Right to Work law they didn't need any Taft-Hartley Act.

Q. Did Mr. Hunter in the course of the conversation deny that Hart had run you off the job or did he agree to it?

A. Hamilton Bryan.

A. He admitted, I think, that it was done. There was no question about the fact that Mr. Hart had led the people to the job and had made them stop work.

page 379 } Q. Did you tell Hunter—

A. Mr. Hunter seemed to think he was entirely justified in what he had done. There wasn't any question about what had happened, it was the justification.

Q. Did you tell Hunter about Hart having told you at Sal-yersville that he could bring a thousand men there to hold the line, if necessary?

A. Well, in the conversation with Mr. Hunter he said that all they wanted us to do was to recognize them for the labor-ers, that they hadn't tried to organize the carpenters. I took issue with him on that and told him that they had threatened our carpenters and they had demanded that the carpenters become members of the UCW, and Mr. Hart had done so repeatedly, that he did it in his telephone conversation with me on July 14, he did it at the job site on July 26, and he had done it at the job site when he stopped the men from working. I said Mr. Hunter told me that Mr. Hart told me that he could bring a thousand men to the job to hold his picket line.

Mr. Hunter then replied that there wasn't any question about it. He said Mr. Hart could arrange to have 6,000 men brought there to stop us from working.

Q. Did you express yourself about Hart's men coming there armed to run your men off the job?

A. I certainly did. I asked Mr. Hunter why it was that Mr. Hart had brought the group of men there with guns. Mr. Hunter's response to that was that it was almost the second nature of a man in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky to carry a gun, and he couldn't help it, that he had often seen meetings up at Tiptop and at all those meetings people came there with guns, that the butt of a gun was used as a gavel to call them to order. I explained to Mr. Hunter that if he and Mr. Hart were going to undertake to organize groups of men that would go out and terrorize people with guns and then they got out of control, that they couldn't disclaim responsibility for it. Mr. Hunter seemed to have the idea that if these people came there with guns and shot and killed somebody, he didn't authorize it, and it wasn't his responsibility.

Q. During the course of the conversation did it become necessary for you and Mr. Hunter to reconcile any discrepancy in your recollection as to what Hart had done on a given day?

A. Hamilton Bryan.

A. Yes, we got into a discussion about whether or not Mr. Hart had gone to the job site on a certain date. I am not certain about the date at this time, but I think it was August first. I said that Mr. Hart had gone to the job and Mr. Hunter seemed to think that he had not gone to the job. Mr. Hunter said he could clear up the question very easily by looking at his files. He opened up a file drawer page 381 } and there was a whole series of files in a very neat arrangement. He pulled out a file folder that was clipped on a board, a cardboard back. It was a weekly report file that gave a daily account day by day of the activities of the different people who worked under Mr. Hunter. This was the report on Mr. Hart. Mr. Hunter said that this was a report that he sent in every week to Washington making a report on the activities in his region. He found the item that covered the question that we were discussing, and that cleared it up. I don't remember now exactly how it was cleared up, but I was able to glance briefly at the files.

Q. Since this suit was started, have you through interrogatories to the defendants attempted to get copies of those reports to which Mr. Hunter referred during that conference?

A. Yes.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Objection, Your Honor. The interrogatories are on file and they should be entered, and if the plaintiff is going to testify about them, they should be introduced.

Mr. Robertson: I never heard such a suggestion as that, Your Honor. The interrogatories and answers to them are entirely independent of this. They may or may not be introduced in evidence. They have not been introduced yet.

The Court: You merely asked him a question page 382 } about whether he received them.

Mr. Robertson: Whether he tried to get them by asking for them and whether he did get them or not and what was the reason he was told that he couldn't get them.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, the best evidence is the interrogatories themselves, and he can't sit here and testify what is in the interrogatories when the interrogatories are sitting right up there on the desk.

Mr. Robertson: I never heard of such a proposition.

The Court: We will recess, gentlemen, and the Court will hear counsel in the Chambers.

(The following proceedings were held in Chambers:)

A. Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: Will you read the question and the objections?

(The question and objections were read by the reporter.)

Mr. Robertson: I might be able to shorten this discussion a little bit in this way: The reason I made the reference to the interrogatories was to show that we had asked for those answers in the way provided by law. If I were to ask him for those reports as a matter of courtesy, they would have a right to decline to let me have them. When I ask for them in the form of interrogatories, it is their duty to let us have them. Therefore, the purpose of my question is to show that

I asked in the way that the law allows me to ask page 383 } to get them as a matter of right. We didn't get them because they said they had been destroyed.

Mr. Allen: Section 8-320, the provision for the filing of the interrogatories and then Section 8-322, the provision for the answers being introduced in evidence: "Answers to such interrogatories may be used as evidence at the trial of the cause, in the same manner and with the same effect as if obtained upon a bill of discovery." The cases construing this section hold that, for instance, a plaintiff can introduce the answers to interrogatories filed by the plaintiff against the defendant, and on the other side the defendant can introduce interrogatories filed against the plaintiff and his answers.

We asked in the interrogatories for these reports and they answered that they had been destroyed.

Mr. Robertson: Excuse me one minute. Just to shorten it. I am perfectly willing to change the form of the question and ask Mr. Bryan if since this trial started, since this suit was instituted, he has called on the defendant for copies of those reports. His answer would be yes. "Have you got them?" "No." "Why did they tell you you couldn't get them?" "Because they said they had been destroyed."

Mr. Allen: Let me finish what I started.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: While you have that book will you please read the next two sections to the Court on page 384 } those interrogatories. I think you referred to 320.

Mr. Allen: You mean that is on production of books and other writings. "In any case at law a party may file in the clerk's office, and in any case or matter before commissioner of a court any person interested may file with such commissioner, an affidavit, setting forth that there is, he verily believes, a book of accounts or other writing in possession of an adverse party or claimant containing material evidence for him, specifying with reasonable certainty such writing or the part of such book. The clerk or commissioner shall issue a summons, directed as under 8-320, requiring him to summon the proper party to produce such writing, or an exact copy of any such part of such book, and make return thereof as under that section. With the summons there shall be a copy of the affidavit, which shall be delivered to the person served with the summons at the time of such service. If the summons be against a plaintiff who is not a resident of this State, or a defendant who is not a resident of this State but who has appeared in the case or been served with process in this State, the service may be on his attorney at law."

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: The next section, too, please, sir.

Mr. Allen: "When the court in which the case is, or whose commissioner issued the summons, is satisfied page 385 } that the person filing such affidavit has no means of proving the contents of such writing, or of such part of the book, but by the person summoned producing what is required by the summons, and that the same is relevant and material, and sees also that the call therefor has not been unreasonably delayed, it may, unless the person summoned shall, in a reasonable time, either produce what it so required, or answer in writing, upon oath, that he has not under his control such book or writing, or any of the like import, attach him and compel him to do the one or the other. It may also, if it see fit, set aside a plea of such person, and give judgment against him by default, or if he be plaintiff, order his suit to be dismissed with costs, or if he be claiming a debt before a commissioner, disallow such claim."

I don't see where those sections have anything to do with it. Do you want to say anything about that?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, in no case in the entire interrogatories did plaintiffs file the affidavits required by those two sections, describing the documents they wanted. We think that Your Honor is in error when you required us to answer them. That is off the point of this subject.

Whatever our answer was is in those interrogatories and that is the best evidence, and Mr. Bryan can't testify to that.

page 386 } Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, the witness has no information whatever on this subject except what he gets from the interrogatories. He called for those, the interrogatories have been answered, that they have been destroyed. He has no knowledge other than that. He is endeavoring to testify on the answers given in the interrogatories. The law of Virginia is perfectly clear that all or none of the interrogatories must be introduced.

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please—

Mr. Mullen: I will give you the cases if you want it. It is perfectly clear.

Mr. Allen: All we want to do is to avoid the breaking of the continuity of our story as it is being unfolded. We don't want Mr. Bryan to testify to what is in the interrogatories. We want the simple question if they have been called for and if they have been received. If these gentlemen insist on our stopping right here, right now, and digging out those interrogatories, which we are going to introduce later, we can go and produce this particular question and the answer to it and there they have filed the reports covering other periods but the reports covering the period here in which this trouble arose they have filed them and they say themselves that they have been destroyed.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, to solve page 387 } the thing I will withdraw the question, and I propose now in order that we won't have to come running out again—I propose to ask Mr. Bryan, "Since this suit was instituted have you attempted to get copies of those reports that you saw there?" His answer would be "Yes." "Have you been able to get them?" No. "Were you given any reason why you couldn't get them?" He was told they have been destroyed.

Mr. Allen: That is all we want now.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: That is all we are objecting to. That is exactly what we are objecting to. He has no independent knowledge.

The Court: In other words, he is getting his information from the interrogatories.

Mr. Mullen: Giving an answer in the interrogatories when all or none of the interrogatories must be introduced.

The Court: I think the objection is good. I sustain the objection.

Mr. Robertson: The plaintiff excepts for the reasons stated.

page 388 } (The following proceedings were had in open court:)

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, since the Court has ruled that in order to get that information we must refer to the interrogatories, we think that this is just as good a time as any to do it, and we are going to ask to take a recess until we can dig through it and find it. We had hoped to save this time, but if that is what we must do, we can find it.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: May it please the Court, it is the position of the defendants that if plaintiff introduces any interrogatories, they must introduce them all. I suggest—

Mr. Robertson: I think the Court is in control of that situation.

The Court: The Court is in control but the Court will hear both parties on all controversial matters, and if you want to recess to go into the question of interrogatories the Court will do so. If you want to delay the matter and take the question up later, the Court will give you an opportunity to put Mr. Bryan back on the stand. It occurs to the Court that we might save some time if we go on with other questions and later on the Court will hear argument on the question of interrogatories.

Mr. Robertson: That is all right.

By Mr. Robertson:

page 389 } Q. During the course of that interview did this man Robinson who had been out on the job site put in my appearance?

A. He came in to the conference during the very last part of it.

Q. Mr. Bryan, I believe I pretty generally covered what I think occurred in that conference between you and Mr. Hunter there on August 5. Have you any recollection of anything else that occurred there in your conversation with him that I haven't asked you about?

A. Yes.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: That is a leading question if I ever heard one. I object to it.

Mr. Robertson: Have I indicated what the answer is or what information he is going to give out?

The Court: I will overrule the objection.

Mr. Robertson: You ought to go to night school, Freddie.

Mr. Mullen: We object to a remark like that. We are trying to facilitate the case.

The Court: The jury will disregard sidebar remarks.

The Witness: During the course of the conference with Mr. Hunter I asked him what effect making an agreement with the United Construction Workers on one job would have in page 390 } connection with other jobs that we might have. I asked him if for example, we should make an agreement with the United Construction Workers on the job in Kentucky and should then be awarded a job in Kansas City, whether he would close down the job in Kentucky unless we made an agreement with him on a job in Kansas City.

Mr. Hunter said that his organization didn't work that way, that he wouldn't do that. I told Mr. Hunter that after my experience with them I didn't have any confidence in any agreement that United Mine Workers might make that I was satisfied that his organization had only one rule, and that was the rule of might is right.

Mr. Hunter said that I just didn't understand.

There is one other thing that occurred. I asked Mr. Hunter what would happen if we should make an agreement with the United Construction Workers for the common laborers, and then our A. F. of L. employees should get mad about it and have a picket line. I asked Mr. Hunter if United Construction Workers would honor the A. F. of L. picket line. Mr. Hunter said that I need not worry about that, that United Construction Workers would always see to it that its contractors would properly be taken care of and protected. Mr. Hunter said that each case of that kind would have to be decided on its own merits and he indicated strongly that United Construction Workers would not pay any attention to A. F. of L. picket lines.

By Mr. Robertson:

page 391 } Q. Mr. Bryan, on August 7, 1949, did your field clerk, Maynard Ragan, send you a number of applications by your laborers who had previously applied for membership in the Salversville A. F. of L. local?

A. On August 7, 1949, Maynard Ragan and Robert Poe, who was the business agent of the Salversville Carpenters Local 697, met me in the law offices of Mead & Johnson in Paintsville. I had been told that all of our laborers and labor foremen had made application to become members of the Salversville Local as carpenter helpers, and that Bob Poe had the applications. I asked Robert Poe if he would send them to me, that I would like to see them. So Robert Poe said he would give them to Maynard Ragan, who would send them over to me.

Q. Is that package the package that you received?

A. After that, Maynard Ragan mailed the application blanks to me and we received them in Richmond on August 10, 1949. Here they are.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Mullen: Do you propose to introduce those?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, the proper party to introduce those is the man named Poe. They are third-hand in Mr. Bryan's hands. The man who took those is the man who should identify them and who can tell under what circumstances they were taken.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I am page 392 { going to prove through Mr. Bryan here that he has compared these signatures with the signatures on his payroll and that he has thereby established the authenticity of them. At the proper time I am going to have Maynard Ragan here to testify to the circumstances under which he actually received them. I offer them in evidence for what they are worth. I think it is material and relevant in view of the fact of the statement that was made by Mr. Mullen in his opening statement that these laborers of ours had joined up with the United Construction Workers when here are their applications at the very time—I think most of them are dated about July—I haven't looked at them—I have forgotten, the 16th or the 26th, the very time we are talking about, and they had filed applications with the Salyersville Local to join up there.

The Court: Do I understand you are going to have the man who took those applications present?

Mr. Robertson: Robert Poe? No, sir. I would like to tell this Court in the absence of the jury why I am not having him. I don't think I have a right to say it here in the hearing of the jury. If the Court tells me to go ahead—I ask, Mr. Mullen, may I tell?

Mr. Mullen: If you think it is proper before the jury. I know what would happen if you said it before the jury.

Mr. Robertson: I would like the jury to know page 393 { it.

The Court: There are a lot of things you gentlemen would like the jury to know that I haven't permitted you to tell.

Mr. Robertson: I think I will question Mr. Bryan along that line right now, Your Honor. I think I might as well.

Mr. Mullen: May I see one of them?

Mr. Robertson: Not yet, because you have objected to them.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, in the latter part of August, 1950, did you go with me to Adrian, Michigan, in an effort to take the deposition of Robert Poe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were we successful or unsuccessful in taking his deposition?

Colonel Harris: We object to that as wholly immaterial, if the Court please.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I am just going to tell it right now.

The Court: I suspect we had better recess. There are two or three matters that you want to argue. We will just have to recess and hear it in Chambers.

page 394 } (The following proceedings were had in chambers.)

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please—

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Before you start, sir. I think Mr. Bryan is still on the stand, and he will have to leave.

The Court: Mr. Bryan, you will have to excuse yourself. I do not know what will come up.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, the papers in this case will show this situation, and I won't stop and get the precise date; the papers will show it.

Mr. Bryan and I thought we had made arrangements to take the deposition of a man named Bradshaw, and Robert Poe, in Adrian, Michigan, in the latter part of August, 1950. We went out there and got in touch with him and interviewed him. He promised to give a deposition along the lines that we had anticipated and along the lines indicated in what has transpired thus far in this case.

On the morning that the depositions were to be taken, he arrived at the hotel and demanded that he be paid $1,000 cash before he would testify. We explained the impropriety of it to him, and told him that we couldn't do it, and we wouldn't want to put ourselves in that position, and he wouldn't want to put himself in that position. He said, "Of course, nobody would know about it but you and me."

Finally, after we had talked a while, he said page 395 } that he was busy and couldn't stay but a few minutes, and if we would pay him $500 before the deposition and give him a note for $500 before we left town that day, that was his final proposition.

We told him, "Well, we couldn't do that." So he left.

By then, I was already late to go to the office where the deposition was to have been taken. I read into the record that the witness we had expected to testify had declined to testify. Bradshaw never showed up at all. He never showed up at all. I said I would make my explanation to the Court at the proper time.

This, I take it, is the proper time, and I think I have a right to tell the jury why we haven't got Poe here; and in those circumstances, I think these applications are properly admissible in evidence for what they are worth. They may think they are not worth anything, but the jury may put such weight on them as they want.

The Court: Mr. Allen, do you want to say anything?

Mr. Allen: No.

Mr. Moore: No.

The Court: Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, the only one who can prove the identity of those is Poe. He is the man who took them.

page 396 } Mr. Robertson: I would like to add, a man named Hackett took a few of them, and we expect to have Hackett here.

Mr. Mullen: It has already been testified that they phoned their man out there to have them taken before he went and took them, after they had been in conference with Hart over the phone.

If they were taken, the circumstances under which they were taken show whether they are of any value or not, and to identify when and how he took them is for Poe to do. He should say, "These are the applications given to me as the representative of the A. F. of L. Union, applications to join the union." We have a right to ask the man what he did with them, whether or not he advised them later that he was sorry he could do nothing, that there was no place to take them in. Mr. Poe said he never delivered them to you for use on trial.

Mr. Robertson: I think Poe is lying.

Mr. Mullen: He may be. I think if that is the kind of people we are dealing with, he might be lying.

Mr. Robertson: We might all of us be lying.

Hamilton Bryan is prepared to testify that he has compared the signatures on those cards with his payrolls, and that they are the identical signatures. If there is any dispute about that, we can get the best handwriting expert that I know around here, Cassidy, and let him say whether page 397 } they are the same signatures or not.

The Court: I doubt if Mr. Bryan is a handwriting expert.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: He is an expert on many things.

The Court: But Mr. Cassidy, the Court considers an expert.

As presently advised, the Court is of the opinion that you can get Mr. Cassidy here to compare signatures on the payroll as against the signatures on these cards.

Colonel Harris: May I offer a suggestion there?

The Court: Yes.

Colonel Harris: It seem to me, developing what Mr. Mullen said, that we are entitled to know the circumstances under which those men executed those signatures, and the man who got them may have held out inducements or promises or may have got them on condition, and if they can just bring somebody in and say, "This is the signature of that man," it deprives us of our right to get all the legitimate evidence on the question of what happened when they signed those papers, those cards.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, the Defendants claim that these men right here, our laborers, are members of the United Construction Workers. If they are in their own membership, they can bring them here and have page 398 } them tell anything they want to tell. They may be bringing some of them here, I don't know.

Colonel Harris: The fact that we may want to do something that he wants to do, equality of desire, doesn't mean abrogation of the rules of law on evidence, Judge. Every time any question comes up, counsel on the other side bring up that we are going to want to do something, but the rules of law don't change merely on account of the desires of the parties.

Mr. Robertson: I address myself to the rule of law, Your Honor. According to their own statement, these men are members of their union; and if so, it is within their power to bring them here. They can offer any explanation they want.

The Court: Let me see one of those.

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, I don't want to prolong this discussion, but let's get back to the simplicity of the thing. They say those men signed up with the United Construction Workers. We present applications for membership in the A. F. of L. with these men's names signed to them.

Prima facie, as soon as a man says he knows their signatures and that these are their signatures—he doesn't have to be any expert. All he has to say is that "these are the signatures of these people. They worked for me. I have their payroll checks. I have documents signed by them. I know that these signatures are the signatures of those page 399 } men." That is as far as we have to go. We have made a prima facie case for the introduction of those applications in evidence.

If they claim they are forgeries, that they were gotten by false pretenses or improper inducements, it is up to them to bring evidence here to prove it.

Mr. Roebt N. Pollard, Jr.: They are putting on us, Your Honor, laying the foundation for those documents. They admit they haven't laid the proper foundation when they endeavor to show by ex parte testimony whose signatures appear on the cards.

Mr. Robertson: I have offered to bring Cassidy here, if the signatures are challenged. It never occurred to me that they would be challenged.

I suggest the Court defer its ruling on it until I get Mr. Cassidy to come here. If Mr. Cassidy says they are all forgeries, I suppose you will want to offer them; but we won't, if they are forgeries.

Mr. Mullen: Will there be a proper foundation when you get him here?

Mr. Robertson: In view of all that has been said before the jury, I think I have a right to explain to the jury, through Mr. Bryan's testimony, why we haven't got him here and don't expect to have him here.

The Court: Let us settle this question first.

Would you care to address yourselves any further page 400 } ther to this subject?

What was the man's name who turned these cards over to Mr. Bryan?

Mr. Robertson: Maynard Ragan, his Chief Clerk on the job. Poe gave them to Ragan for forwarding to Bryan.

The Court: Is Ragan going to be here?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Allen: Your Honor understands who Poe is?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Allen: You have the applications coming from a man who is supposed to get them and has charge of them. You have them given by him to the Clerk of the Plaintiff company, and he turns them over to the Plaintiff.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: Then Ragan is going to testify that Poe turned them over to him?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

The Court: I think under those circumstances, a handwriting expert should compare the signatures, and the Court will admit them for what it is worth.

Mr. Robertson: I will have that done overnight.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We except to Your Honor's ruling.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Robertson: On the other question, Your Honor, I say in view of the point that has been made here, I page 401 } have a right to have Bryan testify why we haven't got Poe here.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, if Mr. Bryan can testify to that, I would like to testify why several of our witnesses aren't here.

Mr. Robertson: That will suit me all right.

The Court: Is there any objection to that, if both parties can testify to that?

Mr. Robertson: If you do, you must retire from the case. Bryan is not a lawyer.

The Court: I think it is in the discretion of the Court whether an attorney retires from the case.

Mr. Robertson: He knows what my thing is. If he will indicate what the line of his testimony is, then I will tell him whether or not I agree to it.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: I have no idea of telling you at this time.

Mr. Robertson: I won't agree to it, then.

The Court: That is in the nature of a deposition that you have, is it not?

Mr. Robertson: No, sir.

Get the paper there and show it to the Court.

The Court: I thought you made the statement in the deposition.

Mr. Robertson: I didn't tell what it was. I said—it will be here in a minute.

page 402 } The Court: That is all right. I will take your word for it.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Mr. Robertson's statement is absolutely correct.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, this fellow Bradshaw out there kept on hinting that he wanted a hand-out, and we made out like we didn't get the point. He would do like this, and say, "You can't live on thanks, you know. It takes money to live. It takes money to live these days."

What was I going to do; get him a Virginia ham?

"Well, I don't know. Of course, I plant seed, and I expect them to come up."

We just couldn't see the point.

Then when the morning came for the shakedown, Bradshaw didn't show up at all, so we had nothing on him, you see. Bradshaw could walk right in here today and say I entirely misunderstood him and was doing him a great injustice. Poe came on in, and Poe didn't make any bones about it.

I said, "You don't want to look like you are selling out, and we don't want to look like we are buying you. What would happen? Suppose they spring that on you at the trial; how would you feel?"

He said, "Wouldn't nobody know anything about it but you and me."

page 403 } The Court: What is your objection to Mr. Bryan's stating those facts?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: It is not material to the case.

Mr. Robertson: It is, Your Honor. They are going to argue: why didn't we have Poe here?

The Court: Do you want him to say why he isn't here?

Mr. Robertson: Yes, a reasonable explanation. We could have had him here if we bought him.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: He can explain if he is asked why Poe isn't here.

Mr. Allen: The Business Agent for the A. F. of L. under whose jurisdiction these applications would come, was receiving them and handling them. He is the man to come here and testify about all this. We would certainly be criticized and there would be a presumption against us for not having him here, if we don't explain his absence.

Mr. Mullen: What was Ragan's part in it?

Mr. Allen: He didn't do a thing but just receive them from Poe, that is all.

Mr. Robertson: Hamilton Bryan was coming back to Richmond, and it was agreed there that—Poe didn't have them with him, and he would go back and get them and give them to Ragan, and Ragan would send them on in to Richmond to Bryan.

page 404 } Mr. Mullen: Did Ragan help to get them originally?

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: No, he didn't help to get them.

The Court: How far do you want him to go in his statement?

Mr. Robertson: Just to say that Poe tried to make us pay him a thousand dollars, and we wouldn't do it, and therefore he is not here.

Mr. Allen: And wouldn't give his deposition, either.

Mr. Robertson: Yes, he refused to give his deposition.

Colonel Harris: Judge, unless we accuse them of something,—if we were to make any accusation against them that implied that they had failed in their duty to produce evidence, they might be entitled to an explanation, but no accusation has been made against them.

You could prolong any trial indefinitely by just offering reason after reason as to why X, Y, Z, and A, B, C, and everybody else, hasn't been subpoenaed.

Mr. Robertson: We are not talking about that, Judge. We are talking about this one particular thing, this instance.

To show you how material it is, with all this talk that has happened about Poe and all that has been said now before the jury about Poe, they will say—Mr. Mullen just page 405 { went to town on that. "If he took them, why don't you have him here and prove them through the proper man?" That challenge has been laid down to us in the presence of the jury. Now we have a right to meet it.

Mr. Mullen: My language was, "I object to its being proved this way. The proper person to prove them is the man who took them."

Mr. Robertson: That is right.

Mr. Lowden: You also said you knew why he wasn't here.

Mr. Mullen: That was his side remark, and I answered it, and had a right to answer it. If he is going to make side remarks to the jury—

Mr. Robertson: And I have a right to show why he is not here and why we don't have his deposition.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: In that connection, Your Honor, we would like to move the Court to ask the jury to disregard Mr. Robertson's remarks just before we retired back here to chambers.

The Court: What were the exact remarks?

Mr. Robertson: I don't remember what they were, but it is all right with me to tell the jury to disregard it.

The Court: Do you remember what the exact remarks were?

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: He implied to the jury page 406 } that something happened to Mr. Poe which we had done to keep him from being here.

Mr. Robertson: Oh, no. You are wrong on that.

Mr. Allen: He doesn't intimate that.

Mr. Robertson: In view of that, that is just another reason why I should be permitted to tell the jury what happened.

Judge, it just seems to be that is ordinary fair play and common sense. There is nothing to it.

The Court: I will let him answer the question.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Reserve an exception.

Mr. Mullen: Do you want to take up the question of the interrogatories? We can dispose of that in a very few seconds.

The Court: Are you going into that right now?

Mr. Robertson: No.

The Court: One of the members of the jury wants to go to a doctor this afternoon at about a quarter to five, and I promised him I would adjourn at 4:30. He is having some sinus trouble. I thought maybe when we adjourned, we might come in here a few minutes and take that question up.

Can you think of any other question now that may come up before 4:30 that will require a conference?

Mr. Lowden: Can we think of anything that won't?

Mr. Robertson: Just to save time, as I understand page 407 } stand, I am going to try to get Cassidy tonight to make this comparison and be back here on that.

The Court: Yes, and they may be offered for what they are worth.

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

(The following proceedings were had in open court.)

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I think the sequence of this matter will be clarified if I at this time introduce in evidence the transcript of what occurred at Adrian, Michigan, on August 22, 1950, and then after that, have Mr. Bryan go ahead with his testimony.

(Document exhibited to Mr. Mullen.)

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, this is not a deposition. There was no evidence taken here.

Mr. Robertson: I will ask the Court to look at it and rule.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

(Document handed to the Court.)

The Court: Why not let Mr. Bryan go ahead and testify, and we will take this up later.

Mr. Robertson: All right, sir.

Mr. Bryan, come around to the stand.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, there has been repeated reference here to a man named Robert Poe, one of the representatives of the Salyersville Local, A. F. of L. Do you recall his page 408 } connection with that union?

A. Robert Poe was Business Agent of the Salyersville Local.

Q. After the occurrences at the job site, about which you have testified, happened, did you take an affidavit or statement from Mr. Poe about the occurrences?

A. Yes.

Q. In consequence of that, did you go to Adrian, Michigan, with me for the taking of Mr. Poe's deposition there, scheduled for August 22, 1950?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is Adrian, Michigan?

A. It is about 50 or 60 miles south of Detroit, closer to Toledo than it is to Detroit.

Q. Did you contact Mr. Poe there and arrange to take his deposition on August 22?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he come to see you on August 22?

A. Yes, he came there.

Q. Did he give his deposition?

A. No; he refused to do it.

Q. Why?

A. Well, Robert Poe said that he lived at Ivyton, Kentucky—

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, this testimony page 409 } many looks like it is not going to be what Mr. Robertson told us it was going to be.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Tell us why he refused to give his deposition.

The Court: The objection is sustained. Just give your reasons.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

The Witness: The two reasons—

Mr. Pollard: Mr. Robertson gave but one reason.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, you just give the one main reason that happened when you and I were in the room.

A. Robert Poe wanted to be paid a thousand dollars cash in advance to testify. He offered other reasons.

Q. Did he ever reduce that offer?

A. We said it wouldn't be proper and it wasn't right and we couldn't do it. He finally said, "I have one last proposition. Pay me $500 now and give me a note for $500."

Q. Did you accept that proposition or decline it?

A. No, we said we couldn't do that, that it was unlawful and wasn't right.

Q. Did he say anything about anybody knowing anything about it then?

A. I didn't understand your question.

Q. Did he say anything then about who would know about it?

A. He said wouldn't anybody know anything page 410 } about it but him and me.

Q. Is he the same Poe who took these applications?

A. Bob Poe was carpenter who had worked for us for some time and became business agent of the Salyersville local. Pursuant to Mr. Delinger's request, he arranged to have those applications signed, and later gave them to me through Mr. Ragan, and there was no question about the genuineness of them whatsoever.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, before I offer them I am going to have Mr. Cassidy, the handwriting expert, determine whether they are valid or invalid.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. So far as you know, will Mr. Poe be here to testify for the Plaintiff during this trial?

A. No, he said he wouldn't testify for us unless we paid him, and threatened to testify for the Defendants if we didn't. I haven't heard any more from him.

Q. Mr. Bryan, did you have another interview with Mr. David Hunter at Pikeville on May 15, 1950?

A. Yes, sir.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Q. How did you happen to have that interview with him?

A. We had been invited by the Island Creek Coal Company to submit a proposal to construct a church and a page 411 } recreation building in Mingo County near Ragland, West Virginia, or Delbarton. I think it is closer to Ragland. We had our estimate practically prepared and were going to submit it in the first part of May. At about that time I got information that another contractor, the R. H. Hamill Company, of Huntington, West Virginia, was constructing a small office building for Island Creek Coal Company at Ragland and that United Construction Workers had closed down the job of the R. H. Hamill Company. I decided that before we submitted our proposal we had better investigate the situation a little further. So I took a trip to West Virginia and Kentucky.

On the 15th of May, last year, I drove over from Williamson, West Virginia, to Pikesville, and went to the office of Mr. David Hunter. I got there about 8:30 in the morning and waited for Mr. Hunter to come in. His secretary came in at about 9:30 or 9:15 and said that Mr. Hunter was down the hall talking to Tom Raney an International Board member. I learned that Mr. Hunter had just been off to Washington for about a week to attend some conference of regional directors. Mr. Hunter came in about 9:15, came in to his office. His secretary must have come in a little bit before that.

He saw me. He didn't recognize me at first. I told him who I was. He wanted to know what I cared to see him about.

I said I wanted to talk to him. He took me into page 412 } his private office, shut the door, and we talked for a while. I told Mr. Hunter that we had been invited to submit a bid for some work over near Ragland and that, as I recalled it, he had told me in my last conference with him that Mingo County was in his region. Mr. Hunter said that was right. So I asked Mr. Hunter what the wage rate was. He said $1.36 an hour.

I said, "Mr. Hunter, if we get that job, will you expect us to use United Construction Worker men and to make an agreement with United Construction Workers?" Mr. Hunter said that he did.

I told Mr. Hunter that we couldn't do that, that we had our agreements with the A. F. of L. unions and if we got the job we would do it with A. F. of L. men. Mr. Hunter said, "No such thing," that we would have to use his men.

I told him that the purpose of my visit was to see if I couldn't make some understanding that if we got the job in

Mingo County he would leave us alone and wouldn't bother us, like happened over in Breathitt County. Mr. Hunter wouldn't agree to it. He said that they would attempt to organize our job just like had been done in Breathitt County and expected all our workers to be members of their organization.

I told Mr. Hunter that I understood that the R. H. Hamill Company had been stopped by Clifton Brown, a page 413 } field representative for the UCW over in West Virginia. Mr. Hunter said that the reason was that Mr. Hamill's superintendent had gotten sick.

I told Mr. Hunter that Mr. Hughes, the manager of the Hamill Company, had told me differently, that Mr. Hughes said—

Mr. Mullen: We are going clean out into another company and what the manager of some other company said. We are going far afield, I think.

Mr. Robertson: I don't want to go into it in too much detail, Your Honor. We have shown in our trial brief other instances of running other people off the job before and after this occurrence where they ran us off the job, and this is admissible to show a scheme, a course of conduct, and a planned proceeding.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Just tell what he said about your company now, Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Mullen: That question remains for the Court to pass on.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Do I understand that the objection and exception we made this morning still run to this line of questions?

The Court: I so understand.

Mr. Robertson: It is all right with me, Your page 414 } Honor, but it seems to me that they are making one objection to cover every phase of the law. I think we have gone into a lot of different legal points since then, but it is all right with me.

The Court: Do I understand you are objecting to all the testimony and evidence that has been given or just to that portion which you originally objected to for the reasons stated?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: All that has been given, for the reasons stated.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: That is all right with me.

The Court: All right.

The Witness: I told Mr. Hunter that Mr. Hughes had said differently and that the Hamill Company had given up all further ideas of doing work in the coal fields because of the way the United Construction Workers had been acting. After that, Mr. Hunter changed his tune and said, yes, that the job of the Hamill Company on the office building at Ragland had been taken over by the Frederick Engineering Company, which had an agreement with the United Construction Workers.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Did you make any suggestion to Mr. Hunter that he talk it over with Tom Raney, the International Executive Board member, and see if he couldn't let you by?

A. Yes. In the course of the conversation Mr. Hunter said that if we undertook to perform the work at Rag-page 415 } land with A. F. of L. men he didn't think the coal miners would work for the coal companies. He said he was going to talk to Tom Raney and to Mr. Blizzard, the President of District 17, Charleston, West Virginia, about it. I told Mr. Hunter that we had performed a lot of work in Mingo County and Logan County for the Island Creek Coal Company, and that we had never had any trouble before Mr. Hunter's region had been organized at Pikeville, and that I was sure that if Mr. Hunter and Tom Raney would give instructions that we were not to be bothered, we would never have any more trouble.

Mr. Hunter's response to that was that he couldn't do that, that it would be against their orders.

After that I asked Mr. Hunter what would happen if we got other work in his territory, say at Paintsville or some other place. He said that if we got any work in his area, whether it was in Mingo County or Paintsville or Williamson or wherever it might be, he would attempt to organize our job just like he had done in Breathitt County, and that that was all there was to it, that the A. F. of L. didn't have any business coming into his territory.

Q. Did he say anything about this suit?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. What was that?

A. To start off with, Mr. Hunter said that he thought that we had made a big mistake in pulling out of Ken-page 416 } tucky, and I told him that we didn't have any choice, that our contracts had been terminated.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Then Mr. Hunter said that remained to be proven in court. He said there had been a lot of additional work in Kentucky and that we probably could have gotten it, but he didn't see how we had been damaged $500,000. I told him that that remained to be proven in court.

Q. Is that the substance in general of your entire conversation with him, as you recall it?

A. I think about the only other thing of importance was that we discussed the additional work in Kentucky, and he said that it had been done with laborers and carpenter helpers who were members of the United Construction Workers, and that the other craft labor, carpenters, and so forth, had been A. F. of L. people. He said that in the future, that is, after May, 1950, all the employees on this work in Kentucky, carpenters and everybody else, would have to be members of the United Construction Workers.

He made a talk to me about the advantages of the United Construction Worker arrangement and tried to sell me on the idea that it was a much more advantageous plan than the A. F. of L. setup.

I told him that we just couldn't do that, that I was sorry, and that is about all there was to it.

(Document exhibited to Mr. Mullen.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. At any time during any of your interviews page 417 } with David Hunter did he deny responsibility for what had been done by Hart?

A. Oh, no. He said that Mr. Hart had done it pursuant to his orders and that that was their policy, and he would do it again if he had to.

Mr. Mullen: No objection.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, at my request have you made up a tabulated statement of the damages that you claim Laburnam sustained by being run off the work under construction, without reference to future work?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that the statement that you made up?

A. This doesn't undertake to set out any damages resulting from the loss of the business connections.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Q. No. I am just talking about the jobs that were under way at the time you were run out.

A. That is right.

Mr. Robertson: I might explain, as I have to Mr. Mullen, I tore off the bottom part because it had some stuff there that was perfectly obviously inadmissible.

I offer the statement in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 32.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 32 and received in evidence.)

page 418 } Mr. Robertson: Maybe I can read it to the jury, and it will save time.

The Court: I believe it would.

Mr. Robertson: Statement of Damages:

Damage from loss of fee on contract for construction of 25 dwellings: $534.19.

Damage from loss of fee on work in connection with construction of schoolhouse: $319.67.

Damage from loss of fee in connection with work for installation of asbestos shingles on said 25 dwellings: $250.00.

Damage from loss of fee in connection with work for installation of concrete foundations for coal preparation plant for No. 2 Mine (now called No. 3 Mine): $1,250.00.

Damage from loss of fee on other additional work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, amounting to approximately $542,500.00 which Pond Creek Pechontas Company had agreed to have Laburnum Construction Corporation handle on a basis of cost-plus a fee of five per cent: $27,125.00.

Total: $29,478.86.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, we object to this because it is speculative, it is not under any existing contract which has been shown here, and it is improper to be put in for that purpose.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I understand that that same question has been raised before, and the Court has ruled that it is admissible. I might state in addition to this that all of these items here are supported either by the testimony of Salvati, which is here in deposition form and I expect to read when Mr. Bryan's testimony is concluded, and in the form of actual—I don't know whether that applies to this or not. It is supported by what Mr. Bryan has testified and will now testify and also by the deposition of Mr. Salvati, in which he says that he had agreed to award them this work. Here is the statement (handing to the Court). Mr. Mullen has written in there "Plaintiff claims." Of course they deny that that is what it comes to.

Mr. Mullen: I think it is one of the principal questions in the case, Your Honor, the question of speculative damages, whether they are to be permitted to put in evidence of speculative damages where there is no contract shown and work has not been done and might never have been done.

Mr. Robertson: That is the same question that has been argued in Chambers.

page 420 } The Court: The Court will admit this exhibit for what it is worth, and it is still a question for the jury.

Mr. Mullen: We reserve an exception.

Your Honor means it will be a question for the jury under the instructions of Your Honor when the time comes for Your Honor to give the instructions on what the law is.

The Court: The Court will instruct the jury what the law is at the proper time.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, at my request did you prepare an itemized statement of the work which Mr. Salvati testified and stated that he would have given the Laburnum Construction Corporation but for the fact that it was run out of the field?

A. This is a statement of the additional work which Mr. Salvati agreed Laburnum Construction Corporation would handle, which I testified amounted to approximately $600,000. It actually totals $617,500. This is a breakdown of it.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I offer in evidence the statement which is now entitled "Statement of Additional Work in Breathitt County, Kentucky which Plaintiff claims Mr. Salvati agreed Laburnum Construction Corporation would handle on the basis of cost plus 5 per cent," and ask that this statement be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 33.

page 421 } (The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 33 and received in evidence.)

A. Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: Gentlemen, the Court will recess for five minutes.

(Brief recess.)

Mr. Robertson: If the Court please, I will read to the jury Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 33, which is the statement of additional work which Plaintiff contends was promised by Mr. Salvati.

Machine Shop, $60,000; Lamp House, Supt. Office and Oil House, $12,000; Warehouse Building, $25,000; 200 houses, $300,000; 10 supervisors' Houses, $60,000; one Large Store, $75,000; one Service Store, $15,000; Heating Plant for Tipple at Mine No. 1, $23,000; Tipple Shop, $3,000; Foundations for Tipple at Mine No. 2 (now called Mine No. 3), $25,000; Sand House, $7,000; Water System, $12,500. For a total of $617,500.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, we object to the introduction of evidence as to other contracts other than those which are the subject of this suit, as set up in this suit, before and after.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I think that is the question the Court ruled on a few moments ago and has been ruling on repeatedly through the trial here. It is page 422 } covered in the trial brief, that these contracts that were—I think all of these are either the contracts from which we were run off or contracts executed before then, and the purpose is to show the value of the business connection and the stability of our relationship with these companies.

The Court: May I see that.

(Document handed to the Court.)

Mr. Robertson: It is already in evidence. I want to support it now introducing the contracts that have not already been introduced.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: If Your Honor please, the plaintiff introduced this morning—and the admissibility has not been determined yet—the Laburnum Construction Corporation, Richmond, Virginia, construction record, and the majority of the work contained on that list isn't contained in this construction record. I think they should be bound by what they introduced first.

Mr. Robertson: I think the gentleman is mistaken on that, Your Honor.

The Court: What is your understanding of it?

Mr. Robertson: My understanding is that it is included in there. We can ask Mr. Bryan right now.

The Court: Is this work included in that statement, Mr. Bryan?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Only a part of it, Your Honor.

The Witness: Yes, it is, Your Honor.

page 423 } Mr. Robertson: There may be some little items there, as Mr. Bryan said, some small items were left out of that book.

The Witness: It is included.

The Court: I will allow the admission of this exhibit for what it is worth.

Mr. Mullen: We understood your ruling this morning, but this is coming up anew. I think it is proper to note an exception.

The Court: Your exception is noted.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, at my request have you prepared an itemized statement of the various contracts that Laburnum had with Island Creek and its associated and affiliated companies including the contracts that it was run off of, according to your contention?

A. This is a statement showing contracts which Laburnum had with Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Island Creek Coal Company and various associated companies and further showing the job profit or loss of Laburnum on each contract. The statement is dated January 9, 1951. It sets out all contracts and work which we have ever had with those companies, including the ones that we were run off of.

Q. Have you got a copy of that before you?

Mr. Robertson: I offer the statement in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 34.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 34 and received in evidence.)

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Mullen: Have you a copy of that that we could have, Mr. Robertson?

Mr. Robertson: Do you have some more copies of that, Mr. Bryan?

The Witness: I can give you one, Mr. Mullen.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. The first item there is a contract dated September 6, 1947, for 50 prefabricated dwellings, Delbarton, West Virginia, amount $95,631, showing a profit of $10,696.05.

(Document shown to Defendants' counsel.)

Mr. Mullen: The Court has already ruled on this.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I hand you what appears to be an executed copy of the contract I have mentioned and ask you if that is an executed copy of that contract.

A. Yes, this is an executed copy of the contract. The contract amount which you just read out was the contract amount including extra work added to the amount named in the contract.

Q. What profit did you make on that contract?
page 425 } A. $10,969.05.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the copy of the contract in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 35.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 35 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. The next item on there is marked June 6, 1948, Brookside and Valley View Stores, Delbarton and Holden, West Virginia, $66,486.05, showing a loss of $2,617.90.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I hand you what purports to be an executed copy of that contract and ask you if it is an executed copy of that contract.

A. Yes. The contract date, however, is June 29, 1948, instead of June 6.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Q. I may have read it wrong.

A. I think you did.

Mr. Robertson: I offer that contract in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 36.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 36 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Did that contract show a profit or a loss?

A. According to the books, the contract showed a loss.

Q. How much?

page 426 } A. $2,617.90.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, we don't think that this letter which it is proposed to introduce is material or relevant, and we object to it for that reason.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, we are introducing this letter at this time because it comes in here in chronological sequence. Mr. Bryan has testified that he was asked to take over the various building activities there in Kentucky for these companies and this is a letter which we think supports his testimony along that line.

(Letter shown to the Court.)

The Court: The Court will admit it for what it is worth.

Mr. Mullen: Note an exception, please.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, I hand you what purports to be a letter under the letterhead of Island Creek Coal Company dated September 3, 1948, from C. V. White, real estate agent, to Laburnum Construction Corporation, and ask you if you received that letter.

A. Yes, sir; I received it. White Real Estate Agency.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the letter in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 37.

page 427 } (The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 37 and received in evidence.)

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: I think I had better read this one, Your Honor.

"Island Creek Coal Company, Huntington, West Virginia, September 3, 1948.

"Laburnum Construction Corporation, 918 East Main Street, Richmond, Virginia.

"Attention: Mr. A. Hamilton Bryan.

"Gentlemen:

Re: Building Program

"Mr. Christie, Mr. Beattie, Mr. Saxe, Mr. Flint, and the writer discussed proposed Bartley Store, to replace one that burned recently. Mr. Beattie made a rough estimate of the cost, which I understand he will check and we will be advised within a few days. I am unable to give you the floor plan of this building at this time; but Mr. Flint expects to have it ready within a few days and we will forward it to you.

"In connection with our building program, about which we have had considerable correspondence, I would like to have you keep in mind the priority for the completion of these buildings, which is as follows:

"1. Bartley Store (mentioned above).

"2. No. 15 Store. Floor plan for this building page 428 } was furnished Mr. Beattie and we request that you prepare plans and specifications and forward to Mr. Saxe, with copy to me, as soon as possible.

"3. Club Lunch Room.

"4. Beauty Shop.

"No. 5. Appliance Warehouse.

"I will advise you later on the matter of Churches and Theaters. We are also drawing a floor plan for a Community House which will be approximately 64' wide and 100' in length, with a basket-ball court, bowling alley, and other recreational facilities. All of the above buildings will be at Holden or Pigeon Creek with the exception of Bartley Store.

"As pointed out above, Bartley Store and No. 15 Store have first priority, and we would like to have them completed before the first of the year. As soon as agreement can be reached on the above, we would like for you to be ready to put additional crews on these projects.

"I am suggesting that you send the plans, pending final approval, to Mr. Saxe in order that time may be saved.

"Very truly yours, C. V. White, Real Estate Agent."

The Court: Mr. Robertson, if you have something you can finish in five minutes, all right, but I have promised to adjourn at 4:30 because one of the jurors wish to go to see a doctor.

Mr. Robertson: I can get rid of a great deal right now. The question has been raised about these interrogatories and answers to them, that you couldn't say anything about any of them unless—

The Court: We won't go into that. I mean in the courtroom.

Mr. Robertson: Yes, sir. We offer all the answers by all three defendants to all interrogatories that have been filed against them.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, I understand that if the plaintiff is trying to introduce them as an exhibit, that is improper. He now must read all of them to the jury.

Mr. Robertson: I don't understand any such thing on earth.

Mr. Mullen: That is the Virginia law.

The Court: I want to hear you gentlemen on that. We will adjourn, gentlemen, until ten o'clock in the morning.

(Whereupon, at 4:25 p. m. the jury was excused.)

page 430 } (The following proceedings were had in Chambers:)

The Court: As I understand, you are offering all the Plaintiff's interrogatories addressed to the Defendants.

Mr. Robertson: Yes, sir, and all the answers.

The Court: And the answers.

Mr. Mullen: Of course we can't object to their offering the interrogatories, but if they do, they have to read them, and read all of them. Section 8-322, "Use of such answers," reads:

"Answers to such interrogatories may be used as evidence at the trial of the cause, in the same manner and with the same effect as if obtained upon a bill of discovery."

In Faut v. Miller, 17 Gratt. 187, the Court said at page 210:

"It may be proper to notice here the difference between the effect of an answer to a technical bill of discovery and an answer to other bills in equity, as a matter of evidence for the defendant. We have seen what is its effect in the latter case, and what amount of countervailing evidence is required to overthrow it. In the former case—"

Referring to the technical bill of discovery, which is what our Code says they may be used as,

"* * * where the discovery is sought to be used in an action at law * * *"

Mr. Robertson: I don't want to interrupt you, but I can save you some time here. We withdraw that offer, page 431 } Your Honor, pending our ability to read that case and decide overnight whether we want to do that or not.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, has he got a right to withdraw?

Mr. Robertson: I have a right to withdraw it before it is ruled on. They are trying to put me in a hole there. I have a right to withdraw it before it is ruled on. I do now withdraw the offer.

The Court: The Court is of the opinion that counsel has a right to withdraw before the Court has ruled on it. That is how I am presently advised. Have you gentlemen any different views on that? I will be glad to hear from you if you do have.

Mr. Mullen: I hadn't considered that, Your Honor.

Mr. Allen: I am sure my good friend Mr. Mullen is wrong on that principle of law, and we want to be sure before we take a position. I thought the brief we had covered it, but it doesn't cover it. Before we take a definite position on that we want to be sure, and we can be sure by in the morning.

Mr. Mullen: There is no question under the Virginia law. These two cases settle it, and there is no exception to it.

Mr. Robertson: You contend there is no merit to any point I have made. We must be right somewhere.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

page 432 } Mr. Mullen: I don't say you are not right somewhere. That is one clear case.

Mr. Robertson: If you thought you had put me in the hole and I could jump out before you caught me, I am going to do it.

Mr. Mullen: All right, you can jump out if the Judge says you may jump out, but still you can't use the part of the interrogatories you think is good and leave out the part you think is bad.

Mr. Robertson: I have withdrawn the offer.

Mr. Mullen: The Code is specific that they must all be introduced and read to the jury.

The Court: This is off the record, if you gentlemen don't mind.

(Off the record.)

Mr. Robertson: The offer is withdrawn.

The Court: It is withdrawn.

Mr. Mullen: We are not going to object to his withdrawing it.

The Court: All right, what is the next matter?

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, I made the statement here this morning, and didn't refer to the written rule in Wigmore's Code of Evidence, that we didn't have to have any handwriting expert to prove the handwriting of these people to these applications; that if we could produce a page 433 } man who knows the handwriting of the persons and can say that that is their handwriting, it is just as good as any expert. Mr. Wigmore lays it down. He says in Article 3 of Rule—

The Court: I thought you had agreed to furnish the handwriting expert.

Mr. Robertson: Here is the thing, Your Honor. It could save a little expense. We are standing right to what we said we were willing to do, of course. The rule that Mr. Allen has there says that if anybody has compared the signatures and is satisfied they are correct, he can testify in support of it, and that is satisfactory. Mr. Bryan says he has done that. As I understand it, they are not satisfied with that and want the handwriting expert.

Mr. Allen: We might not be able to get him. We will get him if we can. That man is busy.

Mr. Robertson: We can get him before the trial is over. If you want him we will get him.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Pollard: I understood, Mr. Allen, that the rule was that the person had to know the signature.

Mr. Robertson: I asked if you wanted the expert, and I am entitled to an answer.

Colonel Harris: We want him there, and I thought that was disposed of.

The Court: All right, what is next?

Mr. Robertson: Nothing.

page 434 { The Court: What about these depositions?

Mr. Robertson: I think I am entitled to read it.

The Court: We had passed that by for the time being. The Court made no decision as to the admissibility of these depositions.

Mr. Mullen: It isn't a deposition. It is an account of why they didn't take a deposition.

Mr. Robertson: It has all been explained, and I withdraw that.

The Court: All right, it is withdrawn.

What is this order here on my desk?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: That is the subpoena. It is an affidavit.

The Court: A new affidavit? Have you gentlemen seen this?

Mr. Allen: Yes, but, Judge, my recollection is that the statute expressly provides if they are called for within a reasonable time. I don't think this is a reasonable time after the trial has gotten under way and we are busy day and night.

Mr. Pollard: It is called for under a different section, Mr. Allen. This is asked for under Section 290.

Mr. Robertson: How much trouble is it?

Mr. Allen: We don't mind getting it if we can.

page 435 { The Court: I will give you a reasonable time to furnish them, if that is what you are asking for.

Mr. Robertson: I don't think I have read it, Judge.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: I saw you reading it just before lunch.

Mr. Robertson: You put one in every few minutes, and I am not sure I have read the last one.

Mr. Allen: He just put it in his pocket.

The Court: I will read it aloud. Do you want this on the record or not?

Mr. Mullen: I don't think so, no.

Mr. Allen: No.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

(Off the record.)

Mr. Robertson: We would like to have overnight on that. I don't know whether he is entitled to it or not.

The Court: All right, I will give you overnight on this. This will be the only matter we have to take up in the morning, will it not?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

The Court: Will you gentlemen meet me here at a quarter to 10, and we will discuss this matter further.

Mr. Mullen: You mean the affidavit.

The Court: The affidavit and the order for subpoena duces tecum. All right, gentlemen, thank you very much.

PROCEEDINGS.

(The following proceedings were had in Chambers:)

The Court: I believe, gentlemen, that we were to meet this morning to discuss further this order requiring Mr. Bryan to furnish certain documents.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, we have looked up the law last night, and we are going to discuss it here in a moment. Coming right down to the practical phase of this matter, these gentlemen are entitled to any data we have got showing the profits or losses on the work in Breathitt County, Kentucky involved in these cases, these particular jobs, or any jobs involved in this case. I ought to broaden that, I think, to anything we have put in this case about jobs we have performed. That would be it, jobs that we have performed so far as they are involved in this case. They have no right to go out side of that. What we did at Hopewell or Chicago or Cleveland or anywhere outside of the work involved in this case has nothing to do with it. I assume that these tax returns are correct and honest returns. I can't think that they would be stupid enough not have them correct and honest, but the proper way to get it, if they want it, we will do any reasonable amount of work through the company accountant to make that stuff available to them.

The audits and final returns were made by the page 438 } company auditors in collaboration with Leach, Calkins & Scott. If they want to bring those accountants in we have nothing to cover up and hide, but if they bring them in we want them to pay their charges and not us. With that general statement, I am going to ask these gentlemen, and I suggest Mr. Moore lead off on the law there.

Mr. Moore: Taking up the law, the general idea seems to be that these tax returns are confidential matters between the party submitting the tax returns and the government. The general rule they lay down is that these returns can be used in litigation only when the government is a party. I would like to quote one part from a recent Treasury decision No. 4945 where it is stated: "Neither the original nor a copy of the return desired for use in litigation in court will be furnished if the United States Government is not interested in the result, but this provision is not a limitation on the use of copies of returns by the persons entitled thereto."

In the case of John O'Connell v. Ugelstadt, the facts are somewhat similar to what we are presented with here, and the court stated: "This is a personal injury action in which the plaintiff alleges that the injuries received have permanently and partially incapacitated him. The defendant moves for the production and inspection of the plaintiff's income tax returns for the years 1945, '46, '47, and '48."

page 439 } The ruling went on to say: "The Internal Revenue Code and the regulations issued thereunder provide that tax returns shall be confidential and disclosed only upon application of the plaintiff and his attorneys in fact. No such provision is made for the production of such returns upon order of a federal court."

Then it goes on to say that such a ruling is in accord with the previous holdings on documents which have been declared confidential of the federal departments are not open to discovery under rule 34 of the Federal Rules."

Then the interesting part is the final sentence, in which they state: "Such a ruling will have no serious consequences as it is information desired to be obtained by intelligent use of other discovery procedure," which we believe in the present case is a long the lines argued by Mr. Robertson.

The general theory behind all that seems to be that when you call for a man's entire tax return you get a lot of items that are irrelevant to the actual subject matter of the trial, and we don't believe that we should have to furnish that in the present case. They can check the audits and the work performed in the present case and avoid the necessity of having the income tax returns.

Mr. Bryan: May I say something about that?
page 440 } The Court: No, let your attorneys talk.

Mr. Allen: Judge, let me say, if my memory serves me correctly, there is a state statute which declares the policy of the state with reference to state income returns. They are asking for the federal income tax returns, but the policy is the same and the principle back of it is the same. The state statute expressly prohibits these income tax returns made to the state from being exhibited even in a lawsuit. They are required to be locked up in a vault and kept there and can't be brought out or the information divulged except by authority of the state.

I know that is the statute because we had the question arise over in the Federal Court where a man tried to get the state income tax return for certain evidence, and it was shown there that it couldn't be done.

Mr. Mullen: You cannot get the original either from the State or the Federal Government, but you can call for the copies in a man's possession. About two years ago I was forced to do it up here in Law and Equity Court in the case of a client. I made the same objection that you are making right now, and they said, "Of course you can't call on the state to produce them and you can't call on the Federal Government to produce them, but if a man has copies, you can call for them," and we had to do it.

Mr. Allen: But the same policy that prohibits page 441 } the state and Federal Governments from being required to produce them is back of requiring the individual to produce the copies, because it is the same information. The policy of the law is to encourage people to make full, complete, and detailed returns, and if you can make a man produce a copy that is in his possession, you might just as well make the state produce the original. There is not a particle of difference.

In addition to that, as Mr. Moore here so well said, and as Your Honor knows, an income tax return covers a whole lot of things that are not material to the issue in any lawsuit. They are entitled to the information that they asked for, but they are not entitled to a lot of other information that is there on the income tax return. It is wholly irrelevant.

Mr. Mullen: The purpose of prohibiting the Government from making the thing public is to prevent a lot of snoopers and a lot of publicity. The Federal Government can go to the Governor here at any time and get them and use them in tax cases. They have done it in cases I have been in.

Mr. Robertson: I don't think you have to go to that at all. Here is what you come down to here. They are entitled to information about the work that has been injected into this case. The original data, the best evidence of that—suppose we filed a fraudulent income tax return, the best evidence of the profits or losses in those cases is the original records of the company, the accountants, who I imagine have their work sheets, certainly the records of their office are there. I think they are going to find that these things are strictly accurate. I think it is a fishing expedition in the hope of getting something, but that is all right, we are willing go fishing with them. If they want to do that and if they want to call in our accountants and pay for them or call in any other responsible accountant, we will work with any responsible people to divulge anything that is properly the subject of inquiry in this proceeding, but they have no more to do with what happened in Chicago or Cleveland or Alabama or Hopewell or Richmond, excepting those we have brought in.

The Court: As I understand, they are asking for returns on Kentucky and West Virginia. Virginia would include all this.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Judge, they have put into evidence all the work that has been done by Laburnum for a 9-year period. They have put in his gross income. He has testified as to his average gross income.

Mr. Robertson: He testified that those jobs netted those profits on those jobs.

Mr. Mullen: He went beyond that and put in his total income from all sources, $20 million, you say, in ten page 443 } years, and then you itemize year by year. You put that in.

Mr. Robertson: We put in that booklet to show that we had done a gross construction business over that period of time exceeding $20 million, and we might do that and be hopelessly busted.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: If those income tax returns don't show the amount of income that Mr. Bryan has stated or the amount of gross business that he has stated, we are entitled to that information to show that he is puffing this case up, which he has been doing all the way through.

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, the books are the best evidence here. They are entitled to see the books and to have their auditors see them. Furthermore, I would like to say here that there are some factual reasons in connection with this matter that I would like for Mr. Bryan to state as a fact as a witness in connection with the matter.

The Court: Any objection?

Mr. Robertson: I object.

Judge, I suggest this: Mr. Bryan is under oath, and let him make a sworn statement to the Court right now. He asked to be heard. Let him make his statement under oath right now.

Colonel Harris: We object to that on the ground that it is just an argument extended to Mr. Bryan under the guise of testifying.

page 444 } The Witness: I would like to say—

Mr. Robertson: Wait. I think the Court wants all the light we can get. If we put Mr. Bryan under oath and hear from him I think that is one of the best ways to get it.

The Court: He is under oath. You ask him questions. Don't let him make a statement.

The Witness: I would like to make a statement for the record that hasn't anything to do with this right now, if I might.

The Court: I suspect that you should be asked questions, that you should confer with counsel and let him ask questions. Don't volunteer any statement.

The Witness: After this is over I would like to make a statement as to what my position is about these hearings in here.

Colonel Harris: We object to any statements by the witness.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: Counsel can make a statement, but I don't think it is proper for the witness to make a statement.

Colonel Harris: May we have an objection to all these questions?

The Court: Yes, objections and exceptions.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What is your attitude, Mr. Bryan, regarding your willingness or unwillingness to furnish copies of the page 445 } income tax returns that have been asked for in this proceeding?

A. The income tax returns will furnish information about our complete operations everywhere. As I understand it, that information is not material and relevant in this case. The only question to be determined here is whether our job profit from the work in West Virginia and Kentucky for the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company and Island Creek Coal Company and its subsidiaries and affiliates resulted in a total figure of approximately $58,000 as shown on the statement offered in evidence. That statement was compiled by our own auditors and accountants based on data shown in our annual audits prepared by the firm of Leach, Calkins & Scott, for the years 1947, 1948 and 1949. I can have those accountants come here to show in detail exactly how they arrived at that information or I can have one of Mr. Leach's men to come here to support it. If a mistake has been made in compiling the information we will be glad to admit it and correct it. We believe it to be true, and it can be demonstrated to be correct, we think, to the satisfaction of anybody. What happened to us on our net operations is beside the point.

The Court: These gentlemen think it is material because you said you had done $20 million worth of business, and you have not only taken in the work done for Pond Creek and others in Kentucky, but you have included work done elsewhere over a period of ten years.

The Witness: The point of that was to show page 446 } that we had an established business. The profits or losses on that other work are not involved in this case.

The Court: That may be true, but they are entitled to show that you didn't do $20 million worth of business.

Mr. Robertson: I haven't talked to Mr. Bryan about it. I don't see any objection to showing that, but that is still far away from the income tax returns. Suppose you did a gross business of $20 million and then had losses that made you a net deficit over the whole period of years, you would still have done the gross business.

The Court: It is still in evidence that you did $20 million worth of business.

The Witness: If they want evidence that we did $20 million worth of business over a ten-year period we will furnish a statement of our gross sales yearly for the last ten years. I have no objection to that.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, the witness is arguing with you.

The Witness: We don't object to doing that but when it comes to the profit part, we do.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: If they say they have had a $58,000 profit on these jobs, we are entitled to know if they reported that much income.

The Court: Do you have any authority on that, page 447? Mr. Pollard, whether or not the Court can require a party to furnish a copy of his income tax? Frankly, I haven't had to pass on that.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: I only know that it was required in a case that Mr. Mullen had before Judge Miller, wasn't it, in Law and Equity Court?

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, suppose the income tax returns shows that he lost $50,000 down here in Colonel Harris' town of Birmingham, and therefore his over all net profit was only $8,000. What would that have to do with the case here? We are talking about the business here concerned. The profits that we made and would have made--

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: This isn't putting this information in evidence. It is giving us the right to inspect it. After we inspect it, then they can raise the question of whether it is admissible. We certainly have a right to look at it.

Mr. Mullen: From the figures you have furnished us, frankly--

Mr. Robertson: Mr. Mullen hasn't answered the question the Court asked him. What is the authority upon which you base your demand?

The Court: Mr. Pollard answered it.

Mr. Mullen: Mr. Pollard answered it.

page 448? The Court: Mr. Pollard stated that the Law and Equity Court required your client to furnish copies.

Mr. Mullen: My client. I was on the losing end of it.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: And that case went to the Supreme Court of Appeals.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Mullen: Nothing was said about that in the Supreme Court of Appeals when it was taken up. It went up on another question.

Judge, they have furnished us certain figures. We have analyzed them. We think the conclusions they have drawn from those figures and testified to are not correct, and we want means to check them by. They have undertaken to state $20 million gross business and $2 million a year, and then they go on to argue that that is a measure of what these damages should be, and so forth. We have analyzed the figures and don't think it works that way. During the war years there may be a big pile up of business and in the other years, it may drop down. It isn't the average. We are talking about the normal business.

The Court: In other words, you would like to have a breakdown of their contracts showing what amount of work was done in '43, what amount was done in '44, instead of the average over a ten-year period.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We have that, Your Honor.

Mr. Mullen: We say these figures are misleading—page 449 } ing in here, and also it is misleading merely to state the gross amount of work they had. They are basing it on benefit to them, the profit to them that they would lose by reason of these transactions out there, income.
We are entitled to know. They leave that question on the jury. They talk about $20 million and $2 million. The income may be very, very small.

page 450 } The Court: You want to know what the profit is from each job?

Mr. Mullen: I want to know what the net is after they have met their overhead and their taxes.

Mr. Allen: Outside of Kentucky?

Mr. Mullen: I mean everywhere, because you all have put in the gross figures.

Mr. Allen: We only claim profits on the business in Kentucky.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Will you be bound by that?

Mr. Allen: What?

The Witness: Kentucky, West Virginia—

The Court: Let Mr. Mullen finish.

Go ahead, Mr. Mullen.

Mr. Mullen: He testified he would get 5 per cent on these jobs. That isn't 5 per cent net. That is 5 per cent gross.
And that 5 per cent may or may not provide a profit. They have to pay taxes, they have to pay the home office overhead, and so forth. It is a very different thing.

A. Hamilton Bryan,

These figures put in about $20 million gross and $2 million a year are thoroughly misleading.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, here is the proposition: We are entitled to show what our gross business was, and we have shown it, just as Mr. Bryan said here a moment ago. We are entitled to show that we had a job page 451  $\frac{1}{2}$  profit or a job loss of so much on these different items of work.

What we did with it, and whether it was eaten up by a loss somewhere else has nothing to do with this case.

The Court: Gentlemen, I think they are entitled to information concerning the $20 million worth of jobs that they allege they have performed during the last ten years, to show whether or not it was profitable to the company, because $20 million is before the jury, and that is big money. I believe that they are entitled to information and a breakdown on those contracts for their own information for cross examination.

In regard to the tax returns, as presently advised the Court will not require the Plaintiff to furnish his tax returns, but will require any other information they desire.

Mr. Mullen: On the audits?

The Court: On the audits.

Mr. Mullen: They have had a certified public accountant make up an audit each year. We want those audits.

Mr. Robertson: You don't mean we have to furnish a copy of that?

The Court: You have them, do you not?

Mr. Robertson: That is worse than the other, Your Honor. They are not even entitled to our annual audits of the entire corporation.

The Court: If you can get this information, page 452  $\frac{1}{2}$  from the audit. I do not mean the full audit of the corporation, but I am talking about dealing with this \$20 million that you have alleged that you have done. That is before the jury, \$20 million.

Mr. Allen: Give them a breakdown of it?

The Court: Give them a breakdown on those contracts.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: They put in yesterday a statement, and you have it on your desk here—

The Court: I haven't had a chance to look at that, and it hasn't been admitted into evidence. It was passed by.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: That is right. That brings it up through the year December 31, 1949. We want that same information for 1950.

Mr. Robertson: We are perfectly willing to do that.

Mr. Allen: We will furnish the breakdown.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: That isn't a breakdown of the gross business.

They have also testified that they made $58,000 on these jobs in Kentucky and West Virginia. That is the only work the corporation did in those States.

Mr. Robertson: We have no objection to giving them that.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We certainly ought to have the returns as to that information, because we want to page 453  $\frac{1}{2}$  see if they actually reported as much income as they claim to make.

Mr. Robertson: The Court has already ruled on that. We will get the audit.

Mr. Mullen: I think we are entitled to the audits.

Colonel Harris: Aren't we also entitled to the books? We can hire public accountants. We don't have to let them go off and make summaries.

The Court: I think you are entitled to inspect the books in regard to these contracts.

Mr. Allen: That is all right.

Colonel Harris: And have CPA's go over them.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We are also entitled to this information: Part of the alleged profits from the work at Pond Creek and Island Creek has got to be allocated to overhead. We don't know—

Mr. Robertson: They don't know anything about that. He is making wild statements. The auditor has determined that.

The Court: Go ahead, Mr. Pollard.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: It is not all net profit if part of that has to go to pay overhead.

The Court: That is something you can determine from the figures and the books which you will see.

page 454  $\frac{1}{2}$  Mr. Mullen: We will examine the books for those purposes, and see the whole thing.

The Court: That is true.

Mr. Mullen: And from that, we will get their net income from everything.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: To allocate, to make the proper allocation.

The Court: The books will show how they arrived at this profit; and if your auditors, after inspecting the books, have a different idea of the situation, then, of course, they would interpret it as they saw fit. It would be a question then for the jury.

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, I think I might say this for the information of all of us: As I understand the law concerning voluminous books and that sort of thing, their auditor or our auditor can make summaries of the books and come in court and testify to them. They can get an auditor and he can go there and make up a summary and give us a copy, and testify to it. That is my understanding of the law.

Mr. Mullen: Now you are talking about a very different thing from what you were talking about the other day, about summarizing papers. The rule is that prolonged accounts, and things like that, can be summarized by a CPA.

Mr. Allen: I admit that, but I say it is not page 455 } confined to books, but that is neither here nor there.

Mr. Robertson: Let's talk about this one.

Mr. Allen: We are talking about this one now.

The Court: When can you gentlemen make those books available?

The Witness: Your Honor, I would like to have it understood that any inspection of the books will be done in the presence of our representatives, and they will not be turned over to them. We will prepare for them a detailed statement showing our gross sales on each job in the last ten years. We will show where the information came from so it can be checked. We will also show not only the gross sales on the work for these companies in West Virginia and Kentucky, each job, but what the costs were and what the net job operating profit was, in order to support the statement we put in. That is what they are after.

When it comes to overhead expenses and net profit from operations, and so forth, we think that goes beyond the scope of their examination. We did put in this statement to support the fact that we had an established business, showing that there was $20 million of business. That is not a complete statement. Actually, it amounts to more than $20 million. They want to verify that, and that will be verified and shown.

We also said that we had a job profit from this page 456 } work in West Virginia and Kentucky. Regardless of what happened on our operations as a whole, if we hadn't had this job profit on the work in West Virginia and Kentucky, we would have been $58,000 worse off than we are today. That is the material point. That is what they want us to establish, to prove.

That, we are prepared to prove. If we have made a mistake in compilation of figures, it will be corrected. I don't think that we have.

Mr. Allen: When can you make the books available to them; say, Saturday and Sunday?

The Court: When would you gentlemen like to have the books?

Colonel Harris: Judge, we will get in touch with our auditors when we get through court this afternoon, if possible, and find out from them how much time, and when; but we don't think that our auditors should be handicapped by having their auditor or anybody else their interfering or overhearing any conversation.

Mr. Robertson: Not interfering; just watching.

The Witness: The books will be made available at our office. We are not going to turn the books over to them.

Colonel Harris: The books will be made available wherever Your Honor says.

The Court: That is true. The Court wants to page 457  $\frac{1}{2}$  be reasonable.

The Witness: It is a big job.

The Court: We have to be reasonable about all things.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Judge, this is a handicap. We asked for this information last summer, and they objected to it; and Your Honor ruled that they didn't have to give it. It is going to take some time to make an analysis, and we think we asked for it in time.

Mr. Robertson: So what?

The Court: If the analysis isn't complete, the Court would give you an opportunity to put Mr. Bryan back on the stand at a later date to pursue this line of cross examination.

The Witness: I will call our people down there right now and ask them to start compiling it.

The Court: I think it would be reasonable to ask your auditors to review the books in his office. I think that is a reasonable request.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: All right, sir.

Is it our understanding that they can see any books they want?

The Court: They can see any books they want, but not the tax returns.

Mr. Robertson: Any books they want relating—

A. Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: Relating to the $20 million.
 page 458 { Mr. Mullen: The books of account.

The Witness: Not all portions of the books, but the parts that show how the $20 million came about.

The Court: They are entitled, in my judgment, to determine whether or not on this $20 million worth of business there was a profit or loss, because before this jury there is the figure of $20 million, big money, and I don't think they should be permitted to speculate how much profit is in that $20 million. Some might say, "He made $250,000 over there." Some might say, "He made $100,000." I think they are entitled to know all the facts concerning that figure.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: I understand Your Honor's ruling is that we cannot have the tax returns?

The Court: As presently advised, that is my ruling.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We except to that ruling, because we think that if the tax returns show a different figure from what Mr. Bryan has testified to, the jury is entitled to know that he reported something different from what he testified to.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Robertson: The Plaintiff excepts to the ruling of the Court requiring the Plaintiff to show its overall net profit or loss upon the complete operation, upon the ground that it is irrelevant in this case. The Plaintiff readily page 459 { admits that the defendants are entitled to a breakdown of the $20 million gross business, and are entitled to a breakdown showing the job profit or loss on all work done by the Plaintiff for Island Creek Coal Company, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, and their associated and affiliated companies. The Plaintiff denies that they have any legal right to extend the scope of the inquiry beyond those matters.

Mr. Allen: Plaintiff excepts upon another ground, namely, that the information is not timely demanded. We are now during the fourth day of the trial. Mr. Bryan's presence is necessary at every moment of the trial. We are trying the case from 10:00 to 5:00 every day, and we haven't the time to get the necessary information or the time to have available men present when the information is being gotten by Defendants' auditors from the books.

Mr. Mullen: In answer to Mr. Allen's statement, counsel for the Defendants states that the necessity for these figures was brought about by evidence given by the Plaintiff on the stand, in addition to the fact that they were asked for last summer; but the immediate necessity was brought about by the testimony of the Plaintiff. We did not choose the time.

Mr. Allen: With further reference to the timely motion, we think this information involves something like 200 jobs which have nothing to do with the jobs now under page 460 } investigation.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, do I understand that you have ordered Plaintiff to furnish a similar statement for the year 1950?

The Court: Yes. You have agreed to do that, as I understand, as contained in Plaintiff's Exhibit 22. This is the exhibit you are referring to?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Yes.

The Court: You want it brought up to date through 1950?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Yes, sir.

The Court: As I understand, you gentlemen have agreed to furnish that information.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We still object to the introduction of Exhibit 22.

The Court: Do you all wish to be heard further on this? We passed it by, to save time, yesterday.

Mr. Robertson: They can't except to it and call for it at the same time. They have to make up their minds.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: If it is introduced, we are entitled to the full information.

Mr. Mullen: It was introduced enough by questions to the Plaintiff to cover what we are asking for.

Mr. Allen: This hasn't been filed in evidence.

The Court: It has not been admitted in evidence. page 461 } dence. It has been marked.

Mr. Allen: We withdraw our motion to file it in evidence, then.

The Court: He withdraws the motion to file it in evidence.

Mr. Mullen: I have it right here in the questions. I looked it up just now.

The Court: There is a statement in evidence showing that you did $20 million worth of business.

Mr. Allen: Are you objecting to the admission in evidence of this construction record, May, 1942, to December, 1949?

Mr. Mullen: Have we a copy of it?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Yes.

The Court: Yes, I think Mr. Robertson gave you a copy of it.

Mr. Mullen: I don't know that I have seen it.

The Court: He gave it to Mr. Pollard.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Allen: I just want to know if you are objecting to it. If you are objecting to it, we certainly have a right to withdraw it. If you are not objecting to it, well and good, let it stay.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: The damage was done, Your Honor, as far as we are concerned, when the Plaintiff was allowed to testify that he had done $20 million worth of page 462 } business over a period of ten years.

Mr. Allen: My simple question is: Are you still objecting to the introduction of this in evidence?

(Defendants' counsel conferring.)

Mr. Mullen: Let us confer a few minutes.

The Court: Very well, we will recess for a few minutes while all counsel confer.

(Short recess.)

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, we withdraw any objection to the introduction of it.

The Court: All right. The Court will admit it.

Mr. Allen: Describe it, so there isn't any question.

Mr. Moore: It is already described as Exhibit 22.

The Court: The Court will admit in evidence Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 22.

(The document previously marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 22 was received in evidence.)

Mr. Allen: We understand there is no objection to the admission of this exhibit in evidence.

page 463 } (The following proceedings were had in open court:)

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, and gentlemen of the jury, we were diverted from discussion of Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 34 yesterday before we finished going through with it.

The Court: Gentlemen, we will poll the jury to see if they are all present. Let the clerk call the roll.

(Roll call of the jury.)

The Court: Now, Mr. Robertson, you may proceed.

Whereupon,

ALEXANDER HAMILTON BRYAN

the witness on the stand at time of recess, resumed the stand and testified as follows:

Mr. Robertson: I refer now to Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 34, to the Contract dated June 29, 1948, for the construction of Brookside and Valley View stores, Delbarton, West Virginia, at $66,486.05, which showed a loss of $2,617.90.

Still referring to Exhibit No. 34, the next item is dated September 19, 1948, for the construction of an appliance warehouse at Holden, West Virginia, at $40,895.89, which showed a job profit of $6,814.24.

(Document shown to Defendants' counsel.)

Mr. Mullen: Of course, Your Honor, we are simply seeing them, not admitted.

page 464 } By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I hand you what purports to be a signed copy of the contract I have last mentioned and ask you if that is an executed copy of that contract.

A. Yes. The contract amount is $36,000. The actual amount of work after extras and so forth was $40,845.85.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the contract in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 38.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 38 and received in evidence.)

Mr. Robertson: The next Item on Exhibit 34 is dated October 21, 1948, for store No. 15, Holden, West Virginia. The amount of the job is $34,313.31, showing a job profit of $7,450.32.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I hand you what appears to be an executed copy of the contract I have first mentioned and ask you if that is an executed copy of that contract?

A. Yes, that is an executed copy of the contract.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the contract in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 39.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 39 and received in evidence.)

Mr. Robertson: The next item on Exhibit 34, page 465 } dated December 9, 1948 is for a colored lunch room at Holden, West Virginia. The amount of the job being $9,550.39, showing a job profit of $795.56.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I hand you what appears to be an executed copy of the contract I have last mentioned and ask you if that is an executed copy of that contract.

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the contract in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 40.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 40 and received in evidence.)

Mr. Robertson: The next item on Exhibit 34 is a contract dated December 13, 1948, for a hearing plant at Tipple No. 25, Dellarton, West Virginia, at $21,236.05, which showed a net profit of $406.36.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I hand you what appears to be an executed copy of an order for that job and ask you if that is an executed copy upon which the job I have last mentioned was done.

A. That is right.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the order in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 41.

page 466 } (The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 41 and received in evidence.)

Mr. Robertson: The next contract is dated June 4, 1949, for an addition to the rear of store No. 28 at Holden, West Virginia, at $4,021.06, showing a job profit of $909.78, and on the exhibit by the date is marked "oral".

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Was that work done under oral agreement or written agreement?

A. That was done under an oral agreement. After the work was performed we submitted a bill and it was paid.

Mr. Robertson: The next item on Exhibit 34 is dated October 28, 1948, for the coal preparation plant in Breathitt County, Kentucky, at $265,370.09, showing a job profit of $10,232.48.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Is that the contract of October 28 which already has been introduced in evidence?

A. That is right.

Q. Is that the contract upon which the ceiling fee of $12,000 was stipulated?

A. That is correct.

Q. How does Exhibit 34 show a job profit of only $10,232.48?

A. We had some direct job expenses that were page 467 } not reimbursable. They were mostly travelling expenses in connection with that work. Then there were some other items, I think, in connection with the commissary and the barracks.

Mr. Robertson: The next item on Exhibit 34 is a contract dated December 15, 1948, for 25 dwellings, Breathitt County, Kentucky, $41,282.05, showing a job profit of $1,946.99.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Is that the contract of December 15, 1948, for the 25 dwellings that already has been put in evidence?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Robertson: The next item on there is a contract dated December 8, 1948, for telephone line, Breathitt County, Kentucky, at $4,591. 59, which shows a job profit of $218.68.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Is that the telephone line that you have testified about for which the contract is already put in?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Robertson: The next job date is marked July, 1949, for a school house, Breathitt County, Kentucky. The amount of work on it is $637.16, showing a job profit of $30.33, and by the side of it is marked "oral".

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Is that the agreement or contract for the construction of the school house about which you have already testified?

A. That is the part of the work that Mr. Salvati page 468 } agreed, additional work, that we would do on a cost plus 5 per cent basis.

Mr. Robertson: The next job number on Exhibit 34 is dated June 28, 1949, for a job at Bartley Boiler Plant, Bartley, West Virginia, at $67,158.20, showing a job profit of $21,787.37.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I hand you what appears to be an executed copy of the agreement I have last mentioned and ask you if that is an executed copy of that agreement?

A. Yes, this is an executed copy of the agreement, but there was a supplemental agreement which followed it.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the agreement in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 42.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 42 and received in evidence.)

Mr. Robertson: All the items about which you have testified on Exhibit 34, as appears from the exhibit, show an aggregate construction value of $651,192.84, and a total job profit of $58,714.26.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. A moment ago you stated that there was an agreement which supplemented the agreement of June 28, page 469 } 1949, for the Bartley Boiler Plant at Bartley, West Virginia, and I hand you what appears to be an executed copy of an agreement and ask you if that is the supplementary agreement to which you referred.

A. This supplementary agreement is dated July 5, 1949, and it supplements the first agreement dated June 28, 1949, which you have already offered in evidence.

Mr. Robertson: I offer this supplemental agreement in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 43.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 43 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, I call your attention to the fact that the agreement of June 28, 1949, and also the supplemental agreement referred to work at the Bartley Boiler Plant, Bartley, West Virginia. Was that work which you were completing in that agreement and this supplemental agreement after you were run off the job in Breathitt County, Kentucky?

A. There is a typographical error in this statement. It is really the Bartley Boiler Plant, not Bartlet. The work was awarded to us under the agreement dated June 28, the agreement dated in June, 1949, and then the supplemental agreement in July, 1949. We did not actually complete that work until December 31, approximately the end of the year 1949.

Q. But you were not run off that work as you page 470 } were from the work in Breathitt County?

A. No.

Q. Mr. Bryan, at my request is Mr. Cassidy, the Richmond handwriting expert, now making an examination to ascertain whether or not the application blanks mentioned here yesterday are true or untrue so far as the signatures are concerned?

A. At the present time he is comparing the signatures on the application blanks with signatures which we have and which we know to be genuine.

Q. Will he make himself available as a witness at a later stage of the trial?

A. He said he would be ready by tomorrow.

Q. At my request have you prepared a list of the laborers who were employed at the job site in Breathitt County, Kentucky, on July 26, 1949?

A. Yes, sir; as shown on the payroll.

Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Does that show them by name?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you read the names into the record from the payroll?

A. Labor foremen?

Q. Everybody.

Q. Does it also show the other laborers who were working there that day and other people who were working there that day?

A. Yes, I can give the names of everybody.

Q. Will you just give the names of everybody and what their job was?

A. Superintendent Cecil M. Delinger.

Chief Clerk Maynard C. Ragan.

Iron Workers: John W. McClellan, Carl B. Rice.

That was all for July 26.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. How many is the sum total of that if it is shown there, where you can get it by glancing at it?

A. I have it in another place, I think. 64 people.

Q. Were any of those working up at the top of the mountain at the head house and up around there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As I understand, none of those up on top page 473  $\frac{1}{2}$  of the mountain were bothered.

A. No, they continued working.

Q. They were all delivering coal. How many were working, including the tippie, the residences and the school house, everything except up on top of the mountain?

A. Thirteen people were working on top of the mountain: 8 carpenters, 1 carpenter foreman, a hoist operator, and 3 laborers.

Q. That would be how many down below?

A. On the tippie there were 41 people working: 2 iron workers, one millwright foreman, one millwright, one carpenter foreman, one carpenter layout man, 18 carpenters, one labor foreman, 12 laborers, and 4 electricians.

Q. How many were working at the school house?

A. Seven people: 1 carpenter foreman and 6 carpenters.

Q. How many were working at the 25 residences?

A. A painter and apprentice.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I hand you now what appears to be the Laburnum Construction Corporation payroll for the week ending July 31, 1949, in four sheets, and I will ask you if that is a copy of a part of the payroll from which you testified a moment ago.

A. This is a copy of our payroll for the week ended July 31, 1949, for our jobs 322, 323, 326, and 340, all page 474  $\frac{1}{2}$  in Breathitt County, Kentucky.

Q. Is this a copy of what you testified from, of the original payroll?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. The original was prepared on a stencil which we still have, and this was run off the same stencil.

Mr. Robertson: I offer these four sheets in evidence collectively and ask that they be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 44.

(The documents referred to were marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 44 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I hand you now what appears to be the payroll for the week ended July 31, 1949, in two sheets for the Virginia Mechanical Corporation and ask you if that is a copy of one of the payrolls from which you testified.

A. Yes. The Virginia Mechanical Corporation is a wholly owned subsidiary of Laburnum, and electricians appeared on the payroll of the Virginia Mechanical Corporation. This is the payroll for the week ended July 31, 1949, on the work in Breathitt County, Kentucky.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the two sheets in evidence collectively and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 45.

Q. Mr. Bryan, after you were run off the work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, and after your interview with Mr. David Hunter at Pikeville, about which you have testified, on August 5, 1945, did you continue for a time to submit bids for work to Island Creek Coal Company and Pond Creek Pocahontas Company and their associated and affiliated companies?

A. Yes, we were invited to submit proposals for a while.

Q. Mr. Bryan, I hand you a carbon copy of a letter dated September 5, 1949, from A. Hamilton Bryan, President, to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Holden, West Virginia, and ask you if that is a proposal by Laburnum Construction Corporation to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company to furnish labor and materials for the installation of a heating plant in connection with the coal preparation plant at the No. 1 Kentucky Mine for the lump sum of $25,595?

Colonel Harris: We object to it, if the Court pleases, on the ground it is immaterial and irrelevant and incompetent. He didn't get the contract. He didn't do the work. He didn't make any profit on something that he didn't do.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, that is the same point you have ruled on repeatedly. It is in the trial brief. We are going to show here that he submitted a series of bids, and finally I am going to introduce here a letter from the Pond Creek Pocahontas Coal Company telling him as long as the situation existed, he need not bid any more. In short, they broke up the connection.

The Court: The Court will overrule the objection and admit the paper for what it is worth.

Mr. Mullen: Will you note an exception, Your Honor, and that it continues as to this line of testimony?
page 477 } The Court: All right.

The Witness: This is a part of the work that Mr. Salvati had agreed we would have on the basis of cost plus 5 per cent. After our contract was terminated and we moved away, we were asked to submit a lump sum proposal, and we did it in this letter.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the letter in evidence, and as that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 46.

(The letter referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 46 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What was the lump sum estimate in that letter?

A. We were to prepare drawings and specifications for the heating plant and submit them to Pond Creek for approval. Based on our idea of what would be required as shown on the plans and specifications, we said we would do it for $25,595.

Q. At cost-plus, or what?

A. No, that would be a fixed price.

(Document exhibited to Defendants' counsel.)

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, I hand you a carbon copy of a letter dated September 7, 1949, unsigned but typed: "Sincerely yours, President," addressed to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company at Holden, West Virginia, and ask you what that is?

A. This was a letter submitting a proposal for page 478  $\frac{1}{2}$  the construction of one cement block store building and two 6-room frame dwellings, and 12 five-room frame dwellings, at Evanston, Kentucky. They were a part of the buildings that Mr. Salvati agreed we would do on the basis of cost plus 5 per cent.

After we moved away and our other contract had been terminated, they asked us to submit a lump sum proposal.

Q. What was the lump sum of that proposal?

A. The lump sum proposal was $205,047. However, it was conditioned in various ways.

Q. Did you get the work?

A. No.

Q. Did you get the work that you mentioned there in Exhibit No. 46 for the heating plant at No. 1 Kentucky Mine in Breathitt County, Kentucky?

A. No.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the letter of September 7, 1949, in evidence, and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 47.

(The letter referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 47 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, I hand you a carbon copy of a letter dated September 29, 1949, typed "Sincerely yours, President," addressed to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Holden, West Virginia, having attached to it a sheet dated September 29, 1949, entitled "Proposed Addition to Store Building, Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Bartley, West Virginia," and ask you what that is?

A. We were asked by Pond Creek Pocahontas Company to submit a proposal to construct an addition to a store at Bartley. There were no drawings and specifications. We had more or less to imagine what we thought they wanted.

We wrote this letter dated September 29, 1949, and made a proposal to perform the work on a cost-plus basis. We also said that we estimated that the work would cost $28,877, and we would perform it for that lump sum amount, provided we had time to fix drawings and specifications so that there couldn't be any misunderstanding as to what the work included.

Q. Was that work awarded to the company?

A. No. We never heard from it.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the two sheets in evidence, and ask that they collectively be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 48.

(The documents referred to were marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 48 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Did the Laburnum Construction Company on November 4, 1949, submit a proposal to Island Creek Coal Company for the construction of a community building near Ragland or Delbarton, West Virginia, for the lump sum of $94,359?

A. Yes. We prepared an estimate for the cost page 480  $\frac{1}{2}$  of that work and gave an oral proposal of \$94,359 on or about November 4, 1949. We were soon advised, after that, that the Island Creek Coal Company decided to change the scope of the work entirely, and that no action would be taken, and that they were going to fix up some plans and send them to us and then we could submit another bid.

This work didn't go ahead on that basis.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, I hand you a carbon copy of a letter typed, "Sincerely yours, President," dated November 23, 1949, to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Holden, West Virginia, and ask you what that is?

A. This is another proposal for the addition to the store at Bartley, West Virginia, $37,308.

Q. Was that a lump sum proposal or cost-plus?

A. Yes, this was a lump sum proposal for the work generally for which we had submitted a prior proposal, but they decided to change it somewhat. This was a large job.

Q. Did you get the work?

A. No.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the letter in evidence, and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 49.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, I am speaking from memory, but my recollection is that during the early part of May, 1950, Island Creek Coal Company or Pond Creek Pocahontas Company invited Laburnum to take over its building program in West Virginia and Kentucky, and that we have introduced that letter in evidence. Is my memory correct?

A. You are correct. The letter was dated September 3, 1948.

Q. I am wrong in my date.

A. The letter related to Island Creek Coal Company's building program in West Virginia for the construction of churches, community houses, stores, beauty shops.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I hand you now a carbon copy of a letter typed, "Sincerely yours, President," dated December 29, 1949, to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Holden, West Virginia, and ask you what that is.

A. We were asked by Pond Creek Pocahontas Company to submit a proposal for the construction of a gas station, a service station, at Bartley. We wrote a letter dated December 29, 1949, offering to do the work for $5,596.

page 482 } Q. Was that a lump sum price?

A. It was lump sum proposal, and then we submitted an alternate proposal to perform the work on a cost-plus basis.

Q. Did you get the work?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the letter in evidence, and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 50.

(The letter referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No.

(Document exhibited to Defendants' counsel.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, I hand you what appears to be a photostat of a letter under the Island Creek Coal Company letterhead, dated May 18, 1950, from R. E. Salvati to you as President of the Laburnum Construction Company, and ask you if you received the original of that letter?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Mullen: Your Honor, we object. That letter was purely a self-serving declaration solicited by the Plaintiff long after this suit was brought. It shows plaintiff what it was for. It was in May, 1950. This suit was brought in December, 1949. This letter is purely a self-serving declaration.

Mr. Robertson: Are you through?

Mr. Mullen: I am through for the time being.
page 483 } Mr. Robertson: It is the same old objection which Your Honor has ruled on time and again. It is a letter from Salvati to Bryan, telling him there is no use to bid any more and not to do it. I offer it to show that these people destroyed this business connection.

Mr. Mullen: I still say, Your Honor, it was after this suit was brought, something that happened subsequent to the suit. It was solicited by the Plaintiff, of Salvati. It plainly shows it was solicited for the purpose of this suit.

Mr. Robertson: This all goes to the weight of it.

The Court: I will overrule the objection and admit it for what it is worth.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception, at this time.

The Witness: Yes, this is the letter.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the letter in evidence, and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 51.

(The letter referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 51 and received in evidence.)

Mr. Robertson: I ask to read this letter to the Jury:

page 484 } Mr. A. Hamilton Bryan, President Laburnum Construction Company
Richmond, Virginia

Dear Mr. Bryan:

I have seriously considered your bidding on the recreation building and church at Rockhouse. Since I talked to you, I find that we have about four or five other reputable and well qualified concerns, which have contracts with the United Mine Workers, that are going to bid. In view of this situation, it seems to me that it would be better that you refrain from bidding because of the facts outlined to me in our conversation Monday evening.

I regret that these circumstances prevail, but I believe it is better to go along with the suggestion which I have outlined.

I was glad to have an opportunity to talk and be with you. With kindest regards.

Sincerely,

R. E. SALVATI."

(Document exhibited to Defendants' counsel.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, I hand you a carbon copy of a letter dated May 23, 1950, signed "A. Hamilton Bryan, President," to Mr. Salvati, and ask you if that is your reply to the letter I have just read?

page 485 } Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, we object to that. That is not a letter from Salvati, as they argued the other. This is a letter written by the Plaintiff after this suit was brought, written to Mr. Salvati. It contains an argument about why he can't bid, and so forth. It certainly is not proper in this suit.

Mr. Robertson: I think it might be well for the Court to read it.

The Court: Let me see the letter, please.

(The Court examining document.)

Mr. Robertson: I withdraw the letter, Your Honor, if they object to it.

The Witness: Your Honor—

The Court: It is withdrawn.

The Witness: Your Honor, may we adjourn court a minute?

The Court: Yes. Court will recess, gentlemen, for five minutes.

(Brief recess.)

page 486 } (The following proceedings were had in chambers.)

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Judge, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 49 is a letter dated November 23, 1949, addressed to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Holden, West Virginia. Mr. Bryan testified he signed it as President of Laburnum Construction Corporation. The last sentence reads: "We thank you for having given us an opportunity to submit this proposal."

That was done on November 23, 1949. This suit was instituted on November 16, 1949. By the Plaintiff's own exhibit, it shows that the business relation was not destroyed at the time the suit was instituted. Therefore, we move that the jury be instructed to disregard any evidence after the date the suit was instituted, because it is shown here that the business relation still existed at the time the suit was brought.

We would like also to move the Court to exclude any evidence in the future that might be offered as to what transpired.

Mr. Robertson: I can't hear you.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Since the date the suit was instituted.

Mr. Robertson: I didn't hear your last statement. Will you speak a little louder?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Would you read that to Mr. Robertson?

page 487 } (The statement referred to was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, since he is taking that tack, I think I will just go ahead and offer the exhibit, because I think it is all admissible. He is trying to get rid of the letter where Salvati told us not to bid any more. We claim that is the culmination of being run off the job; that it destroyed this relationship. Everything he says goes to the exhibit and stand my ground on it.

Mr. Mullen: If the suit was brought in November, that suit has to be based on an existing injury. It can't relate to something that happens after that. Your injury, then, as claimed, was lost on work on this job, not future work, not business connections. You hadn't lost it.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, I am not sure what I want to do on that. Will you give me a few minutes to confer?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: May I turn this exhibit over to the reporter?

The Court: Yes.

(Counsel withdraw for separate conference.)

Mr. Robertson: We think the evidence is admissible as confirming and showing the destruction of the business relationship.

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor, please, the situation is this, as I see it: Without respect to the particular page 488 } form of the testimony, it must be true that we should be able to show anything that happened afterwards that confirms the fact that the business connection is destroyed permanently. On the other hand, if Mr. Bryan and these companies out there had gotten back together and the business had been revived and they were now giving them contracts freely, they certainly would be permitted to show that.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: There wouldn't be any litigation.

Mr. Allen: They would be permitted to show that the business connection had not been destroyed.

The object of evidence like this is to show that Mr. Bryan has been continually trying and doing his best to get that business, and has been unable to do it, even up to this date; that it has destroyed permanently that connection. Anything that shows that, that is in the proper form, is admissible.

Mr. Mullen: You have to go to the date of the suit, the date the suit was instituted. That is the only thing you can bring the suit for; not for something future. At the date the suit was instituted, the connection had not been broken. He has already testified, as shown by his recent testimony, that he has bid and bid and bid. Nobody knows why—we know why some of them weren't accepted. It was because he was the high bidder. But it is something in the future, page 489 } You certainly can't bring a suit today and claim something that happens in the future is the pain for which you are suing.

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, we don't want to argue about things that we don't consider so material. This doesn't mean anything in this case, anyway. We think it is legitimate evidence. We think we are entitled to it. If they object to it seriously, we just withdraw it.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: No, Your Honor. That evidence has been introduced and the Court has ruled on it, and we don't want it withdrawn.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: I thought that was your motion.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: No, sir. Our motion was to tell the jury that any evidence that has come in on the business relationship of the Plaintiff with the Coal Companies after the date the suit was instituted is to be disregarded by them, and not to allow any more testimony on that point.

Mr. Robertson: You either have to strike it out or leave it in. You can't make your decision—

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We want it all stricken, anything he has testified to after the date the suit was instituted.

Mr. Mullen: Strike it out. Striking it out and withdrawing it after you have read it are two very different things.

Mr. Allen: Your Honor, we must not confuse page 490 } the principle here with the one that when you bring a suit for damages, your damages are limited up to the time that the action started unless it is a continuing thing that results in more damages. You can show your damages all along. You can show whether they are permanent or whether they are temporary.

All of this goes to show the nature of the damages suffered, whether they were temporary or permanent.

I merely offered to withdraw it just to save time and get along. If they don't want it withdrawn, then we say let it stay in.

Mr. Mullen: We have stated what we want.

The Court: Do you contend that you are entitled to any damages after the suit was instituted?

Mr. Allen: We are not entitled to any damages that arose out of something that was done after this suit was started. There isn't any question about that. But we are entitled to damages for what was done before the suit was started, and we are entitled to show whether those damages were temporary or permanent.

The object of this testimony is to show the nature of the damages; that they were permanent.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, the damage hadn't occurred when the cause of action was instituted, because a week after the action was instituted, Mr. Bryan writes page 491 } to the Coal Company and says, "We thank you for giving us an opportunity to submit this proposal," which shows that the business relation had not been destroyed.

Mr. Mullen: He was never interfered with in West Virginia where he was making bids.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: He was still working in West Virginia.

The Court: Isn't that a question to argue before the Jury?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Mullen: I think it is a question of law.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: The Jury is not entitled to consider any evidence—

The Court: Couldn't that be taken care of by proper instruction of the Court? It seems to the Court that the situation could be taken care of by proper instruction of the Court and by argument before the Jury.

I will overrule the motion.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We except, Your Honor.
page 492 } Mr. Mullen: Then we are going to object to any further evidence being introduced occurring subsequent to the suit.

Mr. Robertson: I didn't hear that.

Mr. Mullen: We are going to object to the introduction of any further evidence of occurrences subsequent to the bringing of the suit.

Mr. Robertson: Suppose you wait until we offer it. You might change your mind. You might find something helpful to you.

The Court: Do you gentlemen intend to offer any other evidence along this line?

Mr. Robertson: I don't think so, Your Honor, but I am not sure. I don't think so.

The Court: All right. Did you note your exception?

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Yes, sir.

page 493 } (The following proceedings were had in open court:)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, you have previously testified that after your men were run off the job on July 26, and after your efforts to get them to go back to work failed, you instructed your new superintendent, Mr. Veltry, to clean up the job and ship your equipment elsewhere. I think you testified that he did that. At my request have you ascertained from the payrolls how many men he employed to do that and how many days and who they were?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state first who they were?

A. During the week ended August 7, 1949, there were two men, iron workers, John W. McClellan and Carl B. Rice, who worked on August 4 and 5. During the next week, that is, the week ended August 14, 1949, we had the following men employed:

Superintendent, Louis G. Veltry. Chief Clerk, Maynard C. Ragan. Iron Worker Foreman, John W. McClellan, Iron Worker, Carl B. Rice. Carpenters: Harrison Daniels, Clarence Endicott, H. H. Hounshell, and John T. Arnett. All of those men worked from August 8 through August 12.

In addition to that we had the following Laborers: Donald B. Trimble, Hargis H. Howard, Green Conley, George England, and Arnold Sloan. Those men worked every day from August 8 through August 12. We also had Green page 494 } Trusty, Dan Combs, and Burl King. They worked on August 8 and August 9.

Mr. Veltry and Mr. Ragan, of course, were also employed during the prior week. I don't think I named them.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, that completes my examination of Mr. Bryan at this time, with these qualifications: After Mr. Cassidy has completed his examination about the applications that have been referred to here and has testified regarding them, I think it will be necessary to put Mr. Bryan on regarding that phase of the case, and also later on it is going to be necessary to put him back regarding the interrogatories and regarding some photostat evidence which more appropriately comes in at the end of our case-in-chief. I would like to put him back for those purposes later on.

Colonel Harris: If the Court pleases, before the cross examination begins, the Defendants ask the Court to instruct the witness to deliver to us now all the different batches of prepared testimony to which he has been referring for two or three days since he has been on the stand, and we also ask that Defendants' counsel be given sufficient time to read all those batches of prepared testimony.

Mr. Robertson: We welcome that, Your Honor, and they are welcome to it.

The Court: How much time will you need?

Colonel Harris: I haven't seen them. One of them looked like it had about thirty pages. The yellow one looked like it had five or six. Then there are two more batches. page 496 } I don't know how long they are. I haven't seen them.

The Court: Suppose we recess for five or ten minutes, and counsel for Plaintiff will furnish counsel for the Defendants copies of the various papers. Then the Court can determine how much time will be allotted for that purpose.

Colonel Harris: If the Court pleases, we want the exact papers that he has been reading from and referring to as he testified.

The Court: That was understood.

Mr. Robertson: I want this understood, too, Your Honor, that it is our contention that he has a right to look at them, but he hasn't a shadow of legal right for what he is asking now. We welcome the opportunity to give it to them and they may take them and keep them as long as they want them.

The Court: It was understood that you would receive these papers at the end of the examination.

Mr. Mullen: He knows we have a legal right to have them. The statement that we don't have a legal right is improperly made.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: Gentlemen, if they didn't have a legal right to them, I wouldn't let them have them.

Mr. Robertson: He might have availed himself of our courtesy.

The Court: It is a courtesy and it was agreed to. Then there was contention on the part of the Defendants that they had a legal right to it, and I don't know that it became necessary for me to rule on it, since the Plaintiff agreed to furnish them. Anyhow, they will receive the papers. We will recess for five or ten minutes, and then I can tell you when to come back.

All right, gentlemen, you may confer.

(Brief recess.)

page 498 } (The following proceedings were had in Chambers:)

The Court: Mr. Mullen has a statement he would like to make.

Mr. Mullen: I question their right, Your Honor, to put on Mr. Bryan's testimony piecemeal as they propose. I think we are entitled to have his evidence-in-chief put on as a whole so we know how to cross-examine. If we were to cross-examine on what is put in now and they still continue his examination in chief, the second part of it may make unnecessary what we say or may put an entirely different phase on what he said on cross examination. I don't think that they have a right to do that.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, of course the whole matter is completely within the discretion of the Court. Counsel for the Defendants announced yesterday that if we put in any interrogatories and answers, they were going to insist that all of them be read. We have not yet finished our analysis, which we are making anew of those interrogatories and answers, and therefore we haven't determined yet how we are going to meet that situation. We will determine it in due course.

I have already stated about the applications of the laborers. That is a minor phase of it which Mr. Cassidy, I understand, will be ready on tomorrow. We are going to put him on whether he says they are forgeries or whether he says they are genuine. We are going to let everybody know what they are. I don't know what he is going to say. I think he will say they are genuine, but if he says they are false we will put him on anyway.

The other evidence from him, so far as I know, will be what he may have to testify about the interrogatories—I don't mean the contents of them. I mean the way they were made up or something like that, and about the photostats, the way he got the photostats. I have no idea of going back through the merits of the case again. I think the logical place for that to come is at the conclusion of our case in chief. I don't think that this is the proper time for the Court to make a moot ruling that if we offer Mr. Bryan hereafter, the Court is not going to let him testify. I am perfectly willing to abide by our judgment of the Court as to what is the proper ruling when the time comes.

We have finished our case in chief with the exception of the records and those applications so far as I am now advised. Of course there may be some tag ends that I have overlooked that we would want to cover later on. At the moment I don't think of any, but that is customary and the approved practice in a case that covers the scope that this case is covering.

Mr. Allen: Let me say something so you can answer that, too, Colonel, before you start.
page 500 } If Your Honor please, I do not understand that a definite ruling has been made by the Court that if we introduce any of the interrogatories we have to read them all to the jury. I think that is open. While I don't want to argue that now, we are thoroughly prepared to show your Honor that that rule does not apply to interrogatories.

Mr. Robertson: Let me interrupt you just one moment. What we are really trying to do, Judge, we are trying to eliminate as much controversial matter as we can, to lessen the labor of everybody on those.

Mr. Allen: In other words, Your Honor, just to illustrate what Mr. Robertson says, in the interrogatories we asked questions relating to the official organ of the United Mine Workers. Then we asked a question asking them to produce them. They produced a batch of copies of the United Mine Workers Journal that thick (indicating).

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: At your request.

Mr. Allen: Do they mean to contend that we have got to sit here until next Christmas to read everything in the United Mine Workers Journal? We asked them to produce them and when they produce them there are certain things in there we want to read, only, and that is all we expect to read. That applies as it applies to exhibits filed with interrogatories, because interrogatories proper call just for questions and answers.

page 501 } Mr. Robertson: We don't have to argue that now.

Mr. Allen: I know, but I want the Judge to understand that that is the question, and we will be here forever if we have to read everything.

Leaving that for the moment, we have got to call Mr. Bryan back some time or other to testify on photostats of certain of the journals that they said they didn't have. They said they had only certain copies and they would furnish us what they had. What they didn't furnish we want to introduce, perhaps, just a very few photostats from the journal, photostats from the proceedings of the International Convention. It will be absolutely necessary for us to call Mr. Bryan back on those things which don't relate to anything that he has already been examined upon. In other words, we are not going to examine him on anything he has already been examined upon, and then if we put him back on for those limited purposes, they may cross-examine him with reference to the limited examination which we have conducted of him.

As Mr. Robertson has said, the order of testimony and the order of examination of witnesses is entirely within the discretion of the Court, and it is not reversible error. It doesn't make any difference what the Judge does about it. It just simply facilitates the trial, expedites it, and helps us get along, because we want to eliminate all the page 502 } photostats that we can. We want to eliminate everything that we can so as to get along. We have no desire to keep them from reading anything they want that is in the interrogatories or in the journals or in anything else, but we just want to keep the case to a minimum, if possible.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, just to clear up an erroneous impression that I think Mr. Allen might have given, the reason that they have got all those newspapers and all these other documents in the interrogatories is because they didn't comply with the statute which requires them to file an affidavit describing the papers that they wanted. They have gotten all these papers, and the law is if they propound interrogatories to us, we cannot put them in evidence, but if they put them in evidence they have to read everything in them. They must take the good with the bad. I just wanted to clear up that situation.

Colonel Harris: They asked me a question which I want to answer when you get through.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: I am through, sir.

The Court: All right, Colonel Harris.

Colonel Harris: In reply to the argument that this is a moot question that we are arguing, I submit that it is not correct. Counsel for the Plaintiff announced in open Court in the presence and hearing of the jury that they were going to call Mr. Bryan back and stated the purpose for page 503 } which they would call him. If we had kept quiet and had made no objection, then when they did call him back they could come up and say, "You assented to it. The time for you to object was when we made our positive announcement, and on that announcement we didn't finish our examination." So we are compelled to put in these objections now. I don't think they are moot at all. They have announced what they are going to do.

In every lawsuit, if the Court pleases, there is by skilled trial lawyers a jockeying for position, and your Honor knows that in any kind of a contest position has just as much to do with final results as the skill of the players. It does two things: It enables them to use Mr. Bryan to open and Mr. Bryan to close, the witness also being a lawyer. Then it deprives Mr. Mullen and Mr. Pollard and myself of that information that he then gives when we cross-examine him, when we are making preparations as to what we will do with our witnesses. I submit if you were to concede that it is a matter of discretion of the court, it is a discretion that should be exercised in the customary way, and let them finish with the witness and then turn him over to the other side.

Mr. Robertson: Your Honor, I want to say just two things: I don't want to argue this today, but we are prepared to argue the matter right this minute. Mr. Moore has page 504 } the authorities and has the books with him if you want to argue it.

Mr. Mullen is wrong on his law on the interrogatories, what Mr. Mullen said last night. What the statute says is that all relevant and material parts must be read. That is the sense of it. I have not memorized the statute. I submit that that is the law and we are prepared to argue it, but I don't want to argue it now because I want to try to reduce it to a minimum. Frankly, what I think we are going to have to do is ask the Court to come here perhaps Saturday and go through those things one at a time and rule what is relevant and what is not relevant, and what is in and what is out. Then if they insist that all relevant parts be read, I think we have to read them. I don't think the law is that you have to read a lot of irrelevant trash.

Coming along now to our putting Mr. Bryan on later, that is within the sound discretion of the Court. If the Court defers its ruling now and we offer Mr. Bryan as a witness later on, and the Court thinks we do it under unfair circumstances or in a way that puts the Defendants at any unfair disadvantage, the Court at that time can exercise its discretion and rule that he cannot go to the stand. I have never tried a case in Virginia yet where I have been denied the request for the exercise by the Court of the discretion that we are requesting now.

page 505 } Mr. Allen: I would like to make a brief reply to what Mr. Pollard said there about our proceeding in an improper way to get those interrogatories.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: I didn't say it was improper.

Mr. Allen: You said we didn't comply with the statute. The Court held in the famous Robinson case, in 101 Va. 520, and I want to read it. It is very short. I will read one paragraph that may not have anything to do with it but it leads up to it:

"A litigant's attendance upon the trial may be compelled by the issuance and service upon him of a subpoena under code section 6-217 as amended by Act 1940, Chapter 159, as the case with any other witness; but a party to a civil suit as well as any other witness who is present in court may, of course, be called upon to testify although he may not have been served with a subpoena. The same principle applies to subpoenas issued under Code Section 6-219 and 6-237. While under these sections a witness or an adverse party may be compelled to appear and bring with him material documentary evidence, should the witness or party be present in Court and have in his custody the desired document, he may be lawfully compelled by the verbal direction of the court to produce it, although no subpoena has been issued therefor."

Then the court cites a number of authorities.

page 506 } We have the pre-trial conference rule by statute now, and at the pre-trial conference you can call for any document, and the court says whether they are presented. In these interrogatories, they were a combination of interrogatories, and then they said, "If you have these reports or if this man made these weekly reports, produce them. If this is the official journal of the United Mine Workers, produce it."

We came here and the transcript of the pre-trial conference will show that when we got to those things Mr. Mullen over there, I think it was Mr. Mullen, said "We haven't got all the copies of the journal that you want, but we will furnish the copies we have." They did furnish a batch of copies that thick (indicating). They are here, and all we have to do is ask that they be produced. The same way with the news, and the same way with those reports. In connection with interrogatories we called for all sorts of reports. They are here.

Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia.

All we have to do is ask to be allowed to produce them. The fact that we didn't—

The Court: Can't I pass on that at the time?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Allen: Certainly.

Mr. Robertson: I don't see why we are arguing it now.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: I want to straighten one page 507 } thing out. Mr. Robertson said I quoted the law incorrectly and it is he who quoted it incorrectly.

The Court: We will have to go into that more thoroughly.

Mr. Mullen: On the question of interrogatories, if you are going to try to argue that, I want to be heard fully on that. There isn't any question in the law about that. I didn't know we were here for that. We are here to see for how long we are going to adjourn.

The Court: I understand you want to adjourn until tomorrow morning.

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

Mr. Allen: May I make a suggestion here, then. I am just saying this out loud. If you are going to adjourn until tomorrow morning, we may be able and may be ready to go on with Mr. Bryan. Maybe Mr. Cassidy will have made his report by that time. Maybe we will have these other documents ready by that time. Then before we turn him over for cross examination you will have all this testimony.

The Court: If you can do that, do it. I will let the jury go until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock. In the meantime, if you have an opportunity, gentlemen, you might prepare me a memorandum on these interrogatories, the question having been raised that you have to read them all.

Mr. Mullen: Don't the Virginia cases settle it page 508 } absolutely?

Mr. Allen: I will save that for another time.

The Court: It would be helpful if you could let me have a memorandum on that tomorrow morning. I have your memorandum, Mr. Mullen.

Mr. Mullen: Yes.

Mr. Robertson: Have you given the Court a memorandum and not given us a copy of it? If you have, we would like that courtesy.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: You cite one of the cases in your trial brief.

Mr. Robertson: I am saying if you have given papers to the Court I think I have a right to have a copy of it.

Mr. Mullen: Certainly I will give it to you.

The Court: The Court would like to have an opportunity to review the memorandum before passing on the question.

Mr. Allen: What time would you like to have it in the morning, Your Honor?

Mr. Robertson: Unless you are going to write it, let's leave it where it is.

Mr. Allen: The Judge said he wanted a memorandum.

Mr. Robertson: I just wanted you not to put a deadline on our work unless you are going to write it.

Mr. Allen: We have the authority.

page 509 } The Court: What time do you think the question will come up?

Mr. Robertson: I can't tell.

Mr. Allen: I don't think we will reach that—

Mr. Robertson: I want to confer with you before you commit us, George.

The Court: Let the Court go in and adjourn the jury until tomorrow morning and then we will come back in here.

(Brief recess.)

(Whereupon, at 12:45 o'clock p. m. the jury was excused until the following morning at 10:00 o'clock a. m.)

(The following proceedings were had in Chambers:)

The Court: Is there anything else that you gentlemen want to take up before we adjourn?

Mr. Robertson: No.

The Court: I thought maybe you gentlemen were conferring on something.

Mr. Robertson: No, sir.

The Court: We will meet tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 1:00 o'clock p. m. the Court recessed until 10:00 o'clock a. m. Friday, January 26, 1951.)

page 510 }

Hearing in the above-entitled matter was resumed, pursuant to recess, at 10:00 o'clock a. m., before the Honorable Harold F. Snead, Judge of the Circuit Court of the City of Richmond, and a Special Jury, on January 26, 1951.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Appearances: Archibald G. Robertson, George E. Allen, T. Justin Moore, Jr., Francis V. Lowden, Jr., Counsel for the Plaintiff.

A. Hamilton Bryan, President, Laburnum Construction Corporation.

Also Present: Robert N. Pollard, Jr.

page 511 } PROCEEDINGS.

(Roll call of the jury.)

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I would like to put Mr. Bryan back for just a very few questions.

Whereupon,

ALEXANDER HAMILTON BRYAN,
the witness on the stand at time of recess, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION—continued.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, yesterday you testified regarding various proposals for construction work which you submitted to Island Creek and its associated and affiliated subsidiary companies for construction work which was not awarded to Laburnum. At my request have you made a tabulated statement summarizing those estimates?

A. Yes, sir.

(Defendants' counsel examining document.)

Colonel Harris: That is just summarizing the ones talked about yesterday?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Bryan, I hand you a statement and ask you if that is such a summary?

The Witness: Yes, it is.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the paper in evidence page 512 } and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No.
54.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 54 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, you testified previously that your field clerk at the job site in Breathitt County, Kentucky, was Mr. Maynard Ragan; is that correct?

A. That is correct, he was the chief clerk.

(Document exhibited to Defendants' counsel.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I hand you an unexecuted printed form entitled "Membership Application and check-off authorization, District 50, United Mine Workers of America," and attached to it is an envelope addressed to Laburnum Construction Corporation, 918 East Main Street, Richmond, Virginia, P. O. Box 234, attention Mr. A. Hamilton Bryan, with a cancelled postage stamp and stamped Salversville, Kentucky, July 16—it looks like 7 a. m., 1949, and ask you what that is?

A. After Mr. Hart telephoned me on July 14 I talked to the job superintendent Mr. Delinger, and also talked to Mr. Ragan, and asked that they keep in touch with the situation, and if United Construction Workers or District 50 were trying to organize any of our workers, please to let me know. On July 16 Mr. Ragan mailed to me this form of a membership application and check-off authorization, District 50, which one of our laborers had turned over to him.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the form and the attached envelope together in evidence and ask that they collectively be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 55.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 55 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, I hand you an unexecuted printed form for recognition of United Construction Workers, District 50, UMW, bargaining agent for employees in all matters pertaining to wages, hours of work, and other conditions of employment, and also agree to meet within blank days for the purpose of negotiating a contract, which you have turned over to me, and ask you where you got that, if you recall.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. This is one of the papers which Mr. David Hunter gave to me during my conference with him in Pikeville on August 5. Mr. Hunter was asking me to sign an agreement with the United Construction Workers. This is a printed form, rather, a mimeographed form under the letterhead of the United Construction Workers, Pikeville Regional Office, P. O. Box 50, Pikeville, Kentucky, which Mr. Hunter said contractors and other employers signed for the purpose of recognizing United Construction Workers and District 50 as the bargaining agent for employees pending the execution page 514 } of a more formal type of agreement after various terms and conditions had been agreed upon.

Mr. Robertson: I offer the sheet in evidence and ask that it be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 56.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 56 and received in evidence.)

Mr. Robertson: That is a short one and I would like to read it to the jury, if Your Honor please.

"A. D. Lewis, Director, O. B. Allen, Comptroller, United Construction Workers, affiliated with United Mine Workers of America, 900—15th Street, Northwest, Washington, 5 D. C. Address Reply to: Pikeville Regional Office, Post Office Box 50, Pikeville, Kentucky, Telephone 1031.

"We the undersigned do hereby agree to recognize the United Construction Workers, District 50, U. M. W. A., as bargaining agent for our employees in all matters pertaining to wages, hours of work, and other conditions of employment and also agree to meet within . . . . days for the purpose of negotiating a contract.

"U. C. W. Representative, Date, Company's Name, Address, signed By, Signature, Title, Approved by, David Hunter, Acting Director Region 58. This paper Union made by District 50, UMWA."

There is a union symbol on this which I can't read, it is so small.
page 515 } If Your Honer please, that is all the questions that I have to ask Mr. Bryan at this time. As I said yesterday, I wish to reserve the right to put him back on the stand later in further proof of our case-in-chief, if necessary to do so. I state at this time I have, of course, no intention of covering the same ground that he already has been over, and I would expect the Court at that time to rule whether the Court thought it fair for me to be permitted to put Mr. Bryan back or not. I realize I take that chance in what I am doing now and ask the Court to defer ruling on it until the question is actually presented.

The Court: The Court will reserve its ruling.

Mr. Robertson: I might say that Mr. Mullen has agreed with me that Mr. Bryan may now leave the stand before he is cross-examined in order that I may put Mr. Cassidy on to give evidence about these applications for membership that have already been mentioned in Mr. Bryan's testimony.

The Court: Very well. Stand aside, Mr. Bryan.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Robertson: I call Mr. Harry C. Cassidy, please. I think Mr. Cassidy has not been sworn.

page 516 } Whereupon,

HARRY EVANS CASSIDY

called as a witness for Plaintiff, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Cassidy, your name is Harry C. Cassidy?

A. No, sir. Harry Evans Cassidy.

Q. Where do you live?

A. Lower Hanover County, about half way between Old Church and Cold Harbor.

Q. What is your present business or profession?

A. The examining of questioned documents.

Q. Will you state generally what experience you have had in that work in the last 25 years?

A. I began the study of them back in 1915 while I was Superintendent for the Identification Bureau in the Kentucky State Reformatory in Frankfort, Kentucky. I was an officer down there. I worked there in 1915 and I came to Richmond and went to work for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company. I was with the C. & O. until 1948, and then I quit. I didn't retire. I quit and went into this business of document examination on my own hook. During that time I studied various questions that came up, read the books on the subject, did all the research work that I knew how to do and got in touch with people up in the cities that knew a page 517 } lot about it, and they tried to make something out of me. As they say, they did the best they could. Mr. Albert S. Osborn in New York, Mr. J. Fordyce Wood in Chicago, and Mr. Herbert Walter up at Winnipeg, Canada. I got in touch with quite a number of those important people and tried to do the best I could under the circumstances.

Q. How many years were you with the C. & O.?

A. Thirty-two years and 11 months and 15 days, I think.

Q. During that time did you have experience with the C. & O. in examining the authenticity of various questioned documents which came through the C. & O. offices in Richmond?

A. Most every type of an examination, except will cases, came up somewhere down through the C. & O. during that period, yes, sir.

Q. Are you the man who did that work for the C. & O.?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Throughout the system?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you had experience before today in testifying regarding questioned documents in lawsuits?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you one of the handwriting experts in the Lindbergh kidnapping cases?

A. Yes, sir; one among nine.

Q. Could you mention some Virginia cases that page 518 } you have been in?

A. I have been in several will cases around over the State and in criminal prosecutions for extortion letters and different kinds of cases like that.

Q. At the request of Mr. Bryan, the President of Laborum Construction Corporation, have you made an examination of 16 application cards for A. F. of L. membership?

A. Yes, sir.

page 519 } (Defendants' counsel examining documents.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Cassidy, I hand von 16 application forms, and I am going to call the names of them and get you to arrange them alphabetically as I do so, so that I may question you about them in that order.

Harry Evans Cassidy.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, we object to the introduction of these in any form, on the ground that no proper foundation has been laid for their introduction. Some of them are filled in, some of them are not. We don't know under what conditions they were signed, whether the laborers were coerced into signing them, who filled them in, whether they were filled in before they were signed or after they were signed.

Mr. Robertson: We went over all that yesterday, Your Honor. That goes to the weight of it. I can only ask one question at a time. I am going to question him about the authenticity of the signatures.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Harry Barnett.

A. Jerry Barnett, you mean?

Q. Mr. Bryan says that they are numbered, so if you start with 2 and come right on down, you will have page 520  $\frac{1}{2}$  them in order.

(Discussion off the record.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Cassidy, are those 16 application forms the forms which you examined, at the request of Mr. Bryan, to determine the genuineness of their signatures?

A. I spent the day yesterday.

Q. Will you describe precisely what examination you made to determine whether the signatures were genuine or false?

A. They supplied me what they said they could prove were known signatures, admitted signatures, genuine signatures, whatever you want to call them.

I went at it just like old Federal Judge Cochran did in In re Barney, Va. 2d. I laid the known writing on one side and the questioned writing on the other, in front of me, and then I examined it point by point, character by character, quality by quality, characteristic by characteristic. I did it in the best way that I knew how. The questioned signatures, of course, were compared with the known signatures.

Q. What was the character of the unquestioned signatures which you accepted as being correct?

A. They looked like they were on Government forms for deduction of their income tax and forms of the Labor-page 521 } num Construction Company. There were three of them, three forms that were filled out and signed.

(Documents exhibited to Defendants' counsel.)

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, there has been no foundation made for comparison with these. There has been no foundation as to these.

Mr. Robertson: Are you objecting to them?

Mr. Mullen: I object to them at this time.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Cassidy, I will ask you to turn now to Application No. 1, which I believe purports to be signed by Lee Bach.

Based upon your examination and comparison, in your opinion is that signature the same as the signature upon the document with which you compare it?

The Witness: Your Honor, I can't answer that question until those documents are proved.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON BRYAN,

recalled as a witness on behalf of Plaintiff, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION (resumed).

Mr. Robertson: Do you want to look at them before I give them to him?

(Documents examined by Mr. Fred G. Pollard.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Bryan, I hand you batch of documents with various signatures, and ask you if you turned those over to Mr. Cassidy yesterday for him to use as the basis of his examination and comparison to determine the genuineness of the signatures of the applications that have been mentioned page 523 } and received in evidence here?

A. It is the standard practice of our Company to have all employees, when they are hired, sign the Employees Withholding Exemption Certificate, which shows how many exemptions he is claiming in connection with withholding taxes. The employee also signs what is known as an Employee's History Record, which states his name, Social Security Number, age, residence, his father is, whether he is married, and so forth, what his address is.

Also, in connection with work in Kentucky, it was also necessary to have every employee sign a paper electing to accept the provisions of the Kentucky Workmen's Compensation Act. We understood that unless he signed such a paper, the Workmen's Compensation Act didn't apply to him; so we had every man sign those three papers on this job.

When the question came up about the authenticity of the signatures on these application blanks, we went to our files and got the Employee's History Records, the Employees Withholding Exemption Certificates, and their statements accepting the provisions of the Kentucky Workmen's Compensation Act, for each one of these 16 people. They are the papers which I have in my hand, and they are the ones which I furnished to Mr. Cassidy to use in making his comparison of signatures.

Q. Were they kept in the regular course of the page 524 } business of the Laburnum Company?

A. They were kept in the regular course of business, not only on the work in Kentucky, but everywhere, the only exception to that being that the paper electing to accept the provisions of the Kentucky Workmen's Compensation Act was done on all employees in Kentucky, but only in Kentucky.

Q. Were those signed statements accepted by those who signed them as the basis upon which those particular phases of their connection with Laburnum were acted upon?

A. Yes, sir. There are witnesses to the signatures on most of the statements.

Mr. Robertson: Unless there is a request for it, I will not offer them in evidence. I think it just clutters up the record.

Mr. Mullen: We do not insist, Your Honor, on their being put in the record. We simply wanted the proper course to be followed.

Mr. Robertson: Will you stand aside, please, Mr. Bryan?

Harry Evans Cassidy.

(Witness Bryan temporarily excused.)

Mr. Robertson: Mr. Cassidy, will you come back, please?

page 525 } Whereupon,

HARRY EVANS CASSIDY

recalled as a witness on behalf of Plaintiff, having been previously duly sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION (resumed).

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Cassidy, I hand you a group of papers bearing various signatures, and ask you to look at them and see if those are the signatures which you used as the basis of your comparison of the application cards you mentioned, to determine the genuineness of the signatures on the application cards?

A. These were the known signatures that were furnished me to use as the standard of comparison with the questioned signatures, yes, sir.

Q. You have already stated the kind of examination you made. I don't think it is necessary to repeat that.

I will ask you to turn to Application No. 1, Lee Bach. The questions I ask you now are based on your examination.

In your opinion, is the signature of Lee Bach on the application blank the same as the unquestioned signature with which you compared it?

A. Yes.

Q. If you will lay that aside and go to No. 2, page 526 } What is the date of No. 1, first?

A. 4/18/49. All three of the documents bear the same date.

Mr. Robertson: I am asking you to look at No. 1, the application blank. You haven't got them. You are looking at the wrong thing.

(Discussion off the record.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I hand you No. 1, Lee Bach, and ask you what is the date of that one?

Harry Evans Cassidy.

A. It is dated at the bottom, in pencil, 7/21/49. That is July 21, 1949.

Q. I hand you now No. 2, Jerry Barnett, and ask you whether, based upon your examination, that signature is the same as the unquestioned signature with which you compared it?

A. Yes, it was, but this document is not dated.

Q. I hand you now No. 3, Dan Combs, and ask you whether that signature, in your opinion, is the same as the unquestioned signature with which you compared it?

A. Yes, sir, absolutely, sir.

Q. What is the date of that one?

A. That is dated 7/21/49.

Q. I hand you now No. 4, which bears the signature of Green Conley, and ask you whether or not, in your opinion, that signature is the same as the unquestioned signature 527 } ture with which you compared it?

A. There isn't any unquestioned signature here. On the Employees Withholding Exemption Certificate here, the known one, the Laburnum documents here, the two forms they filled out, this Green Conley signed by mark; and on this, there is very good handwriting here that doesn't even resemble this Green Conley over here.

Q. What is your explanation of that, if any?

A. I would judge that this is—thus, by inference, that they forgot to have the person who signed this make his mark, that somebody signed it for Green and just neglected to have him put his "X" mark on it. That is all I know.

Colonel Harris: We move to exclude that pure guesswork on the part of Mr. Cassidy.

The Witness: It is nothing else but a guess.

The Court: I will sustain the motion.

It is a guess. Gentlemen, disregard the evidence regarding the "X" mark.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Is the written part of those applications, the handwriting part of those applications above the various signatures, in your opinion, all in the same handwriting?

A. As far as I can tell, they were, yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell whether or not the signature on the Green Conley application is the same writing as the page 528 } handwriting in the body of the application?

A. It doesn't have any resemblance, and I don't think the person who filled this out could hardly write two signatures like that "Green Conley" in the way it has been here on this questioned document.

Q. You have no explanation, based on your examination?

A. I couldn't do nothing but guess, and there is no use in guessing about something.

Q. I ask you to turn to No. 5, which—first, what is the date of No. 4?

A. 7/21—No. 4? They are all dated July 21, 1949, when they are dated.

Q. Now, No. 5 bears the signature of Earnest Howard. In your opinion, is that signature the same as the unquestioned signature with which you compared it?

A. Yes, sir, even though some of them are spelled E-a-r-n-e-s-t and some E-r-n-e-s-t. On the questioned document, they are spelled E-a-r-n-e-s-t; and on the Laburnum Company records, it is spelled once as E-a-r-n-e-s-t Howard and twice as E-r-n-e-s-t. There has been, it looks like an addition of this "a" in the Employees Withholding Exemption Certificate of this standard which has been furnished me. It looks like the person might have started to write his name E-r-n-e-s-t and then changed it to E-a-r-n-e-s-t, which, of course, is the wrong spelling. E-r-n-e-s-t is the page 529 } way to spell the person's name, if I am right in my spelling.

Q. I hand you now No. 6, which bears the signature Hargus Howard, and ask you if that signature is the same as the unquestioned signature with which you compared it?

A. Yes, sir, in my best judgment they are the same, but the "Hargus" is spelled wrong. H-a-r-g-i-s is the way to spell Hargis. This is H-a-r-g-u-s.

Q. You are not an authority on the spelling of proper names?

A. I know those families down through there, and I know the way they spell their names.

Q. Did you come from out there?

A. Yes, I come from Kentucky. I came from Clementsville, Kentucky, and I know lots of people from Breathitt, Wolfe, Magoffin, Floyd and Pike, and they are all good friends of mine, too, most of them.

Q. Why don't you go back?

A. I am doing all right, outside of court days. (Laughter.)

Q. I hand you now No. 7, which bears the signature of John Jordan, and ask you if, in your opinion, that signature is the same as the signature of the unquestioned document with which you have compared it?

A. I don't have any doubt about it whatsoever, but what that is a genuine signature.

page 530 } Q. I hand you now No. 8, which bears the signature of Burl King, and ask you if, in your opinion, that signature is the same as the unquestioned signature with which you compared it?

A. The person who wrote these signatures, the questioned signatures, didn't get on the line, the horizontal line of writing, as well as they did over on these, but they still have the same form, shape, size, proportion, pen lifts, beginning strokes and ending strokes, all the way through. I have to pronounce them genuine when they are that good.

Q. I hand you next No. 9, which bears the signature Ossie Lovely, and ask you whether or not, in your opinion, that signature is the same as the unquestioned signature with which you compared it?

A. Every element, feature, quality, and characteristic of one shows in each. These all conform to each other, and these two conform with each other. All five conform together, so I think they are good.

Q. I hand you now No. 10, which bears the signature of Luther Litteral, and ask if, in your opinion, that signature is the same as the signature of the unquestioned document with which you compared it?

A. Yes, sir, I think unquestionably they are all written by the same person.

page 531 } Q. I hand you now No. 11, which bears the signature of George Miller, and ask you whether, in your opinion, that signature is the same as the signature of the unquestioned document with which you compared it?

A. I don't think two people could write two sets of signatures that bad and exactly alike and not be the same person. (Laughter).

Q. Is that George Miller application dated?

A. No, sir. It is one of the undated ones, and very slightly filled in. It hasn't anything but his name and the name Decoy, Kentucky, on it.

Q. I hand you now No. 12, which bears the signature Matt Miller, and ask you whether or not, in your opinion, that signature is the same as the signature on the unquestioned document with which you compared it?

A. There is only one questioned signature involved here.

Harry Evans Cassidy.

Matt didn't sign it where he was supposed to sign it here, but he did put it in at the top. I think that top signature and the bottom signature are the same as the three on these Laburnum Company records.

Q. Is that application of Mat Miller dated or undated?

A. No, sir, it is not dated.

page 532 } Q. I hand you now No. 13, which bears the signature Avis Salyers and ask in your opinion if that signature is the same as the unquestioned signature with which you compared it.

A. These two questioned signatures were so much alike and the same length and height and so forth that I am a little skeptical of them. They look like they might have been copied from the same model. So I made a tracing of this signature and this signature as a test and held it up between me and the light and they didn't coincide. So they are the signatures of the same person at the same time and it is a genuine writing. I think the writing of this signature agrees with the known signatures over there.

Q. What is the date of Avis Salyers' application?

A. That is 7-21, July 21, 1949.

Q. I hand you now the application signed Green Stacy and ask you whether in your opinion that signature is the same as the signature of the unquestioned document with which you compared it.

A. I do. Green Stacy writes a very rapid signature that would be very difficult to forge. Some of these poorly written signatures are susceptible to tracing and forgery, but one that is rapidly written by Green Stacy, like John Hancock's signature on the Declaration of Independence, is mighty hard to imitate. It is hard to imitate good writing page 533 } like that.

As a handwriting expert is the fact that John Hancock's signature is hard to forge the origin of the expression "Put your John Hancock on it"?

A. Yes, sir; I think that is where it originated.

Peter Fannhill is another writer up in Boston that was another hard one for anybody to imitate.

Q. Green Stacy's application is signed what?

A. Green Stacy, S-t-a-c-y.

Q. What is the date?

A. July 21, 1949.

Q. I hand you now application which bears the signature Donald B. Trimble and ask you whether or not that signature in your opinion is the same as the signature on the unquestioned document with which you compared it.

A. I think it is the same and that is another very difficult signature for a person to counterfeit or simulate. Mr. Trimble writes a very good hand. If he didn't have a man's name I would think it might be a woman's writing.

Q. What is the date of that application?

A. 7-21-1949.

Q. I hand you now application which bears the signature Green Trusty, and ask you whether or not in your opinion that signature is the same as the signature of the unquestioned document with which you compared it.

page 534 } A. Unquestionably, not a doubt in the world in my mind about them.

Q. And is Green Trusty's application dated or undated?

A. It is undated. That is a family name I never heard of down there.

Mr. Robertson: You may cross-examine the witness.

The Witness: I forgot to mention that that form there was filled in by Trimble, too. That is the only one that is not in the same handwriting that apparently filled in the rest of those forms.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. You have no information whatever in regard to these except what you have testified to for the purpose of determining the authenticity of the signatures. That is correct, is it not?

A. I haven't any information—

Q. You have no information in regard to these, how or when they were taken or anything, except what you have testified?

A. Except what it shows on the face of it. I am accepting that.

Q. You do not know whether those papers have ever been questioned, the signatures on those, or not, do you?

A. No, I do not. I am acting on faith as far as page 535 } the known documents are concerned and using my best judgment on the questioned ones.

Q I hand you No. 1, Lee Bach. Is the body of that filled out?

Harry Evans Cassidy.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the handwriting in the body filling it out the handwriting of the person who signed it?

A. Oh, I don't think so, sir.

Q. What date does that bear?

A. 7-21, July 21.

Q. Is that in the handwriting of the man who signed it?

A. No, sir; I don't think so. In my opinion—

Mr. Robertson: Wait a minute. Let him finish, please, before you interrupt him.

The Witness: In my opinion the filling in of the body of it, everything except the signature, was by somebody else than the signer.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. That is an application for membership in what?

A. The United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, and then it says at the bottom the Louisville District Council of Woodworkers Affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. You don't see the word Paintsville or Salyersville on there anywhere, do you?

A. Not on this one, no, sir.

page 536 } Q. I hand you No. 2, Jerry Arnett. Is the body of that filled out?

A. Only with the name Jerry Arnett, Noctor, Kentucky.

Q. Is that the same handwriting as the signature?

A. No, not as the signature.

Q. What is the date of that?

A. No date.

Q. To whom is that addressed, that application?

A. To the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

Q. And down at the bottom the Louisville District Council.

A. The Louisville District Council of Workers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. There is nothing about Salyersville or Paintsville on that, is there?

A. No, sir.

Q. I hand you No. 3, Dan Combs. Is that filled out in the body of it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the handwriting in which it is filled out the same as the handwriting of the person who signed it?

Harry Evans Cassidy.

A. No, sir.

Q. What date does it bear?

page 537 } A. 7-21-49.

Q. To whom is that addressed?

A. It is addressed to the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Louisville District Council of Woodworkers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. There is written in there at the top the word Salyersville, isn't there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Local—?

A. 697.

Q. That is different from those that you have already passed on?

A. It is in addition to what the others were, yes, sir.

(Defendants' counsel conferring)

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. Is that dated?

A. Yes, sir; this is dated July 21, 1949.

Mr. Robertson: Let him complete his answer before you ask him another question. You are inadvertently cutting in on the witness before he finishes.

Mr. Mullen: I thought he had finished.

The Witness: I thought I had, too.

Mr. Robertson: I am wrong, then.

The Court: Mr. Robertson, you are in error (laughter).

page 538 } By Mr. Mullen:

Q. I hand you No. 4. Is that filled in?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the writing filling it in the same as the writing of the person who signed it?

A. No, sir; not in my opinion it is not.

Q. What is the date of it?

A. July 21, 1949.

Q. Is that the handwriting of the signer?

A. No, sir; only the signatures.

Q. That is addressed to—

A. United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Louisville District Council of Woodworkers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Harry Evans Cassidy.

Q. Does that have the words Salyersville, Kentucky, up above that?

A. Yes, sir, up at the right-hand corner.

Q. And on the left-hand corner?

A. Local 697.

Q. I hand you No. 5. That is Earnest Howard. Is the body of that filled in?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the handwriting in which it is filled in the same as that of the signer?

A. No, sir; not in my opinion, sir.

Q. Is it dated?

page 539 } A. Yes, sir; 7-21-49.

Q. Is the date in handwriting of the signer?

A. No, sir.

Q. To whom is that addressed?

A. United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Louisville, District Council of Woodworkers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. Does that have anything else up in the right-hand corner?

A. It has the notation, Salyersville, Kentucky on the right-hand side and Local 697 on the left.

* * * * *

Q. I hand you No. 6, Hargus Howard. Is that filled in?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that handwriting the same as that of Hargus Howard?

A. No, sir.

page 540 } Q. Has it a date?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the date in the same handwriting as Hargus Howard's?

A. No, sir.

Q. To whom is that addressed?

A. That is addressed to the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Louisville District Council of Woodworkers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. Does that have any addition at the top above the application?

A. It has Salyersville, Kentucky up at the right-hand side and Local 697 over on the left-hand side.

Harry Evans Cassidy.

Q. I hand you No. 7, John Jordan. Is the body of that filled in?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I notice there is an "x".

A. In front of the signature.

Q. In front of the signatures. Do you take that merely as a check?

A. No, sir. I think that was put there to show the man where to sign. It is frequently done.

Q. That is the question I asked you. You re-page 541 } gard it as a check and not as a signature?

A. Not as a mark.

Q. Is the body of that filled out?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that in the same writing as Jordan's?

A. No, sir.

Q. And the date on it?

A. 7-21-49.

Q. That is addressed to whom?

A. United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Louisville District Council of Woodworkers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. Is there any addition at the top?

Q. I hand you No. 9, Ossie Lovely. Is that filled in?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the body of the form filled in in the handwriting of the signer?

A. No, sir; not in my opinion.

Q. Is it dated?

Harry Evans Cassidy.

A. Yes, sir, 7-21-1949.

Q. Is that in the same handwriting as the signature?

A. No, sir.

Q. To whom is that addressed?

A. To the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Louisville District Council of Woodworkers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. Is there any pencil addition?

A. Salyersville, Kentucky over on the right-hand side, Local 697 over to the left.

Q. I hand you No. 10, Luther Literal. Is the body of that filled in?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the handwriting the handwriting of the person who signed it?

page 543 } A. No, sir.

Q. Is it dated?

A. Yes, sir; 7-21-49.

Q. Is the writing the same as that in the body?

A. Not in my opinion. Salyersville is up on the right-hand corner and Local 697 over on the left.

Q. I hand you No. 11. Is it supposed to be George Miller?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the one that you questioned?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is the one that is so bad no two people could make it the same.

A. I don't think any two people could write that bad.

Q. Is the body of that filled in?

A. Only in part. It just has the name George Miller, Decoy, Kentucky.

Q. To whom is it addressed?

A. Addressed to United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Louisville District Council of Woodworkers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. Does that have Salyersville on it?

A. No, no notation of Salyersville.

Q. No local number on it?

page 544 } A. No, sir; nor date of birth and none of the other questions asked.

Q. Is it dated?

A. No, sir.

Q. I hand you what purports to be the application of Matt Miller. Is the application itself filled out at all?

A. It only has the name Matt Miller, Decoy, Kentucky.

Harry Evans Cassidy.

Q. And the application is not signed, is it?

A. It is signed below and filled in at the top with Mat Miller.

Q. But the actual application there--

A. Oh, no, the application doesn't have anything but Matt Miller, Decoy, Kentucky.

Q. Up at the top, and not signed?

A. Up at the top. That is not signed. It is just signed at the bottom.

Q. Signed in that headed "authorization for representation under the National Labor Relations Act"?

A. That is right.

Q. But the application to join the union is not signed at all?

A. No, sir; it is not.

Q. Is there any date on it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Is there anything about Salyersville or local?

A. Neither one; no, sir.

page 545 } Q. I hand you No. 13, Avis Salyers. Is that filled in?

A. Yes, sir; it is filled in.

Q. Is the handwriting in which it is filled in the same as the handwriting of the signer?

A. No, sir.

Q. Has it any date?

A. Yes, sir; it is dated July 21, 1949.

Q. Is that the same handwriting as the signer?

A. No, sir.

Q. To whom is that addressed?

A. To the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Louisville District Council of Woodworkers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. Is there anything about Salyersville?

A. It has in pencil Salyersville, Kentucky up on the right-hand side of the application, and Local 697 over on the left-hand side of the application.

Q. I hand you No. 14, Green Stacy. Is the body of the application filled in?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that in the handwriting of the signer?

A. No, sir; not as good handwriting as the signer.

Q. Is it dated?

A. Yes, sir; 7-21-1949.

page 546 } Q. Is that in the handwriting of the signer?

Harry Evans Cassidy.

A. No, sir; I don't think so.

Q. Does that have anything about Salyersville?

A. No, sir; it doesn't, or No. 697 either, and it is addressed to the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Louisville District Council of Woodworkers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. I hand you No. 15, which is the application of Donald B. Trimble. Is the body of that filled in?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the same handwriting as the signature?

A. Yes, sir; in my opinion Donald B. Trimble filled in that, all except the Local 697 and Salyersville.

Q. That was not filled in in his handwriting?

A. That is not in his handwriting.

Q. That was addressed to—

A. The United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Louisville District Council of Woodworkers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. But it has above in the right-hand corner the addition of Salyersville?

A. Yes, and in the left-hand corner 697, but not in his handwriting.

Q. Did I ask you if that was dated?

A. No, you didn't; but it is dated 7-21-1949.

page 547 } Q. Is that in—

A. I think Donald put the figures on there, too, he dated it.

Q. I hand you No. 16, Green Trusty. Is that filled in?

A. Only in part. It just has the name Green Trusty, Decoy, Kentucky. It is signed and it has an "x" mark in front of it.

Q. Is the name in the body of it and the location in the handwriting of the signer?

A. No. Green couldn't write that good.

Q. Is it dated?

A. No, sir.

Q. To whom is it addressed?

A. It is addressed to the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Louisville District Council of Woodworkers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. These applications are in the form of a letter, with postage paid, so they could be mailed, are they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To whom are they addressed?

A. To the Louisville District Council of Woodworkers,

Harry Evans Cassidy.

Room 204 Torbitt Building, 406 South Fifth Street, Louisville, Kentucky. It is what is known as a business reply envelope.

Q. I know that all of them show at the top that they have been sealed and torn open. Were they sealed page 548 } when they were given to you?

A. No, sir.

Q. So you know nothing about that.

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Did you compare the handwriting in the body of those instruments with each other, that is, handwriting with handwriting in the body?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are the larger number of them in the same handwriting?

A. I would say all of them were except Burt Trimble's.

Q. All except Burt Trimble's are in the same handwriting.

A. Yes, sir.

page 549 } (The following proceedings were had in chambers.)

Mr. Mullen: Judge, we have Mr. Holt, a member of the firm of Elkins, Durham & Kemp, accountants, and we would like now to put the books at his disposal and to know how it can be done.

Mr. Robertson: You want to do what?

Mr. Mullen: We want to make arrangements for carrying out the authorization given us yesterday to examine the books.

Mr. Robertson: I think he can go down there and have our representative there, have Mr. Bryan's representative there. What firm is Mr. Holt from?

Mr. Mullen: Elkins, Durham & Kemp.

Mr. Robertson: Where is that?

Mr. Mullen: 1201 State Planters Building.

Mr. Robertson: I don't see any reason why he shouldn't.

Mr. Mullen: Get Mr. Bryan to come in.

Mr. Robertson: I thought you wanted Mr. Bryan to come out whenever you mentioned his name.

Mr. Mullen: Not on that particular question.

Mr. Allen: I think it is all understood.

Mr. Mullen: We want to do it in time.

The Court: He wants to get to work on it.

Mr. Robertson: I also understand Mr. Bryan page 550 } wants his accountant there, and wants Mr. Leach there, since they can help.

Harry Evans Cassidy.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Provided that it won't delay things to have him there.

Mr. Robertson: It doesn't make any difference whether it delays it or not.

The Court: Would it be helpful to you, Mr. Holt, to have these gentlemen, who are familiar with it?

Mr. Holt: It probably would be.

The Court: I think it would be.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We understand he is entitled to see everything except the income tax returns.

Mr. Robertson: The Judge can't make any such—I didn't mean any reflection on Mr. Holt at all. The Court is not going to make any such blanket ruling as that. Mr. Pollard certainly doesn't know any more about accounting than I do. They have reputable accountants to go down there and see whatever is necessary for them to come up with what they think is the necessary information that the Court directs them to give. They are reputable certified public accountants, and our people are going to cooperate with them to that end.

Mr. Mullen: Mr. Bryan.

(Mr. Bryan entered the room.)

Mr. Mullen: Mr. Bryan, we just want to make page 551 } arrangements for Mr. Holt, who is a member of the accounting firm of Elkins, Durham & Kemp, to start work without delay. He is here. Can you give instructions for him to go to work now?

Mr. Robertson: I told them that you wanted your company accountant and also Mr. Leach to be there to cooperate and collaborate with Mr. Holt and help in any proper way they can.

Mr. Bryan: That is a right big order. It goes back to the beginning of 1941. I have already instructed our people to start assembling the records, and we had planned to have them available beginning tomorrow morning. We are having photostatic copies made of portions of the auditor's reports which give detailed information on every job that we have done from 1941 through the end of 1950, showing sales, the direct cost of sales, and the job profit or loss. That is going to be the simplest way to handle it.

If this gentleman over here, or any other accountant, in my opinion, undertakes to verify everything shown on these reports over a ten-year period, the trial won't finish for two or three months.

Harry Evans Cassidy.

We will also ask our accounting firm, Leach, Calkins & Scott, to collaborate with the firm of Elkins, Durham & Kerap, to assist them. Perhaps the data can be supported by notes that Leach, Calkins & Scott have made during page 552 <sup>1</sup> their periodic audits.

I understand from our auditors and accountants that it would be an exceedingly difficult job, if not almost impossible, within the period of time allotted, for Elkins and Durham, or any other accounting firm, to go back and segregate out of the various accounts the data that is already compiled on the audit reports of Leach, Calkins & Scott.

The Court: Mr. Holt has indicated to the Court that he thought their assistance would be helpful.

Mr. Bryan: I was not able to get in touch with Mr. Leach yesterday, and of course, I have been here all this morning. We started the ball rolling.

The Court: And you will be ready by tomorrow morning?

Mr. Bryan: We plan to be ready by tomorrow morning. That was our schedule.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Judge, I don't think that we want to go in and verify things that already have been done by Leach, Calkins & Scott, but we want their results. I understood yesterday we were entitled to the audit reports, and Mr. Bryan says he is having portions or parts of the audit reports photostated.

page 553 <sup>1</sup> Mr. Robertson: Let me say something here, Judge. It seems to me that we just talk, talk, talk, and are not getting anywhere. The Court has indicated what we want. We have thoroughly responsible accountants. In good faith we are going to cooperate with them. If Mr. Holt thinks he is not getting cooperation—

The Court: You will report to your attorneys and let the attorneys report to me if you are not getting what you want.

Mr. Pollard: There is one thing we know we want. You have said we are not entitled to the income tax returns. We would want this figure, and it is not giving us the return. We would like to know the figure that Laburnum Construction Corporation reported to the State of Kentucky and the State of West Virginia for 1948 and 1949 as its figure for net income taxes on which the tax was based.

Mr. Robertson: Your Honor, we think they have no right to it.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: That is not seeing the returns. They claim so much profit out there. We just want to know what they reported to those states as taxable income.

Harry Evans Cassidy.

The Court: It wouldn't take long to furnish that information. Let the Court take that point under advisement, and when you are through with the audit by Mr. Holt, take that matter up with me again. It wouldn't take long page 554 } to get those figures, I imagine. It wouldn't take more than 10 or 15 minutes. The Court will take that request under advisement.

Mr. Robertson: That is all right.

The Court: As I say, it would take but a few minutes to get that.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: I don't think the other information we want will take terribly long.

The Court: I do believe that all these gentlemen, the CP's and professional men are of good standing, and I think probably collaboration would be helpful and would save a lot of time.

Mr. Robertson: I think they know a lot better what to do than we can tell them.

The Court: Better than the Court and I guess counsel.

Mr. Allen: While we are in here, Your Honor, I think yesterday we promised Your Honor we would let you have a memorandum in connection with these interrogatories.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Allen: I have about completed that memorandum but I had to come back in Court this morning before they were quite finished. If I get that completed and get it to Your Honor this evening after adjournment and a copy to counsel, will that be all right?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Allen: It may be some seven or eight page 555 } o'clock before I get it to you but I think I will be able to get it to you before that time.

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Allen: I will have to send it to you by special messenger to your home.

The Court: It may be that I will be coming in town for a few minutes tomorrow. Call me at home tonight if you don't mind. It might save a trip. I may have to come in town for a few moments and I could pick it up then.

Mr. Mullen: You are going to give us a copy of that?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

The Court: Of course you will furnish Mr. Mullen a copy.

Mr. Allen: Yes. I stated that.

Mr. Mullen: What you furnished was a very sketchy one.

of course, and we didn't think there was any question about it.

Mr. Allen: Where would you want me to deliver the copy and to whom?

Mr. Mullen: What time?

(Off the record.)

Mr. Mullen: Mr. Holt, I don't think we need to keep you any longer. You know where the Laburnum Corporation is. You can go there tomorrow morning and get in touch with them.

page 556 } Mr. Robertson: I think they open there at eight o'clock.

The Court: We are about to start the cross examination of Mr. Bryan, are we not?

(Mr. Holt left the room.)

The Court: Gentlemen, you will recall that on January 22 counsel for the defendants moved the Court to permit Mr. Fred Pollard to examine and cross-examine witnesses on behalf of District 50, and either Mr. James Mullen or Colonel Crampton Harris to examine and cross-examine witnesses on behalf of the United Construction Workers, and the United Mine Workers of America, which motion was objected to by counsel for the Plaintiff. Do you gentlemen still object to that motion?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Allen: I object to that, Your Honor. Where they are closely connected like this, it is not permitted.

The Court: Do I understand you still object?

Mr. Allen: Yes.

The Court: Gentlemen, I have given careful consideration to this motion, and the record discloses that all three of these gentlemen have appeared for and represent all three of the defendants in this case. It appears to the Court that the practice in the courts of this Commonwealth under similar circumstances is to permit only one attorney for the page 557 } defendants to examine a witness of the defendants and to permit only one attorney for the defendants to cross-examine a witness of the Plaintiff, and not have the privilege of cross-examining the witnesses of the defendants. Therefore, the motion is overruled.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: We note an exception.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Mullen: Your Honor, there is one other matter we would like to take up.

Mr. Robertson asked Your Honor to postpone a ruling to the question of interrupting Mr. Bryan's testimony at this time and putting him back for some of their major testimony-in-chief. I know it is in the discretion of the Court, and I know it is permitted where some question has been overlooked or something of that kind, but having him break into what he admits is his main evidence, his evidence-in-chief, and a considerable amount of it, and then call on us to cross-examine on a part of the evidence-in-chief and later put on a whole lot more evidence I think is a disadvantage to the defendants under which we ought not to labor.

The Court: Mr. Mullen, the Court prefers to defer ruling on that question until Mr. Bryan is offered again as a witness in this case.

Mr. Mullen: The reason I was asking Your Honor—

The Court: But I will say this. If the Court page 558 } decides to let him take the stand again, counsel for the defendants will have every opportunity to cross-examine him.

Mr. Mullen: I knew we would have that, but the damage has been done then.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, of course we don't know what their plan of presenting their case is, but we can speculate, and we think that what the plaintiff is doing is that if at the end of the trial they feel that they haven't proved agency in some other way, then they are going to put Mr. Bryan back on with the interrogatories.

The Court: As I understand, they want to put Mr. Bryan back on or may want to put him back on before they close their case.

Mr. Robertson: That is right.

Mr. Mullen: Before they close their case, yes.

The Court: Before you put on any evidence at all.

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: But they are going to wait to see whether they can get certain evidence in before, and if they are denied the right to put that evidence in, then they will come back with Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, this is the answer to the thing. Mr. Pollard admits that he is conjecturing. He doesn't know what we are going to do at all. If we are taking the risk in what we are doing, if we want to put Mr. Bryan back before we close our case-in-chief and the Court thinks page 559 } that the circumstances under which we are doing it are unfair and unjust to the defendant, of course the Court will rule we can't do it.

The Court: I think the Court will be in a better position to rule on that question at the time you offer Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: We might not offer him.

The Court: If you do offer him. That is the position the Court takes, gentlemen.

page 560 } (The following proceedings were had in open court:)

The Court: All right, Mr. Bryan, will you take the stand.

Whereupon,

ALEXANDER HAMILTON BRYAN

recalled as a witness on behalf of Plaintiff, having been previously duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, the defendant without waiving any of the objections heretofore made will proceed to cross examination.

The Court: Very well.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. Mr. Bryan, you stated near the end of your testimony that a prominent businessman—was it of Paintsville or Salyersville—came to your superintendent and brought a message that if he wanted to go out of Kentucky under his own steam, he had better go? Who was that businessman?

A. Mr. Adams.

Q. What is his first name?

A. I don't know.

Q. Where did he live?

A. Salyersville, I was told.

Q. Salyersville. He came as a messenger from someone else?

A. That is what Mr. Delinger was told.

page 561 } Q. Did Mr. Delinger state whether he told him from whom he was bringing the message?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was that?

A. Mr. Delinger told me United Construction Workers, District 50.

Q. Who?

A. United Construction Workers and District 50.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. I asked you from what individual he brought the message.

Q. No, He didn't tell me that. Mr. Delinger will be here to testify and you can find out from him.

Q. Mr. Bryan, you have put in evidence the contract of October 28, 1948, which provided for necessary construction work at installations, the preparation of a coal tippie, a coal preparation plant, for the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company in Breathitt County, Kentucky. The contract described the work to be done, the basis of the payment to you and other conditions. You testified you went over this proposed work and were advised that other work was to be done there, and you claim that you were assured that you would get the other work which you subsequently in your testimony have itemized. Were you given any contract for other work at the time you entered into the contract of October 28, 1948?

A. Mr. Salvati, who was then the Vice President in Charge of Operations of Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, and also of Island Creek Coal Company, agreed—I might say first he told me about the additional work and said what it was, said that it had been approved by the Board of Directors, that he wanted us to do it, and it was agreed that we would do it on the basis of cost plus 5 per cent. The work amounted to over $600,000.

Q. Did you enter into any written agreement with him for extra work at that time?

A. No, there was no written agreement.

Q. Was any assurance given you that the additional work which you have outlined, which you claim was promised you, would be done regardless of conditions or developments?

A. Mr. Salvati said that the most important thing to do was to get the coal preparation plant in operation as promptly as possible, that the C&O was spending several million dollars bringing in railroad tracks and making the tunnel through the mountain for the tracks, and that it was estimated that they would be ready some time in May 1949, and that this work had to be done by that time so that the plant could be put in operation. First Pond Creek wanted to be able to ship coal, and the C&O wanted to get freight for hauling coal, and nobody wanted to hold up anybody else. He said that on the additional work we could also start almost right away the construction of 25 of 200 houses page 563 } which were going to be needed. That was to take care of the Pond Creek employees and other people who would be there at the little development which was afterwards known as Evanston. Other work was to follow. There was a big development planned which he outlined to me which had been approved by the Board of Directors, and he said that the work at the plant was going to be constructed during the winter under the most adverse conditions you could imagine, just like going up into the wilds of Alaska. There were no facilities at all. We would have to provide everything. He wanted us to do all the rest of the additional work. It was agreed then and there that we would do it.

Q. I will ask you the question in another form. Was not the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company entirely free to change their plans and to change their intention to do all of the work which you have outlined if conditions changed or if they saw fit so to do.

A. There were no dates set, Mr. Mullen, for starting the additional work. As I said, he told us that he wanted us to start on the 25 houses pretty quickly because he needed those facilities. He said that later on they were going to have a number two or number three mine, and when they were ready for that they wanted us to put in the concrete foundations.

A little later they said they had to have telephone page 564 } communications to and from the job site, and he wanted us to run a telephone line from Carver 11 miles over to the job site. That was some additional work that Mr. Salvati didn't mention at the time when we talked about the additional work. He said that as the coal preparation plant got into operation and more people were there and more things were needed, there would be machine shops and schools, a church, warehouses and stores; there would be all this additional work that would come along in the ordinary development of their plant. If Pond Creek Pocahontas Company decided to abandon the operation and never had put up the work, that would be one thing; but if they did it and we had assurance they were going to do it, we were going to do it on a cost plus 5 per cent basis.

Q. But they were entirely free, so far as any binding contract with you was concerned, to change their plan for that additional work.

A. If Pond Creek Pocahontas Company had decided to stop the whole thing, I don't think we would have had a law case against them, if that is what you want.

Q. You considered that the promise of that work, the understanding that you would have that work, was one of the considerations for the contract of October 28, 1948, to which you entered.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. Mr. Salvati said it was.

Q. As one consideration.

page 565 } A. I regarded that as one of the considerations.

Q. For entering into that contract.

A. I don't say that we wouldn't have entered into the contract without it, but Mr. Salvati volunteered the information and he seemed very pleased with the work we had done. He outlined all this additional work, and he wanted us to know about it. Mr. Salvati said he wanted us to go into the thing with our eyes open, that it was going to be a rough, tough, mean job to do, and that in deciding whether we would take it he would like us to know about this additional work which he wanted us to do, and that he said he would agree for us to do.

Q. The next contract that you received after October 28, 1948, was a contract to build a telephone line, was it not?

A. It was either a telephone line or the 25 houses.

Q. The evidence shows that the telephone line was dated December 8. That was a written contract, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It specified the work—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —the estimated cost, your compensation, and other conditions.

A. Yes, sir. They asked us to fix up an agreement on that, and we did it. I prepared the paper myself.
page 566 } Sometimes we had written agreements, and sometimes we didn't.

Q. When the company determined to build the 25 houses you also had a written contract, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Specifying the estimated cost, your compensation, and other conditions.

A. I was asked to prepare that contract and did it. I submitted it to them, and they turned it over to Mr. Raleigh Campbell of their legal department, and he approved it.

Q. With these contracts were you furnished any plans and specifications?

A. On the work in Kentucky we were furnished some sort of sketches and rough drawings.

Q. Do you know who made those sketches?

A. They were made in the office of Mr. Menk or Mr. Sachs. I think. Mr. Menk was the general engineer for Pond Creek and Island Creek, and he was very busy making up drawings and ordering equipment. We were in touch with him a lot. Mr. Menk is the first person who took me to the job site.

Q. You have testified that you also had a contract for a schoolhouse. That was in addition to your contract of October 28, 1948?

A. Yes, sir. That was a part of the work Mr. Salvati discussed with me at the time we entered into the page 567 } contract dated October 28, 1948. There was no written agreement about it. We were told to proceed to construct the schoolhouse using lumber that came off the mountains there that was owned by Pond Creek.

Q. Were you furnished plans and specifications for that?

A. No. They gave us a sketch on that. They told us the approximate size that they wanted. It was a very simple building. They just had to outline generally the size of it and how many doors and windows they wanted. It was a one-story building made of frame, a frame schoolhouse.

Q. When you received the contract for the 25 houses that also was a written contract, was it not?

A. Yes, sir. They said they didn't know at the time who the contract would be with. They said they were forming a land holding company, and they didn't know the name of the company; it hadn't been formed. After that we were told it was Spring Fork Development Company, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Pond Creek. I fixed a contract for that work, sent it to Huntington and it was submitted to their legal department, approved, and it was executed.

Q. After you had constructed the 25 houses I believe you have testified that by reason of having been constructed with green lumber they were not as air-tight, and so forth, as they should have been.

page 568 } A. The lumber dried out and shrunk. The houses were unsightly.

Q. You were directed to put shingles on the sides, were you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In construction contracts it is quite customary, is it not, that changes in the course of construction regularly occur?

A. During almost every job.

Q. And the contractor is instructed to make changes, and this additional work is compensated?

A. That is true.

Q. The instruction to you to put on those shingles was of that character, was it not?

A. If we had not had any understanding with Mr. Salvati at all, it would still have been considered a normal change which would be treated as additional work for which we would have been compensated, that is as far as the shingles are concerned, and the contract for the 25 houses.

Q. Did you ever receive or enter into any written contract for any other part of this additional work which you claim was promised you?

A. No. We only had three contracts written for the work in Breathitt County. There was one dated October 28, 1948, for the coal preparation plant, a contract for the page 569 } telephone line, and a contract for the 25 houses.

Q. When the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company in all of the contracts that it had let you for that work required written contracts, isn't it fair to assume that if they considered they had a contract with you for $600,000 worth of work they would have required it to be put in writing?

A. No, not according to the way those people work. We did a lot of other work for which we didn't have any contract. Practically every job we had there was extra after extra after extra. They were using us almost as maintenance men in connection with some of their work. Sometimes whole buildings would be put up without a scratch. They were told in advance what we thought it would cost, and we would build them and they would pay it. They had confidence in us and thought we wouldn't cheat them. We don't hold ourselves out as being architects and engineers, but a lot of the buildings that we put up for Island Creek in West Virginia were from drawings and specifications which we prepared ourselves. A number of times they told me afterwards they wouldn't have done that with anybody else. The drawings were to sketchy. The specifications were not definite enough. If they didn't have confidence in us they wouldn't have worked under that arrangement.

Q. Those plans and specifications that you prepared were submitted to them for approval before they told you to go ahead with the work, weren't they, that you spoke of?

A. Oh, yes, they were submitted to them and they approved them, but the point I am trying to bring out is that they were not the finished product which you would get from an ordinary architect who would pin the thing down.

Q. You sent the plans in, and their men in charge of the construction would go over them and approve them where you prepared the plans and specifications, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. They would initial them or mark approved on them?

A. They would attach them to the contract. They are not attached to the contracts put into evidence. We have taken them off, but we have them, and if you want them we can produce them.

Q. No, but I understood you were speaking of where you said you did not have any contracts, where you didn't have any written contracts, you had drawn the plans and specifications.

A. After you put up some of those buildings you knew pretty well exactly what they wanted. You reached an understanding. We knew what they wanted, and they knew that we knew what they wanted. Based on that, we would submit a proposal. They might say "We want you to put up a colored lunch room, and the general outline will be like page 571 } the appliance warehouse or store building No. 15, except it will be smaller, so many feet wide and so many feet long. How much will you put it up for?" It happens that I think that particular job we did have a written contract on, and it was done on a cost-plus basis. A lot of the work was very simple. You almost didn't need to have drawings and specifications.

Q. But I gather from what you have said that there was always either some written contract or proposal accepted or plans and specifications submitted, approved by endorsement thereon, and instructions to proceed.

A. Not in every case. Of course we were instructed to proceed. If we just went out and voluntarily did work on our own that nobody told us to do, I suppose there would be some question about it. In getting instructions to proceed we were told what to do. Sometimes it was done on a cost-plus basis, and sometimes it was done on an estimate, a guaranteed price. If the work was such that we could guarantee it, we would. If we couldn't, we wouldn't. There was an enormous amount of work that was just added on to practically every job we did that really wasn't covered by any written agreement, that they just had us do. An account was kept of the time and the value of the materials, and we would bill them for it plus the usual mark-up, and the bill would be paid.

Q. It is customary in contracts for construction page 572 } to add for extras, is it not?

A. It is customary, but it is not customary on a wholesale basis the way they worked it.

Q. Do you know whether any more of that additional work in Breathitt County has been done other than that which you were working on and which was finished up by someone else?

A. Well, we were asked to prepare specifications and plans for a heating plant to be installed in the tippie at the No. 1 mine, including some set-up by which they could thaw out frozen coal when it came in to the tippie in the wintertime. It was suggested that we take a trip to St. Paul, Minnesota, to see some contractors there named Butler—I think that is the place—to find out how they had worked it in connection with another coal preparation plant in another location. We didn't go out there, but we gave a lot of thought to it. I believe that some of our people were in touch with them on the phone, and we came to the conclusion that it is best to handle it by means of live steam. About the time, while all that was under discussion, this trouble came up, and then our agreements were terminated and we had to move everything away. After that, we were invited to submit a lump sum proposal, which we did. We did not do the work, and I don't know who did it. Maybe Pond Creek did it themselves.

Q. That was for the steam—

page 573 }

A. For the heating plant.

Q. You were not told why the contract was not awarded to you?

A. No. I never had an answer.

Q. You don't know whether you were low bidder or not?

A. I don't know whether there was any other bidder. We never heard. At about the same time we were invited to submit a bid for the construction of a store and some other dwellings that were much nicer than the ones that we had put up before. The first dwellings were just shacks, to tell you the truth. They were not much, but that is what they wanted and that is what the people out in that section seemed to be used to. On the second houses, which were for supervisory employees, they were supposed to be a little nicer. We submitted a bid for that work, and we didn't get it. I heard that the work was given to another contractor. I don't know the contract amount or what happened. I have heard that he lost money on the job.

Q. You are referring there to a bid you submitted under date of September 7, 1949?

A. That is right.

Q. For two six-room dwellings?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And 13 five-room dwellings and a store?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Your bid was $205,047?

A. Yes, sir. I don't have that in front of me. It has been put in evidence, but I think that is right.

Q. You don't know that your bid was the highest bid?

A. I don't know. I know this, that we worked out there and had plenty of experience working in winter conditions under that set-up, using that green lumber, with all the costs involved. If somebody else wanted to come in and give a firm lump sum price without taking account of those considerations, they were welcome to do it.

Q. Didn't you say just now that the person who bid on the contract lost money?

A. That is what I was told.

Q. Were you told what his bid was?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Were you told that your bid was $75,000 above his?

A. No, I never heard what his bid was.

page 575 } Q. You were not awarded the contract?

A. No.

Q. You were not given any reason?

A. No.

Q. You were not told it was because of any of the difficulties you had already had there, were you?

A. No, we were not given any reason. We, frankly conditioned the bid in certain ways that I think were objectionable to Pond Creek. For one thing, we said that we expected them to keep those roads in passable condition so we could get in and out, and I don't think they liked that very much.

For the second thing, we asked that they provide builder's risk insurance with extended coverage, which would protect the buildings against loss or destruction from malicious mischief or acts of vandalism. That was put in there purposely in order to get some protection in case the United Construction Workers and that crowd should come in there and burn the building down.

Q. But the Pond Creek Pocahontas people never told you that you were turned down because of the trouble you had had there prior to that?

A. No, we were not informed. We never had an answer, I don't believe.

Q. Were you at that time still performing some work in West Virginia?

page 576 } A. We had started work on the boiler plant at Bartley, West Virginia, down near Welch.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. At Buckley, you say?

A. Bartley. B-a-r-t-l-e-y. It is a little place near Welch where Pond Creek has some mines.

Mr. Mullen: I have been in all that country, myself.

Mr. Robertson: So have I.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. You were never interfered with in that work, were you?

A. Interference was threatened.

Q. You completed your work, didn't you?

A. Yes, we finished it.

Q. There was no actual attempt made to organize any of your workmen there by anyone else, was there?

A. As far as I know, there wasn't. We were using A. F. of L. people. Protest was made, but in the meantime we had started this case. Whether that acted as a deterrent, I don't know.

Q. In this additional work which you claim was promised you, the largest item is 200 houses at $300,000. Do you know whether they have been built?

A. I don't think they have all been built. Some of them have been built.

page 577 } Q. The 25 that you built, plus the 15 that you said you bid on—they are all the houses that have been built, aren't they, to your knowledge?

A. I don't know. I know that they have been built, and what else has been built, I couldn't say.

Q. You don't know that they have decided not to build those houses, those 200 workmen's houses?

A. No. I don't think they have. They might have postponed it for a while. I bet they build them before they are through.

Q. Or it is possible that they have decided to let the miners live at their homes instead of building company shacks and a company village?

A. They might change their mind.

Q. You testified that on September 29, 1949, your company submitted a proposal to Pond Creek Pocahontas Company to construct an addition to a store building at Bartley, West Virginia, either on a cost-plus basis or with 8 per cent or a lump sum. You state you were not awarded that contract?

A. Let me get my schedule here. (Referring to papers.) No, sir.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Do you know whether there were any other bids for that work?

A. Well, they seemed to want to have the work page 578 } started on that store right away, and because of the location of the store it was uncertain as to exactly how much work would be necessary. We didn't have time to go into it fully enough, and submitted a proposal on the basis of cost-plus.

After that, they decided that they would attempt to fix up some drawings and specifications themselves. So, no action was taken on that bid, as far as I know.

Q. But you were never notified that your bid was not considered because of any happenings in July and August prior?

A. No.

All we knew was that we had gotten an enormous amount of work before. Every bid we made, we seemed to get.

From the time this thing happened in Kentucky, we were trying our best to maintain our connection, and were doing everything we could, didn't want to let any opportunities slip—if we stopped bidding, we knew we would be out, so we kept trying, but we never could get any more.

Q. Mr. Bryan, you have stated a number of times, in the course of your testimony, that the United Construction Workers would not recognize an A. F. of L. contract; that they would try to organize men even if they had an A. F. of L. contract.

Have you ever worked employees in the A. F. of L. union on work for a company where either the employees of other people on the work, the same as you were, were page 579 } U.C.W. members?

A. We have worked in various plants where the employees of companies were represented by the CIO, sometimes by A. F. of L., sometimes by District 50, sometimes by United Mine Workers. I don't recall anyone was represented by the United Construction Workers. I never heard of United Construction Workers before October, 1948, when Mr. Robert Fohl came to see me. I didn't know what they were.

Q. Where were you working then?

A. Solvay Process in Hopewell.

Q. Who is Mr. Robert Fohl?

A. Robert Fohl is Regional Director for United Construction Workers and District 50 in Richmond. I forget the number of the region. It is shown on the tabulation of Regional Directors as Region 19.

Mr. Fohl said he had organized our workers and laborers over at the Solvay plant in Hopewell. I told him we couldn't deal with him; that I would check into the matter. He and a man named Walter Shuey came to see me, and I called in Jack Joinville in the meantime. Jack Joinville, President of the Building Trades Council in Richmond, met with those men in my office in Richmond, with me.

After some discussion they went out, and I never heard any more from Mr. Fohl. It developed that none of our laborers had joined United Construction Workers at all.

page 580 } Q. Was there a Hopewell office at that time, of the UCW?

A. The office was in Richmond, the regional office. They may have had a branch office in Hopewell. I think they did. He said he didn't have any agreements with Richmond contractors. He mentioned two Hopewell people.

Q. Now, Mr. Bryan, didn't Mr. Fohl phone you in the week of October 23, 1948, advising you that he represented your common laborers on the Solvay job, and asked for a conference with you?

A. If you will let me look at my notes, I will tell you.

Q. Go right ahead.

A. It was sometime in the latter part of October or the first part of November, but I will give you the exact dates in a minute. (Referring to papers.)

Yes, sir, October 21 is the date.

I didn't have a memorandum as to whether or not Mr. Fohl called me or came to my office, but I do have a memo of 10-21-48, Mr. Robert R. Fohl, United Mine Workers, District 50, United Construction Workers, David Hunter, Hopewell representative, Utilities Engineering and Construction Company, Coastal Stevedoring Company. He did telephone me first. That must have been the first date.

Q. All right.

Didn't you tell him that you were going out of town and couldn't talk with him then, but you would talk with him about the matter on October 27?

A. I told him, my recollection is, that I was busy and couldn't see him, but that I would see him later. I didn't know who he was or anything about it. I never heard of United Construction Workers.

Q. But he told you on the phone who he was?

A. He told me on the phone. He must have, or I wouldn't have written it down here.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. And told you what he was phoning for?

A. He said that they had organized our laborers in Hopewell and wanted us to recognize them.

Q. Have you a memorandum of the next day you saw him?

A. The next memo I have is October 26, 1948. Whether that is a memorandum of another telephone call or a conference, I don't recall. My recollection is that it was another telephone call.

Q. Whether a telephone call or a conference, you again put him off until November 1, did you not?

A. That is right. He said—I have it written down again—“Robert R. Fohl, 311 West Grace Street, 7-7592, Regional Director, United Construction Workers, UMW; Joseph O'Hara, representative, Local 655-A, Hopewell, Virginia. No agreements with Construction Companies in Richmond. Have agreements with Utilities Engineering and Construction Company, Hopewell, Virginia, Coastal Stevedoring Company, Hopewell, Virginia.”

He mentioned the man who was Assistant Manager at the Solvay plant, Mr. George Owen—I think he is dead now. He claimed that he had 20 men signed up on our job at Hopewell. He was anxious to see us. I think that was a telephone call.

I put him off. I was anxious to have Mr. Joinville there when he came in.

Q. That was the 27th?

A. 26th, I have.

Q. 26th, all right.

Then you got in touch with Mr. Joinville, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you and Mr. Joinville, working together, had him sign up those common laborers, and you gave them a raise of 9 cents, and that was between the time of the 27th or 26th, and November 1st that you had put Mr. Fohl off to, was it not?

A. No, I think you are wrong about that. The wage rate for laborers in Richmond was 90 cents, and it has been 90 cents for a long time. It recently has been raised. The A. F. of L. union rate has been raised to a dollar in the last week or so. I don't recall any wage rate increase. The Business Agent for the laborers' local union in Richmond was Mr. Kendig. He was at that time. He is not now. I got in touch with Jack Joinville and said that the United Mine Workers people were after us to recognize them as the representative for our laborers at Solvay, and I was afraid it would cause trouble. Under our agreement with the Building Trades Council in Richmond, we couldn't do that.

Q. Did they get busy and sign them up?

A. Certainly. I don't know whether you are familiar with conditions in the building trades, but it leads to all sorts of trouble among the various crafts.

Q. On November 1st, then, you finally met with Mr. Fohl. You had Mr. Joinville there in the office, too, did you not?

A. Joinville, yes.

Q. You told Mr. Fohl then, "I am sorry, but these men are now members of the American Federation of Labor union," did you not?

A. No. I told him that we had an agreement with the Building Trades Council, and we couldn't make an agreement with him, but that my investigation showed that the laborers were not members of the United Construction Workers anyway, and I had gotten in touch with Mr. Kendig. I think I told him that. There is no reason why I shouldn't have, and told

Kendig if these men were not in his union he had page 584 { better get busy; that somebody else was going to take them in.

Q. He got busy and got them in?

A. I don't know whether he did or not. I know Mr. Joinville and Mr. Fohl had quite a pow-wow in my office, and they went out together, and that was the last I ever heard of it.

Q. Didn't Mr. Fohl tell you at that time that as long as you said they were signed up by the A. F. of L., he would honor the A. F. of L. contract and he would return to the common laborers the money they had paid him to join UCW?

A. No, sir. He certainly did not. I don't know what kind of deal or arrangement Mr. Joinville or Mr. Fohl made when they went out. Joinville just asked Mr. Fohl to lay off.

Q. By "lay off," he meant recognition of the A. F. of L. by UCW?

A. I don't know what you could say about that, because United Construction Workers certainly didn't recognize the A. F. of L. at Wheelwright when they went there with 200 or 300 men and broke up a job.

Q. I am asking you what your own personal experience is. You did go to the A. F. of L. after Fohl had phoned you, and took steps to block him off from your laborers?

A. Mr. Mullen, United Construction Workers is in direct competition with the A. F. of L. unions in organizing building page 585 } trades workers, and if the United Construction Workers came in on a job, there is no telling what trouble and confusion would finally be the result. You either have a United Construction Workers organization or have an A. F. of L. organization. We happened to be lined up with the A. F. of L., and I wanted to keep it that way. There were plenty of other people that Mr. Fohl could try to organize, and I saw no reason why he should come and pick on me.

Q. As long as you had unorganized labor, any union was free to try to organize them, weren't they?

Mr. Robertson: I call to the Court's attention that Mr. Mullen is getting right much into points of law. I don't object to it. I just wanted you to know that I knew what you were doing.

The Witness: I say they are free to organize in a peaceful sort of way. They haven't a right to go there with guns and threaten them.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. There were no guns and no threatening at Hopewell, were there?

A. No, but there have been at other places.

Q. And you did succeed in having them blocked off at Hopewell?

A. I didn't succeed in blocking them off. I just told Mr. Fohl I couldn't recognize him; that I was dealing with the

A. F. of L. unions, and for him to go work on page 586 } somebody else, and let me alone.

Q. You didn't tell him that until after you had put him off long enough to get the A. F. of L. people to get on the job?

A. Of course, I got in touch with the A. F. of L. people. I would have been very derelict in my duty if I hadn't.

Q. Yet you left him under the impression that you would talk with him about representing your laborers?

A. No, I don't think so, necessarily. He said that he represented them, and I said, "I will check into it," and I did check into it, and found out he was wrong. He either told me a story or was mistaken, because he didn't represent the laborers.

Q. How do you know he didn't represent them?

A. Because we checked, and they said so.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: Mr. Mullen, I hate to break in on this examination, but I promised one of the jurors that I would recess at 12:45. It is 12:45 now, and we will recess until 2:15.

(Whereupon, at 12:45 o'clock p. m., a recess was taken until 2:15 o'clock p. m., of the same day.)

page 587 } AFTERNOON SESSION.

2:15 p. m.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, Mr. Mullen hasn't come yet, but my attention has been called to the fact that I failed to offer these applications in evidence and I would like to offer them now.

The Court: Do you want to wait for Mr. Mullen?

Colonel Harris: I don't think that is necessary. I don't think he would object to it.

Mr. Robertson: I ask that the 16 applications be marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 57, sub 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16.

Colonel Harris: Judge, we might put in an objection, that no proper and sufficient predicate has been laid.

The Court: Very well.

Colonel Harris: And an exception to Your Honor's ruling.

(The documents referred to were marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 57, sub 1 through 16 and received in evidence.)

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: I want to apologize to the Court for our lateness, Your Honor. We were tied up in a parking lot and couldn't get our car.

The Court: That is perfectly all right, Mr. Pollard.

page 588 } Whereupon,

ALEXANDER HAMILTON BRYAN

the witness on the stand at time of recess, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Mr. Mullen: Mr. Reporter, will you read the last few questions and answers, please?

(The last few questions and answers read by the reporter.)

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. Do you think that when on October 21 you told him you would talk to him later, that you had nothing but the A. F. of L. Union, and again on the 27th when you told him you would still talk to him later, that he did not have a right to assume that in the meantime you were not going to do anything to prejudice his position?

A. I didn't tell him on October 21 that our employees were not represented by the A. F. of L. On the contrary, I told him that they were, and he insisted that he had organized our labor. So I said I would look into it and talk to him again. I try to be polite to people.

Q. Between that you got hold of Mr. Joinville and had him go to sign them up in his union?

A. I certainly did.

Q. Then on November 1 you said "I am sorry, page 589 <sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> they are in the A. F. of L. union."

A. I told him on October 21 that we had our contractual agreements with the A. F. of L. unions, and that we couldn't deal with his crowd. Mr. Fohl insisted he had already organized our laborers on the Hopewell job, and I said I would have to look into it. I did look into it and I found that Mr. Fohl was wrong. Later Mr. Fohl kept insisting and said he wanted to come down and talk to us. I said I would see him, and I had Mr. Joinville there, and I told him finally once and for all.

Q. And you had had Mr. Joinville in the meantime sign up the laborers?

A. I don't know what Mr. Joinville did. I told him that representatives of the United Mine Workers were trying to cause us trouble over at Hopewell on our job, that all of our employees were members of A. F. of L. unions. Let's be practical about this.

The Court: Just answer the question, Mr. Bryan.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. Did you have skilled laborers and common laborers on that job?

A. We had practically every classification of labor involved in all types of work in a chemical plant.

Q. Prior to that conversation with Mr. Fohl were your common laborers members of any union?

page 590 } A. I think that some of them were, maybe some of them were not.

Q. You don't know?

A. The A. F. of L laborers local union around here has not been as strong as it might be.

Q. How many common laborers did you have on the job there?

A. Of course that varied. The job started out very small, and before it was over we had spent a million and a half dollars in labor alone. I don't mean for common laborers but for pipefitters and electricians and on millwrights and iron workers and brick masons and carpenters and everybody else.

Q. How many common laborers did you have on October 21?

A. Mr. Mullen, I couldn't tell you to save my life without looking at the payrolls. If you want that information I will try to find it for you.

Q. I would like to know how many you had.

A. When I get back to my office I will try to get the information.

Q. Will you also ascertain whether or not there was an increase in their wages at that time?

A. Yes, I will. My recollection at the present time is that there was no wage rate increase, but I might be mistaken.

If there was, it wasn't just for that job. It was page 591 } a general increase all over.

Q. During the course of the testimony you have spoken of carpenter helpers and common laborers. Is that a different classification?

A. They have carpenter apprentices who are learning the carpenter trade, and they also have laborers who sometimes assist the carpenters and wait on them and perform very much the same duties that a carpenter apprentice would. A carpenter helper is a term broad enough to take in laborers that specialize in helping carpenters and also carpenter apprentices, I think.

Q. Is there a different wage rate for carpenters' helpers and laborers as between the two?

A. In some localities I think that is true. We have made no distinction there on the jobs in Breathitt County.

Q. You class them all as common laborers in Breathitt County?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. They were classified on our payroll as laborers, but many of them were particularly occupied in helping carpenters rather than in digging ditches and doing things of that sort.

Q. In my opening statement I referred to the several large international unions besides the railroad brotherhoods. Do you know what the difference is in the organization of the CIO, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, page 592 } and the A. F. of L.?

A. I think I do.

Q. The CIO is what is known as an industrial organization. They organize a whole industry, do they not, such as the automobile workers and steel workers, regardless of crafts?

A. The United Mine Workers have an organization that is organized on an industrial basis, and for a long time, certainly from 1898 up until 1935 or 1936 the United Mine Workers was affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. At about that time after the National Industrial Recovery Act was passed Mr. John L. Lewis and some of the other officers and leaders of the international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor were very anxious for the American Federation of Labor to endorse a program for the organization of workers on an industrial basis rather than on a craft basis. The International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners is a union organized on a craft basis. The plumbers and pipefitters, the United Association of Plumbers and Steam Fitters, is organized on a craft basis. The same thing applies to the Iron Workers International Union, and the Painters International Union. But the printers, the United Mine Workers, the clothing workers, and some others were very anxious to take steps to organize workers in the mass production industries such as automobiles, page 593 } radios, rubber, on an industrial basis. At the

A. F. of L. convention in Atlantic City in 1935, November or October, 1935, a major quarrel developed on that issue. The Committee on Resolutions voted 8 to 7 in favor of organizing on a craft basis instead of on an industrial basis. At that time Mr. John L. Lewis, Mr. Dubinsky, and some others, decided to form what was known as the Committee for Industrial Organization. Mr. Lewis was made chairman of that committee. It was composed of the presidents of eight international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and commanded about a million workers. From that time on, Mr. Lewis, who was a vice president of the American Federation of Labor, resigned shortly after that Atlantic City convention in 1935. The American Federation of Labor opposed the organization of workers on an industrial basis opposed the committee for Industrial Organization, and expelled from the American Federation of Labor at a later date the unions that were affiliated with or connected with the Committee for Industrial Organization. Also, the United Mine Workers in turn expelled from its organization Mr. William Green, who had been in the United Mine Workers for many years and at one time was president of District 6. After that, the Committee for Industrial Organization held a convention and the name was changed to Congress of Industrial Organizations. The two unions have been in competition with each other from that time on in the organization of workers.

Q. Mr. Bryan, I didn't want to interrupt you, but the Congress of Industrial Organizations is an industry-wide union, isn't it?

A. That is correct.

Q. And the American Federation of Labor is a craft union?

A. That is correct. Primarily. There may be some unions in it that are not.

Q. The United Mine Workers for their mine workers is also an industrial union.

A. That is right.

Q. District 50 and the UMW take in both, either industry or crafts or unskilled workers, don't they?

A. No. When this quarrel over the method of organizing workers was developing, it was at the 1936 convention of the United Mine Workers that they amended their charter so that the jurisdiction of the United Mine Workers would include not only coal miners and people working on coke ovens, but would include coal processing plants.

Q. Mr. Bryan, I don't want to interrupt you, but without going into that—

Mr. Robertson: Excuse me one minute. If Your Honor please, he asked him the question and I think the witness is entitled to answer it without being caught off in the middle.

Mr. Mullen: It is not responsive to the question.

Mr. Robertson: I think it is responsive.

The Court: Read the question back.

(The pending question was read by the reporter.)

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I don't want to argue against the ruling of the Court.

The Court: I am not ruling that he can't answer further, but he has answered the question. If he wants to qualify it, he is entitled to do it.

Mr. Robertson: I don't want to keep on interrupting, but I have studied this thing very much myself, and I know that a lot of these questions just can't be answered yes or no and then quit.

The Court: If the witness desires to qualify his answers, he has a perfect right to do so, but make it as brief as possible.

The Witness: What I was trying to say is this: That the UMW amended its constitution so that its jurisdiction would include coal processing plants. After the quarrel with the American Federation of Labor over the method to be used in organizing workers came to a head and a show-down, the United Mine Workers of America took steps to organize district 50 pursuant to the change made in the constitution early in 1936, and District 50 was organized, its charter was finally issued in September, 1936. It was then while page 596 } affiliated with the United Mine Workers considered itself in a sense a part of the CIO. That is shown by the fact that one of the publications is called the CIO news, district 50 edition. The workers employed in District 50 were organized on an industrial basis, although they included a multitude of types of businesses. It was not considered a craft union in any sense of the word.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. You are now speaking of the CIO?

A. I am speaking—

Q. I am speaking of District 50 after it was chartered by the United Mine Workers of America as a district.

A. They represented gas and coke workers on an industrial basis.

Q. And also took in any others?

A. Later on, the charter was further amended to include any other industries approved by the International Executive Board, and then they went to town to take in everything in sight that didn't include mining coal.

Q. All right. That is what I am getting at. You testified at length as to the different classes of workers that they took in. Wasn't that entirely within their right to do that?

Mr. Robertson: I object, Your Honor.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

The Witness: Nobody I know of has denied the page 597 } right of District 50 to try to organize anybody they want to. The only question is the methods used in doing the organizing. After all, between these three big unions you have spoken about there is the keenest type of competition in connection with the organizing of workers. District 50 was organized as an arm or branch of the United Mine Workers to compete first with the A. F. of L. and then after the CIO and the United Mine Workers split, it was then to compete with the CIO.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. And it does compete with both of them?

A. It competes with them repeatedly. It is their agent to do it, that is, the agent of the Mine Workers.

Q. You have stated that from your study of the United Mine Workers and the United Construction Workers and District 50, supreme power is vested in an international convention which meets every four years.

A. It used to meet every two years, but now it is every four years.

Q. That under the international convention there is an International Executive Board which corresponds to the Board of Directors of a corporation,—

A. Well—

The Court: Let him finish the question. Finish the question, Mr. Mullen.

By Mr. Mullen:

page 598 } Q. And that there are a president and other officers. You have been asked as to the chairman of the organization committee of District 50, secretary-treasurer and comptroller of District 50, and the national director and national comptroller of the UMW, as to how they were appointed or elected. You replied that each of these were appointed by the international president with the approval of the International Executive Board.

Where the International Executive Board has approved or designated a person for a certain position, it is merely a form for the international president to issue a commission in accordance with those directions of the international board, isn't it?

A. The constitution of the UMW—

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: Can you answer that yes or no and then qualify it, Mr. Bryan?

The Witness: No, I can't answer it yes or no, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, sir. Go ahead.

The Witness: The constitution of the United Mine Workers of America provides that between international conventions the complete management and control of the organization of the United Mine Workers, including all of its districts and district 50, the various divisions, is vested in the international executive board, which has supreme page 599 } judicial and executive power over all of those districts and over all of its members. Under that you can say that the International Executive Board could appoint anybody it wants. But there is another provision in the construction which provides for Mr. Lewis, the President, the international President, to make appointments that are necessary, with the approval or subject to the approval of the International Executive Board. I would say that both of them make appointments, but it is customary for Mr. Lewis to do the appointing subject to the approval of the Board.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. Coming back, then, to the question, when the executive board has approved or designated a person for appointment to any of the jobs mentioned, it is purely a matter of form for the president to carry out the orders or approval of the international board and issue proper commissions?

A. If the International Executive Board did that, I am certain that Mr. Lewis would carry through the appointment. If he didn't all the International Executive Board would have to do would be to disapprove Mr. Lewis' appointment.

The constitution further provides that between meetings of the International Executive Board Mr. Lewis is to run the show.

Q. It is no different from the President of a page 600 } corporation running it between meetings of the Board of Directors.

A. Mr. Lewis has power to remove the international board members if he wants to.

Q. That is a matter that you have no knowledge of.

A. It is provided in the constitution. Ordinarily the president of a corporation can't do that.

Q. Your contract with the Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council which you have put in evidence is dated May 15, 1947, is it not?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was executed at that time?

A. At about that time, yes, sir.

Q. At about that time. What is the Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council?

A. It is an association of local unions affiliated with the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor having their principal offices in Richmond.

Not all of the A. F. of L. local unions, Richmond A. F. of L. unions in the building trades, are affiliated with the Building Trades Council. There are some that are not, but there are a lot that are, and those that are make up the Building Trades Council.

Q. What is the territory in which the Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council has jurisdiction?

A. There is no jurisdiction. The jurisdiction page 601 } of the Council as such, each local union affiliated with the Council has jurisdiction, supposedly, over certain areas. Those areas differ depending upon the local union involved.

Q. An act was passed by the General Assembly of Virginia in 1947 known as the Virginia Right to Work Law, which was signed by the Governor on January 21, 1947, but did not become effective until April 28, 1947. Your contract with the Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council was signed just a few days before that law became effective, was it not?

A. It was signed about April 15. I know it was signed before the law became effective.

Q. You and the Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council purposely entered into it in order to get in before that law became effective, did you not?

A. Well, we were anxious to have an agreement that would be within the law, and we were advised that this could be done. It wasn't unlawful if we wanted to do it that way and if it wasn't unlawful, there as no reason why we should not do it.

Q. But the purpose was to get a contract before the Virginia law which had already been passed became effective?

A. We had a contract with the Building Trades Council before that time, and this contract was prepared and signed on or about April 15, 1947, and we purposely page 602 } tried to make it in such a way that it would be within the law, which I believe it is.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Could you have entered into such a contract after April 28, 1947?

A. I can only express my opinion about it, if you want it. I will tell you I think that it probably would be unlawful and in violation of the Virginia Right to Work Act, but because it was entered into before the law became effective and it never has been extended or renewed, the contract is good and is not in violation of the Virginia Right to Work Act. We have sought the advice of counsel on the subject, and that is what they think.

Q. How long has that contract run?

A. The contract with reference to duration provides as follows. Do you want me to read it?

Q. Yes, you can read it.

A. "This agreement shall become effective April 15, 1947, and shall continue in full force and effect until terminated by the written notice provided for in the paragraph next below.

"Either party to this contract shall have the right to terminate same on April 15, 1949, by giving three months' prior or written notice to the other. After April 15, 1949, either party to this contract shall have the right to terminate this contract on its anniversary date, that is, April 15, page 603 } by giving three months' prior written notice to the other. It is expressly understood and agreed that this contract shall continue in full force and effect without interruption until such time as it may be terminated by the written notice hereinabove provided for, and that the failure of either party to give notice to terminate shall not be construed as a renewal or extension of this contract."

So the contract runs indefinitely until terminated.

Q. Did either you or the Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council ever give notice to terminate it?

A. We have never given notice to terminate it. The Building Trades Council did give us notice to terminate it about a year ago, but it was too late, and afterwards they agreed to it.

Q. The agreement provides that the contractor agrees with each local union to employ only members of that local union when working in the area over which it, the local union, has jurisdiction and when performing work over which it, the local union, has jurisdiction.

A. Which article is that, Mr. Mullen?

Q. That is Article 2, section 1, the first sentence.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that in labor parlance a union contract, a union shop contract?

A. It is a closed shop contract.

page 604 } Q. That is a closed shop contract.

A. That is a closed shop contract. It has not been strictly enforced in all particulars at all times.

Q. The contract uses the words "local union" and "other local unions". What is the difference between those?

A. That is covered by Article 1 under the heading "Definitions." Look on page 1. As used herein the words 'Local union' shall mean a local union now or hereafter associated with the Council. As used herein the words 'other local unions' shall mean a local union which is affiliated with the National Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, but which is not associated with the Council.

Q. When you got out to Kentucky there were other local unions under the definition of this contract, were they not?

A. Yes, that would be covered by that.

Q. There was not a wage scale in this contract, was there?

A. No, sir.

Q. So this contract was merely a contract to make contracts with either unions in the local council or other local unions if you got beyond its jurisdiction.

A. There is a provision in the contract about wages, I believe.

Q. Article 4.

page 605 } A. It doesn't state what the amount shall be, but that we agree to pay the prevailing wage rate in whatever rate in whatever territory might be involved.

Q. So when you went—

A. As a matter of fact, it says "prevailing wage rate is the same as may have been established as the result of collective bargaining."

Q. When you went then into Kentucky you had to make a contract with the local union, and that was a contract that provided for the wages that would be paid?

A. It wasn't always customary to make a contract. The only contract that we actually made on the Kentucky job was for the carpenters, and they specifically asked for it. We have gone to a lot of other places, and I would say that it is not customary to make a contract with each local union every place you go. On the Kentucky job when we started we got in touch with the Charleston, West Virginia, Iron Workers Union. We found out what the scale was. We asked for men, and they were sent, and we paid the scale. The same thing for the electricians. We called the Lexington Local and said that our subsidiaries, Virginia Mechanical Corporation had an agreement with the IBEW, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and we would appreciate it if they would send us men, and found out about the wage rate, the terms and conditions. The men were sent to us. The page 606 } same thing happened for the plumbers and pipe-fitters. In the case of the carpenters there were two local unions very close together, and it was a question which one was closest to the job, whether it would be the Prestonburg local or the Paintsville local. At that time there was no Salyersville local. After checking into it, it looked like the Paintsville Local was closest to the job and so we did make an agreement with them and I think that they wanted the agreement because of some question that might be raised as to whether it was Prestonburg or Paintsville that had jurisdiction over the work.

Q. There was no Salyersville Local at that time?

A. No.

Q. When was that organized, do you know?

A. Not of my own knowledge. I have heard it was in May, 1949.

Q. At the later date, though, you did have some negotiations or talk with the agent for that local?

A. After the Salyersville local was chartered by the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, the Salyersville Local was anxious to claim jurisdiction over the job because it definitely was the closest local union, but under the contract which we had with the Paintsville local, the Paintsville Local did have jurisdiction. So there was some friction there between those two local unions as to who was going to have the jurisdiction. We continued to recognize the Paintsville Local in accordance with our agreement. After our work was interrupted and the men were threatened and intimidated and we couldn't get the Paintsville carpenters to go back to work, we did approach Robert Poe and asked him please to try to man the job.

page 608 } Q. In other words, there was friction between those two unions over your work?

A. That was something over which we didn't have any control, but that would have been straightened by the international representatives.

Q. When you got the iron workers and the hoist operator, the millwright foreman and millwrights, which I believe you say you got from various unions, did they transfer to the Paintsville union and become members of the Paintsville union?

A. I don't know whether they made them transfer into the union or not. Some unions require people to get clearance cards and come in, and some don't. Those millwrights came out of the Ashland local, I think. Anyway, they reported to the Business Agent of the Paintsville Local, through the facilities of the Paintsville Local.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. This contract that you had with the Richmond Council you testified is, with regard to the local unions, a closed shop contract. With regard to other local unions, that page 609 { is, those that are not in the Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council, it is what is known as a preferential shop contract?

A. The agreement says on that point: "With respect to work which the contractor may have in any area over which a local union does not have jurisdiction, the contractor agrees to contact the other local union which has jurisdiction over that area to request that other local union to furnish qualified workers, and to give preference to members of that other local union in employing workers."

Q. It is, then, what is known as a preferential shop contract with regard to other local unions?

A. I say that is right. I don't know exactly what a preferential contract is, but this says that we would give preference to the other local unions.

Q. When going out to Kentucky, you entered into a contract with the Carpenters' Local Union No. 646, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That reads, does it not: "Carpenters' Local Union No. 646, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, on behalf of each member thereof"?

A. Could I get my copy of that contract?

Q. Surely.

page 610 { (Witness obtaining document.)

Mr. Mullen: Will you read him the question?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: The opening paragraph of the agreement reads as follows:

"This agreement made and entered into this 14th day of December, 1948, by and between Construction contractors, builders, and associations, signatory hereto, hereinafter referred to as Operators, parties of the first part, and Carpenters Local Union No. 646, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, on behalf of each member thereof, parties of the second part, and covering all the operations of the said parties in the territory or jurisdiction of said Local Union No. 646."

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. The signatory association referred to as the operator was the Laburnum Construction Corporation?

A. That is right.

Q. That provided for an exclusive bargaining agency with that local union, did it not?

A. The next portion of the contract reads as follows:

"It is agreed that this contract is for the exclusive joint use and benefit of the contracting parties as defined and set out in the agreement. It is agreed that the Local Carpenters Union No. 646, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, is recognized as the exclusive bargaining agency representing the employees of the parties of the first part in the territory and in connection with work over which the parties of the second part have jurisdiction."

Q. The contract being for the exclusive joint use and benefit of the contracting parties, and one of the contracting parties was that union, acting on behalf of each members thereof?

A. That is right.

Q. It didn't cover anybody else than those designated in the contract, isn't that right?

A. That was an agreement that covered work over which the United Brotherhood of Carpenters has jurisdiction, within the area over which that local union has jurisdiction.

Q. But as you read, it was for the exclusive use and benefit of the contracting parties; and the contracting parties were the Laburnum Corporation and the members of that union, and the contract specifically states it is made on behalf of the members.

A. That is what the agreement says.

Q. It didn't cover anybody but members of that union, did it?

A. This agreement just covered the members of that union. It didn't have anything to do with iron workers or anybody else.

page 612 } Q. It didn't have anything to do with common laborers?

A. It did have something to do with the millwrights, because they are part of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters. They are members of that international union. Other than the carpenters and millwrights, this agreement didn't affect anybody else.

Q. And didn't affect the common laborers specifically?

A. No, not specifically. Indirectly it might, but not specifically.

Q. Was Local Union No. 646 ever certified by the National Labor Relations Board to you as the bargaining agent for your employees?

A. Not that I know of. If they were, I haven't heard of it.

Q. You would have been given notice if they certified them to you as the bargaining agent, so as to bind your company, would you not?

A. I don't know much about that. If they had been certified, I feel sure I would have known about it. How I would have known about it, I don't know.

Q. You don't know whether they ever made application for certification, whether the union ever made application for certification?

A. I doubt very much that they did. I don't know of a single local union in the City of Richmond that page 613 } ever has made application for certification. It is almost not customary. That is the way it works.

Q. You don't know of unions in Richmond that have applied for certification—

A. In the building trades. I don't mean in other lines.

I might say about that, that the matter had been taken up from time to time with Mr. Denham before he got put out, and nobody yet had been able to figure out how to work the thing out in the building trades. Employees shift around too much. They are not personal employees like you would have in a plant.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. When you entered into this contract, had you already employed your skilled laborers?

A. Which contract are you referring to?

Q. The contract with Local No. 646.

A. When this was a question as to which union would have jurisdiction over the work in Breathitt County, that is, the Prestonburg Local or the Paintsville Local, one of our representatives got in touch with the international representatives in Louisville. I think I am correct about this. And it was decided by him that Paintsville would be the proper Local to deal with.

We had started to work before this agreement was signed, but we also agreed orally to recognize the Paintsville Local as having jurisdiction over the work in Breathitt County before this agreement was signed, dated December 14. We started to work in the first part of November.

Later on, after the Salversville Local was organized, the two locals sort of divided up the work.

Q. If a carpenter who was not a member of the union had applied for employment, would you have employed him?

A. We would have told him to go get a referral card from the Business Agent.

The Court: From whom?

The Witness: From the Business Agent.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. By "referral card," you mean telling him to join the local union?

A. We would have said that we were getting our carpenters through the Business Agent of Local Union 646, and we would tell him to go see the steward on the job. The steward would probably ask to see his book, whether his dues were paid up.

Q. In other words, if he was not a union member, you would not employ him?

A. No, not unless there were some very extraordinary circumstances where you couldn't get any men. If you want to deal with the local union, you might as well go whole hog.

Q. Don't you know that that was a violation of page 615 of the Kentucky law and of the Taft-Hartley Act, both?

A. I do not.

Q. It never has been brought to your attention that that was a violation of both of those?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. Under the provisions of our agreement with the Building Trades Council, that was what we were obligated to do.

Q. I am talking about your agreement with the local brotherhood entered into on the 14th of December, 1948.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I have sat here now for an hour and 15 minutes. They have been questioning Mr. Bryan on questions of law, and Mr. Mullen is bound to know, just as well as Your Honor and I do, that it is for the Court to construe written instruments. I think it has gone far enough. I would like to get on with the facts of the case and let the Court work out the law.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, I don't think we have been asking him to construe any statutes. I asked if it had been brought to his attention that it was in violation of the law, of the Taft-Hartley Act, of the Kentucky law; and he said it had not been brought to his attention. I didn't ask him to construe the law.

Mr. Robertson: Then he asked him if he didn't know he was violating the Taft-Hartley Act and if he didn't know he was violating the Kentucky law. My limited knowledge is that on the facts of this case, he wasn't violating page 616 } either of them, so there can be a difference between us right here.

If you haven't asked him a question of law, I don't know what a question of law is. "Don't you know you have violated the Taft-Hartley Act?" Isn't that the question?

Mr. Mullen: I asked if it had been brought to his attention.

The Court: I think it is proper to ask him if it was brought to his attention.

Mr. Robertson: I don't object to that.

The Witness: It was brought to my attention that we were not in violation of any law.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. If you employed a carpenter and the Paintsville Carpenters Local Union objected and said the person was not a member of their union, did you discharge him if they asked you to do so?

A. The question never came up.

Q. Would you have done it?

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, that is getting right into the realm of speculation. You can get into all sorts of things.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: I will sustain that objection.

The Witness: We were trying our best to cooperate with the Paintsville Local.

The Court: I sustained the objection.

page 617 } The Witness: To try to have friendly relations.

Colonel Harris: Will Your Honor exclude that statement made after you had ruled?

The Court: Gentlemen, the statement made by Mr. Bryan after the Court sustained the objection should be disregarded by you.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. What wage rate did your contract with the local union provide for?

A. The contract, with reference to wages, provides as follows:

"It is agreed that the following wage scale be established as the prevailing wages to be paid under this contract: The parties of the first part agree to pay wages in accordance with the scale asserted in this contract for all work performed by parties of the second part as follows: $1.75 per hour for straight-time up to 8 hours' work performed in one day. Time and one-half per hour for all time worked over 8 hours in any one day. Time and one-half per hour for all time worked on Saturdays. Time and one-half per hour for all time worked on Sundays or holidays. Holidays shall include the following named days: New Years Day, 4th of July, Labor Day, Thanksgiving, Christmas Day."

Q. That is the sole wage scale contained in the contract, isn't it?

page 618 } A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you pay your laborers?

A. Ninety cents an hour.

Q. So you wouldn't claim that they came under that contract?

A. Oh, no.

The agreement says it is also made subject to any laws, State or Federal, which may be applicable.

Mr. Mullen: There is no question, Your Honor. I object to that.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: I sustain the objection.

Mr. Robertson: I don't want to press the point, Your Honor, but in fairness to the witness, I think I ought to say that if Mr. Mullen picks out a sentence here and there in a legal instrument, in all fairness to the witness he should complete his answer.

The Court: Of course, when you take the witness back, you may ask him that question if you want to.

Mr. Mullen: He has read the complete paragraph about labor wages, and so stated himself, and then he volunteered something else.

Mr. Robertson: He hasn't read the modifying clause.

Mr. Mullen: It had nothing to do with it.

Mr. Robertson: That is what you say.

Mr. Mullen: Your saying it doesn't make it so.
page 619 { The Court: Let's move along, gentlemen.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. The contract provided that it was for the duration: "This agreement shall be effective for the duration of this job from and after the date of this agreement, the job being work for Pend Creek Pocahontas Company in connection with a coal preparation plant at its No. 1 Kentucky Mine, Breathitt County, Kentucky."

A. That is right.

Q. That contemplated, then, that the only work you were to do under that contract was the preparation plant, according to its terms, did it not?

A. I construed that to mean work incidental to the construction of the coal preparation plant at the No. 1 mine, and would include the 25 houses, school house, and other work going on at the same time in that area.

Q. That is not what the contract said, though, is it?

A. It might have been worded a little better, but you wouldn't have one local union recognized as the bargaining agent for the employees on the coal preparation plant, and have another carpenters' local union or another union recognized on the same type of work on a school house a half mile away, going on at the same time. That just wouldn't work out.

Q. You were asked on direct examination:

"Did it ever come to your attention during the progress of the work that your laborers were contemplating a strike against Laburnum Company?"

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

You stated "No."

"By Mr. Robertson:

"Q. I mean, did you ever hear anything about a strike until you heard his opening statement yesterday?"

That refers to Mr. Mullen's statement.

You answered: "This was the first time I heard it."

You didn't mean that, did you?

A. I certainly did. We never did have a strike.

Q. You never heard about a strike until I made my opening statement here?

A. I didn't call it a strike.

Q. You had the picket sign that you took down, didn't you?

A. Mr. Mullen, when the employees that are working for you are dissatisfied and quit work and go off, you have a strike; but when a bunch of hoodlums come and run them away, that is not a strike, and that is what happened to us.

Q. That is simply your statement of the case.

A. That is my idea, that we didn't have a strike and never did have a strike.

Q. And you never heard a strike mentioned until I spoke of it in my opening statement in this case?

A. The United Mine Workers called it a strike page 621  $\frac{1}{2}$  on one of their placards that they put up at the job, but it never was a strike at any time.

Q. The question asked you, though, was if you had ever heard of a strike until I mentioned it in my opening statement. I ask you if you really meant that?

A. I was assuming that it meant—of course, I have heard of a strike. We have had lots of strikes all over the country, but I was assuming that it referred to a strike in connection with our work.

Q. That is exactly what I am asking you.

A. We never had a strike in connection with the work, regardless of what anybody calls it.

Q. That is purely your opinion. Didn't you take down at least three picket signs saying "Strike"? Didn't the very first one say, "On Strike"?

A. My memory may be faulty, but I think that the first one said, "UMWA Picket Line—Contractor Laburnum." We didn't have any dealings with the UMWA.

Q. You are now claiming that you did have; that the UMWA was a party to this, aren't you?

A. I meant by that, that our employees were not members

Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

of the U.M.W.A. Not a single employee ever approached us making a complaint about anything. As a matter of fact, when some of them left, they had some very complimentary things to say. Not one sour note.

page 622 } Q. Those picket signs didn't mean to you, a strike?

A. No. It only meant one thing: that the Mine Workers and the United Construction Workers were just trying to break up our job, just like Mr. Hart said they were going to take over.

Q. You have testified throughout that they told you they were going to close down the work. Isn't that, in labor parlance, the same as a strike?

A. No. You can have a strike without closing down a job.

Mr. Mullen: May I see those exhibits, please, the picket signs that were torn down?

(Exhibits handed to Mr. Mullen.)

page 623 } By Mr. Mullen:

Q. The only use of a picket line is in connection with a strike, isn't it?

A. I don't know whether it is the only use. You generally associate a picket line with a strike.

Q. When you found the notices of a picket line at your work you didn't associate it with a strike?

A. Mr. Mullen: to repeat what I said a minute ago, regardless of what the United Mine Workers called it, as far as we knew our employees had made application to join the Salyersville Local. They had never protested to us, they had never complained there about it. The work went on in a proper manner until Mr. Hart led that big bunch of men out there and threatened and intimidated everybody and stopped the work. Just because Mr. Hart's crowd put up a sign saying there was a strike didn't make it a strike. Yes, I saw those, but I still don't think there was a strike. In fact, I say there wasn't a strike.

Q. You say you never heard of a strike. That was the question you were asked.

I show you this while I have it here. You took that down.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It has been in your possession or in the possession of your company ever since?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

page 624 } A. Yes, I turned it over to Mr. Flippen and he put it in the safe.

Q. There have been no changes made on the signs you took down?

A. None at all.

(Referring to Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 25)

Q. And there is on it, is there not, an arrow connecting the word carpenters with helpers?

A. It is just like it is here.

Q. It is there, isn't it?

A. Whoever wrote it said carpenters and then helpers and laborers and then decided they wanted to make a little revision.

Q. And put an arrow from carpenters to helpers to qualify it?

A. That is right.

Q. You referred to Breathitt County as bloody Breathitt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever heard any other county out there called bloody so and so?

A. Yes, bloody Harlan.

Q. Bloody Harlan. Doesn't that go back to the ancient fend days when they got those names?

A. It is not so ancient. Those people out there have a reputation of being ready to shoot you just as page 625 } soon as they will look at you.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, I don't think I am going to ask for a view.

The Court: Do you promise the Court you won't? It is a long way to go.

Mr. Mullen: A view of the country?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Mullen: I went through Devil Anse Hatfield's yard one morning at four o'clock in the morning before daybreak.
I didn't know whether I was going to be shot.

Mr. Robertson: I know you won't mind my telling you this.
I went up this hollow with Monroe Sublett to see somebody up there last September and took the automobile just as far as we could and it played out and we went on up the creek bottom at night and we walked about two miles and every time we would come to a light Monroe Sublett would holler,
"Taint nobody but Monroe Sublett!" (laughter).

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: All right, gentlemen, let's proceed.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. Mr. Bryan, on the 14th of July, did Mr. Hart phone you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he tell you that he represented the United Construction Workers and that they represented your common laborers?

page 626 } A. Mr. Hart said that he represented United Construction Workers in District 50. He didn't say that he represented our laborers. He said we were working in United Mine Worker territory and he was going to take over, that he was going to shut our job down just like he did the people in Wheelwright unless we recognized the United Construction Workers.

Q. Didn't he tell you specifically that he represented only the common laborers?

A. He definitely did not, because in connection with the original conversation with Mr. Hart I asked him about it, and he said that he was going to take over our work and represent all the employees, including the iron workers and the pipefitters and the electricians and the carpenters and everybody else.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told him that we had agreements with A. F. of L. unions, and it wouldn't work out, that I didn't see how we could do it. So he said that—I told him I would think about it. I didn't see how I could do it. I asked him to think about it and to let me hear from him again before he did anything. Mr. Hart said that he wasn't so much interested in the present work, but that he was thinking mainly about all the additional work which he understood we were going to do, that he was going to close down our job unless we page 627 } recognized them.

Q. You say that you asked him to let you hear from him before he did anything?

A. I certainly did.

Q. All right. Did he ask you to write him as promptly as possible what you would do?

A. No, I don't think he did. He asked me to get in touch with him again, and I asked him to get in touch with me again, and didn't either one of us get in touch with the other.

Q. As soon as you finished the conversation with him, what did you do?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

A. Called Mr. Delinger. I either called to Mr. Delinger or called Mr. Joinville. I think I called Mr. Delinger.

Q. You did that just as soon as you finished talking to him?

A. Yes, I did that right away.

Q. What did you tell them, whichever man you called?

A. If you are referring to Mr. Delinger, I asked him if he knew anything about United Construction Workers or District 50 trying to organize our workers. Mr. Delinger said he didn't know anything about it. So I told him about my conversation with Mr. Hart and asked him to watch the situation very closely and to keep me fully informed. That was on the 14th of July, which was a Thursday. I called Mr. Joinville and told him what Mr. Hart had said he was going to do and asked him for suggestions. Mr. Joinville said that they would try to help us and suggested that I call Mr. Herbert Rivers, who was the Secretary-Treasurer of the Building Trades Department of the A. F. of L. in Washington. I called Mr. Rivers up.

Q. Did you ask Mr. Delinger if the laborers were in any union?

A. I think I did.

Q. What did Mr. Delinger reply?

A. My recollection is that he didn't think they were in any union. I asked Mr. Delinger to take it up with the representatives of the Paintsville and Salyersville carpenter locals and see if he couldn't get them in one of those unions of carpenters helpers, and he took steps to do that.

* * * * *

Q. What did you instruct Mr. Delinger to do when you phoned him on July 14?

A. I asked him if he knew anything about the United Mine Workers, District 50, and the United Construction Workers organizing our workers, and he said he didn't. I asked him to keep in close touch with the situation and told him about Mr. Hart's conversation, that Mr. Hart had said he was going to organize all of our employees, including everybody. I inquired especially about the laborers. Mr. Delinger seemed uncertain about the laborers. So I asked him or suggested, rather, that he talk to the business agents of the two carpenter locals, the one in Salyersville, 697, and the one in Paintsville, 646, and that he tell them about my conversation with Mr. Hart and see if arrangements couldn't be made for the laborers to be taken into one of those locals as carpenter helpers. I inquired about what happened at Wheelwright because Mr. Hart had referred to it, and received information about it.
page 630 }

Q. Mr. Bryan, did Mr. Delinger tell you that there had been contact between some of the organizers of the United Construction Workers and your common laborers?

A. He said he didn't know anything about it at all, that the first he heard about the United Construction Workers or any of those organizations was from me in my telephone conversation with him that day.

Q. Then you instructed him, you said, to take it up with one of the local unions to see if he couldn't get your laborers into the union as carpenters helpers.

A. That is right. He said he would do it.

Q. Then did Mr. Delinger report to you what he did?

A. That was on a Thursday. I will refer to my little book here. That was Thursday, July 14, and while I don't remember any specific calls to Mr. Delinger on Friday, I am almost positive I did talk to him, because I did talk to him practically daily. I think I talked to him again on Monday, the 18th. I think it was reported to me that some UCW representatives had been out to the job. On the 16th, which was page 631 } Saturday, Mr. Ragan, our chief clerk, mailed in to me an application blank form for membership in District 50 which one of our laborers had turned over to Mr. Ragan. On the night of the 18th I left for Kentucky on the train.

Q. Let's come back to July 14. Did Mr. Delinger report to you that he had talked to Monroe Sublett, President of the carpenter's union No. 646 at Paintsville, Kentucky, about the matter of having laborers taken into the Paintsville local as carpenter helpers?

A. I don't know whether he told it to me then or told it to me on the 18th, but thereabouts he told me that he had discussed it with a representative of the union.

Q. Did he tell you that Mr. Sublett thought that the general idea was good, but that the laborers would be taken into the Salyersville local union as carpenter's helpers?

A. I think he told me something to that effect. I can't remember the exact words. He told me that neither one of those business agents had the forms for these fellows to sign and that they were getting in touch with an international representative in Louisville. As soon as the forms came in, they were going to talk to the laborers about it.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Robert Poe was one of your carpenters at that time, wasn't he?

A. Yes, sir. Robert Poe had been working for us a good time, I think since around November 1948.

Q. Mr. Delinger reported to you he had also page 632 1 discussed it with Robert Poe?

A. I think he first talked to Mr. Sublett, and Mr. Sublett thought it would be better to have that part handled through the Salyersville local.

Q. Then did Mr. Poe agree to try to have the laborers taken into his local as carpenter helpers?

A. That was the general idea. He went out and was allowed time to go and talk to them.

Q. You were going to change the classification from laborers to carpenter helpers in order to get them in the union.

A. That is right, and maybe give them a wage rate increase.

Q. Neither local union 646 nor local union 697 had the necessary application forms to be signed, did they?

A. That is what I was told, Mr. Mullen. They came in later and they were signed.

Q. So then they phoned to Louisville and asked them to rush them out, didn't they?

A. That is right.

Q. You instructed that Mr. Poe be given time to get the laborers together and sign them up, didn't you?

A. I don't know that I gave instructions. Mr. Delinger told me that that is what he did. I had asked page 633 1 that arrangements be made to do it, and pursuant to that discussion that is what Mr. Delinger did.

Q. Mr. Poe was given time off, and he got these applications and got the laborers together and got them to sign up.

A. Robert Poe talked to the laborers. They said they would like to join his union. I am informed that Mr. Poe told them that if they joined his union, he would try to get them a wage increase to a dollar, which would be improved by Pond Creek Pocahontas Company.

Q. What chance did the laborers have of refusing to sign when you as the head of the Laburnum Corporation had instructed your superintendent out there to get them signed up? You had taken one of your workmen and given him time off and sent him with cards to get your laborers together and to say, "Here, the boss wants you to sign up." What chance did they have to refuse?

A. They had plenty of chance. They could have said they didn't want to join the union if they wanted to. They could have said they wanted to join another union.

Q. They were working there because they wanted a job, weren't they?

A. Most of them had been working there since November 1948. This was sometime in July, almost nine months, and there never had been any discussion, no trouble. Everything was going smoothly, as far as things could go on a job of that kind.

page 634 } Q. I am not asking you that question. I am asking you what chance was there that they would refuse when they were put on the spot by an employee of the company undertaking to say what union they must go in and presenting it to them at the direction of the boss of the job?

A. Nobody was being put on the spot at all.

Q. That is what you may call it.

A. They were being given—

Mr. Robertson: If that is what you call it, it doesn't make it so. That is what you said.

The Court: You gentlemen are even now.

Mr. Mullen: That is a matter of inference for the jury.

The Witness: Those laborers had sense enough to know that the United Construction Workers and the A. F. of L. people wouldn't work out very well together.

Colonel Harris: Your Honor, will you exclude that statement as not responsive to any question?

The Court: Gentlemen, I instruct you to disregard the last statement which was made by Mr. Bryan.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. Those cards that were introduced here today were procured in that manner.

A. Robert Poe said he got them signed. That is what he told me. I asked him if I could have them.

page 635 } Q. He was your employee.

A. He had been working for me since November, 1948.

Q. So your company was undertaking to pick out the organization that these men must have.

A. Mr. Mullen, it is clearly indicated by our agreement with the Building Trades Council in Richmond exactly what labor organization we were lined up with. Everything that we had done had been more or less pursuant to that arrangement.

Q. These men were not organized before.

A. We had talked to the business agent for the laborers over in Lexington, and it was recognized that it would be necessary to get local help. They are not skilled workers. They are not paid as much as skilled workers are. The business agent for the Lexington laborers local—we told him that 90 cents was the rate that we had, and we thought that would be proper. He said, well, that would be all right. I don't know, the man didn't come back, and it just stayed that way.

Q. But when you had that talk with Hart on the phone you immediately recognized, didn't you, that your laborers were not organized and they were open to organization.

A. As soon as I had that threat from Mr. Hart I knew that my job was in danger, and I knew that I had better take steps to see that everything was lined up, and that is page 636 } what I was trying to do.

Q. You went out to Kentucky on the 19th or 20th of July, didn't you?

A. I certainly did.

Q. Did you get in touch with Mr. Hart?

A. No, I didn't get in touch with Mr. Hart.

Q. You had asked Mr. Hart not to do anything until—

A. —he got in touch with me.

Q. —he had a further talk with you.

A. That is right.

Q. Did Mr. Hart have a right then to assume that you were not going to do anything to go behind his back during that period?

A. I don't think so. I told Mr. Hart in my conversation with him that we were lined up with the A. F. of L., that we had an agreement with the A. F. of L. unions, and I didn't see how we could make an agreement with his organization, and he knew that was what the score was. I asked him please not to do anything. He practically threatened to go over there and close my job down. It wasn't practically. He did threaten. He said he would do that, just like he did over in Wheelwright, where they took 300 men there and shut down a job.

Q. Yet you testified earlier you had never heard of a strike.

Wasn't that a strike right there?

page 637 } A. I was testifying about a strike in connection with our work. Everybody in the room has heard of a strike.

Q. Of course we are talking about hearing of a strike at your place of work, not all over the United States. You know that just as well as I do.

Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

So you don't think he had a right to assume that you wouldn't take steps to go behind his representation of the laborers when you asked him not to do anything until you talked again.

A. Mr. Hart never told me that he represented the laborers. He said we were working in Mine Worker territory and he was going to take over everybody.

Q. You knew your laborers were your danger point.

A. We knew that was a weak spot, sure.

Q. Weren't you following identically the same plan that you followed in Hopewell, which we have had in evidence here today?

A. I don't think I was, but if I was, was entirely within my rights to do it and was supposed to do it.

Q. Didn't you mislead them into thinking that you were going to talk with them about recognition when they called and asked you about it, when you put them off until a certain date?

A. I didn't mislead anybody. I told Mr. Hart I couldn't make an agreement with his organization.

Q. But you could make an agreement with his organization.

A. I couldn't make an agreement with his organization without breaking up my operations all over the country, and particularly in Breathitt County. It wouldn't have worked out.

Q. Didn't the people who followed you work with common laborers in the United Construction Workers and their skilled laborers in the American Federation of Labor?

A. I don't know. I have heard that they did.

Q. Yes.

A. On the other hand, down at Wheelwright the United Construction Workers came in there with about 300 men, led by Mr. Hart and Mr. Hunter and all that crowd, stopped the work of the iron workers, the carpenters, the painters, the laborers, the millwrights, everybody, and demanded that Beckett Construction Company, and Nelson Baldrige, Painter, and Link-Belt Company all recognize United Construction Workers, and got those fellows behind the eight-ball and they had to do it.

Q. You don't know anything about that if your own knowledge, do you?

A. I know what is reported to me. I have heard what was testified to in the depositions that have been taken.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Q. The depositions are not in evidence here.

A. I know what Mr. Hunter testified when his page 639 } deposition was taken. He was questioned about it.

Q. You followed the identical same plan in Hopewell to block off the Construction Workers, who had a perfect right to organize your unorganized labor, and you followed the same thing in Kentucky. Instead of sitting down and talking with them to see if you could reach an agreement, you immediately set out to fight them, didn't you, and to block them?

A. United Construction Workers and the Mine Workers are outlaw organizations when you come down to it.

Mr. Mullen: I object to that, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Robertson: I think he has a right to say it, Your Honor. He asked for it, and he gave it to him.

The Witness: They can't get any—

Mr. Mullen: I refer to "outlaw."

Mr. Robertson: They are an outlaw organization. I state that. They are outlawed under the Taft-Hartley Act. I will talk a little law on that.

The Court: The judge will ask you not to argue the case, Mr. Bryan. Just answer the questions.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. You went out to Kentucky on the 19th and you didn't communicate with Mr. Hart. Did you ask Mr. Delinger what had been done?

A. Mr. Mullen, I would just as soon negotiate page 640 } with Mr. Hart as I would negotiate with a robber that threatened to rob my house.

Q. You simply want to have your way as to who should represent your laborers. That is all it is, isn't it?

A. No, sir. I have tried to say repeatedly that we are lined up with the A. F. of L. There are some contractors who are lined up—

The Court: We have been over that.

The Witness: —with the United Construction Workers.

The Court: I don't think it is necessary to repeat that.

The Witness: I told Mr. Hart that in advance, and he said he was going to take over anyway. I asked him not to do it until he talked to me again, and he said he wouldn't.

Q. Then you went right behind his back to get your men signed up that he was organizing.

A. I don't think I was going behind his back at all.

Q. You went out there on the 19th and you didn't go to see him. Did you communicate with him any more before the 26th?

A. No. I never heard from him, and he didn't hear from me.

Q. You didn't try to negotiate, didn't try to get a peaceful settlement of it.

A. There wasn't anything to negotiate about. I told him I couldn't do it.

Q. That is just your idea.

A. He said he didn't care, he was going to take it over.

Q. He told you he was going to take over the job?

A. Yes, sir; which is exactly what he finally did.

Q. Yet he was representing your laborers and simply trying to get them a better wage.

A. I don't think he represented my laborers. If he did, he might not have represented more than one or two out of 15 and 16.

Q. Don't you know he had them all signed up?

A. I don't know anything of the kind. You page 642 }

Q. have admitted that they never were in the union. Because you discharged them, wasn't that the reason?

A. I never discharged a soul.

Q. Didn't you put a qualification on there?

A. I never discharged a soul.

Q. That will be developed later that you did discharge them.

Mr. Robertson: Are you going to testify?

Mr. Mullen: Nothing like as much as you have testified if I do. If Your Honor please, we have reached the point now where we go into all the doings in Breathitt County. It is going to take quite a long while. It is now 4:30. I think if Your Honor could see fit to adjourn now, we could go on with it later.

Mr. Robertson: I was going to I think that is all right because they want it to go over until Monday anyway, you see, to keep Mr. Bryan on the stand.

Mr. Mullen: Wouldn't you want to go over until Monday?

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: Not if I were getting it like you are.

The Court: It is true, this case has gone one week, and I can't give you gentlemen any encouragement that it won't last another one. It is a lengthy case.

Mr. Robertson: I think it is going to run into page 643 } week after next as far as I can tell.

The Court: I have set aside three weeks for the trial. If you gentlemen have matters to take care of, you might make your plans accordingly.

Juror: I understand, Your Honor, you will hold Court until five o'clock. I feel that everything that we get over here is that much less on the other end.

Mr. Robertson: So do I, Your Honor.

The Court: Would you prefer—

Mr. Fred G. Pollard: Your Honor, I feel if we start in on this situation that comes next, we will have to review it Monday morning and will just have to go over it again, sir, to bring the connection together.

The Court: I think that the request of Mr. Mullen's is a reasonable one in view of the continuity of the situation. We are getting into Breathitt County, as I understand, Monday morning.

Mr. Robertson: I just want to say this, Judge. I am just as anxious to get through this case as anybody and I am just as willing to start as early as anybody else will and run just as late.

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, I would like to say that we will try to save time on our cross examination. We will try to cut them short and I think we can. I am not a long cross-examiner and don't believe in it. We will page 644 } save all the time we can on our cross examination.

The Court: I am sure you gentlemen will cooperate with the Court and with the jury, and so far as the Court has been able to ascertain counsel on both sides have cooperated with the Court. There have been many problems which the Court has had to pass on and some big questions that it has had to pass on, and it takes time. Mr. Mullen, did you have some further comment?

Mr. Mullen: Your Honor, if you please, we are going to finish the cross examination as rapidly as we can. They had him on the stand four days. We have had only a part of a day. We will certainly finish, I reckon, by midday Monday. We will try to do it. I think it would expedite finishing it by adjourning at this time.

Alexander Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: I am in accord with you—Mr. Harris?

Colonel Harris: Mr. Mullen said what I was going to say, that we had occupied only about five hours of the time of the Court, and the reason we have been here so long is because counsel for the plaintiff took so long in examining Mr. Bryan. I am extremely anxious to speed it up because I am away from home and I have got to stay away from home until this case is over. I can assure the Court and the jury that I want to get back with my wife and not leave her down there in a house by herself. If I can do anything to expedite it, I will certainly do it.

page 645 } The Court: The plan was not to hold Court on Saturday, and we are not going to hold Court tomorrow. One or two of the jurors planned to go away tomorrow. These gentlemen who are preparing the case work at night while you gentlemen go home. Counsel for both sides stay up late at night and get up very early in the morning to get ready for you the next day. Then there are times when we are not in the Courtroom when we are in the Chambers, which you have heard so much of, and I can assure you we are not playing. It is all work. I want to cooperate with the jury as much as I can, and I think have done so, but you can go but so fast and do justice. I am here to see that justice is done along with you gentlemen.

Mr. Allen: If it please your Honor, I did not mean to intimate that these gentlemen were conducting a lengthy cross examination at all. I am perfectly willing to concede that the principal witnesses for the Plaintiff require lengthy cross examination. I simply meant to say in view of what we know about the witnesses which they may put on, we do not think lengthy cross examination will be necessary and we will make it as short as possible.

The Court: I see. If possible, we will go along until about ten minutes to five next week. There are going to be times when we are going to have to adjourn, when it will be necessary, and you just can't keep on hearing evidence page 646 } when questions arise. They have to be passed on. That is just the story.

Gentlemen, the Court is adjourned until ten o'clock Monday morning.

(Whereupon, at 4:35 p. m. the Court recessed until 10:00 o'clock a. m., Monday, January 29, 1951.)

PROCEEDINGS.

(The following proceedings were had in Chambers:)

Colonel Harris: If the Court pleases, we have a motion for mistrial, a motion to discharge the jury and declare a mistrial, and I want to sign the certificate that I served counsel and ask that it be marked filed, and we would like to argue it, if the Court please.

Mr. Fred Pollard is somewhat sick and I think he may not be here.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Mullen: Before we take that up, there is another matter we would like to take up. Mr. Holt, the CPA that we employed, was not given access to what the Court said he should have. We are in great difficulty now. We can't always get CPA's here. We got him for Friday, Saturday and Sunday. They wouldn't let him start on Friday. You remember, we had him up here and asked that he start. On Saturday they wanted to give him photostatic copies of portions and not what Your Honor had ordered him to have.

The reason I bring it up first is because Mr. Holt was taken off another job. The people he was working for did not like it. He has to go back on that now, and it will be toward the end of the week again before we can get him. We want to let him know. We asked him to appear up here this morning, and he may be out there, I don't know.

page 649 } Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I ask that they have Mr. Holt here to speak for himself and that the Court question him.

The Court: I understand he is coming.

(Off the record.)

The Bailiff: Mr. Holt doesn't answer, Your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Shall we proceed without Mr. Holt?

Mr. Robertson: I have a matter that I want to take up first, Your Honor.

The Court: We will pass that by, then, for a few moments.

Colonel Harris: Unless they have some matter of priority, I should think this would come up first.

The Court: The motion for a mistrial would be first, I imagine.

Mr. Robertson: All right.

Colonel Harris: Shall I wait until Your Honor reads it?

The Court: I haven't read it. This is the first I heard of it.

(Court reading document.)

Mr. Mullen: Here is Mr. Holt.

(Mr. Holt entered the room.)

Mr. Robertson: I suggest that Mr. Holt be page 650 } sworn and the Court ask him whatever he wants.

The Court: Will you raise your right hand, Mr. Holt. Do you solemnly swear the evidence you will give in this matter will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Holt: I do.

Whereupon,

C. HOWARD HOLT,

called as a witness on behalf of Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. Mr. Holt, will you state what happened when you sought the information that you asked for to review and report on?

A. I went over to the office of the Laburnum Construction Company Saturday morning, and I was under the impression I would have access to the audit reports, but the only thing they submitted to me was photostatic copies of certain portions of the report, and that information, which I have with me, shows the contract price, the cost of the work on the job, and the gross profit or loss by job for the years 1947, 1948, and 1949, I believe, and 1946 is in here, too. I was seeking information on some particular jobs applying to the exhibit that was submitted, and that was to establish the net profit for the job, but this information doesn't give that.

page 651 } The Court: Just what do you want now, Mr. Holt?

The Witness: I think I would have to see the complete audit report before I could verify—

Mr. Allen: What was that? I didn't catch that.

The Witness: The complete audit report before I could verify any of the information that we would like to have.

Mr. Robertson: Are you through?

The Witness: Yes.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I would like you to hear Mr. Bryan as to what he did, and if there is any misunderstanding to clear it up. Mr. Bryan, you are under oath, too.

Mr. Bryan: As soon as the Court ruled the other day that we were to make available data on these jobs amounting to some $20 million, about which we testified, I asked our counsel and auditors to get together all books back beginning with 1941. That was done, and they were there available for Mr. Holt when he came to the office on Saturday morning. In an effort to make things easier, we also prepared a statement based on the information shown in the audit reports of Leach, Calkins & Scott, listing in detail every job on which we had performed work from January 1, 1941, to December 31, 1950.

Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia.

showing the gross income on each job, the direct page 652 } job costs, and the profit or loss on each job. Mr. Holt saw the work papers which we had prepared and which were being typed at that time.

We told Mr. Holt that any information shown on the statement, we would try to help him to verify from the books. We had representatives of Leach, Calkins & Scott there. In addition to that, we had photostatic copies made of the portions of the Leach, Calkins & Scott audit reports which showed this detailed information by job. They were all turned over to Mr. Holt, and it wasn't just for 1947 and '48, but it was from 1941 down to date. If Mr. Holt didn't get them, it was a mistake, because I understood that they had been turned over to him.

The statement that we were preparing and which Mr. Holt didn't have because it was being typed while he was in the office, I have here in my hand this morning (producing document), and shows the information. It is a 21-page report, showing total work amounting to over $24 million in total and net job profits of $822,095.33. We called Mr. Holt Saturday afternoon to find out if he was coming back to get any more information, if it was necessary for us to keep people there to help him, either that afternoon or on Sunday, and Mr. Holt said he had all the information that he needed. Mr. Holt did call for general overhead costs, main office operating expenses.

We said we didn't understand that we had to page 653 } furnish that, that what Mr. Mullen and Colonel Harris and Fred Pollard wanted was information about this $20 million worth of work to show whether or not we had made a loss on those jobs. That is what we furnished.

Frankly, it is detailed information that we have always regarded as strictly private, and it is rather embarrassing to make it available. Some of the people that we have been doing business with, we have lost money on some jobs as every contractor does, and we have made money on some jobs, but this shows the exact amount to the penny. It is in balance with the books. We have here today a representative of Leach, Calkins and Scott who assisted in the compilation of this. I am ready to make oath to it that we have our general Comptroller, Mr. Williams, available, and he is willing to make oath to it. We believe this is the information they have asked for. If they are not satisfied with it, if they want to check any figure on here, we will be glad to assist anybody at any time.

In addition to that, I might add that with reference to the work in Kentucky and West Virginia Mr. Holt made a detailed examination of that information which we have put in, that is the jobs showing a net profit aggregating approximately $58,000 over a 28-month period. That is the work at Pond Creek and Island Creek Coal companies and its subsidiaries and affiliates. Mr. Holt found a 10-cent mistake.

page 654 } I would like to add at this time that the figures shown on that exhibit which has been offered in evidence showing net profits of approximately $58,000 represents the combined net profits and losses per job of Laburnum and its subsidiary, Virginia Mechanical Corporation. That was explained to Mr. Holt. He checked that information not only from the audits, but I understand from the books themselves. That took up the major portion of the time during the morning on Saturday. I told Mr. Holt I was sure that Mr. Pollard and Mr. Mullen and Colonel Harris would want that done because some question had been raised about it, and we were there to help him, and that is what we have done.

Mr. Mullen: The catch there is the use of the words "net job profits." We want the net profits. The net job profits are a different thing. They have used big figures, and have left the jury under the impression they made $58,000 on these jobs when they didn't do it because they have not allocated to it the proper proportions of overhead, and so forth. We think that as long as they have put in there, as we have stated, $20 million and they claim that $58,000 was made on jobs, and they claim that they have done some $650,000-odd of work over a certain period, we are entitled to see the books, to see the audit, and not to have them make up statements for us and say "Here is what you can have." We are entitled to see the original documents.

page 655 } Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I think it is perfectly obvious that what they want is not relevant here, for this reason: Of course, the net job profit that they got out of it, if they hadn't made it, they would have been that much worse off. As I understand it—and the accountants here can testify on this, and I might say I don't think there is anybody in this room other than the accountant who is really qualified to speak with any authority on this matter—but as I understand it on each job the proper overhead in the form of salaries and expenses of people working on that job is charged as an item of expense to that job. That is all separate and distinct from the general office overhead. I think I am correct when I say that according to sound principles of accounting it is just ABC as to how much percentage of general office overhead could be charged out in to operations such as this. They can argue from it anything they want, 10 per cent, 20 per cent, 30 per cent, 50 per cent. It is a matter of sound accounting principle as to what that amount would be. I don't know, and I doubt very much that anybody here knows. I think anybody from Mr. Leache's office who knew the set-up of this company could say.

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, I would like to say, what they are really complaining about is the failure of Mr. Bryan's books to show an allocation or the failure of this page 656 } statement to show an allocation of the general office overhead. That is an impossibility. Mr. Bryan, according to my information has made no allocation on the books, and it would be utterly impossible for him to say how much of the general overhead should be allocated to any specific job.

He doesn't ask them to accept the statement which he has made. He has opened the books wide. They can go there and check every job that they want to check to see if these figures are correct.

Mr. Bryan in this statement has covered a 10-year period. Every job that he has done during that period is put down, the gross income for the job, and the costs of the job and the profit or loss on that particular job. That is all the way through. It winds up and shows the gross business to be some $4 million more than he testified to, and it shows what his net profits on the whole were. It is not but an addition of the profits and a subtraction of the losses on the particular jobs.

The only thing left out is the allocation of the general overhead to the particular jobs. As we understand, under your ruling we are not required to go into that, and if we were, I just don't see how it could be done. They can make any allocation they want, by the size of the job, and argue anything they want from it.

page 657 } The Court: All right.

Mr. Mullen: Mr. Holt, have they furnished such information as we asked you to get for us?

The Witness: No, sir.

The Court: That statement which has just been presented to will suffice?

The Witness: This is the same type of statement, Your Honor, that applies to the exhibits which were submitted, which shows the gross income for the job and direct costs and general, the job profit and loss. I was asked to get the net profit per job. In other words, the general office expenses would have to be allocated in some manner to the particular jobs in question for that period in order to arrive at the net profit per job.

C. Howard Holt.

The Court: Just what is it now that you want to see, the audit reports of each job?

The Witness: The audit report for each—I would have to see the audit report showing the general office and overhead expenses. In other words, I have it down to the gross profit per job. From that we would have to deduct the additional expenses involved in arriving at the net profit.

The Court: Will the audit report show that?

The Witness: It should, yes.

The Court: You would like to see the audit report?

Mr. Robertson: I would like you to hear Mr. Bryan on one more thing before you rule on it.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Bryan: Mr. Holt came in on Saturday, and he said that he had instructions to find out what our general net profit was before taxes and what our profit was after taxes. I told Mr. Holt that Your Honor had ruled that we were not to make available the tax returns, that I understood that Mr. Mullen and Mr. Harris were interested in the $20 million figure that we mentioned and whether or not we had made or lost money on those jobs. The way our books have been kept and maintained—and I think the same applies generally to all construction companies—we have of course a gross income on each job, we have the direct job costs. Those direct job costs include the cost of all labor on the job, that is, the money we paid the carpenters, laborers, iron workers, and the resident staff people. It also includes the job overhead, which is the cost of the superintendent's salary, if the job is big enough and you have a field clerk, it would include his salary. It also includes the cost of your insurance, workmen's compensation insurance applicable to the job, the cost of payroll taxes, the cost of any bonus that you pay subcontractors. It includes the cost of all rentals. All direct expenses and costs in connection with the job. You deduct the total costs from the total gross income on the job and you get your job profit or loss.

In addition to those expenses and in operating a construction business you are bound to have certain general operating expenses. No attempt is made to allocate those expenses to the job. In most cases, especially in the case of large jobs, they are not just completed on a calendar year basis, but they extend from one year to another. The information which we gave to Mr. Holt is the same as the information which is shown on the statement which we just handed to you, except that the information on the statement which I just handed to you, is compiled in a little different form. In order to see whether or not we made a loss or profit on the job, it was necessary to take the figures for probably a couple of years, two or three years and compile them together. That has been done very carefully and accurately and the figures submitted are in balance with the books. There is no way I know that a person can intelligently allocate portions of the main office operating expenses to the jobs. There are all sorts of figures which might come into it. Mr. Holt might have one idea as to how it is to be done. Mr. Leach might have another ide as to how it is to be done. Mr. Durham might have another idea as to how it is to be done. We might have still another. Actually speaking, that was not done. The company tries to keep its overhead costs down as low as it can ordinarily, but whether it was large or small, page 660 { it seems to me that that is beside the point. The main point is whether or not we made or lost money on our jobs that we had. That is where we got the revenue from which to run the business.

Mr. Mullen: It is allocated on a percentage basis.

The Court: I think Mr. Holt is entitled to that information, gentlemen. I will ask that you make it available for him.

Mr. Robertson: We save the point, Your Honor.

Mr. Allen: You mean the general overhead expenses?

The Court: Yes. I think he is entitled to see the books, any books that have anything to do with your profit or loss. One auditor may determine whether the loss is computed one way or the profit is computed one way, and another auditor may determine it another way. That is a question of argument. But I think he is entitled to see the books.

The Witness: Thank you, sir.

The Court: Do you want me to deliver this statement you just tendered to the Court to Mr. Holt, Mr. Bryan?

Mr. Bryan: I have no objection to that.

The Court: Would you like to have it? Do you think it would be helpful?

The Witness: It probably would be helpful.

C. Howard Holt.

Mr. Robertson: It can't hurt us.

Mr. Bryan: I make only one request in that connection. I know this is going into the Court now and it is to be made a public record, but it does contain information that normally is considered to be private and confidential, and it would be embarrassing to me and embarrassing to a lot of other people to have some of that information bandied around.

Mr. Robertson: It is the same thing I said about financial transactions.

The Court: If they mention anything in the proceedings about that, I give you the same opportunity.

Mr. Bryan: I can't help it, but I just ask that cooperation.

The Court: All right, gentlemen.

The next on the agenda is the motion for mistrial.

Mr. Allen: May we read it through first?

Colonel Harris: Whichever you like.

The Court: I think it might save time of Colonel Harris read it.

Colonel Harris: If I read it.

The Court: Yes.

Colonel Harris: "Now come the defendants separately and severally and jointly and move the court to discharge the jury and to declare a mistrial in this cause, and for grounds of this motion assign the following separately and severally:

(1) Counsel for the plaintiff has engaged in highly prejudicial, inflammatory, poisonous and false argument to the jury injected for the purpose of prejudicing the jury and piling up punitive damages as part of the verdict sought by the plaintiff.

"On Friday, January 26, 1951, near the conclusion of these proceedings, counsel for plaintiff used this language in the presence and hearing of the jury:

" 'They (referring to the defendants, United Construction Workers and the Mine Workers) are an outlaw organization. I state that. They are outlawed under the Taft-Hartley Act. I will talk a little law on that.'

"(2) Immediately preceding the utterance of counsel for the plaintiff, made the basis of Ground No. (1), Counsel for plaintiff made the following statement in the presence and hearing of the jury:

“ ‘I think he has a right to say it, Your Honor, He (referring to Mr. Mullen, Counsel for Defendants) asked for it, and he (the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan) gave it to him.’ ”

“(3) At or near the close of the day's proceedings in this case on January 26, 1951, the question of adjournment to Monday, January 29, 1951, was under consideration. Counsel for the plaintiff used the following language in the presence of and in the hearing of the jury:

“ ‘I was going to say that I think that is all right because they want it to go over until Monday anyway, you page 663 } see, to keep Mr. Bryan on the stand.’ ”

“And further in reply to Mr. Mullen's question as to whether plaintiff's counsel would want it to go over, plaintiff's counsel replied:

“ ‘Not if I were getting it like you are.’ ”

“Defendants separately and severally and jointly assign as additional grounds for this motion to discharge the jury and declare a mistrial the statements made by A. Hamilton Bryan, witness for the plaintiff, and President of plaintiff corporation, while on the witness stand testifying as a witness as follows, to-wit:

“(4) In response to the following question by Counsel for defendants:

“ ‘Q. You followed the identical same plan in Hopewell to block off the Construction Workers, who had a perfect right to organize your unorganized labor, and you followed the same thing in Kentucky. Instead of sitting down and talking with them to see if you could reach an agreement, you immediately set out to fight them, didn't you, and to block them?’ ”

“The witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, made answer:

“ ‘A. United Construction Workers and the Mine Workers are outlaw organizations when you come down to it.’ ”

“And to this statement of the witness, Counsel for the

C. Howard Holt.

defendants then and there in open court in the page 664 } presence and hearing of the jury stated:

“ ‘I object to that, if Your Honor please.’

“ (5) Defendants charge that the statement of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan just quoted in the preceding ground hereof, was not responsive to the question asked him, was entirely voluntary, was highly inflammatory and prejudicial, was for the purpose of injecting poison and prejudice against the defendants in this cause, and that said statement was false and also injected for the purpose of wrongfully and illegally prejudicing the jury against the defendants and piling up a verdict for punitive damages.

“ (6) The witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, President of the plaintiff, and while testifying as a witness for the plaintiff, was asked by Counsel for the defendants the following question:

“ ‘You went out to Kentucky on the 19th, and you didn’t communicate with Mr. Hart. Did you ask Mr. Delinger what had been done?’

“ And to said question the aforesaid witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, made answer as follows:

“ ‘Mr. Mullen, I would just as soon negotiate with Mr. Hart (referring to Mr. Hart, the District Representative of United Construction Workers affiliated with United Mine Workers of America and District Representative of District 50, United Mine Workers of America) as I would negotiate page 665 } with a robber that threatened to rob my house.’

“ And defendants do herewith and hereby charge that the quotation just made was not in response to any question by Counsel for defendants, was highly prejudicial, poisonous and inflammatory, and was injected for the purpose of piling up a verdict for punitive damages against these defendants.

“ (7) Defendants charge and represent to this Court that the foregoing remarks of both Counsel for plaintiff and of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, are each of such highly prejudicial, poisonous and inflammatory nature that the poison and prejudice injected in this cause thereby cannot be removed by any direction or instruction of this Honorable Court, and the only way these defendants can obtain justice and a fair and impartial trial is for this Court to order the jury discharged and to declare a mistrial in this cause.

“(8) Defendants allege that the conduct hereinabove set forth, as a basis of grounds (1) through (7) inclusive, occurred near the close of the proceeding on January 26, 1951, and were cumulative of a course of conduct which had been indulged in by Counsel for plaintiff and by the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, from the beginning of the testimony of the witness up to and including the occurrences hereinabove listed, said prior statements and testimony being as follows, to-wit:

“When Counsel for defendants asked the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, the following question:

“‘Q. You were not told it was because of any of the difficulties you had already had there, were you?’

“He made answer as follows:

“‘A. No, we were not given any reason. We, frankly, conditioned the bid in certain ways that I think were objectionable to Pond Creek. For one thing, we said that we expected them to keep those roads in passable condition so we could get in and out, and I don't think they linked that vedy much.

“‘For the second thing, we asked that they provide builder's risk insurance with extended coverage, which would protect the buildings against loss or destruction from malicious mischief or acts of vandalism. That was put in there purposely in order to get some protection in case the United Construction Workers and that crowd should come in there and burn the building down.’

“(9) During the examination of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, President of the Plaintiff, by Mr. Archie G. Robertson, Attorney for the Plaintiff, on January 23, 1951, the aforesaid attorney made the following statement in the presence and hearing of the jury:

“‘We are suing here in all earnestness and good faith for the biggest lawsuit that I personally have ever been in.’

page 667 } “And the defendants allege that the aforesaid statement of counsel was wholly without any evidence in the cause to justify this statement.

C. Howard Holt.

“(10) During the direct examination of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, President of the Plaintiff corporation, by Mr. Archie G. Robertson, Counsel for Plaintiff, a colloquy arose when defendants’ counsel made objection as follows:

“Colonel Harris: We object to the witness reading from a document. I notice he keeps looking at the document and then turning the pages.”

“During the aforesaid colloquy Mr. Robertson, the aforesaid counsel for Plaintiff in the presence and hearing of the jury made the following statement:

“It seems to me, Your Honor, that the real purpose of my friend here is to break in on this story and destroy the effectiveness of the testimony.”

“And the defendant alleges that the purpose imputed to counsel for defendant was not the real purpose of counsel and the statement so made was false and highly prejudicial.

“(11) During the direct examination of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, President of the Plaintiff, by Counsel for Plaintiff, on January 24, 1951, counsel for defendant made the following objection:

“Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, if the only part relevant is the telephone number, it is improper page 668  $\frac{1}{2}$  to put in a whole newspaper in evidence in the record.”

“Whereupon, Mr. Robertson, Counsel for Plaintiff, in the presence and hearing of the jury made the following statement:

“Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I brought it here—of course, if I had brought one sheet they would have said that looked mighty fishy.”

“(12) During the course of the direct examination of the witness A. Hamilton Bryan, President of the Plaintiff, Counsel, Mr. Fred G. Pollard, objected to a question by counsel for Plaintiff, which objection the court then and there overruled. Whereupon, the following occurred:

C. Howard Holt.

"Mr. Robertson: You ought to go to night school, Freddie."

"Mr. Mullen: We object to a remark like that. We are trying to facilitate the case."

"The Court: The jury will disregard sidebar remarks."

"And the defendant alleges that the personal remark about Mr. Fred Pollard, one of the defendants' counsel, was highly prejudicial and was made for the purpose of intimating to the jury any further statement or argument made in their presence and hearing by Mr. Fred Pollard was not worthy of belief or consideration by them because he was an ignorant lawyer and needed to go to night school."

page 669 } "And defendant further alleges that the remark was false and unjustified for the reason that Honorable Fred Pollard has already gone to Law School and received his LL.B. degree from the Law School of the University of Virginia during the year 1942, and defendants further allege that said Law School has a high reputation not only in the State of Virginia, but among educated and experienced lawyers throughout the boundaries of the United States."

"(13) During the course of the cross examination of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, by Mr. Mullen, Attorney for the defendants, he asked the witness the following question:

"Q. By 'lay off', he meant recognition of the A. F. of L. by U.C.W.?"

"A. I don't see what you could say about that, because United Construction Workers certainly didn't recognize the A. F. of L. at Wheelright when they went there with 200 or 300 men and broke up a job."

"And defendants allege that the quoted answer was made in order to arouse prejudice against the defendants, and particularly against United Construction Workers, and was the gratuitous introduction of a transaction which was not a part of the transactions complained of by the Plaintiff in its Notice of Motion for Judgment."

"(14) During the course of the cross examination of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, President of the Plaintiff, said witness disregarded the rulings of the Court, for instance, Counsel for the plaintiff objected to a question by Mr. Mullen whereupon the following proceedings were had:

“Q. Would you have done it?

“Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, that is getting right into the realm of speculation. You can get into all sorts of things.

“The Court: I will sustain the objection.

“The Witness: We were trying our best to cooperate with the Paintsville Local.

“The Court: I sustained the objection.

“The Witness: To try to have friendly relations.

“Colonel Harris: Will Your Honor exclude that statement made after you had ruled?

“The Court: Gentlemen, the statement made by Mr. Bryan after the court sustained the objection should be disregarded by you.”

“(15) During the course of the cross examination of the witness, A. Hamilton Bryan, President of the Plaintiff, the following proceedings were had:

“Q. They were working there because they wanted a job, weren't they?

“A. Most of them had been working there since November, 1948. This was some time in July, almost nine months, and there never had been any discussion, no page 671 } trouble. Everything was going smoothly, as far as things could go on a job of that kind.

“Q. I am not asking you that question. I am asking you what chance was there that they would refuse when they were put on the spot by an employee of the company undertaking to say what union they must go in and presenting it to them at the direction of the boss of the job?

“A. Nobody was being put on the spot at all.

“Q. That is what you may call it.

“A. They were being given—

“Mr. Robertson: If that is what you call it, it doesn't make it so. That is what you said.

“The Court: You gentlemen are even now.

“Mr. Mullen: That is a matter of inference for the jury.”

“The Witness: Those laborers had sense enough to know that the United Construction Workers and the A. F. of L. people wouldn't work out very well together.

C. Howard Holt,

"Colonel Harris: Your Honor, will you exelude that statement as not responsive to any question?

"The Court: Gentlemen, I instruct you to disregard the last statement which was made by Mr. Bryan.' "

* * * * *

Mr. Robertson: They have made personal remarks about me, Your Honor, and I will address myself right to the heart of this situation as I see it.

Referring first to Mr. Harris, I say with all truthfulness that I never heard such a jury harrangue under the guise of a legal argument. It looks to me like his dramatics and theatricals are trying to influence this court. It looks to me, the way they come here with some sort of page 685 } affidavit or some sort of motion after every recess of this Court, and come here and kill more than an hour this morning, that they are trying to stall this trial.

If Your Honor please, Your Honor knows the Virginia decisions, and so do I. What have they done? Your Honor knows the spirit that has pervaded this trial as to whether it is anything of willful defiance of the rulings of the Court, or trying to evade the rulings of the Court, or trying to circumvent the rulings of the Court. Your Honor can look at the attitude in this jury in this trial as von sit there, and look at them and notice their reactions to different phases of the trial, and their good humor and good spirit, and see whether or not they have been influenced by any prejudice or passion against anybody.

What have they done? It reminds me of a case that I had, the Cornell case before Judge Lamb. They said it took Billy Cornell 6 months to make up his own mind whether or not he had been defrauded by the actions of his wife, and if it took him 6 months to make up his mind, how could they ask a court to believe that the testimony was clear and cogent.

What have these gentlemen done? It has taken them a week-end to do it. It has taken a conference between the four of them to do it. It has taken them to search this record as it is evident they have done, to do it. It page 686 } has taken them, coming down to what is fair and square, they have lifted isolated statements out of their context. They have misconstrued the tone in which they were uttered. They have injected a venomous and wicked misconstruction of the meaning of words in here in an attempt to get a mistrial, because, as I have said from the outset of this thing, all they want is to get away from a trial on the merits by any means they can.

C. Howard Holt.

Mr. Mullen: I object to that.

Mr. Robertson: I don't care whether you object to it or not. You have said some very mean things about me.

The Court: Gentlemen, let's be calm and proceed.

Mr. Robertson: It has taken them over a week to search and gimlet-eye this record to try to find something that they think they can take offense at. They are bringing up everything here that Your Honor would expect to be brought up in argument of instructions, in argument to a jury, in argument upon a motion to set aside a verdict, in argument upon an appeal of any case which any lawyer loses; and they haven't lost it yet.

I submit that when Mr. Bryan was asked as to why he had to put those provisions in that proposal about the protection of the property while it was under construction, one of the reasons he did that was that it was his duty to tell the whole story if he was going to tell any part of it. It is page 687 } utterly different from where you are suing somebody in a personal insurance suit, and they won't let you mention the insurance company because they can't get a fair run for their money if you do. No insurance company is involved anywhere in this case.

By what authority does Mr. Harris step out here and talk to Your Honor about people who have accumulated property sitting on that jury? What does he know about it? By what warrant does he, an experienced lawyer who won the Jewel Coal Mine case, and with the association he has had in the practice of law, by what authority does he come here and make any such statement as that?

I think I know the Virginia decisions. I think I know the rights of counsel here. I don't expect them to like our testimony. I don't expect them to like what we say. We have a whole lot more coming, and they are not going to like that, either.

As the Court has said here, the Court has time and again

said that it appreciates the spirit that counsel have shown in this case in trying to cooperate with the Court. I think the Court can search back through its own memory and see whether anything has been done here by counsel for this Plaintiff that warrants any such attempt as is being made here to sidestep a trial on the merits.

When they single out and lift from their con- page 688 } text and twist and distort and misconstrue what I have said in the spirit in which I have said it, they don't quote one single thing that called for those remarks, what was said to counsel over here, what was said by Mr. Mullen to me, what was said by Mr. Harris to me.

They ask the Court on any such thing as they have brought forward here, to declare a mistrial without even reading the record in the case, which they have studied meticulously over the week-end to resurrect what they have brought forward here and stated.

It took four counsel a week-end to think up these things.

My remark that Mr. Mullen has gotten himself wrought up over, after 48 hours, was made in response to a question that he asked me. I said it, and I think I was right, and I still think so, that they wanted to keep Mr. Bryan on the stand today. They have killed over an hour here this morning.

He turned to me and said, "Wouldn't you want to do it?" I replied, "Not if I were getting it like you are."

If Your Honor please, I say they are not entitled to a new trial, and if the Court grants any new trial here it would just be a laughing stock everywhere for anybody who knows about this case; just another case where you couldn't get the United Mine Workers before the court and page 689 } hold them there. I think the motion should be overruled.

I am going to ask Mr. Allen to address himself to it.

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, let us get entirely out of the atmosphere that naturally and sometimes inevitably there is generated in a controversy of this kind, and let us see where we are legally.

Some years ago, I had occasion to take a case to the Court of Appeals on the very question involved here. I was then on the same side that my friend, Colonel Harris, is on now. I was complaining of a remark that Mr. Buford made in the course of the trial, whom Your Honor knows was one of our outstanding lawyers in Virginia. I looked up all the authorities and went to the Court of Appeals. I got a reversal of the case on that ground, and that ground alone.

The remark there was—I will have to go back just a little bit to give you the setting of the case so you will understand. There was involved in the case a widower and a widow whom he had employed as a housekeeper. None of their conduct between themselves was involved, and Mr. Buford makes the statement before the jury that when a widower and a widow were in the same household or under the same roof, indicating that something improper might have happened. There was no foundation in the evidence for it, none whatsoever. It was brought, not purposely, I don't think, by Mr. Buford, but anyway the remark was made, and I contended that it influenced the jury and that there was no foundation for it, and the Court of Appeals reversed the case on that ground, and went into all the authorities.

That was about 20 years ago. Since that time I have had occasion in a number of cases to look up the authorities on the same question. The courts since that case have gotten very much more liberal. They are coming around to this viewpoint: They are judging each case on the particular facts in that case, and they are judging the remarks made by virtue of what preceded or what occasioned the remarks. They reach this conclusion: that it is to be inevitably expected that in the heat of the trial of a case, remarks are going to be made, and I would say certainly 9 times out of 10 they say and hold that the instructions of the judge to disregard the remarks will be sufficient; that if you declare a mistrial for all these remarks that may be held to be improper in the course of the heat of a trial, you will never get to the end of the case.

Coming to the remarks that they complain about most seriously and the one about the robbers and the one about burning down the house, you will remember that when Mr. Bryan said that he would just as soon negotiate with a robber as to negotiate with the United Construction Workers, Mr. Mullen was asking him why he wouldn't negotiate with the United Construction Workers. All the authorities on cross examination say that if a lawyer on cross examination asks a witness a question of why, the witness can answer anything that shows his reason why he did a thing. Mr. Bryan said that from his experiences with the United Construction Workers and what he knew about the United Construction Workers, he just couldn't negotiate with them. He would just as soon try to negotiate with a robber.

That was answering the question that Mr. Mullen asked. If Mr. Mullen didn't want the real answer that was in the brain of Mr. Bryan, he shouldn't have asked the question "Why?"

The same thing applies to the question about burning the house down or burning the property down. That wasn't all the answer. Mr. Mullen was asking Mr. Bryan why; if he didn't know why he didn't get those bids, and he was trying to tell Mr. Mullen why he didn't get them. He said maybe one reason was that the roads were so bad that there had to be roads in there, and that was one of the requirements. Another reason was that after his experience there, he insisted on putting in the contract a provision for carrying insurance against arson and vandalism; that he didn't know what these people would do.

That was perfectly responsive to Mr. Mullen's question. Mr. Mullen had risked the question "Why," and all the authorities say when you risk that question "Why," page 692 } you take your chances on the answer. A man may answer out of his imagination, and there is nothing under the law of evidence that you can do about it.

Another case in Virginia in which this question arose about improper argument—and these things come up so often that I have made a practice of carrying around in my pocket a little memorandum book listing the cases. I picked this one out of the list, 161 Va., and Mr. Moore has just handed it to me. Your Honor knows how zealous courts are about guarding against the mention of insurance in the trial of automobile accident cases. In this case, 161 Va., Majestic Steam Laundry and others v. Puckett, 161 Va. 524, the lawyer for the defendant was arguing to the jury that the plaintiff wanted to take out of the pocket of this man from Chicago—the defendant was from Chicago—were asking this jury to give the plaintiff $10,000 out of that man's pocket. This man, coming from Detroit, was traveling around down there and had an accident.

The lawyer for the plaintiff replied and said, "If you just give me $10,000, I promise you I won't go into this man's pocket for the dime."

They made a motion for a mistrial upon the ground that that was furtively bringing insurance into the case. The Court of Appeals said, "No, you invited it, you invoked it and got the answer, and it was a legitimate argument."

C. Howard Holt.

I say that principle applies exactly to Mr. Mullen's questions asking Mr. Bryan "Why this, that, and the other," and Mr. Bryan had a right to tell him why, and he told him why.

In a situation of that kind, it is an ideal situation. If the Court should differ with me on that, it is certainly not such a departure from what a man had a right to do as to require a mistrial. An instruction to the jury would be entirely sufficient, but we don't think that is necessary.

Mr. Mullen brought it out by the questions he asked, and the same principle applies to a number of other things that they complain of here.

We are at the beginning of the trial, and what has taken place here, before the trial is over I suppose the jury will forget all about it. To declare a mistrial at the beginning will place untold expense on the Plaintiff and the loss of a week's time. I don't think the remarks, under the circumstances under which they were made, are sufficient.

It takes a studied effort over a week-end, with the transcript before them, taking a number of the words out of their setting or context, to give them the meaning which would justify the Court in declaring a mistrial. I submit the motion should be overruled.

The Court: Is there anything further you gentlemen want to say?

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, I have never asked Mr. Bryan "Why." I have carefully refrained from "Why." Here is a question I asked him:

"You went up to Kentucky on the 10th and you didn't communicate with Mr. Hart. Did you ask Mr. Delinger what had been done?"

There is no "why" there, nothing asking why he didn't do it.

"Mr. Bryan: I would just as soon negotiate with Hart as I would negotiate with a robber that threatened to rob my house."

That was not responsive.

Mr. Robertson: You are still taking it out of context. Go back far enough to get the context.

Mr. Mullen: I didn't ask him "why."

C. Howard Holt.

Mr. Robertson: The sense of it was you did ask him "why."

Mr. Mullen: There is no "why" there. I asked him what he did, where he got his report.

Mr. Robertson: Make him read that.

Mr. Allen: Read your question at the top of page 639.

Mr. Mullen: It reads:

"You followed the identical same plan in Hope-page 695 } well to block off the Construction Workers, who had a perfect right to organize your unorganized labor, and you followed the same thing in Kentucky. Instead of sitting down and talking with them to see if you could reach an agreement, you immediately set out to fight them, didn't you, and to block them?"

I didn't ask him "why."

Mr. Allen: You say, "It is exactly the same thing." You are in effect asking him why he didn't negotiate with them, because you say, "Instead of sitting down and talking with them to see if you could reach an agreement, you immediately set out to fight them, didn't you, and to block them?"

If that didn't call for a reason for what he did—

Mr. Mullen: There is a whole page between them.

Mr. Allen: Then he says right there, the immediate answer:

"United Construction Workers and the Mine Workers are outlaw organizations when you come down to it."

That was his answer.

Mr. Mullen: I asked him if he didn't set out to fight instead of sitting down and trying to reach an agreement. That is not a "why."

If Your Honor please, of course the question of how long we took to get this has nothing to do with it. The page 696 } Court was not in session since then. This is the first time we could bring it up. We haven't had to have four lawyers digging through this to dig this up. I never even read the motion, and took no part in it. I worked until 12:30 Saturday night, and I worked all day yesterday at my home except for a few minutes in the afternoon. It was the independent opinion of all of us that what happened there made this necessary.

Colonel Harris: May I add a word, Judge?

The "why" rule is where counsel for the adverse party,

C. Howard Holt.

counsel for the party against whom the improper statement is made, is based on the fact that he invites and provokes it. There is no provocation and there is no invitation. Mr. Mullen has read you one.

Let's go back to another one on page 575. Here is a whole page.

"Q. You were not awarded the contract?

"A. No.

"Q. You were not given any reason?

"A. No.

"Q. You were not told it was because of any of the difficulties you had already had there, were you?"

He answers it in one word, and then makes a speech.

"A. No, we were not given any reason."

Now he starts relating what is in his mind:

page 697 } "We, frankly, conditioned the bid in certain ways that I think were objectionable to Pond Creek." That is pure guesswork and speculation. "For one thing, we said that we expected them to keep those roads in passable condition so we could get in and out, and I don't think they liked that very much."

That is still merely speculating as to the mental operation of a third party.

"For the second thing, we asked that they provide builder's risk insurance with extended coverage, which would protect the buildings against loss or destruction from malicious mischief or acts of vandalism."

He could have stopped there, but he goes ahead to state that he wanted protection against—"malicious mischief or acts of vandalism" isn't sufficient. He said "That was put in there purposely in order to get some protection in case the United Construction Workers and that crowd should come in there and burn the building down."

"Q. But the Pond Creek Pocahontas people never told you that you were turned down because of the trouble you had had there prior to that?

C. Howard Holt.

"A. No, we were not informed. We never had an answer, I don't believe."

It is a remarkable statement that one of the counsel made, and that is, where he has found any facts in human nature to justify that statement is a mystery to me—where page 698 } counsel stated that for Your Honor to discharge the jury and order a mistrial would make Your Honor's court a laughing stock. I submit that people in Virginia do not laugh, and they find no occasion for merriment when the judges of the Virginia courts hold counsel and litigants to the highest standards. I have never heard of people laughing at a just and upright Judge who holds counsel to the duty which they have violated.

We submit, if the Court pleases, if that sort of argument should be made, it is not the kind of argument that should swerve Your Honor, and I don't believe it ever would swerve Your Honor away from the path of duty and justice as Your Honor sees it.

The Court: Gentlemen, the Court overrules the motion for a mistrial.

The Court also instructs counsel to discontinue any side remarks throughout the balance of this trial.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception to your ruling.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor pleases—

The Court: How long is your proposition going to take?

Mr. Mullen: Let me ask one thing, Judge. What was your ruling as to reporting what occurred here in chambers?

The Court: You mean in the newspapers?

page 699 } Mr. Mullen: Yes.

The Court: I requested Mrs. Morse not to publish anything that took place in chambers, because the jury might read it.

Mr. Mullen: The reason I asked was because—

Mr. Robertson: I think it is much better not to publish anything that happens here.

The Court: I think they understand that it is confidential in chambers.

Mr. Robertson: Here is what I want to say, Judge. On Friday afternoon when we adjourned, it was perfectly obvious that one juror felt that the case was dragging. We are frankly in this position: We are doing all we can to expedite the trial, but it is necessarily a lengthy trial, and there are many things in it which are going to be tedious and boring that we cannot eliminate. To our best judgment, our case will certainly run into Thursday. You see, we have lost an hour and a half this morning. It may well run all this week. If we do that, that will have meant that putting on our case will have taken two weeks. Suppose the other side takes two weeks, and then I think it probable that the instructions will take a day and perhaps the argument a day.

This case, as Your Honor knows—and I think what I am saying now is to the benefit of everybody on all sides—the case is obviously a very important one to us. It is obviously a very important one for the three defendants. It goes to the very heart of the way they are organized and do business, and I think it is going to be a test case for perhaps years to come. That has nothing to do with this except for a matter of general interest and information. My information is that the case is being featured in the various newspapers throughout Southwest Virginia coal fields, and the West Virginia coal fields, and Kentucky coal fields, and out to Cincinnati and Louisville.

I think it would be a service to everybody in the case if the Court would explain to the jury that this is going to be a trial which it looks like is going to keep them here maybe three weeks longer, and that they have to put up with it; and also, my suggestion is that the Court ask the jury whether they would prefer, for instance, to start at half-past 9 in the morning and run to 6 in the evening, with one hour out for lunch, and sit on Saturday, or do something else.

Frankly—and I say this now in a friendly spirit—I think if we hit that pace, the jury will very soon get to where they don't want it, because I think what the Court, either consciously or unconsciously, has been doing has been a service to the jury, giving them time to go by their places of business in the morning before they come here, to go back at their lunch hour, and to go back there in the afternoon before they shut up, if they want to.

After we put our case in, they are going to be a week tireder than they are now, and they are going to be restive and all, with the defendants as much as with us.

That is the suggestion I wanted to make.

The Court: Do you gentlemen have any observations on that?

Mr. Mullen: I am very anxious to get the case through as quickly as possible. Frankly, at my age, it is a strain on me. Instead of trying to delay the case, as Mr. Robertson may think, I have just the opposite desire.

Mr. Robertson: I think you just got mad at me.

C. Howard Holt.

Mr. Mullen: 9:30 to 6:00 o'clock are pretty lengthy hours. Saturday is the time to try to gather together loose ends of things that have occurred all during the week. I don't want to make any—

The Court: I question whether it is physically possible for you gentlemen to start out at 9:30 and work until 6:00 and then stay down at your office until 1:00 o'clock at night and come back again.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, I am doing it anyway. It doesn't make any difference to me.

Colonel Harris: I would like to make an observation on our side of it, too, Judge.

There is an inherent unfairness to the defendant page 702 } ants to start the case off with a certain tempo and let the Plaintiff have the benefit of that tempo, no matter whether a juror likes it or not, and then start increasing the speed and increasing the speed until the time the defendants begin to put on their case. There is an entirely different tempo and atmosphere in the trial from that which was accorded to Plaintiffs.

Mr. Robertson: I am not asking it. I offered it as a suggestion. I do think it would be well, in fairness—

The Court: I thought I told the jury just before we adjourned on Friday that this was a case that couldn't be rushed, and that I had set aside three weeks for the trial of this case.

Mr. Mullen: I am willing, Judge, to do anything that Your Honor wants. Of course, when it gets down to putting on our defense, we have to have some time to talk with our associates.

The Court: I realize that. We all want to go along as fast as we can, but it is necessary to confer with you gentlemen often during the trial of this case, and I have explained to the jury that it is necessary, and I am going to tell them this morning.

Colonel Harris: But I suggest—

The Court: I don't think there is but one juror who is in a big hurry.

page 703 } (The following proceedings were had in open court:)

The Court: Gentlemen of the jury, I regret the delay this morning, but I assure you it was necessary.

(Roll call of the jury.)

Whereupon,

A. HAMILTON BRYAN

a witness for Plaintiff, having been previously duly sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

CROSS EXAMINATION—continued.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. Mr. Bryan, on Friday, referring to Mr. Hart, I asked this question: "Yet he was representing your laborers and simply trying to get them a better wage?"

Your answer: "I don't think he represented my laborers. If he did he might not have represented more than one or two out of 15 and 16."

I ask you to refer to page 7-A of your prepared statement and read paragraph E.

A. Which one?

Q. Paragraph E.

A. Let me see if we are looking at the same thing.

(Counsel and witness conferring.)

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. It is 7-B. I beg your pardon. I didn't read my own handwriting correctly. 7-B, paragraph E, please.

A. 7-B. "At about 12 noon on July 26, 1949"—page 704 }

Q. 7-E.

A. I thought you said B.

Q. No, 7-B page, paragraph E.

A. Excepting the superintendent, the chief clerk"—

Q. No, E, please.

A. I am sorry, sir. "Excepting the laborers, all our employees approached by Hart and his group refused to become members of the United Construction Workers."

Q. On your direct examination—

Mr. Robertson: What day is that, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: On the 23rd, page 253.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. You were asked: "Did you give any instructions to Delinger or Ragan as to what they should do regarding the situation over the week-end?"

Your answer was: "Yes, I gave instructions that they should watch the situation closely and keep me informed of any developments."

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Will you refer to page 5 of your prepared statement and to the last line of the first paragraph on there and read that sentence, please.

A. "He suggested to Mr. Delinger that he ignore the United Construction Workers."

Q. On the 26th you got to the job around three o'clock?

A. Approximately that. I believe it is stated page 705 } in this memo about three. It might be 2:30, around a quarter of three.

Q. You met on the road a number of automobiles which you state contained the men who had been there earlier, is that correct?

A. Yes, we met a perfect caravan of automobiles headed in the opposite direction, leaving the mine, rather going back toward Royalton, in the opposite direction from which we were going toward the mine.

Q. You know nothing, do you, of your own knowledge, as to what happened there prior to three o'clock or, say, around three o'clock? All you have are reports made to you?

A. That is correct. I didn't get there until after the big trouble had all happened. Of course I inquired about it and was informed, but I didn't see it myself.

Q. You heard Mr. Robertson's opening statement here in which he said, "A crowd of men, a nondescript group of men, some of them carry uns, came to the plant," and your testified that you had a report that a lot of them were armed. Will you please refer to your prepared evidence, page 7-C, and read paragraph II?

A. "Many of our workers believed that some of the group headed by Hart were carrying guns or pistols. While nobody saw any guns, some of our employees thought page 706 } that they saw the outline of pistol handles or bullet cylinders concealed under the shirts or in the pockets of some of the group. Our carpenter foreman on the schoolhouse said he heard shots after the group left the schoolhouse and went around a bend in the road as they were going toward the tippie."

Q. Was it reported to you that on the morning of the 26th before you arrived, that Bert Preston, legal representative of the local Paintsville union, but not an employee, as you have stated, said to Mr. Hart that he could not strike because he had a contract with you, but that if he established a picket line he would honor it?

A. No, it wasn't reported to me before I came to the job.

Q. Was it reported to you that Bert Preston asked "Will there be a picket line tomorrow?" and he said that if there is not a picket line our men will work?

A. It was reported to me that Bert Preston said something to that effect. However, there is a question as to what Bert Preston meant by picket line.

I might add, Mr. Mullen, that that is what Mr. Preston said at the job site. I heard that he said something like that at the job site at that time.

Q. Then later in the afternoon you met Mr. Hart on the page 707 } 26th and had a talk with him. Did Mr. Hart tell you that he had received the message which you had phoned to Mr. Hunter, that you had had plenty of time to talk to his office, and that not having heard from you that plans for a strike had been made and it was too late to stop?

A. I don't know that you got that exactly right. I called Mr. Hunter—Rather, I placed a call for Mr. Hart early on the morning of July 26 at about 7.15 a. m. I was in Huntington and placed a long distance call for Mr. Hart in Pikeville. I had his telephone number. Mr. Hart wasn't there, and I was told I could talk to Mr. Hunter, who was the regional director. So I talked to Mr. Hunter and told him that I had had this report that Mr. Hart was leading a large crowd of men to our job for the purpose of stopping the work and closing the job down. I told Mr. Hunter that I was trying to get to the job site just as soon as I could. I asked him please to ask Mr. Hart not to interfere with any of our workers until I could talk with him at the job site. Later when I talked to Mr. Hart I told him about my conversation with Mr. Hunter, and Mr. Hart said yes, he knew it, that Mr. Hunter had informed him, Mr. Hart, about my telephone conversation, and then Mr. Hart said that he had already made his arrangements and it was too late to change them. After that Mr. Hart referred to his telephone conversation with me on July 14, in which he then said that he was going to organize all of our workers and close down the job unless we page 708 } recognized the United Construction Workers. He said that I hadn't—

Q. I don't want to interrupt you, Mr. Bryan, but it is not responsive to the question. I simply asked, did Mr. Hart tell you that you had had plenty of time to talk to his office.

A. He said he hadn't heard any more from me since July 14, and so United Construction Workers had decided to close down the job.

Q. All right. Now we come to the 27th. You went to the job and you testified you took 25 carpenters with you. Who did you find there at the job when you got there?

A. When we got there, there wasn't a soul there. That is at our office, which you passed before you went down to the tipple.

Q. You say there was no one there when you got there?

Q. When we first got there, there was no one there. There might have been—Maybe I should qualify that. I don't think I was the first person at the job. We all left at about the same time. Maybe some of our people got there a minute or two before I did, but outside of our own group I didn't see anybody.

Q. Didn't you say you saw two men sitting on a log there?

A. Well, I said that that was up at the office. You went down the road from Evanston—as you go down the road from Evanston toward the coal preparation plant page 709 } which we built you first passed the temporary buildings which we put up to take care of the men, the barracks, the mess halls, office, bathhouse, cook's quarters. You turn right there and go down another road which leads to the tipple. We all stopped at our office, and there wasn't any one there. When I got down to the tipple there were two men sitting on a pile of lumber.

Q. Do you know who they were?

A. I didn't know who they were. Some of my fellows talked to them. I didn't know who they were.

Q. Were there only carpenters who went with you to the job on the 27th?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were any of your laborers with you?

A. I didn't see any laborers. Most of those fellows lived in Breathitt County around Decoy. Some electricians went with us, and some iron workers went with us. That is about all I can think of.

Q. Then Mr. Harvey J. Robinson, you testified, arrived. Who is Mr. Robinson?

A. He showed his credentials. He was a field representative of the United Construction Workers and District 50, working in Region 58. I understood he was on par with Mr. Hart.

Q. Who was with him?

A. I didn't know, Mr. Mullen. After we got page 710 } there to the job we found a picket sign sitting on a barrel or on some rocks by the office, and I picked up the picket sign and threw it in the bushes, and lead about seven or eight or ten carpenters down to the tipple. I was down there with them for a while, while they were getting ready to go to work. Then I went back to the office. When I got back there I found Mr. Robinson. I don't know who came with him. There were a few more people there, though.

Q. Those people who were with him, were they not the men who had been working there as common laborers?

A. No, sir; I didn't recognize the common laborers. I mean by that I wouldn't—if I had seen one on the street I wouldn't have known whether he was a laborer or not.

Q. In other words, you didn't know personally all the people working on your job?

A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. Didn't you say to that group there with him, "If you want to work at 90 cents an hour, go on to work"?

A. No, I don't remember that. I remember going back up there. I wanted to get more people to go back to work and I tried my best to persuade them to go to work.

The Court: You don't remember making that statement?

The Witness: No, sir.

The Court: I think that answers the question.

page 711 } By Mr. Mullen:

Q. Do you remember their stating they didn't want to work for 90 cents?

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. Did you tell a group of them then, "All right, if you don't want to work, go get your time"?

A. No, sir. That was a Wednesday, and it was regular payday. Some of the men went in to the office, the people around there, to get their wages for the preceding week. The chief clerk, Mr. Ragan, will be here to testify. I feel certain that some of the men went in there and got their money because it wasn't due them until that day. I wanted to get men to work.

Q. Neither Mr. Robinson nor any of the men with him at that time made any threats, did they?

A. I don't recall Mr. Robinson's making any threats. I talked to him. I don't have a very clear recollection of what my conversation was with Mr. Robertson. I feel sure that he showed me his credentials, and I feel sure that I told him that we were trying to get men to go to work.

Q. Did he tell you who they wanted you to recognize the UCW as representing?

A. Hamilton Bryan.

A. No. My conversations have always been that all the workers would be organized, and I just assumed that they would all be organized by the United Construction page 712 } Worker<sup>d</sup> and the same thing applied.

Q. But there was no conversation between you on that subject at that time?

A. No. I thought at the time that Mr. Robinson was a sort of assistant to Mr. Hart, and I expected Mr. Hart would be coming out a little bit later, but he never did come.

Q. When the Paintsville carpenters—and by Paintsville carpenters I mean the carpenters who were members of the local union at Paintsville—didn't go back on the job, did you try to get Salyersville carpenters, members of the Salyersville union that had been established?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. You have testified that Mr. Freeman, I believe, the International Representative of the Carpenters Union, was present at a meeting later, I think on the 2nd of August. Did he tell you you had to deal with Paintsville and not with Salyersville?

A. He took the position at that meeting that we had an agreement with the Paintsville local and that we would have to continue to obtain carpenters through the facilities of that local.

Q. You have testified that on Sunday, the 31st of July, you went to the job site with a man named Charlie Williams, who was a contractor, and that you offered to make page 713 } him an assistant to Mr. Veltry who was coming to take Mr. Delinger's place. You testified that later on, after you had returned to Salyersville, he came to you and said that he could not take the job, it would make his wife nervous. Will you turn to page 23 of your prepared evidence there, the ninth line, and read what Mr. Williams said to you?

A. Will you give me that reference again, sir?

Q. Page 28, 9th line, I think it is, sir.

A. I don't see it there. There are two references in here about conversations with Mr. Williams.

Q. I will ask for the reply he gave you on page 28, the 9th line.

A. I think that is the wrong page.

Q. That is the wrong page. I will give it to you in a minute. Page 23, the last two lines of the last paragraph.

A. "Mr. Bryan told Charlie Williams that Mr. Delinger had gone to Richmond and that he had another superintendent, Mr. Louis G. Veltry, coming to the job. Mr. Bryan asked Mr.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Williams if he would like to work on the job as assistant to Mr. Veltry. Mr. Williams indicated he would like to do so, but that he would give the matter further thought. After supper Charlie Williams said he had decided not to take the job with us because his wife said that it would make her nervous. He also said that he had considerable contract work which needed his attention."

page 714 } Q. When you were testifying before you left out that last sentence, I believe.

A. I hadn't memorized that thing, and I was doing the best I could.

Q. On Monday, August 1, you again went to the job, got there about seven o'clock. Did you find anybody there then?

A. Yes, sir; there were some people there at that time.

Q. Do you know who they were?

A. Some of them were our carpenters. They had heard a report abroad that we were going to make another effort to go back to work.

Q. They were men, I believe you said, that Mr. Poe sent over there.

A. When it became apparent that the Paintsville local men were afraid to go back to work I had asked Robert Poe, the business agent of the Salyersville Local, to help us out and he said he would try to. A lot of our carpenters were members of the Salyersville local anyway.

Q. While you were waiting over there to see if these men would go to work you put in a call for Mr. Joinville in Richmond, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your testimony-in-chief you have testified, "I told Mr. Joinville about our trouble and asked Mr. Hart if he would like to speak to Mr. Joinville."

page 715 } So Mr. Hart got on the phone. Of course I didn't hear what Mr. Joinville said, but I did hear Mr. Hart tell Mr. Joinville that we couldn't do any more work unless we used United Construction Workers men."

I will ask you to refer to page 27 of your prepared testimony and read the first sentence that you have underscored in red thereon.

A. My copy is not underscored in red here, sir.

(Document provided to the witness.)

"Mr. Hart told Mr. Joinville that he and his group would stop us from working unless we recognized his laborers."

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Unless you recognized his laborers it says there, does it not?

A. That is what it says.

Q. Later on, in talking on that day with Mr. Hart, didn't you inform Mr. Hart and say to Mr. Hart that the work could go along without any laborers since the carpenters on the job would be willing to do the work which normally a laborer should do?

A. I had a conversation with Mr. Hart about that. I told Mr. Hart that I had heard from Robert Poe that at the meeting at Tiptop the day before when they had the gathering of about 250 people, Mr. Hart had indicated that he might let the laborers go on back—I mean the carpenters page 716 } go on go on back to work. Mr. Hart said, "Yes, that he had, but that they had changed their minds and that the carpenters could not go back to work unless we agreed to recognize United Construction Workers as the bargaining agent for the laborers." I don't know whether that is the exact language, but it was words to that effect.

I then told Mr. Hart that we probably could get along without the laborers if necessary and that the Carpenters could do this work, which consisted mostly of helping carpenters, carrying materials and doing things like that.

Mr. Hart said no, that he represented the laborers and that we would have to recognize him. I think I told Mr. Hart that I wasn't so sure that he represented the laborers. I think we had a discussion again about the application blanks the laborers had signed for joining the Salyersville local. He said he had represented them anyhow and he was taking over.

Q. But he told you at that time that he was only representing the laborers, and if you recognized those you could go back to work, didn't he?

A. Yes. That was the first time he took that position in his conversations with me, but he did take it then.

Q. But at that time you asked him to call off the strike because you would employ only carpenters and didn't need any laborers, and the carpenters would do the work normally done by the laborers?

page 717 } A. I never asked Mr. Hart to call off his strike. He continually threatened to bring a large crowd of people there from Beaver Creek and other places to stop us from working if any of our people went to work. He said he would do that unless we signed a paper recognizing his organization as the representative of the laborers. I said I wouldn't do it and couldn't do it. I tried to explain my position to him and he said, well, we had to do it if we continued to work. I said I wouldn't do it.

Q. Mr. Bryan, didn't you ask him to leave your work alone if you employed only carpenters?

A. I don't think I asked him just that. I told him—in the conversations before he always said he was taking over all the work, representing all the employees. In the conversation on August 1 he shifted his position for the first time that I knew about and then said that the other people could go to work if we would recognize them for the laborers. I think that is about what it was.

Q. Didn't he tell you if the carpenters did the work that was normally done by the laborers, that that would be scabbing?

A. I told Mr. Hart that the little work which remained to be done at that time on the coal preparation plant and the houses, finishing up the schoolhouse, could be done by the carpenters.

Mr. Hart said no, that he wouldn't agree to that.

page 718 } Mr. Mullen: Mr. Reporter, will you read the last question?

(The pending question was read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. Did he tell you that?

A. I don't remember Mr. Hart's mentioning the word "scabbing." I know that we had a conversation about the carpenters going ahead and doing the work which would normally be done by laborers in helping carpenters. I said it could be done.

The Court: You don't remember his using that word, That is the question.

The Witness: He said he wouldn't agree to it.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. The next day you had the meeting of a group of some thirteen A. F. of L. people?

A. That is right.

Q. You had requested Mr. Hart to be there, and he came there and waited 45 minutes, didn't he, something like that?

A. I believe the meeting was scheduled for 10 o'clock at the Carpenters Hotel. I had asked Mr. Hart to come and would he please ask Mr. David Hunter to come. We went into the meeting in the dining room at the Carpenters Hotel, and I asked Mr. Ragan to wait outside and let me know when Mr.

Hart arrived, if he did come. After we had been page 719 } in the meeting for a while Mr. Ragan told me he was there, and about 45 minutes after the meeting started I went out and talked to Mr. Hart. I couldn't leave the meeting before that.

Q. The meeting refused to talk to him?

A. Well, after I found out that Mr. Hart was outside, at the first appropriate chance I informed the group that Mr. Hart was outside and I suggested that they talk with him. Various business agents and other A. F. of L. representatives—I don't know whether they all got up or just some of the leaders got up and went back into the kitchen behind the dining room. The kitchen was not in use. They had a little chat back there. They came back, and I was told that they had nothing to talk to Mr. Hart about and did not care to see him.

Q. Mr. Hart was so advised?

A. I went outside and told Mr. Hart that that was their position, right away as soon as they told me.

Q. That is what, on the 2nd of August. On the 3rd of August you went to Huntington and talked with the Pond Creek Pocahontas people, I believe.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And on the fourth you state they wrote a letter terminating the job?

A. That is right.

Q. That letter you have put in evidence.

A. I think it has been offered.

page 720 } Q. Who wrote that letter?

A. Mr. McDonald, the Assistant Counsel.

Q. Were you present in his office when it was written?

A. I was in the room, but I did not dictate it.

Q. But didn't you make some suggestion as to some of the language in it?

A. I think the only suggestion that I made was that Mr. McDonald in originally dictating the letter mentioned United Construction Workers and United Mine Workers, or maybe it was that he mentioned District 50 and United Mine Workers, and I said that I thought the proper way to say it was United Construction Workers, a division of District 50 of the United Mine Workers.

Q. The recital in there is that about noon July 26, 1949, we understand that your men were prevented from continuing to work on the tippie by threats and other action of the representatives of the United Construction Workers, a branch of District 50, United Mine Workers of America. That was based on what you had reported to them the day before, wasn't it?

A. Well, they knew it. Mr. Salvati had been out to the job the very day all this happened, and they had been kept in close touch with the situation all along. I suppose it was partly based on what I had reported to them the day before and partly on what they already knew.

Q. The next day, August 5, you went to Pikeville, I believe it was, to have a conference with David Hunter.

A. That is right.

Q. And you conferred there from 4:30, I believe, to about 8 o'clock.

A. Roughly. It was a rather long meeting.

Q. He gave you a form of contract that they use as the basis for agreements with the United Construction Workers, didn't he?

A. Yes, sir; he showed me an executed copy of a contract with Beckett Construction Company, and gave me another form of contract. There were some little differences between them, and we compared the two.

Q. In other words, this form of contract was a form as a basis for negotiation, and he had made changes in the actual one negotiated?

A. He presented to me two types of forms of contracts. One was you might say a form of preliminary agreement under which a contractor or employer would agree to recognize United Construction Workers and would then agree to negotiate with the United Construction Workers for terms and conditions. That was simply—it was on the letterhead of the United Construction Workers and was in the form of a letter, as I recollect. It is in evidence. Then he presented to me the more formal type of contract which would be entered into pursuant to the preliminary recognition. He presented to me a blank form of contract, and he also showed me an executed contract. The two forms of the more elaborate contracts were not the same, outside of various other changes.

Q. You went over with him paragraph by paragraph the forms?

A. We read them, yes, sir. I think that I read the unexecuted form of contract that he gave to me instead of the one which had been executed by Beckett. I might have read them both.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Then toward the end of your conference you told him, did you not, that you didn't see how Laburnum Corporation could make an agreement with UCW or told him that you might sue him. Will you please turn to your memorandum of conference which A. Hamilton Bryan had with David Hunter in Pikeville, Kentucky on August 5, 1949, starting on page 6 at the sentence beginning in line 18, and read that paragraph, please.

A. Page 6?

Q. Page 6, starting at line 18.

A. "I told Mr. Hunter that for many years we had worked under agreements"?

Q. You can read the whole paragraph if you wish.

A. "I told Mr. Hunter that for many years we page 723 } had worked under agreements with an A. F. of L. local union and that Laburnum had a contract with Richmond Building and Construction Trades Council which required us to do so. I told him that I did not see how Laburnum could make an agreement with United Construction Workers. Mr. Hunter said that if that was the case I had wasted a lot of my time and his time, too. I then told Mr. Hunter that there was a possible way out by forming another corporation which would make an agreement with United Construction Workers, but that I did not believe that A. F. of L. workers would work in harmony with United Construction Workers. Mr. Hunter said that they had been working in harmony on the job that Beckett Construction Company has at Wheelright."

Q. Mr. Bryan, will you please turn to Page 9 and read the second paragraph beginning with the words "As the situation stands"?

A. "As the situation stands now, Mr. Hunter knows that we may bring legal action against the United Mine Workers of America, but he does not know how, when or where we may start. He also understood that we may consider forming another corporation and make some kind of agreement with his group."

Q. Then you had an interview on May 15, 1950, to which you have testified, with Mr. Hunter, and you have a memorandum of that conversation, is that true?

page 724 } A. Yes, sir.

Q. From which you were testifying here before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you please turn to page 3 and read the last paragraph on that page, which paragraph extends over on to page 4?

A. "Mr. Hunter said that if we got additional work in Mingo, Paintsville or elsewhere in his area, he would attempt to organize our laborers and our other workers, and that if he was successful he would expect us to make a contract with UCW granting recognition to it. He said that he would not undertake to tell us that we could not bid for work in Mingo, that as American citizens we had the right to bid, but that if we got the work he would expect it to be done with UCW workers. Mr. Hunter said that he would not permit us to bring in outsiders, that we would have to use local UCW labor."

Q. Will you also read the last paragraph on page 4, "Mr. Hunter again emphasized * * *?"

A. "Mr. Hunter again emphasized that it would be o. k. for us to bid for the work in Mingo County, that if we got it, he would try to organize the job and have us sign an agreement with UCW."

Q. Where is Louisa, to which you referred in your testimony?

A. Louisa, Kentucky, is right on the Big Sandy page 725 } River, right across the West Virginia line. The little town across the river in West Virginia is called Fort Gay, on the main road from Huntington to Paintsville.

Q. Is that where the job you referred to as being handled by the Hamill Company was?

A. That job was an office building near Ragland, West Virginia, in Mingo County.

Q. That was not the job at Louisa?

A. No. In connection with the job of the Hamill Company on the office building at Ragland, Mr. Hunter said that he had met—

Mr. Mullen: I haven't asked him about what Mr. Hunter said, if Your Honor please. He has been over that. I was simply trying to locate the place.

The Witness: I am sorry.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. You have put in evidence the statement listing damages amounting to $29,478.86, the item being loss of fee on contract for construction of 25 dwellings, $534.19—

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Mr. Robertson: What page?

Mr. Mullen: Page 418.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. —damage from loss of fee on work in connection with the construction of schoolhouse, $319.67, damage from loss of fee in connection with the installation of as-page 726 } bestos shingles of 25 dwellings, $250, damage from loss of fee in connection with work for the installation of concrete foundations for coal preparation plant for No. 2, now called No. 3 mine, $1,250, damage from the loss of fee on other additional work in Breathitt County, Kentucky, amounting to approximately $542,500 which Pond Creek Pocahontas Company had agreed to have Laburnum Corporation handled on the basis of cost plus a fee of 5 per cent, $27,125. Total $29,478.86.

In regard to that last item, the work amounting to approximately $542,500, you have testified elsewhere it was $617,500. What makes up the difference?

A. Just a minute, Mr. Mullen.

(Witness computing.)

I took off $50,000 to cover the approximate cost of the work in connection with the 25 dwellings. I have a statement or schedule made out showing how I arrived at it, but I can't remember it all right now. I would have to look at it.

Q. Do you recall what the 25 dwellings cost? I think you have testified to that somewhere.

A. I think I have it here. Our billings on the 25 dwellings amounted to $21,285.05. In arriving at the figure of $542,500 I allowed credit for some of the work which we had done so it wouldn't be too big.

Q. You are suing for $500,000 damages.

A. Yes.

page 727 } Q. Here is $29,478.86. How do you divide up your other items?

A. The other items are made up for loss of profits in connection with additional work which we would have received in view of our business connections with Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Island Creek Coal Company, and its affiliated companies.

Q. Have you a specific amount for that?

A. You asked us to give an itemized statement, and we furnished our idea of approximate amounts.

A. Hamilton Bryan.

Q. Will you state, please, what those approximate amounts were?

A. The other three items?

Q. Yes.

A. Making up the total of $500,000: Damage by reason of the destruction of the business relationship and connection which Laburnum Construction Corporation had developed and built up with Pond Creek Pocahontas Company, Island Creek Coal Company and their associated and subsidiary companies, $120,000. Damages to plaintiff's reputation $100,000. Punitive damages, $250,521.14. Adding all those items together you get $500,000.

Of course the last items were necessarily approximate.

Q. Mr. Bryan, during the period from July 26 through August 5, when you were out in Breathitt County page 728 } and in that general neighborhood, did anybody shoot at you?

A. Nobody shot at me, that I know of.

Q. Did anybody try to beat you?

A. No, nobody made a pass at me.

Q. And you went all through that country day and night, which you say is so wild, and you were the head of the business that the trouble was about, and no one offered to interfere with you or to stop you in any way, did they?

A. Mr. Hart threatened to.

Q. I asked if anybody did stop you or if anybody did prevent you from going around.

A. No, nobody actually did it.

Q. Nobody offered you any violence of any kind while you were going around on the roads and all?

A. It depends on what you mean by offering violence. If that means threatened violence, I would say yes. If it doesn't the answer is no.

Q. Were any of your employees beat up?

A. I didn't hear of anybody getting a mauling.

Q. Was anybody shot at?

A. No, I didn't hear that anybody got shot at.

Q. Was any property destroyed?

A. No, I didn't hear of any property being destroyed.

Q. Were any automobiles overturned?

A. No, I didn't hear of it that I know of.

page 729 } Q. In other words, it was all talk and no action.

A. Well, I guess you just don't understand the situation out there. When they tell you not to do something, you had better not do it.

Q. Yet nobody was hurt, nobody was shot at.

A. I tried to get my people to go back to work by every way known to man, and I couldn't do it.

(Defendants' counsel conferring.)

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, that is all that we have to ask Mr. Bryan at this time. We serve the right, of course, to cross-examine him on the information that he was requested to furnish this morning when we get that. With that exception, we are through, and I believe I kept the promise to Your Honor to get through by midday today.

Mr. Robertson: Stand aside.

Now, if Your Honor please, Mr. Mullen has cross-examined Mr. Bryan from the original memorandum that Mr. Bryan used as his guide when he testified in chief and I therefore now ask that this memorandum be introduced in evidence for what it is worth.

Colonel Harris: We object to that and call the attention of the Court to the fact that Mr. Robertson in the examination-in-chief had a copy of it that he was using from the very beginning. The witness had one copy and Mr. Robertson had the other. Mr. Robertson made the state-page 730 } ment in the presence and hearing of the jury that he always prepared such a statement.

Mr. Robertson: I am being quoted inaccurately, but I am not asking that it go in for any benefit of mine. Mr. Mullen used it as the basis of his cross examination of Mr. Bryan, and I think the jury is entitled to have it in evidence in case they want to see it when they go to the jury room, and they can call for it and see the whole thing and determine what credit we will give Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Mullen: Your Honor, I think the law is that where a witness testifies from a memorandum, opposing counsel at the end of the testimony has the right to see it and to cross-examine from it, but that it is not properly in evidence unless opposing counsel requests that it be made so, because it is a narrative form of evidence underscored and emphasized and so forth with various points. We simply asked for certain of the rights that we had to examine it at the close of his testimony, and unless we ask for it to go in I don't think it can be put in.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I can shorten this

a great deal, In view of their objection to it and in order to avoid delay, I withdraw my offer,

I ask them if they also object to my introducing in evidence the memorandum from which you cross-examined Mr. Bryan regarding his interview with Mr. David Hunter page 731 } on August 5, 1949. I offer that, but I want to know whether you object to it or not,

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, it is exactly the same.

Mr. Robertson: All right, I withdraw it for the same reason,

Mr. Mullen: He has testified to the contents of them and we asked him about what had been left out,

The Court: Very well, the offer is left out.

Gentlemen, we will recess for lunch and be back at 2:15.

(Whereupon, at 12:45 o'clock p. m. the Court recessed until 2:15 o'clock p. m. the same day.)

page 732 } AFTERNOON SESSION,

2:15 p. m.

(The following proceedings were had in Chambers:)

Mr. Robertson: Judge, we are starting now to put on witnesses from Kentucky who are going to testify about specific episodes that occurred there, and they are going to repeat the exact language used. Some of it is pretty rough talk, and I noticed a number of ladies in the room. I think they are members of the families of various people here. There is nobody out there that I recognize at the moment. It doesn't make any difference to me whether they stay in or not. I think the witnesses are going to be reluctant to repeat the language used if ladies are sitting there. I don't know whether the ladies want to hear it or not. I don't think about the lady from the press. I am trying in good faith to avoid all this jockeying in front of the jury, and that is why I am bringing it up here in chambers. I am suggesting it. If these gentlemen object to it, it makes no difference to me.

Mr. Mullen: Just what is it you are going to bring up?

Mr. Robertson: A whole lot of cussing.

Mr. Mullen: You are going to identify the people who did it?

Mr. Robertson: Yes, I am going to have them on the stand and have them repeat what was said.

page 733 } Mr. Mullen: In the presence of Mr. Hart?

Mr. Robertson: In the presence of wherever

~~I think it is admissible.~~

A. Hamilton Bryan.

The Court: Your point is that there are ladies in the Court-room and you do not want to see them embarrassed?

Mr. Robertson: And I don't want my witnesses embarrassed by not wanting to repeat this language before them.

The Court: Do you gentlemen have any observations you would like to make?

Mr. Mullen: I haven't any observations.

The Court: The witness is entitled to say what occurred.

Mr. Mullen: I appreciate counsel's embarrassment.

Mr. Robertson: I am not embarrassed. It is all right with me, Your Honor. Let them stay.

Mr. Mullen: Mr. Lewis asked me on Saturday if I had any idea what day he could be put on, that he had been holding himself awaiting your call. He has managed to keep everything open this week except on Thursday, when Mr. Wilson has asked the heads of the unions to meet with him on the matter of controls. You know who Mr. Wilson is.

Mr. Robertson: It is only about two hours from Washington down here. I can tell you that I do not know and will not know until I know how this case develops, page 734 } and I am unwilling to commit myself.

Mr. Mullen: He would be glad to come Friday or Wednesday or any day.

The Court: Try to arrange it so it won't hit on Thursday.

Mr. Allen: I don't think it will hit on Thursday.

Mr. Robertson: I will do my best not to have it go on Thursday, but I am unwilling to commit myself.

The Court: You wanted to make a statement?

Mr. Mullen: I have spoken to Mr. Robertson and he doesn't object to it.

page 735 } (The following proceedings were had in open court:)

The Court: Are there any witnesses in the courtroom who have been excluded?

Mr. Robertson: Mr. Dixon, my next witness, is here and I am going to call him to the stand.

(Conference at the bench.)

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, I would like to state in regard to the absence of Mr. Fred Pollard, who is one of the counsel for defendants, that Mr. Pollard was taken ill on Saturday, he is running quite a high temperation today, 103, and I don't know when he will be able to be back. I think it proper that I should explain why he is not here today.

Frank Dixon.

The Court: Let the record show that Mr. Pollard's absence is due to illness.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, we have reached the stage of this trial where we are going to introduce a number of witnesses from Kentucky to state what occurred in various episodes out there, and there is going to be some rough talk. I don't think from all witnesses, but from some of them, pretty rough expressions. I notice a number of ladies in the courtroom. They might not want to hear it, and the witnesses might not want to say it in front of them. I suggest that they leave.

The Court: As I understand it, it is immaterial to you whether the ladies stay or not.

Mr. Robertson: No, sir; I can stand it.

The Court: Ladies, it is up to you whether you want to stay or not.

Who is the first witness?

Mr. Robertson: Mr. Frank Dixon, who was not sworn.

Whereupon,

FRANK DIXON

a witness for the Plaintiff, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Dixon, your name is Mr. Frank Dixon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do you live?

A. I live in Beuchel, Kentucky.

Q. How far is that from Breathitt County?

A. I should judge roughly around 190 miles.

Q. Speak loud enough for the jury to hear you without using the microphone, if you can, please.

Were you born and raised in Kentucky?

A. No, I wasn't.

Q. Where were you born and raised?

A. I was born in West Virginia.

Q. Are you connected with the American Federation of Labor?

A. Yes, sir; I am.

Frank Dixon.

Q. What is your position, if any, with that union?

A. I am an international representative of the United brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. How many years have you occupied that position with the union?

A. About four years all together.

Q. What are your duties in that position?

A. As an international representative, my duties are to go around over the state on assignments from our international office where we might have disputes or to organize, maybe to settle some dispute between one local union and another over maybe jurisdiction or territorial dispute, strikes, or what have you that might come up. We would be sent in there maybe to investigate it and find out what the trouble is all about and make a settlement in the matter if possible.

Q. In the discharge of your duties have you from time to time had knowledge brought to your attention of the contests and differences between the A. F. of L. and the United Mine Workers of America?

A. I have.

Colonel Harris: We object to that on the page 738 } ground it would be hearsay.

Mr. Robertson: I think I can explain it in a minute, Your Honor. I am laying the foundation for him to state whether or not he knows that there is competition between these three defendants here and the A. F. of L. for the organization of different crafts, particularly construction workers. I think it is admissible.

The Court: I will overrule the objection.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I think the question was, in the discharge of your duties have you come to know about the contests and accords and differences between the American Federation of Labor and the United Mine Workers of America.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Is that also true as to the American Federation of Labor and District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America?

A. That is right.

Q. Is that likewise true as to the American Federation of Labor and the United Construction Workers, affiliated with the United Mine Workers of America?

Frank Dixon.

A. That is right.

Q. Does the American Federation of Labor and the three unions that I have named compete to organize in the same geographical territory?

page 739 } A. The United Construction Workers does.

Q. What is the nature of that competition?

A. The United Mine Workers has a set-up of an organization known as the United Construction Workers. They are in direct competition with our organization as far as construction work is concerned. They do attempt to organize construction jobs, in other words what we call reconstruction. That construction would consist mostly, you might say, in the eastern part of the state around the mines. In and around these mines of course we have signed contracts maybe with certain contractors. I don't know whether that is to be brought out here or whether you wish to bring that out. We can say probably in the case of the Laburnum Construction Company. We had a signed contract with this company to build coal hoppers, school buildings and houses and things in Breathitt County.

Q. Mr. Dixon, in union talk what is meant by one union raiding another?

A. That comes under the case practically you might say in the same instance here between the Laburnum Construction Company and our organization. As I stated before, we had a signed contract with the Laburnum Construction Company to furnish the carpenters and millrights on that job. Of course there wasn't any dispute there. At the start of the job the thing carried on nicely for I think a period of page 740 } around six or seven months. Out of a blue sky the United Construction Workers came on the job and told the men either they were going to get off the job, that it was their work, or else they were going to have to join the United Construction Workers if they wanted to work there.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, is the witness testifying from his own knowledge. He already has said he was a hundred miles away from there.

Mr. Robertson: I understand the witness is testifying from information that he got in the routine discharge of his duties and reports made to him.

The Court: Is that true?

The Witness: How is that again?

The Court: Is it true that this is information that you received from reports, or do you know it from your own knowledge?

Frank Dixon.

The Witness: I know it from my own knowledge, sir.

The Court: Go ahead.

Mr. Robertson: I have forgotten where you got to. Read the last sentence or two of his statement.

(The answer to the question was read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Is that an illustration of raiding a union?

A. That is what you might say a definition of raiding, we will say on particular work like that, that is the page 741 } practice that they have. For instance, in this particular case here there was a gang of men of 50 to 100 people who came out there on the job and demanded of these men to join their organization or else they would have to get off the job. That is raiding of a construction job. That is raiding the work. In other words, it is taking advantage of one group of people that already has a contract. It has happened in other instances around the eastern part of the state of Kentucky.

Colonel Harris: We move to disregard that statement.

The Court: You gentlemen will disregard that statement.

Mr. Robertson: Before that, Your Honor, you remember we have set out in our trial brief and I am coming to this in a few other questions, we maintain and I think the Court has heretofore ruled that other instances of the same sort of thing in this Eastern Kentucky area, both before and after that, is admissible to show a pattern of behaviour.

The Court: In what period of time?

Mr. Robertson: Any reasonable period of time, one year, two years, three years.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, Your Honor has not ruled on that question. It hasn't come up yet for argument. I know because I have a note of argument on it. It page 742 } has not come up and has not been ruled on by Your Honor.

Mr. Robertson: I will ask the Court to defer its ruling because it is going to come up in a very few moments.

The Court: Very well.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Dixon, do you know the policy of the American Federation of Labor about honoring a picket line?

Frank Dixon.

Colonel Harris: We object to that, if the Court pleases. It is not a question of policy of the American Federation of Labor. It is a question of what those men out there on that job did about honoring the picket line. If they honored the picket line, whether they are American Federation of Labor or whether the American Federation of Labor had a policy of doing it or not, is immaterial.

Mr. Robertson: Are you through?

Colonel Harris: Yes.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, it has been stated here by counsel on the other side, I think by Mr. Mullen, that it was a point of honor or an unwritten law among unions to honor each other's picket lines. I am laying the foundation to meet my friend's objection, but I can ask but one question at a time. I am asking him now does he know what the policy generally is about honoring a picket line. I think he is going to say yes, and then I am going to ask him what would the policy of the A. F. of L. be in honoring any kind of picket line under such circumstances as prevailed on this job on July 26.

Colonel Harris: And we expect the evidence to show actually that the men out there honored the picket line. Suppose the policy of the A. F. of L. is not to honor it, but in actual practice these men did honor it, that is the thing that we are enquiring about here, if the Court pleases. What happened out there on that job in Kentucky? We are not trying the different policies of the A. F. of L. or any other international union. What happened. It is a simple problem. The men who were there can then testify what happened there on that day.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I stated in my opening statement that I expected them to deny anything we did was right or anything they did was wrong. Now there is going to be a conflict of testimony here. We are going to have testimony which would lead you to believe there was no picket line there, and there was no question of a picket line, but our men were run off by threats of force and violence. I ask this witness here from what he knows of this situation, if he knows the general policy what would be their general policy. I have a right to do it because they have already said in here that it is a matter of unwritten law to observe a picket line. I am going to show now whether it is or whether it is not in circumstances like this.

page 744 } Colonel Harris: The undisputed evidence already shows from the testimony of the President of the Plaintiff that there were three picket signs out there which he picked up, one he threw in the bushes, and he has brought the others here. There isn't any question about that. The plaintiff himself has testified to that. That is the alter ego of the plaintiff, the man whom they say owns all the common stock. They are asking this witness to speculate as to what would have been the policy of the A. F. of L., and I respectfully submit that what we are interested in is not what would have been the policy but what actually happened.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, how can he talk about uncontradicted testimony when we haven't had a chance yet to put the case in? I expect his witnesses to say there was a picket line there like the iron curtain and that we honored it. I expect our witnesses to say no such thing. I think on the evidence that is in here now I say if some responsible person or any person goes and sticks up one picket sign at the office and goes a mile and a quarter down to the school house and sticks up another thing like that out in the bushes and then goes a mile and a half back to the tippie, that that does not constitute a picket line.

The Court: I will overrule the objection and allow the evidence for what it is worth.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

Q. Do you know the policy of the A. F. of L. regarding honoring picket lines?

A. Yes, I would be glad to answer that. Take, for instance, where there is a jurisdictional dispute between maybe we will say that my craft and another craft affiliated with the A. F. of L., of course our people would recognize that picket line, but in this instance where we are talking about the Breathitt County job—that seems to be the case here—I will say to you that our international and our people does not recognize such a picket line as that because that picket line was put up there for the purpose of trying to force our membership to give up their card in their brotherhood and join a dual organization which in our general constitution it says that you shall not join, give aid, comfort or support to a dual organization, which the United Construction Workers is a dual organization to our organization. I think that answers your question. We would not under any circumstances recognize a picket line set up there, which has been illustrated I think here if I might use the attorneys' language here, a piece of paper stuck up some place on a rock or nailed up on a tree. We wouldn't recognize such a sign as that anyhow. A man would have to be carrying a picket sign to and fro across the site of the job or something before the men would.

Then of course it is left up to the man's own page 746 } choosing as to whether or not he would cross that picket line. Another thing is, in this case here, with the Laburnum Construction Company on the Breathitt County job, I was in the meeting and told these men as far as my orders to them they were that they were to return to work and to continue because they had a contract with the Laburnum Construction Company to finish that job. In the meeting they told me definitely that they were not going to work under those circumstances.

Colonel Harris: We object to what happened in a private meeting that none of the defendants were present at, and the only meeting I have heard about here was one in which Mr. Hart waited 45 minutes and after being invited to come there they wouldn't let him in. So we object to bringing testimony to this jury of something that happens in a secret and private meeting of their own.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, Mr. Dixon was a little ahead of what I am trying to develop there, but to relieve my friend's lack of knowledge, we are talking about the Salyersville meeting on August 2, where Mr. Bryan made the speech and tried to get the people back to work and we are going to come to that in due course.

The Court: I overrule the objection.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

page 747 }

. . . . .

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. I think you have already said that you are familiar generally with the facts of this case.

A. That is right.

Q. Do you know a man named Tom Raney, who lives in Pikeville, Kentucky?

A. I don't know Mr. Raney personally.

Q. Do you know who he is?

A. Yes, I know he has some kind of official capacity I guess probably like myself. He is probably international representative for the United Mine Workers.

Frank Dixon.

page 748 } Q. Since this case was set for trial has Mr. Raney sent you a message that if your witnesses from the Paintsville area would not testify, you wouldn't have any more trouble out in Eastern Kentucky?

Colonel Harris: We object to that statement: Mr. Raney has no authority and no authority is shown from any one of the defendants to engage in any discussions of that sort. If he did, he stepped outside of his agency.

Mr. Robertson: That doesn't make any difference to us, Your Honor. The undisputed testimony thus far is that Tom Raney is a member of the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America, that he did whatever duties were assigned to him by Mr. John L. Lewis, that he lived in Pikeville and maintained an office there.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Have you received a message such as I have mentioned in my question?

The Court: As him what message he received.

Colonel Harris: Judge, I am not familiar with the Kentucky practice. In the other states in which I practice if I object to a question and counsel repeats it then I have to repeat my objection, and the custom is to let the stenographer read it in order to preserve the objection and the page 749 } exception. Is that the rule up here?

The Court: That is a question that you gentlemen will have to determine for yourselves as to how you want to save your point, but the Court will be very liberal with you in that respect, and you rise at any time you care to to save your point.

Colonel Harris: I want to conform to the Virginia rules, and every time he repeats his question I will have to repeat the objection.

Mr. Robertson: I would say that the general practice is just to have a continuing objection to the entire line of testimony.

The Court: That is done frequently, Mr. Harris.

Colonel Harris: But some of these questions will be different, and at the time he asks them will suggest the specific and precise objection that applies to it, and if I put in a general objection and I come to read them I probably wouldn't get the same idea. So I prefer to state my objection.

Frank Dixon.

The Court: You feel free to state your objection at any time, Mr. Harris.

Colonel Harris: Thank you, sir.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What message did you receive from Tom Raney?

Mr. Harris: Same objection, if the Court please.

The Court: Go ahead and answer.

page 750 } The Witness: I received a message in a round-about way that Mr. Tom Raney wanted to meet with me and suggested that we meet and talk this matter over and we would arrive at some kind of settlement where the United Construction Workers would lay off the carpenter work in the eastern part of the state, and the understanding was that I was to get hold of my men at Paintsville and keep them from testifying in this case, that they just couldn't afford to have the carpenters testify in this case in Richmond.

Colonel Harris: We move to exclude that because the witness says that he got that in a round-about way, and nobody can possibly tell what is meant by a round-about way. That means it did not come directly from Tom Raney, and I think if a man comes in and says I got a rumor or a round-about report, they should be more specific and lay a better predicate for it.

Mr. Robertson: Just a minute before you rule, if Your Honor please. If you want to ask him, the round-about was in a way that the person giving the message won't get hurt physically through violence. If you want to pursue that I will pursue it right now.

Colonel Harris: I challenge the definition. I never heard that round-about meant that you weren't going to get into a fight. That is a new definition of round-about, to me anyway.

Q. What do you mean by what you said?

A. The way the message came to me this man happens to hold a pretty high position in the labor movement in Kentucky, and of course the way the message was delivered to me was that "I don't want you to say anything about this to anybody else. I ate lunch with Tom in a certain city and he talked this matter over with me and suggested that I come down here and get hold of you and see if you want to get in conference with him." I started to interrupt there a minute ago and try to make a clear explanation to that effect. Probably Tom didn't know me and doesn't know my address. I guess the attorney might object, but I will say I am glad of it.

Frank Dixon.

The Court: Gentlemen, disregard that last statement.

Colonel Harris: I don't move to exclude his statement that he is glad of it because it shows his personal ill-will toward Mr. Raney, and I think the jury is entitled to know it.

The Court: I thought you were rising for the purpose of asking the Court to disregard that statement.

Mr. Robertson: I am going to ask that they do regard it.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Dixon, has your life been threatened since this case started on account of your connection with the case?

page 752 }

. . . . .

page 753 } (The following proceedings were had in chambers.)

(The last several questions and answers were read by the reporter.)

Mr. Mullen: I think he should go back to the point where objection was made to his saying that.

Mr. Robertson: Let me add this here, because I didn't feel that I should say this in the presence of the jury. What he means by "around-about way" is that that man, if he reveals his name, thinks his life would be in danger, and the man was afraid not to deliver the message, and he was afraid to deliver it for fear that his name would leak out. He says that if it becomes known, that that man's name was mentioned in this case, it will cost him his life.

Wait a minute, I haven't finished.

I told this man Dixon that I would not ask him on the stand to reveal that name, for that reason.

Mr. Mullen: We will.

Colonel Harris: We certainly will.

Mr. Robertson: That is up to you and him and the Court.

Frank Dixon.

Mr. Mullen: You are making a very serious charge.

Mr. Robertson: I am.

Mr. Mullen: On the basis of hearsay. The man who he claims told him isn't even willing to back it up by having his name stated.

Mr. Robertson: It is a rough case, and I have page 754 } done my part now. If it comes out through you all, that is—

The Court: What observation do you have to make, Mr. Allen?

Mr. Allen: If it please Your Honor, I suppose it will be conceded on all sides that you have a difficult problem here. It is exceedingly difficult any way you go about it, but the case itself makes it difficult. We are willing to be guided by any instructions to counsel that Your Honor may think are fair, but I think this should be borne in mind first, last, and all the time: according to the nature of the case itself, we certainly have a right to bring out the conflicting jurisdictions, so to speak, between these two unions. We have certainly got a right to bring out the antagonisms between the two unions. We certainly have a right to prove, according to the issues that have been drawn here, that our men left the job because of threats, intimidation, and fear of bodily harm, and not because of their desire to honor a so-called picket line, not because of their desire to join the United Construction Workers because the scale of pay was greater.

How are you going to prove those things? You might say, "You can prove them by proving the practice or the custom or policies of the United Construction Workers to raid people that didn't join their unions." I don't know how page 755 } you are going to get at it. The evidence ought to be confined to somewhat a general nature, and specific instances ought not to be gone into too much unless they bring them out themselves on cross examination.

How are we going to show the motive of these people? How are we going to show that they made up their minds to come there and did run these people off the job by threats, violence and intimidation?

You come back to this man Dixon. He holds a high position in the American Federation of Labor. A man comes to him and brings him this message, and promises him, "I don't want my name mentioned. If my name is mentioned as coming to you about this, I might be killed."

That is right much of detail to go into, it is true, the same way something was brought out about one of the meetings

Frank Dixon.

there, when the man started to mention something that was said at the meeting. It is certain that we have a right to bring out that this representative of the American Federation of Labor, an International Representative, came there and urged these people to go to work, and they refused to go to work because of threats, intimidation and fear. We certainly have a right to go that far.

Then these gentlemen have the right to ask them, if they want to, "what was done or said to show that fear?"

If, Your Honor doesn't think that we have a right to go into that detail on direct examination, limit us to statements to the effect that, "I urged these men to go back to work, and they wouldn't go back to work."

"Why wouldn't they go back to work?"

"They were afraid. They were afraid of being killed."

We have a right to go that far. The question is just how far we have a right to go in order to prove the issues on our side of the case which have developed here. I submit that Your Honor give that serious thought and confine us to the rules which you think give us the right to bring out what we have a right to bring out without an infraction of any rules that are made for the benefit of the defendants in cases of this kind.

Mr. Mullen: If your Honor please, I think we are confusing two things. The question has been asked him as to what he said at a meeting, and that was objected to. There were one or two other questions as to what happened there in Breathitt at the time. They are asking him here about a matter that occurred after the suit was brought, long after the suit was brought, and are asking the witness to testify that Tom Raney tried to prevent a witness from coming here to testify. All his authority for that is that "some man, whose name I can't mention, told me that he talked with Tom Raney, and that is what Tom Raney would like to do; he would like to meet with me to see if we can get together."

It isn't a part of what happened at the time. It is a matter that came up long afterward. Clearly, so far as he is repeating what Tom Raney said, it is hearsay, and he certainly has no right to go on the stand and try to prevent, even if he could testify of his own knowledge, us from asking the source of his message and the authority on which he is making these statements.

Frank Dixon.

If that is going to put a man in jeopardy, they are doing it, not us, and the burden should not be put on us.

The Court: What is the materiality of this question that threats have been made since the alleged cause of action arose?

Mr. Robertson: I can't think of anything that would be more relevant. They are trying to scare us out of proving our case. It just hooks up the whole thing from beginning to end. I can't think of anything more relevant.

The Court: The witness is here testifying what he knows about it.

Mr. Robertson: I have a right to show their efforts to scare us out of proving our case. They are not all here.

Mr. Allen: The materiality is this, Your Honor: It is exactly the same as old Judge Keats said in one of our famous slander cases. Slanders, even after the suit has started, are admissible to show the motive. You can't re-page 758 } cover on those slanders, but they go back and show the motive. This is just the aftermath and continuation of the same sort of thing, and it comes out of the same atmosphere that they created.

Mr. Robertson: It shows the pattern. The trial of this case has taken the pattern that every one I have ever been in takes. It is the same pattern. I am not talking about counsel. I am talking about on the facts, and the way they try to scare you out of coming to court, the way they try to scare your witnesses out after you get there.

I think it shows, as we have said in our trial brief, a pattern of conduct from before this case right on down through it and right down here into this trial. I think it is a great element of punitive damages.

Mr. Mullen: Assuming that it was material to show that, you are confusing the question of materiality with the method of proof. Speaking of slander cases, and the proof of subsequent slander, it is assumed that they had the proper witness to prove it. The question here is the method that they are trying to follow to prove that Tom Raney, whom this man had never met and never talked to, had said that he wanted to get with him and prevent witnesses from coming here. It is the worst violation possible of the hearsay rule. They even admit they brought him here on the promise that they wouldn't ask him who told him.

page 759 } Mr. Robertson: That is right, but I have no right to bind you.

I say this, Your Honor: It is perfectly obvious that this message came to this man as the official of the union, and it was up to him to receive it and act upon it as an official of the union. He got it in the routine performance of his duties. When we get to where we want to go into particulars, they say, "Let's confine ourselves to generalities." When we try to stick to generalities, they say, "You must give us the particulars." They can get them if they want them.

Frank Dixon.

Colonel Harris: May I say a word, Judge?

The Court: I will come back to you, Colonel.

Mr. Moore: I would like to bring to Your Honor's attention the language of the Virginia Courts concerning this situation in the case of Troglon v. Commonwealth, 31 Gratt. 862, where the Court cites from Judge Story as follows:

"The question was one of fraudulent intent or not, and upon questions of that sort, where the intent of the party is the matter in issue, it has always been deemed allowable as well in criminal as in civil cases to introduce evidence of other acts and doings of the party of a kindred character, in order to illustrate and establish his intention. Indeed, in no other way would it be practicable in many cases to establish such intent or motive; for the single act taken by itpage 760 } self may not be decisive either way, but when taken in connection with others of the like character and motive, the intent and motive may be demonstrated almost with absolute certainty."

That is how we think it is relevant and admissible, because if they intimidate this man as far as testifying in the case goes, it certainly shows they went at least that far and probably farther in intimidating a large group of them to the extent of running them off the job.

The Court: All right, Colonel Harris.

Colonel Harris: If the Court please, counsel for the Plaintiff keep saying and trying to leave the impression on the Court that this is a rough case.

Mr. Robertson: What kind of case?

Colonel Harris: To me, it is a powder puff case. There is no evidence that any single human being lost even a tiny little bit of skin. Nobody had their toes stepped on. Nobody was pushed over. Nobody was hurt. From the beginning of this puffed-up lawsuit to the present time, nobody has been hurt.

Now they come in and try to create the impression on this Court that they are so anxious to save this man down in Kentucky. If he were sent by Tom Raney, don't you know Tom

Frank Dixon.

Raney knows who it was? It is absurd to come in here and go through all that rigmarole as if they were trying to protect the man's life. If he came from Tom Raney, Tom Raney knows who he is. They can't protect him. If Tom Raney sent him and Tom wants to disclose who he was so the people will know that his sympathy is not with the Mine Workers, Tom Raney can tell them.

Mr. Robertson: Tom Raney is a member of your International Executive Board, and you can bring him.

Mr. Mullen: I am talking about, not the facts; I am talking about the question of procedure and the question of law, whether they can prove what they are trying to prove. I am not arguing about whether they can or can't prove it. I am arguing the question of procedural law, that they can't prove it in the manner that they are trying to prove it. It is hearsay.

The Court: Just how far do you think, Mr. Allen, you could go?

Mr. Robertson: As far as we have gone, Your Honor. I don't think any farther.

Mr. Allen: You have reference to this particular incident right here about calling for the conversation between Mr. Dixon and this man, whoever he was, supposed to be sent by Tom Raney?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Allen: I think Mr. Dixon ought to be allowed to say that he had received threats patterned after those on page 762 <sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> before, even after this suit started, in connection with witnesses. If they want the names and the details, then they should ask for them.

Mr. Robertson: Let me finish here. Isn't this the answer to it? As far as the message from Tom Raney is concerned, I am now through with that. If they want to develop the name, they can develop it. If they want to say Dixon is lying and is unworthy of belief, they can bring Tom Raney here and he can deny it out of whole cloth, and there is the issue that the jury can take or leave.

Mr. Mullen: We are not through with it. We are asking the Judge to rule it out and tell them so. Dixon isn't claiming that he has been threatened.

Mr. Robertson: I haven't come to that yet. I am talking now about the message from Tom Raney. We are going to talk about the other thing in a minute. I thought you wanted to dispose of this first question first.

Frank Dixon.

Mr. Mullen: I do, but Mr. Allen brought up that Raney had threatened him.

Mr. Robertson: He didn't say that. You misunderstood him, Mr. Mullen. We said this, that Tom Raney sent him a message and said, "I want to get together and make an agreement with you that you call off your witnesses from Paintsville, and we won't worry you any more in Eastern Kentucky." That is not a threat. That is an over-page 763 } ture to buy off the witnesses.

What I am going to tell you about the threat to his life is an entirely different matter, and Tom Raney had nothing to do with that.

Colonel Harris: The fact that they say we can later try to shovel out the mass of irrelevant stuff that they are trying to get in doesn't require the violation of the rules of evidence. We still have rules of evidence to determine the admissibility of stuff, and every once in a while they argue that we will get our chance to do so and so. They can't put us to that chance. They have to meet the requirements of the rules of evidence as they go along.

The Court: Is there anything else you gentlemen want to say?

I will overrule the motion, and will allow the witness to answer.

You want to reserve an exception?

Mr. Mullen: We note an exception.

Mr. Robertson: Now, let us take up the other matter. This thing about the threat to his life is an entirely different matter, and Raney has nothing to do with that. I want to develop there the threat that was made to his life.

The Court: Can you foresee any question that is going to be raised when we go back in the courtroom so we can thresh that out now?

page 764 } Colonel Harris: We are going to object to any claim that this man, this eager beaver, gets on the stand and says that "somebody threatened my life," and thereby poses as a brave man. Of course we will object to it.

The Court: What question are you going to ask?

Mr. Robertson: I am going to ask him, since this case was instituted and since he has been connected with it, has any threat been made against his life; and if so, by whom and in what manner. That is the substance of it. I can't remember the exact wording of it.

Colonel Harris: Your Honor knows that the threat of an individual member of a union of 600,000 members wouldn't be action for which the union would be responsible.

Mr. Robertson: Judge, let me give you an illustration of it. Suppose the Court were to adjourn this afternoon and John L. Lewis would come to my home tonight and say, "I don't like your tactics in that case, now, and you just dry up and quit them or I will shoot you." Does the Court mean I wouldn't have a right to come back here and tell that to this jury tomorrow as showing the animus and attitude in this thing and the pattern of it from before this occurrence on down through to the present day?

Mr. Mullen: No, we wouldn't say that, but there you have direct connection. Here you have a go-between.

Mr. Robertson: That doesn't make any difference. Suppose he sent me that message by you; it would serve me just as bad and be just as effective, because I wouldn't want John L. to send me word he was going to kill me. I think he would do it.

Mr. Mullen: He might not be lying, you don't know.

Mr. Robertson: He might be, and the jury could decide on that.

Colonel Harris: If all his arguments are as weak as the statement that he is scared, I think Your Honor can just dismiss them from your mind hereafter.

The Court: Do you care to make any observation on that point, Mr. Allen?

Mr. Allen: No, sir.

The Court: Do you gentlemen care to discuss it further?

Mr. Mullen: No.

The Court: I will allow the question to be asked.

You want to except to it in here?

Colonel Harris: Yes.

page 766 } (The following proceedings were had in open court:)

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Dixon—

The Court: Mr. Robertson, it has been indicated to the Court that some questions may be asked that may be embarrassing to some people, and it is entirely up to you whether you want to stay in the Court or not. All right, you may proceed.

Frank Dixon.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Dixon, since you have been connected with this case have any threats been made against your life and if so, by whom and in what manner?

A. I will have again to say in a round-about way the word has been sent on to me by various people that I had better keep my ass out of the eastern part of the state.

Mr. Harris: We move to exclude the answer on account of the fact that the witness again makes use of the device "round-about way."

The Court: What do you mean by round-about way, Mr. Dixon?

The Witness: I am trying to refrain from bringing somebody else into this case because bodily harm might come to them by using their name.

The Court: Did somebody tell you or what?

The Witness: It goes back to the conversation page 767 } that happened at Ashland, Kentucky and the same thing was brought to me there from the same party, that Mr. Raney had offered to meet with me to make a deal with me, and if we did allow these men in Paintsville to testify I had better keep my ass out of the eastern part of the state.

Colonel Harris: We object.

Mr. Roberson: Let him finish, please.

Colonel Harris: I thought he was through. I beg your pardon.

The Witness: I have finished if that is a satisfactory answer.

Colonel Harris: You want to find out from him if that is satisfactory?

The Witness: I beg your pardon. I didn't say it was satisfactory to him. I was waiting to see if he was going to ask me anything further pertaining to it.

The Court: Had you completed your statement?

The Witness: Yes, I finished the statement.

Colonel Harris: We ask the Court to exclude from the jury this evident attempt to create the impression that he is protecting somebody, because if a man came to him who was sent by Tom Raney, Tom Raney knows that man's name. It isn't a secret known only to this man that he is protecting. If anybody connected with the union sent that man there, the man connected with it knows his name and it isn't any page 768 } secret from him.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, and also Tom Raney is a member of the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America, living at Pikeville, Kentucky, and they can bring him here if they want him. All that he is saying here now is precisely what your Honor has already ruled on in Chambers and he is just repeating it here in the presence of the jury. The Court has already ruled that these questions may be asked.

Frank Dixon.

Colonel Harris: Since Your Honor made a ruling, this witness has been trying to make satisfactory answers for Mr. Robertson.

The Court: That will be a question for the jury to appraise the testimony. I overrule the objection.

Mr. Mullen: We reserve an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. In connection with that threat did they make any reference to you about Big Sandy River and Tug River?

Colonel Harris: May we have an objection to all questions along that line and an exception without taking up time delaying the case?

The Court: Yes.

The Witness: The threat was sent to me again that if I testified and permitted these men in Paintsville, the carpenters in Paintsville to testify, that all the damned page 769 } water and gravel in the Big Sandy River wasn't going to fill me up if they ever caught me in the eastern part of the State again.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Does what happened in Breathitt County conform or differ from the pattern of behavior of the United Construction Workers in other parts of eastern Kentucky?

Colonel Harris: We will have to add that that calls for an unauthorized conclusion of the witness and we don't know with what he is comparing.

Mr. Robertson: I am comparing it with other instances where they have been run off the job. There have been some of them already mentioned here, Wheelwright, Kentucky. Somebody else called them. There are four or five of them. I can't remember them all. As I understand the law we are entitled to show a general pattern of conduct a reasonable length of time before the Breathitt County occurrences and a reasonable length of time after the Breathitt County occurrences to show whether this Breathitt stuff was part and parcel of a general pattern used by these defendants to enforce their will.

Frank Dixon.

The Court: I overrule the objection.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception and may we add, Judge, to that exception that they don't specify the date, they don't specify the time, the don't specify the place, page 770 } and they don't specify the industry or business that was involved.

The Court: Are you going to follow this question with one specifically showing those things?

Mr. Robertson: I hadn't intended to but I do now intend to.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Dixon, does what was done in Breathitt County, Kentucky conform to or differ from the general course of conduct as you have known it in similar instances in Kentucky?

A. It did, and it does.

Q. Did it conform or differ?

A. There has been a number of jobs that our people have been run off of: Wheelwright, Kentucky, Prestonburg, Kentucky—

The Court: Give the time.

The Witness: If Your Honor please, I don't really—I will say within the past year. I can do it that way. I would have to go back to my records and reports to the International office to get those dates.

The Court: Give the approximate times.

The Witness: It was in the summer at Prestonburg Kentucky, where we had a contract with a contractor. I don't just remember the name. That was a job where we built a dam on the Big Sandy River. There was a graveyard above the dam where they would have to be moved. Our page 771 } contract called for removing those bodies and making caskets. The graveyard would be removed to higher ground. The members of the Prestonsburg local union had a contract with this company—I just can't say the name of the company—and the United Construction Workers run our carpenters off that job. We had another contract at Wheelwright, Kentucky to do the carpenter work and wheelwright, and they were ran off that job. We had another job that was being built in Barberville, Kentucky, an armory for the State of Kentucky, and our people were run off that job.

Frank Dixon.

We had a job at Lynch, Kentucky, building a washer and coal tippie, and the men were run off that job.

Those are the jobs that I specifically know something about because the local unions had called me in to their districts, and my assignments from the international office took me in there to investigate and find out what the trouble was, and those are the conditions that I found when I got into the territory.

Mr. Robertson: The witness is with you.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Harris:

Q. You say it conformed to these instances where other people were run off. In those other instances were the cases in which no single member of your union got as much as a scratch?

A. I would answer that in this way, that their page 772 } lives were threatened.

Q. No. I asked you the question, was it the case in these others that you mentioned where no single member of your union got as much as a scratch?

A. I might answer that by saying we didn't give them a chance to because we left the job without anybody being injured.

Q. Every time—

A. In other words, we left the job before we would allow any of our people to be injured over the job.

Q. All United Construction Workers have to do is to come in and say we want you to git, and you git, is that the idea?

A. No, sir. When there is at least 50 or 75 men or 100 men come to a job and go to a small building and just crowd up into the door and tell you that by God you are going to belong to our organization or you ain't going to work here, and we probably have only 10 or 15 or 20 men on that job, they certainly haven't got any room to protect themselves.

Q. You know you had more than any 10 or 15 or 20 men on the job of Laburnum Construction Corporation, don't you?

A. We had quite a few men on that job. I don't just remember how many. But those men were scattered from the top of the mountain to the bottom of the mountain.

Q. Don't you know you had 64 men on this work?

A. Even so there would be 64 of our men on the page 773 } job, those men were scattered over a large area, and I don't suppose there were more than, we will say the largest number of them that could be together would be around 15 of them.

Mr. Robertson: Let him finish, please, Mr. Harris.

Colonel Harris: I thought he had answered my question. He might have been making a speech that I wasn't listening to.

The Witness: You certainly were asking the question.

The Court: Did you finish answering the question?

The Witness: Yes.

The Court: I understood you had. Go ahead, Mr. Harris.

By Colonel Harris:

Q. Do you claim to this jury that the carpenter helpers and common laborers on the Laburnum job were members of the carpenters union?

A. They were not, the laborers and carpenters helpers, members of our organization, but they had made applications to join our organization.

Q. That was after the United Construction Workers came in to try to organize them, wasn't it?

A. I beg your pardon.

Q. When did they make application?

A. I gave personally to one of the men—I can't recall his name—in the Paintsville Local Union a large number of application blanks, I would say roughly it would have been around the early part or around the middle part of July, around about the early part of July.

Q. What do you mean by the early part of July?

A. I would say roughly—I am not specifically stating any dates because I didn't have no occasion to have to remember the date of that meeting. I was attending a meeting of their local union, and the question was brought up that the laborers and the carpenter helpers wanted to organize on the Laburnum Construction Company job. I said, if that is the case your general constitution says you handle your own materials of members of your organization. Sign these men up and put them into your organization as carpter helpers.

Q. Do you remember the question I asked you?

A. That is the question you asked me.

Q. Didn't I ask you what you mean by the early part of July? Wasn't that what I asked you?

A. I believe I answered your question.

Q. I didn't hear any dates given.

A. I didn't give you any dates.

Frank Dixon.

Q. Give us one.

A. Exact date?

Q. Give us one, please.

A. I am unable to give you the exact date of that meeting.

Q. By the early part of July do you mean before the 10th of July.

A. I would say, yes, around the 10th, somewhere around in there.

Q. All right. Do you mean applied for the membership?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the carpenters union on the 10th of July or by the 10th of July?

A. I know that some of the applications were signed around about the 21st.

Q. Oh, they were all signed and dated on the 21st, weren't they?

A. I did not write the applications myself, so there I couldn't say what date they were signed.

Q. Have you seen a single application that bears a date that was not dated the 21st of July?

A. I really haven't saw any of the applications.

Q. You haven't?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, then, you are an organizer, aren't you?

A. That is right.

Q. Didn't you carry blanks around with you when you were around organizing?

A. Yes, sir. I always do.

Q. You didn't have any blanks when they asked for some out there on the job, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you have to send off and get the blanks?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you mean the first time anybody asked out there for an application blank with the A. F. of L. carpenters union you were able to hand it right out?

A. Yes, sir. If you will let me give you a clear answer of my answer.

Q. No, you answer the question.

The Court: One minute, Mr. Robertson.

Colonel Harris: I asked him to answer my question. I am not willing for him to make speeches. Mr. Robertson will no doubt make them.

Mr. Robertson: Your Honor, I am not calling for any speeches. We have plenty of oratorical talent. The witness said that he answered the questio, yes, and said "I would like to make an explanation." I think the witness has a right to do that before he goes to something else.

Frank Dixon.

The Court: Do you want to qualify that statement?

The Witness: Yes, sir, I would like to in as much as the attorney has asked me a question in such a way that I can't answer the question any more than say yes.

The Court: You may proceed to qualify your statement.

The Witness: I swore to tell the truth and that page 777 } is what I want to say. In this instance where he asked me that question, I certainly answered him yes that I always carry these application blanks with me, and when my membership asked me for those cards we were in a meeting. I can't run around here with a whole pocket full of literature sticking in my pockets as if I was a pack horse or something. I went down to my automobile and got the cards and gave them to him. That is the question I wanted to answer you on. That is the reason I couldn't answer your question the way you asked it because you asked the question, didn't I have the applications cards with me.

By Mr. Harris:

Q. You stated to this jury a while ago that you didn't regard that those three signs informing the public that there was a strike there—didn't regard that as a picket line.

A. Certainly not, sir.

Q. You also would tell this jury, would you not, that if there had been a picket line you wouldn't have paid any attention to it?

A. Right.

Colonel Harris: That is all.

Mr. Robertson: I have no other questions.

The Court: Stand aside.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Robertson: Mr. Weaver P. Freeman.

page 778 } The Court: Do you want this witness to go outside? Are you going to put him back on?

Mr. Robertson: Not as far as I know, Your Honor.

The Court: If he stays in, there will be a question about his testifying again.

Mr. Robertson: He had better go out, then. I can't look into a crystal ball.

The Court: The previous witness will leave the room, then.

Whereupon,

WEAVER P. FREEMAN,
called as a witness on behalf of Plaintiff, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Freeman, is your name Weaver P. Freeman?

A. That is right.

Q. Where do you live?

A. Louisville, Kentucky.

Q. How old are you?

A. Fifty-three.

Q. Where were you born and raised?

A. Harrisburg, Kentucky.

Q. How far is that from Breathitt County?

A. Probably 100 miles, roughly.

page 779 } Q. Are you connected with the American Federation of Labor?

A. I am.

Q. What is your position with that union?

A. I am an International Representative of the Carpenters.

Q. What are the duties of your position?

A. It covers a multitude of things, good will ambassador, troubleshooter, and various things that might have to be settled in our organization.

Q. How long have you occupied your present position with the union?

A. About six years the last time.

Q. On the 28th of July, 1949, that calendar shows was Thursday. Were you in Salyersville, Kentucky, on that date in connection with the trouble that the Laburnum Construction Company was having in Breathitt County?

A. I don't know whether it was actually in that connection.
I think I had been over to Paintsville and stopped in Salyers-ville, if this is the time you are having reference to, the time I was talking to Mr. Delinger.

Q. On that occasion, did you phone Mr. Bryan in Huntington while you were in Salyersville?

A. I did.

Q. What was the occasion for your seeing Mr.
page 780 } Delinger at that time?

A. I came into town and I parked my automobile, and Mr. Delinger was standing on the sidewalk. We went up to his hotel room, and he told me of the difficulties that he was having over on the job. I had already heard about it through various people. I wouldn't be able to name them, probably, right now, but you know how it gets around.

Weaver P. Freeman.

He asked me if I would talk to Mr. Bryan—

Colonel Harris: We object to any hearsay conversation, if the Court please.

Mr. Robertson: I can bring this right to the point. It is the same thing the Court has ruled on before.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Did Mr. Delinger tell you, or not, that his life had been threatened?

A. He told me that they had sent him word to get the hell over there and get what few rags he had and get the hell out and stay out.

Q. Did you convey that message to Mr. Bryan in your telephone conversation?

A. I certainly did.

Colonel Harris: May we have an objection to all the questions along that line, and an exception, Judge?

The Court: The record will show your objection and exception to this line of examination.

Q. Did you attend an A. F. of L. union meeting in Salyersville, Kentucky, on the 2nd day of August, 1949?

A. I did.

Q. What was the purpose of that meeting?

A. It was a group of building trades representatives, myself as an International Representative of the Carpenters. We had a meeting with Mr. Bryan, and as the International Representative of the Carpenters, he insisted that I would send my members back in there on that job. He told me that he had a contract with us; for us to furnish them with carpenters. And I told him that didn't make any difference what kind of contract he had; that under no condition would I send my membership back in there where I wouldn't go myself.

Q. What was the conversation between you and Mr. Bryan about whether you would or whether you wouldn't? Just give us the whole conversation. Don't pull any punches on what was said.

page 782 } A. My local unions work under local autonomous charter, and by that they make their own rules and regulations and their own by-laws, and decide as to who they will work for and who they won't work for, and the conditions they will work under. By that, I wouldn't even advise them to go back, knowing the conditions that existed.

Q. Did you and Mr. Bryan have any words over that?

A. Why, yes, I guess it was a pretty heated argument.

Q. What did you tell him and what did he tell you? Don't mind the ladies; just go ahead. We told them to go out if they didn't want to hear it.

The Court: Go ahead and answer the question.

The Witness: Well, I—they told us, they told my membership if they went back there they were going to shoot their ass off, if that is what you are asking for.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. That is what I am asking for. Did you have any talk with Mr. Bryan about the difference in the situation in Kentucky and in Richmond?

A. Yes. I told him—he told me about the contract and everything, and I said, "Yes, that contract is in Richmond, but this is down in Breathitt County, Kentucky, and there is a hell of a lot of difference between Breathitt and Richmond." I think it was something like them words that I used.

Q. When he kept on telling you what he knew about it, what did you tell him to do about it?

page 783 } A. I told him from past experience and what I had read in the newspapers, they would do just exactly what they said they would do.

Q. Did you tell him anything about he didn't know—

A. Yes, I told him as far as going back there and putting on a pair of overalls and leading a bunch of men back there, he didn't know his ass from a hole in the ground.

Mr. Robertson: The witness is with you.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

By Colonel Harris:

Q. Do you live out in Kentucky now?

A. I live in Louisville.

Weaver P. Freeman.

Q. Louisville, Kentucky?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much did they agree to pay you to come here today?

A. How much did who agree to pay me to come here today?

Q. The Plaintiff that you are testifying for?

A. Nothing. The International Brotherhood of Carpenters pays me for my traveling, sir.

Q. And you are not looking to the Laburnum Construction Company or Mr. A. Hamilton Bryan for any compensation?

A. Absolutely not. I am on my own, brother.

page 784 } Q. Your visit here today is just a part of a broad fight between your union and the United Construction Workers?

A. I would assume so, for I am here on assignment from my International Office.

Q. Yes. How long have you been fighting the United Construction Workers?

A. Well, we have had a little trouble with them right along, ever since I have been on this job. The first trouble I ran into with them was at Barbourville, Kentucky, when the J. D. Jennings Company out of Louisville—

Q. I didn't ask about that. I asked him how long.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I am going to ask him to read the question. He is answering the question that was asked.

The Court: Read the question back.

(The pending question was read by the reporter.)

The Court: Answer that question.

The Witness: About two or three years, roughly.

By Colonel Harris:

Q. You say you have been an organizer this time about six years?

A. Did I say "organizer"?

Q. I beg your pardon. You didn't. You said you had been with the union six years this last time. How long were you with it the first time?

page 785 } A. About 14 or 15 months, and I was lent to the American Federation of Labor for the three war years, and then went back with the Carpenters.

Q. How long have you been a member of the Carpenters Union?

Weaver P. Freeman.

A. Since 1921.

Q. Have you maintained your membership constantly all that time?

A. If I hadn't, I wouldn't be an International Representative.

Q. In your talking with Mr. Delinger, did you name anybody there on the job that had been shot?

A. No, I didn't know—

Q. Did you tell him anybody on the job that had been hit?

A. No.

Q. Did you tell him anybody on the job that had had their foot stepped on?

A. No.

Q. As a matter of fact, there wasn't a single living person that received any physical injury whatsoever out there, was there?

A. They used good judgment.

Q. Will you answer my question, please, sir?

The Court: Answer the question.
page 786 } The Witness: No.

By Colonel Harris:

Q. This terrible reputation that Breathitt County has—the people in Breathitt County had that reputation long before July, 1949, didn't they?

A. Yes, it dates back as far as 1900. We have a statue of a Governor standing in front of the Capitol now, from some of their outlaw activities up in that section of the country.

Q. That wasn't a United Construction Workers fight?

A. It goes to prove that they are not law abiding citizens.

Q. The people, not the United Construction Workers alone, but everybody out there?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you mean to say that all the people on the other side are brave and all the people on your side are cowards?

Mr. Robertson: I object to that, Your Honor.

Colonel Harris: I think that is a fair question.

Mr. Robertson: I say that is a perfectly unfair question to the witness, and is intended to be an unfair question, and I object to it.

The Court: I overrule the objection.

Weaver P. Freeman.

Mr. Robertson: Exception.
page 787 } Colonel Harris: Read the question to him.
please, Mr. Dudley.

(The pending question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: No, there are no cowards in my family, to answer the question in that respect, but I think our people just aim to use good judgment, as I said before, if that answers the question.

By Colonel Harris:

Q. As a matter of fact, those people out in Breathitt County, in fact, all over Kentucky, have a reputation for being brave men and fighters, don't they?

A. That is right.

Colonel Harris: That is all.

Mr. Robertson: I have no other questions.

The Court: Stand aside, Mr. Freeman. That is all.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, our next testimony is the deposition of a man named Henry Starr which was taken out in Kentucky. He could not come here, and I am going to ask that I be permitted to take the stand and read the answers to the questions, and Mr. Allen read the questions.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, objections to a large number of the questions have already been filed with Your Honor.

page 788 } Mr. Robertson: You may object to them as they come along.

The Court: I am wondering if we wouldn't save some time if we conferred in chambers.

Mr. Robertson: I don't think you would. I don't think there are many objections to them. I won't read the answers if they object.

Mr. Mullen: I think we would save a great deal of time. The objections are written out. We could go over them right quick.

The Court: How long do you think it would take, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: I don't know, Judge, because I don't know how much argument there is going to be on the objection after it is made.

Mr. Robertson: I suggest we go along and see how far we can get, and then if we come to an objection, if there is any difficulty on ruling on it, then we can adjourn to chambers.

The Court: Let's go on to the first objection, and then I can see.

page 789 } (At this point the deposition of Henry Starr was read to the jury, Mr. Allen reading the questions and Mr. Robertson reading the answers, as follows:)

"The witness,

HENRY STARR,

being first duly sworn by Alice Lyon, a Notary Public for the County of Johnson, in the State of Kentucky, testified as follows, to-wit:

"Question 19. Is that County sometimes called "Bloody Breathitt"?"

"Answer. That is what they call it, yes, sir.

"Question 20. How did it get that name, if you know?"

"Answer. Because there was so much willful murder done there. If someone got mad at someone they would go out and have a feud.

"Question 21. How far is Breathitt County, Kentucky, from Harlan County, Kentucky, if you know?"

Mr. Robertson: There is an objection to that.

Mr. Mullen: We will waive that objection.

(The reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

"Answer. I wouldn't know just exactly.

"Question 22. What kind of work was Laburnum Construction Corporation doing at Evanston in the month of July, 1949?

"Answer. We were building a coal tripple and preparation plant and houses, and also a school house, we had under construction at that time.

Henry Starr.

"Question 23. I believe Laburnum Construction Corporation had another company of the same ownership that was doing some of the work there at the school house?

"Answer. Laburnum Construction Corporation was doing it all.
page 792 }

"Question 24. About how many members of your local were doing that carpenter work there at Evanston; approximately?

"Answer. I think we had thirty-four or thirty-five carpenters on the job there out of this local.

"Question 25. Would that include the school house and also the tipple and coal preparation plant?

"Answer. That would include all the carpenters on the job for Laburnum Construction Corporation.

"Question 26. I will ask you to describe the construction of the tipple there and what was at the tipple and what was at the head house and how those two units were connected?

"Answer. The main tipple built at the bottom of the hill was to receive all the coal, and we had a lot of construction work going on at the top of the hill so the coal could be sent down the hill on the button line.

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 28. Was that a shaft mine, or a strip mine?

"Answer. Approximately a mile and a quarter.

page 793 } "Question 30. How far would you say Evanston is from Paintsville by road?

"Answer. I think the car registered fifty-one miles.

"Question 31. And how far was that operation from Salyersville, Kentucky, in Magoffin County?

"Answer. It is eighteen miles from here to Salyersville.

"Question 32. What kind of country is it up there where that operation is?

"Answer. It is mighty rough country.

"Question 33. Was it wooded right down to the operation?

"Answer. Yes, sir, until we cleared it out.

"Question 34. How close would you say the brush and woods came down to the tipple and school building there?

Henry Starr.

"Answer. I would say we cleared off, or the Company cleared off the right-of-way, and I would say they cleared off a hundred foot lane for the button line up the hill, and on the hill they cleared off a place for the water tank.

"Question 35. Is the tipple in a little pocket there?

"Answer. It comes off of a point.

"Question 36. And how far was the woodlands away from the school house?

"Answer. It is approximately a hundred feet up to the woods in some places and in some places not so much.

"Question 37. Do you know where the United Mine Workers of America operate in that vicinity?

"Answer. Yes, sir, they are working around page 794 } there in the mines and it is a fact they would be organized in there.

"Question 38. Do you know whether the United Mine Workers of America were organized in there at that time?

"Answer. They were not as I know of at that time.

"Question 39. How long had your Local 646 been operating there before July 25, 1949?

"Answer. We went there in November, 1948, when we signed a contract and went to work over there.

"Question 40. So that would be approximately eight months?

"Answer. Yes, sir."

Mr. Robertson: There is not an objection at this point, but there is something here. Do you want me to read it? If you don't object, I will read it.

Mr. Mullen: I have no objection.

The Court: Let us read only what is necessary.

(The reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

"Question 41: Mr. Starr, did you, as a member and officer of your union, receive reports that United Construction Workers of District 50, Region 28, affiliated with United Mine Workers of America, were going to try to run the Laburnum Construction Corporation's employees off the job there at Evanston?"

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, we have an objection on that. We object to the question on the ground that the purport and nature of any reports received would be hearsay.

Henry Starr.

Mr. Robertson: Your Honor, we say it was page 795 { information he received in the regular course of his employment as a union official, and it is admissible.

The Court: I will overrule the objection.

Mr. Mullen: Please note an exception.

(The reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

"Answer. Yes, sir, I did.

"Question 42. Did those reports that came to you come in increasing frequency or decreasing frequency?

"Answer. Every day or two we would hear a rumor and they were careful whose name they would attach to it, but it was official enough that they were aware of it."

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, we object to the question and answer because he says it is simply a rumor. He doesn't say any definite report came to him, that anybody brought the report, but it is simply a rumor.

Mr. Robertson: We think it is admissible, Your Honor, because it is information that came to him as an official of the union, that these people were coming to run them off the job.

The Court: I will allow that.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

(The reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

"Question 43. You say it was reported to you in your capacity as a member and officer of the union you represented?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

page 796 { "Question 44. As a result of those reports which came to you on or about Sunday, July 24, 1949, did you take any action about it?

"Answer. On the Saturday night preceding the Sunday we had a meeting and we requested our business agent, Mr.
Preston, to be over there on Monday morning.

"Question 45. Was that Mr. Burt Preston?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 46. Why did you request him to be there on Monday morning?

"Answer. He was our legal representative in a case like that and we wanted him there to take care of the affairs and to keep down any trouble that might arise. We had received reports that the United Construction Workers were moving over there.

Henry Starr.

"Question 47. Did the carpenters from your Local 646 go to work over there on July 25, 1949?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 48. Was one Burt Preston there on that day?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 49. Did the United Construction Workers show up there that day, as you had expected, or not?

"Answer. No, sir.

"Question 50. As an officer of the union you represented, did you get any word during that day that any-page 797 } thing further would be done by the United Construction Workers?

"Answer. No, sir, not that day.

"Question 51. Did you and your men work all that day?

"Answer. Yes, sir, on Monday, the 25th of July, 1949.

"Question 52. Before you left work on the 25th, did you, as an officer of your union, Local 646, get word that anything would happen there on Tuesday the 26th?

"Answer. No, sir, not that day.

"Question 53. Did you and your men go back to work there on Tuesday the 26th of July, 1949?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 54. How many men were there that day?

"Answer. I think I had sixteen on the payroll that were working on the tipple and some men borrowed from another job that were working on top of the hill.

"Question 55. Do you know how many carpenters were working on the school house?

"Answer. No, sir, I don't know.

"Question 56. How far was the school house from the tipple?

"Answer. About a mile and a quarter.

"Question 57. What was the regular time for starting to work on the job in the morning?

"Answer. Seven o'clock.

"Question 58. Did you start to work as usual page 798 } with your men that morning?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 59. How long did you work?

"Answer. Until the noon hour; twelve o'clock.

"Question 60. And then what happened there at the noon hour?

Henry Starr.

"Answer. We were eating our lunch and some of them were through and I think some were not and I looked out the office window in front and the first thing I knew fifty or seventy-five men came up over the hill all at once, was the first time I knew anyone was there.

"Question 61. Were they walking or in automobiles?

"Answer. They were walking when I seen them.

"Question 62. Did they appear to have anyone leading them?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 63. Who was that?

"Answer. Mr. Hart.

"Question 64. What are his initials, if you know?

"Answer. W. O., I believe.

"Question 65. Do you know what connection he had, if any, with the United Construction Workers?

"Answer. He said he was an international organizer.

"Question 66. You said you were in the office. What office was that?

"Answer. In the superintendent's office.

"Question 67. Was that at the tipple, or away page 799 } from the tipple?

"Answer. About fifty feet away from where the end of the tipple went up.

"Question 68. You say you saw, in this group of men; how many did you say you saw?

"Answer: Between fifty and seventy-five, when I first looked out.

"Question 69. How many men working for the company were there at the tipple at that time?

"Answer. About eighteen.

"Question 70. So they had you outnumbered four or five to one?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 71. When you saw them coming, what did you do?

"Answer: I closed up my lunch kit and walked out into the yard and began looking things over.

"Question 72. Where did they come to?

"Answer. They came up in the yard around the tool house, blacksmith shop, and office, all around there, just milling around.

"Question 73. Did any of them get up into any part of the tipple?

Henry Starr.

"Answer. I wouldn't say they did, because the Coal Company asked them not to on account of someone getting hurt and the Company being responsible for the accident.
page 800 }

"Question 74. What would you say about the ages in that group; how old or young or middle aged?

"Answer. Some were middle aged and some were young, sixteen or eighteen years old, and some older, forty or fifty.

"Question 75. Had any of them been drinking?

"Answer: Yes, sir.

"Question 76. How do you know that?

"Answer. I smelled it on them and from the way they acted; they acted intoxicated, in an intoxicated way.

"Question 77. I believe this was Tuesday, July 26, 1949, in the summertime. How were these men in this fifty or seventy-five group dressed?

"Answer. In different ways; some had on overalls and some had on overall pants and some had on jackets and some had on sport shirts.

"Question 78. Did you see whether or not any of them were carrying any guns?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 79. What did you see along that line?

"Answer. I saw two of them with their shirts come up and guns sticking under their belts.

"Question 80. Did you see any of the others where you could see signs of their guns?

"Answer. Yes, sir, several of them you could see prints of guns under their belts.
page 801 }

"Question 81. Did any of them carry knives? know.

"Answer. I never seen any knives out in the open, I don't know.

"Question 82. Was it an orderly group or disorderly group?

"Answer. Disorderly.

"Question 83. Was there any cursing going on?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 84. Was that gentle or rash?

"Answer. It was pretty rash.

"Question 85. Would they go through the whole string of cursing you are familiar with?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 86. Did you hear the words "son-of-a-bitch" used there in that group?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

Henry Starr.

"Question 87. Was that addressed to any particular person, or just general?

"Answer. They said they would run that bunch of sons-of-bitches out of there.

"Question 88. Did you hear the word "bastard" used there?

"Answer. I couldn't say.

"Question 89. How old a man would you say page 802 } Mr. Hart, the leader of the group, was?

"Answer. Yes, sir. I went out and talked with him.

"Question 92. You went out and talked to him as an official of your union?

"Answer. Yes, sir, and as foreman of the carpenters of the company, I felt it my duty to go out and ask him what they meant.

"Question 93. I will ask you to say what he said to you and what you said to him.

"Answer. I went out and asked him what it meant and he said, 'It means we are taking the job over and if you fellows want to sign on the dotted line, you can work and we will go along with you.'

"Question 94. He meant for you to sign on the dotted line for what?

"Answer. To join up with the United Construction Workers, and he said, 'We are going to take it,' and I said, 'That is pretty strong language,' and he said, 'Don't you think I can back it up.'

"Question 95. Did any episode occur that day page 803 } in the tool house at the tippie?

"Answer. I wasn't in the tool house.

"Question 96. How long would you say that Hart and his crowd stayed there?

"Answer. Something like an hour.

"Question 97. Did they say anything else to you that you heard—I am talking about Hart—did he say what would happen if you came back to the job and worked?"

Mr. Robertson: There is an objection there.

Mr. Mullen: Objection was taken to that, Your Honor, on the ground that it is leading.

Henry Starr.

Mr. Robertson: I don't think that amounts to anything. You don't press that, do you?

Mr. Mullen: No, I am not particularly concerned with that. I didn't take this deposition, Your Honor. I am reading what other people did. Neither I nor Colonel Harris took them.

(The reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

"Answer. He said he didn't intend for us to work there.

"Question 98. Did he say what would or what would not happen to you if you went on and worked in spite of what he said?

"Answer. He said he would make it plain that he didn't aim for us to work there; that was their work and they were going to take it.

"Question 99. How long did you say he stayed there?

page 804 } "Answer. About an hour.

"Question 100. And then did this group leave all together or did they just drift away?

"Answer. They drifted away, I think. We left some of them there when we left, standing around.

"Question 101. Did your union's men go back to work after the lunch hour that day?

"Answer. No, sir.

"Question 102. Why?

"Answer. Because we were afraid to.

"Question 103. Why were you afraid?

"Answer. They told us not to, and if we did, they would fish us out of the pond out there.

"Question 104. Did they make that threat to you?

"Answer. They said we were not going to work, and if we went back to work, they would fish us out of the pond.

"Question 105. Was Mr. Bryan there at that time?

"Answer. No, sir.

"Question 106. You didn't see him there at all while you were there that Tuesday?

"Answer. No, sir, I didn't.

"Question 107. After the lunch hour, did your men just leave as they generally did when the day's work was over?

page 805 } "Answer. No, sir, we didn't. After they told us not to work, I asked about gathering up the tools and we would go and gather up the tools and bring them down and not work any more.

"Question 108. And then what did you do?

Henry Starr.

"Answer. I gave orders for all the men to gather up the tools and put them in the tool house and then we loaded up the trucks and cars and jeeps, whatever we were riding in, and came out of there and came home.

"Question 109. Did you order your men not to work that afternoon after the lunch hour?

"Answer. I didn't have to; they were afraid to go back. It was dangerous and I wouldn't have gone back myself.

"Question 110. Was anything said or done about a picket line when Mr. Hart was there Tuesday?

"Answer. Yes, sir. He went out there to put up one and Bill Maynard, of the Coal Company, asked him not to put it up.

"Question 111. And what did Hart do?

"Answer. He took it down. He had it printed on a sign stuck up beside the track there.

"Question 112. Did he leave it stuck up beside the track?

"Answer. No, sir, he took it down and he went over to the road, five or six hundred feet over to the highway, and stuck one up over there against some rocks. He pulled up some rocks and set it up over there at the road.

"Question 113. Did he leave it there?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

page 806 } "Question 114. Did he say anything about any-one crossing that picket line?

"Answer. I didn't hear him say anything about that.

"Question 115. Now, after the men quit work there on Tuesday, July 26, 1949, and went on home, was there any meeting of your Local 646 in Paintsville here as a consequence of what had happened that day?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 116. When was that meeting?

"Answer. On the night of July 26, 1949, we met down at the City Hall."

. . . . .

"Question 117. How many men attended that meeting?

"Answer. About fifty.

"Question 118. What was the purpose of that meeting?

"Answer. To discuss and try to get something done about what had happened over there and what was the best thing to do.

"Question 119. Was that the main place for carpenters to get work around here?

Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia.

Henry Starr.

page 807 { "Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 120. If you got run off of that job, where would you work?

"Answer. Just anywhere where they could find a day's work or a job; Ohio, Michigan, or anywhere they could find work.

"Question 121. Were there any outsiders present at that meeting?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 122. Do you know Mr. A. Hamilton Bryan sitting over there?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 123. What is Mr. Bryan's connection with Laburnum Construction Corporation?

"Answer. He is General Manager of Laburnum Construction Corporation.

"Question 124. Was he the top man on the job?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 125. Did he have anything to say about the men in your Local 646 going back to work the next day?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 126. What was the substance of what he had to say?

"Answer. He asked us to go back to work and he said he would put on a pair of overalls and go first and we told him we would follow him."

Mr. Mullen: One minute, please, What number page 808 { are you on?

Mr. Allen: No. 127. I am going to read No. 127 now.

Mr. Mullen: I have an objection to 125 and 126. You have gone over them. Go ahead.

(The reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

"Question 127. Did he have anything to say as to whether or not he thought anyone would get hurt there?"

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, I object to the question on the ground that any statement made by Mr. Bryan was not in the presence of the defendants and is hearsay.

Mr. Robertson: We claim it is admissible, and the Court already has been letting it in. It shows a state of fear or lack of it, and whether or not the utterance was made.

Henry Starr.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Mullen: To save time, if these gentlemen don't mind, I will make the same objection to 128, 129, and 130, and we can dispose of it now. I will just take an exception.

The Court: Let me take a look at these other questions, and then I will pass on them.

(Court examining deposition.)

The Court: I will overrule the objection, and you note an exception.

Mr. Robertson: Read 127 again please, Mr. Allen.

(The reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

"Question 127. Did he have anything to say as page 809 } to whether or not he thought anyone would get hurt there?

"Answer. He didn't seem to think it, but we knew better.

"Question 128. Did anyone make any statement to him along that line?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 129. Who made a statement to him?

"Answer. Mr. Burt Preston. He told Mr. Bryan he didn't know the situation; that he didn't know it was as dangerous as it was and he wouldn't order anyone to go back to work there and get them killed and have to haul them out of there.

"Question 130. Did he say anything about things being different in Richmond, Virginia, and out here at Evanston in Breathitt County, Kentucky?

"Answer. Yes, sir. He told him if he had trouble at Richmond, Virginia, he could get the police, and over there he couldn't even get the highway patrol to come in.

"Question 131. After Mr. Bryan said he would put on a pair of overalls and lead the men back to work, did the men decide they would go back to work on Wednesday?"

Mr. Mullen: If your Honor please, the objection heretofore filed with the Court on that is on the ground that it is based upon the hearsay statement of Mr. Bryan and the answer states a conclusion of the witness as to what was decided.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, we page 810 } claim that is the same proposition as before. It all tends to show whether or not the men were afraid to go back to work.

Henry Starr.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Mullen: Exception noted.

(The reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

"Answer. They decided they would go back over there and see how conditions were before they went to work. That was Mr. Preston's orders.

"Question 132. Were you to go in a group?

"Answer. We were to meet at Salyersville at a filling station on the corner and we were to proceed from there close together for protection if something happened.

"Question 133. How far is it from Salyersville to the mine, approximately?

"Answer. About thirty miles.

"Question 134. How big a town in Salyersville, would you say?

"Answer. Between 1,300 and 1,500 population.

"Question 135. Are there any other towns of any consequence between Salyersville and where you were working?

"Answer. Just Royaltown with a population of 400 or 500 between Salyersville and the mine.

"Question 136. When you got over to the job on Wednesday morning what was the situation you found there?

"Answer. We met at the time office. We all page 811 } gathered up there.

"Question 137. How far is the time office from the tippie?

"Answer. I would say five hundred or six hundred feet.

"Question 138. Was it in sight of the tippie?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 139. Now, tell us what happened there on that Wednesday morning of July 27, 1949?

"Answer. We didn't see anyone over at the tippie and the sign was sticking up there at the side of the road, the picket sign, and Mr. Bryan went down and got it and took it in the office and we went over to the tippie and some of the boys went to work.

"Question 140. What did Mr. Bryan do with the picket sign?

"Answer. He took it into the office.

"Question 141. Do you remember what was written on that sign?

"Answer. "ON STRIKE—UNITED MINE WORKERS," and I have forgotten the number of the Local that was on it.

Henry Starr.

"Question 142. When you got there and before you went over to the tippie, did Mr. Bryan have anything to say?"

Mr. Mullen: One minute, please. I object to that question on the ground that it calls for hearsay, as it does not appear that it was made in the presence of any of the defendants.

The Court: That is the same objection, and it is overruled.

Mr. Mullen: I have three or four more on hearsay.

Mr. Robertson: I am perfectly willing to admit that there is a continuing objection to that entire line of testimony.

Mr. Mullen: To be consistent with what has gone before, we have to make these objections, and if we can agree it is a continuing line, it will save time.

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Allen: I will read the question over.

(The reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

"Question 142. When you got there and before you went over to the tippie, did Mr. Bryan have anything to say?"

"Answer. He tried to get us to go on over there and go to work; that the job was in jeopardy; that if he couldn't get the job done, he would lose the job.

"Question 143. What took place then?"

"Answer. After he took the sign down, we went over to the tippie and some of the boys went on the tippie and went to work and Mr. Trimble wouldn't go to work, said it looked too dangerous, and there was a group of fellows sitting on a wooden crate and we went out and sat down by them.

"Question 144. How far from the tippie?"

"Answer. About twenty feet.

"Question 145. Did you have any talk there?"

page 813 } "Answer. Yes, sir, we talked some with them.

"Question 146. Did they make themselves known?"

"Answer. They said they were there to see if we went to work or not. They said, 'If you go to work, in an hour there will be a hundred men here and they will fish you out of that pond out there, and that damned squirt there with that straw hat on will be the first one to get in.'

"Question 147. Did they say they would pull anyone else out of the pond?"

Henry Starr.

"Answer. They said we all would get in that pond if we worked. They said in an hour there would be enough men there to take care of us.

"Question 148. Did they say what those men would do if they had to come there and stop you from working?

"Answers. They said they would throw us in that pond; pretty stern words for men out in the mountains like that. He said within an hour they could have a sufficient number of men there to take care of us.

"Question 149. Did he say where those men would come from?

"Answer. No, sir, he didn't say.

"Question 150. That was about what time in the morning?

"Answer. Around eight o'clock.

"Question 151. And what did you do in consequence of what those fellows said and did?

page 714 } "Answer. Well, according to our constitution, the only way we can call a man off the job is for safety measures and Jack Patrick said that was one time he was going to exercise his authority, for it wasn't safe for no man to go to work.

"Question 152. And what did he do?

"Answer. He told the men not to go to work until conditions were made safe to go back there and go to work.

"Question 153. Did the men quit after he told them that?

"Answer. We all bunched our tools up and the men came down off the tippie and said they were going to quit work for they were afraid they would get shot in the back.

"Question 154. What time did you leave there?

"Answer. About nine-thirty or ten o'clock in the morning.

"Question 155. Have you ever been back there to work since?

"Answer. No, sir.

"Question 156. Why?

"Answer. I was afraid to go back.

"Question 157. Why?

"Answer. I was afraid I would get killed.

"Question 158. Now after that, on August 2nd, I believe, which would be the following Tuesday, do you know whether there was a meeting held between your local and the local at Salyersville to see whether or not there could be something worked out between the two unions?

page 815 } "Answer. There was, but I wasn't present.

"Question 159. Going back to the situation that existed there on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, July 25,

Henry Starr.

26, and 27, 1949, in addition to the carpenters you mentioned, were there some laborers there?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 160. About how many laborers were working on the job, if you know?

"Answer. I don't know. I wasn't keeping their time. I think there were six or eight.

"Question 161. Do you know whether or not they were organized in any union?

"Answer. They had signed up with the American Federation of Labor, because I had seen the cards where they had signed up.

"Question 162. On Tuesday, when Hart and this fifty or more men came there, did Hart and his crowd have anything to do with trying to make those men sign up there with the United Construction Workers?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 163. Tell us what happened about that.

"Answer. They went out there and got those laborers and I don't know how many signed willingly, but I did see them take one of them, a man on each side of him holding him by the arm and one in the back, behind him, and they page 816 } took him out there and forced him to sign a card.

I was watching that particularly, because he told us he would not sign.

"Question 164. Were they mistreating him in any other way?

"Answer. They just told him he had to sign.

"Question 165. Did you see them actually physically force anyone else to sign?

"Answer. I saw them gang around them and take them out there where the man had the cards and saw them signing them.

"Question 166. What sort of system did they use? Suppose I would be here and I didn't want to sign, what would they do to me?

"Answer. Three or four would gather around you and open up a lane and tell you to walk.

"Question 167. Suppose I wouldn't walk?

"Answer. I would be afraid to say, I don't know.

"Question 168. Do you know how many they forced to sign up there that day?

"Answer. I saw them force two to sign and I couldn't say about the rest of them, but I know there were two they actually forced to sign up there that day.

Henry Starr.

"Question 169. Did you hear any reference made there, either on Tuesday or Wednesday, about a territory known as Beaver Creek?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 170. What was that?

page 817 } "Answer. They said if they had to, if we went to work any more, they would go to Beaver Creek and get two hundred tough men and come there and kick every one of us out of there.

"Question 171. Did Hart make that statement?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 172. Did you hear him make that statement?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 173. Do you know why he said, 'Beaver Creek'?

"Answer. It has the name of being a tough territory.

"Question 174. What I am trying to do here is for you to tell what occurred from Sunday, July 24, 1949, when you asked Mr. Burt Preston to go over there, until they ran the men off the job. Do you recall anything else that happened there that I haven't asked you about?

"Answer. Mr. Preston told him, "I don't believe you can get two hundred men out of Beaver Creek to do that. I have as many friends on Beaver Creek as you have. I used to live there for a number of years and all those fellows are my friends."

"Question 175. And what did Mr. Hart say to that?

"Answer. I don't remember what he said, but that is what Mr. Preston said to him.

"Question 176. Did that make you feel all right so you were willing to go back to work?

"Answer. No, sir.

page 818 } Mr. Robertson: The next is on pages 62 and 63.

Mr. Mullen: Let me ask, do you want the stenographer to take this down. We all have copies of it. It makes a useless amount of record to pile up.

Mr. Robertson: I don't think so. I think it makes the record easier to follow if we have to use it hereafter. I think we had better put it in the record.

Mr. Mullen: I have no objection.

The Court: You are jumping to page 62?

Mr. Robertson: We called him back.

Mr. Allen: There is a continuation of Mr. Starr's testimony on page 62.

Henry Starr.

Mr. Robertson: Other witnesses testified and then he was called back to the stand.

(The reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

"Question 1. Mr. Starr, you testified this morning regarding various things which happened on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, July 25th, 26th, and 27th, 1949. Since that time have you received any threats against your personal safety?"

"Answer. I have received three (3) telephone calls.

"Question 2. State what they were?"

"Answer. Two of them were on Friday evening after July 26th, and the other was on Saturday evening, and said if I wanted to live, not to go back over there."

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, we object page 819 } to all that testimony upon being recalled on the ground that the witness had been excluded and he had been allowed to remain in after testifying on the statement that he would not further testify.

Mr. Robertson: Where is that in the record, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: Page 31, isn't it?

Mr. Robertson: I think Mr. Pollard waived it, too.

Mr. Mullen: I am reading Mr. Pollard's objections.

Mr. Allen: May it please Your Honor, that witness wasn't called back to be examined about anything that he had testified to before or about any incidents connected with the affair at all. It was about something that took place after he testified.

Mr. Mullen: Let me look at it a minute.

Mr. Allen: What was the objection?

Mr. Mullen: The objection was that he was permitted to remain in the room upon the completion of his previous testimony without objection and upon the condition that he would not further testify.

Mr. Robertson: I don't remember that. If you show it to me in the record and if I am wrong, that is different.

Mr. Mullen: Let me look at it a minute, please. page 820 } Mr. Robertson: All right. I think you are mistaken. If you will look on page 9 I think it refers to two of your witnesses.

Mr. Mullen: On page 9 it was agreed that all of the witnesses should be excluded. At that time Mr. Starr was on the stand.

Mr. Allen: In any event it is within Your Honor's discretion as to whether he can be recalled.

Mr. Robertson: I don't concede that that was done. I don't remember it. I want my memory refreshed. I don't remember that that was or was not done, I mean that he was in the room or not in the room.

Henry Starr.

Colonel Harris: Page 31 is where it is supposed to be.

Mr. Allen: There is nothing in the stipulation on page 9, and I don't see anything following that which shows it.

Mr. Mullen: We will waive it, Your Honor.

Mr. Robertson: Here it is. Let's clear that up. At the bottom of page 31—

The Court: There is no need to clear it up because they have withdrawn the objection.

Mr. Robertson: They said there they didn't mind his staying in. It is at the bottom of page 31.

Mr. Mullen: It was on the assumption that he page 821  $\frac{1}{2}$  is through testifying. We will waive it, however.

Mr. Allen: I guess I will have to read the No. 1 question again.

(The reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

"Question 1. Mr. Starr, you testified this morning regarding various things which happened on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, July 25th, 26th, and 27th, 1949. Since that time have you received any threats against your personal safety?"

"Answer. I have received three (3) telephone calls.

"Question 2. State what they were?"

"Answer. Two of them were on Friday evening after July 26th, and the other was on Saturday evening, and said if I wanted to live, not to go back over there.

"Question 3. Could you tell who it was?"

"Answer. No, sir. I tried to trace the calls and they were made from a pay station and there wasn't any chance to trace the calls.

"Question 4. Have you had any since those three you have mentioned?"

"Answer. No, sir.

"Question 5. Did you ever get any before that time?"

"Answer. No, sir."

Mr. Robertson: The next is on page 150 to 153. Wait one minute. Let me glance at that. When we come to page 822  $\frac{1}{2}$  the objections we will stop.

(The reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

Henry Starr.

"Question 1. Mr. Starr, there was a question I failed to ask you on yesterday, but you are still under oath.

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 2. Since the occurrence at the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company's #1 Mine at Evanston, in Breathitt County, Kentucky, on July 25th, 26th, and 27th, 1949, has Mr. Hunter approached you—"

Mr. Mullen: That we object to, Your Honor. It relates to matters subsequent to the occurrences there, and it is not shown to be relevant.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, the relevancy of it is that after this occurrence David Hunter got him and tried to get him—I think the Court had better just read it. If the Court would take it up on page 150 over to page 153.

The Court: The Court will read it.

(Court Examining the portion of the deposition referred to.)

The Court: Do you gentlemen want to say anything further?

Mr. Robertson: Yes, sir. If Your Honor please, we think from Question No. 3 at the bottom of page 151 on through page 153 is relevant because it was in effect an attempt page 823 } by David Hunter to buy Starr off.

The Court: Do you want to say anything further, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: No, I don't want to make any further objection.

The Court: I will overrule the motion and allow the questions.

Mr. Mullen: Note an exception, please.

(The reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

"Question 3. Now, Mr. Starr, I asked you if, since the occurrence at the Pond Creek Pocahontas Company's #1 Mine at Evanston, in Breathitt County, Kentucky, on July 25th, 26th, and 27th, 1949, Mr. Hart has approached you regarding his giving you a job?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 4. Do you know about when that was?

"Answer. That was in November 1949, this last year.

"Question 5. At that time did you have regular work?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

Bert Preston, Senior.

"Question 6. What was the conversation that Mr. Hart had with you?

"Answer. We were working on a bridge, me and Mr. P. L. Trimble, on Jenny's Creek, about four miles up here, and he approached us along about 2:00 or 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon and asked us if we would meet with him that page 824 } day, and we said not until after work hours; that we were obligated to the man we were working for until 5:00 o'clock, and he asked if we would meet him at the courthouse, and I said, no, we would meet him at the Lodge Hall and went up there and lit the fire and he came in and hd some man with him. I don't know him. He said he was an attorney for United Mine Workers or United Construction Workers, I don't remember which he said, and he asked us if he would give him a statement, and he told me he had a job for all of us, providing that things went the way they should go, and I said, "I can give you a statement just the way it happened, but I don't think you will want it."

"Question 7. Did you give him any statement?

"Answer. No, sir. He didn't ask me any more for any statement.

"Question 8. Did he give a job?

"Answer. No, sir."

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, our next witness is Mr. Bert Preston.

Whereupon,

BERT PRESTON, SENIOR,

Q. Did anything happen before noon, before the noon hour?

A. No, sir.

Bert Preston, Senior.

Q. What was the first thing that happened out of the ordinary that day as far as you yourself know about?

A. I was standing at the tippie. I had eaten lunch and had finished my lunch and I was standing at the tippie. There was quite a bunch of fellows came along and passed by me and went over to the toolhouse, carpenters toolhouse. I followed them over.

Q. How many men would you say were in that group?

A. I would estimate something like 40, near 40, page 829 } something like that.

Q. Was anybody in charge of the group?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was that?

A. A fellow by the name of Hart.

Q. All right, then what happened?

A. He went on in the toolhouse and he was talking to some of the carpenters when I went in there. They filled up the whole front of the house. I had to elbow my way to get in. He went almost in the middle of the little room. He was talking to some of them. I walked up and asked him what he wanted, and he turned around to me and said, "Who are you?" I told him I was acting agent for the carpenters of the Paints Local.

Q. Then what happened?

A. He told me then that he wanted us all to sign up with the United Construction, and I told him the boys all had cards with the A. F. of L. He said we would sign up or get out, get off the job. I said, "Well, if we don't sign up or get off the job, what will you do then?"

He said, "I will go to Beaver and bring 300 men from Beaver and then you will find out what will happen."

Then I asked him the question, I said, "Well, what will happen?"

He said, "We will kick your damned asses off the job."

Q. Did anything else happen in the toolhouse? page 830 }

A. Then I told him that I was going to take it up with the International, and I said to him, "You know how well Willim Hutcheson loves John L. Lewis."

He said, "Well, let them thrash that out in Washington."

Q. Did Hart make any statements to the men there in the toolhouse about what he could get for them if they joined up with the United Construction Workers?

A. I never heard it.

Q. Did you hear argument between Hart and a man named Arnett?

Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia.

Bert Preston, Senior.

A. It was after that talk. Arnett accused him of promising the men more than he could do, and he said that he hadn't promised them any more. John Arnett said, "You are a God damned liar." All this crowd came shuffling down and were in their shirts and everything else. I don't know what they were going for. I tapped John on the shoulder and said, "John, let me do the talking." John hushed up.

Q. Then what happened?

A. Then I told him—he said that he had all the laborers signed up over there. I asked him if he had ever given them their obligation. He said "We don't give them an obligation."

Q. What did you say to that?

A. I didn't say anything, but I knew better.

page 831 } Q. Were you scared in there?

A. That was the tightest place I was ever in in my life, and I have been in tight ones.

Q. Were you scared?

A. I was scared.

Q. What were you scared of?

A. I was scared of all those people around there. They looked like they were going to try to kill everybody in there, and I guess they would if I hadn't stopped John Arnett.

Q. Then what happened after you got out of the toolhouse?

A. He went out and he said he was putting up a picket. I said, "I will not recognize your picket." He told one of the big tall fellows, I don't know who it was, and said go out and stand at the foot of the stairs that goes up to the tippie. I said we won't recognize any picket line. Then he got a card and wrote a card. This fellow was carrying it. And the tippie worked on. I walked up to Mr. Hart and I asked him, "Don't your picket stop the tippie?"

He said "Tom Raney told me not to stop the tippie for a day or two unless I had to."

Q. Then what happened next?

A. After I came back with him I started over to the office, the construction office over there to call the inter-page 832 } national, and on my way out they run across. There was one fellow walked up to a laborer. The laborer had quit, had his lunch kit under his arm and started walking off. This tall fellow walked up to him and he said, "Sign this." He just stood and looked at him, I don't know, it seemed like a half a minute. A couple more fellows walked up, one on each side of him. This fellow had a book, and this fellow said "By God, sign it." And this fellow put his lunch kit at his feet and signed whatever it was he had in his hand.

Bert Preston, Senior.

Q. Did anything happen after that that day?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. How long would you say Hart and his men were there?

A. Well, I would say something like 45 minutes.

Q. Did the men who had been working there, the carpenters and laborers, did they leave in a group or just drift away?

A. They drifted away.

Q. What did you do?

A. I went over to the office and put a call in at international and didn't get them, but we did get a call in to Frank Dixon at Louisville.

Q. What was the purpose of that call?

A. We wanted him to get in touch with International and let International know what had happened over there.

Q. Did you go on back to Paintsville from the job site?

A. Yes, sir. I guess it was 3:30 or 4:00 when I page 833 } left there.

Q. Did your local hold a meeting at Paintsville that night?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many men would say were there?

A. Thirty-five.

Q. What was the purpose of the meeting?

A. We wanted to discuss it, and Mr. Ham Bryan was going to attend the meeting. The meeting was called especially I think for him.

Q. Was he asked to make a talk to the meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear the talk he made?

A. I did.

Q. What was the substance of it?

A. He wanted us to go back to work regardless. We said that somebody was apt to go over there and get killed or hurt. He called it hurt, but people down in that country don't hurt you. They kill you.

Q. What did you have to say about it?

A. I told him he didn't know a damned thing he was talking about, that he was from the city, a town, that he page 834 } didn't know a damned thing about them people down there.

Q. You know them pretty well?

Bert Preston, Senior.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever live over on Beaver Creek?

A. I have been on Beaver Creek, sir.

Q. How do you like it over there?

A. Well, they are rough there too. I guess there are more murder cases in Floyd County than any place on Sandy River.

Q. When Mr. Bryan wanted them to go over there and you told him he didn't know a damned thing he was talking about, what happened next?

A. He kept arguing that they would have to go or lose their jobs. I told him the jobs didn't amount to nothing when a man was dead. He argued around I guess for an hour, and I told him, I said, "If you will put on a pair of carpenter overhauls and furnish each of these men two, and not less than a '38 revolver, I will have no objection to their going."

Q. What did he say to that?

A. He said he would do it.

Q. Did he say he would give them the guns?

A. No. He talked the boys out of that before he left the hall.

Q. What was the final decision about the guns?

A. To leave them off.

page 835 } Q. Whose advice was that?

A. Mr. Bryan's.

Q. What did he say about that?

A. Mr. Bryan?

Q. Yes.

A. He said leave them off.

Q. Did the men take a vote on what they would do?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did they vote to do?

A. They voted to go back over there.

Q. Were they going to meet at any particular place or meet at the job site?

A. I don't know. I wasn't interested in it after they decided to go back.

Q. Did you go back over there the next day?

A. No.

Q. Why didn't you go?

A. I didn't have any business over there.

Q. Have you been back since?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why?

A. I have no business over there.

Bert Preston, Senior.

Q. Are you scared to go over there?

A. I am. I have good friends over there, and page 836 } they have all advised me not to come over there any more.

Q. Do you know about the meeting that was held at Salyersville on August 2?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you at that meeting?

A. I was.

Q. What happened at that meeting?

A. He still argued for them to go back to work, that he was going to lose his job over there if they didn't go back. He asked me right in the meeting if I was willing for the men to go back, and I said no, that I wasn't. Then he asked the Salyersville business agent, Robert Poe, if he was willing to go back, and Robert Poe said no, that he wasn't willing to go back over there to work.

Q. What did Mr. Bryan have to say to that?

A. He was at the end of his row it looked like. Then he asked me a while after that if it would be all right for some of the boys over there to help crate up his tools and move away from there, and I told him if they wanted to go and help him it would be all right with me.

Q. Did Bryan have any words there at the Salyersville meeting with Weaver Freeman about whether the men would go or not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that?

page 837 } A. They talked quite a little about it, and Freeman backed me up 100 per cent. He said he was afraid to go back, that he knewed that he wouldn't go to Breathitt County, that he had no business over there and he wouldn't advise the men to go, that he had no way of forcing them to go and he would not force them to go.

Q. Did he express himself on what Bryan knew about it or not?

A. Well, yes. He told Bryan he didn't know anything about it. He told him about the same thing I did.

Mr. Robertson: The witness is with you.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

By Colonel Harris:

Q. Is your name Bert E. Preston, Sr.?

A. That is right.

Q. Is that your signature?

(Witness examining document.)

Mr. Robertson: I would like you to show me what you are asking the witness about. That is in accordance with Virginia practice.

Colonel Harris: I will show it to you before I ask any question other than that.

Don't talk about it. Just answer that question. I want to show it to the lawyer.

The Witness: That is my signature, but I never—

The Court: One minute.

(Plaintiff's counsel examining document.)

Mr. Robertson: We don't object to that. That is just part of what he said, my dear friend.

Colonel Harris: I understood we weren't going to take it up until tomorrow morning, Judge.

The Court: All right. Gentlemen, it is five o'clock, and Court will be adjourned until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

PROCEEDINGS.

(Roll call of the Jury.)

The Court: I believe Mr. Preston was on the stand when we adjourned yesterday.

Whereupon,

BERT PRESTON, SR.

the witness on the stand at the time of adjournment, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

. . . . .

CROSS EXAMINATION (continued).

By Colonel Harris:

Q. Mr. Preston, when we adjourned last night, I had just asked you to look at your signature and asked you whether or not it was your signature, and you said that it was.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This paper that you signed was signed in your own home, wasn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. And two men came there to talk to you?

A. That is right.

Q. After they had talked to you, you signed?

A. With objections, yes, sir.

Q. You objected to one sentence, and they scratched that sentence out, and you initialed the lines marking page 842 } it out, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were sworn at that time, weren't you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You read what was in that paper above your name, didn't you?

Bert Preston, Sr.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall that it starts off: "State of Kentucky, County of Johnson: The affiant, Bert Preston, having been duly sworn, deposes and says"?

A. I wasn't sworn.

Q. You read that, didn't you?

A. I read it, yes, sir.

Q. You didn't ask them to strike that out, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. On that occasion, the paper that you signed, and which I have in my hand, in that you made the statement that it was true that William O. Hart, a representative of the United Construction Workers—you told Hart that if they, the United Construction Workers, established a legal picket line, that the local union would honor it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you told him that Hart asked you what you would do if the picket line wasn't there the next day, and you answered that they would sure as hell work?

page 843 } A. That is what I said.

Q. Then you also told these gentlemen that you told Hart at that time that if they continued their legal picket line, they would honor it?

A. I don't remember telling him that.

Q. Will you look right here, this last sentence?

A. (Examining document.) That is my signature, but I didn't sign that statement at all.

Q. You admitted yesterday evening that you signed this, didn't you?

A. That wasn't what you showed me yesterday evening. What you showed me yesterday evening was just on the front here, just down a little ways, and I signed up here, and down there it is signed two places. I only signed one paper.

Q. You saw me hand the paper to Mr. Robertson, the lawyer in the case, didn't you?

A. I never made a statement like that. The only statement I made was that I would honor a picket line. I told him when he brought it there if he added a word to it or took one away from it, I wouldn't sign it. Then he marked out that they had went on strike. I said, "I won't sign it." After he marked it out, I did not sign it. The rest of the statement, I never made.

Q. You saw me hand this statement to Mr. Robertson yesterday, didn't you?

Bert Preston, Sr.

Colonel Harris: If the Court please, we offer in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit—you may look at it and see if it is the same thing I showed you yesterday, Mr. Robertson.

(Paper handed to Mr. Robertson.)

Colonel Harris: —as Defendants' Exhibit No. 1 for identification.

(The document referred to was marked for identification Defendants' Exhibit No. 1.)

page 845 } By Colonel Harris:

Q. You tell this jury now that you never at any time told Mr. Hart that if they established a legal picket line, you would honor it?

A. I told him—

Mr. Robertson: He didn't say that at all. He is misquoting the witness either intentionally or unintentionally.

Colonel Harris: I asked him do you tell this jury now that you never at any time told Mr. Hart if they established a legal picket line, you would honor it.

The Witness: I told him that.

By Colonel Harris:

Q. You did tell him that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You took a prominent part in the proceedings out there, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When they were in the toolhouse, about 40 men, I believe you said, were in the toolhouse?

A. I said there were 40 men in the bunch, but they didn't add get in the toolhouse. It wasn't big enough. They crowded in, all they could get in.

Q. How many in your best judgment were in the toolhouse?

A. About half of them about 20.

Q. About 20. At that time you had to elbow your way into the toolhouse, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you elbowed your way into the toolhouse did you see any drunken men?

A. I never seen a drunk man there. I wouldn't swear that I seen anybody drunk.

Bert Preston, Sr.

Q. Did you see any weapons?

A. No, I never seen any weapons.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Arnett tell Mr. Hart "You're a God damned liar"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When a member of your union used that sort of fighting language to Mr. Hart was the member of your union struck or hit by anybody?

A. No, sir.

Q. At that time you touched Arnett on the shoulder and told Arnett to let you do the talking, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you did that you then told Mr. Hart that if they would establish a legal picket line, you would honor it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long was it after you gave directions to Mr. Hart as to the proper way to proceed was it before he made the sign?

page 847 } Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I object to that. I am not going to keep interrupting, but I do want to put counsel on notice here that he must quote the witness fairly. This witness has not said that he gave Hart any directions to do anything. It is perfectly unfair to the witness.

The Court: The witness is on cross examination.

Mr. Robertson: I know, but he is predicating his questions on a false assumption. The witness never said he instructed Hart to do anything.

The Court: I didn't understand counsel to say that he did that.

Mr. Robertson: I am not going to interrupt any more, but I call to the attention of the Court and the jury that the lawyer is not being fair to the witness. Read the question, please.

Colonel Harris: I state, Your Honor, that it is my purpose to be very fair to the witness. In no particular do I want to take advantage of any witness. All I want is to get the truth before this jury.

Mr. Robertson: Read the last question, please.

(The pending question was read by the reporter.)

By Colonel Harris:

Q. When you told Mr. Hart that he would have to put up a

Bert Preston, Sr.

page 848 } picket, he then and there told one of the men to walk out there and stand, and when he did that you told him you wouldn't recognize that kind of picket, isn't that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. Then you added that he would have to put up a card to show what he was picketing for?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know a man named Henry Starr?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. After Mr. Hart put up the sign as indicated by you, did you give instructions to Henry Starr?

A. I don't remember giving Henry Starr any instructions.

Q. To refresh your recollection, didn't you, after he put up the sign, advise your men to quit work?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then after advising your men to quit work didn't you tell Mr. Starr they had put up a picket and we would recognize it?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Your name is Mr. Bert Preston, isn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. I will ask you if on the 18th and 19th of August, 1950, in the offices of Meade & Johnson in the city of Paintsville,
Johnson County, Kentucky—

Mr. Robertson: What page, please?

Colonel Harris: I will get to the page in a minute.

page 849 } By Colonel Harris:

Q. —if you didn't—

Mr. Robertson: What page, please.

Colonel Harris: I will follow my own ideas. I told you
I would give it to you in a minute.

Mr. Robertson: When he refers to the record of depositions I ask the Court to instruct Counsel to tell me the page to which he is referring.

Colonel Harris: Page 1. It is the first page.

The Court: Page 1.

Colonel Harris: Showing the date.

By Colonel Harris:

Q. —if you didn't give testimony on that occasion. They took your deposition.

Bert Preston, Sr.

A. They did.

Colonel Harris: Now refer, Mr. Robertson, to page 42, which contains a part of this witness' deposition, and you will find this question No. 69: "Question: Did you advise your men to quit work?" "Answer: Yes, sir."

By Mr. Harris:

Q. That is true, isn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. You swore that out there then, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right, question 70: "Who did you give page 850 } your instructions to?" And you answered: "Henry Starr." Do you remember that?

A. No, I don't.

Q. There was a person there taking down, a Mrs. Mabel Louise Porter. You know her, don't you?

A. I do.

Q. She was sitting there in the room in your hearing taking down the testimony, the questions and answers, wasn't she?

A. She did.

Q. To refresh your recollection further, I will ask you if this question, No. 71, was not asked you, just after you answered "Henry Starr."

"Question: What did you tell him?" And you answered under oath on that occasion, didn't you, "I told him they put up a picket and we would recognize it."

Do you recall that now after reading what the lady has down here?

A. I don't remember it.

Q. Do you say you didn't say it?

A. I didn't say that. I said I didn't remember it.

Q. I ask you now another question: Do you say you didn't say that?

A. I still say I don't remember it.

page 851 } Colonel Harris: Will Your Honor instruct the witness to answer my question?

The Court: Can you answer yes or no, Mr. Preston?

Mr. Allen: Isn't the witness entitled to have his memory refreshed by having shown him the statement and let him tell all that he said in this immediate connection?

Bert Preston, Sr.

Mr. Robertson: I am going to offer the whole deposition into evidence as soon as they get through and try to ask the Court to let me read his entire deposition to the jury so they can tell whether he is lying or telling the truth.

Colonel Harris: Counsel is just anticipating what we were going to do. Naturally when I ask him questions about the deposition we are going to offer it and let the jury see it.

Mr. Allen: I understand, Your Honor, the rule to be that if you ask a witness about former testimony or a former statement he has a right to look at it before he answers the question, and let him refresh his memory.

The Court: Let him look at it, Colonel Harris.

Colonel Harris: Yes, sir. Questions 69, 70, and 71, right on that page. That is what I was asking about.

(Witness examining deposition.)

By Colonel Harris:

Q. No. 69 was the question, did you advise your page 852 } men to quit work and you said yes, sir, and you answered that that is true and correct.

A. That is true.

Q. No. 70, the question was who did you give your instructions to, and the answer was Henry Starr. Do you say whether that is true and correct or whether the lady added something that you didn't say?

A. I don't remember having—

The Court: What was your answer?

The Witness: I don't remember having talked to Henry Starr.

By Colonel Harris:

Q. I didn't ask the witness whether he talked to Henry Starr. I asked you if the question was asked you, who did you give your instructions to on that occasion, and if on that occasion you didn't answer under oath that Henry Starr was the one?

A. I didn't get that question.

Colonel Harris: Will you read the question to him, please?

(The pending question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: I don't remember talking to Henry Starr in any way at all about honoring a picket line. The only talk we had was he asked Hart's permission for the men to go up on the tippie and get their tools, and Tart told page 853 } him to go and get them. The only conversation I remember—

Bert Preston, Sr.

By Colonel Harris:

Q. I am not asking you whether you had a conversation with Mr. Starr. I am asking you what you swore to. The question is—I will repeat it—did you on that occasion before Mrs. Mabel Louise Porter have this question asked you. Question No. 70: "Who did you give your instructions to?" And if you did not make answer, "Henry Starr"?

A. Henry Starr never had any conversation with me at all there. When I came out from the toolhouse I passed him alongside the building.

The Court: Do you deny or affirm making the statement?

The Witness: I still deny that I ever talked to Henry Starr about the strike. If I did, I don't remember it.

Colonel Harris: We ask the Court to instruct the witness to answer our question, if the Court please.

The Court: The Court understands from the witness that he doesn't remember making such a statement, and by that the Court further understands that he doesn't deny or affirm it. That is the best I can make out of his testimony. Is that correct or not?

The Witness: That is right.

By Colonel Harris:

Q. On that occasion when they were taking your page 854 } deposition do you recall this question being next asked you: "What did you tell him"? And that you made answer, "I told him they had put up a picket and we would recognize it."

A. I don't remember now telling Henry Starr that or talking to him that way. Henry Starr when he sees a picket or any union man sees a picket, you don't have to tell him.

Q. It is just ingrained with a union man to honor a picket line, isn't it?

A. It is.

Q. How long have you been a union man?

A. Al most nine years.

Q. How long have you been familiar with the reputation of Breathitt County, Kentucky, for violence?

Bert Preston, Sr.

Q. And it has had a reputation of feuding and fighting and killing one another for 20 years, hasn't it?

A. Oh, 20 years, I imagine, or longer.

A. That is right.

Q. The County adjoining Breathitt is Floyd County, isn't it?

A. McGoffin County, that we have to go through.

Q. You have to go through Magoffin. You go through Magoffin and you get to Floyd. How long have you been familiar with the reputation of Floyd County?

A. Forty years or longer.

page 855 } Q. What has been the reputation of Floyd County during that 40 years for feuding and fighting and violence?

A. About as bad as Breathitt County and Magoffin County.

page 856 } Q. You would say, would you not, that those Kentuckians out there in Breathitt County and in Floyd County, don't care any more for killing a man than they do for sitting down at the table and eating?

A. They will kill you if you cross their path, and don't think they won't.

Q. Do you mean that that is just confined to the few people who are members of the United Construction Workers?

A. The people as a whole.

Q. The people as a whole: all right.

When you were giving your deposition that I have asked you about this morning, didn't you describe it this way—and to refresh your recollection I will read you the preceding question:

“Question. Were you afraid to go back to work there as a result of what Hart and his crowd had said and done?”

“Answer. I wasn't working there, but I was afraid for the men to go back to work.

“Question 73. Why?”

And you answered:

“Answer. I knew the condition over there. They don't care any more for killing you than sitting down at the table and eating.”

Do you recall saying that?

Bert Preston, Sr.

page 857 } A. I do.
Q. That is true, isn't it?
A. Very true.

Q. Do you recall the meeting on August 2, which was Tuesday, at Salyersville, at which Mr. A. Hamilton Bryan was present?

A. Yes, sir. We call it "Salyersville" over there, though.
Q. Thank you.

Mr. Bryan at that meeting made a speech, didn't he?

A. I never heard it.

Q. In giving your deposition, I will ask you to look at Question No. 83, right up there (indicating).

A. (Examining deposition.) I still say Mr. Bryan never made a speech. He made a talk with everybody. He would ask one a question and another one a question. But as far as a speech, Mr. Bryan never made it.

Q. I will ask you if, when you were giving your deposition, Question No. 83 was not asked you in these words.

"Did Mr. Bryan have anything to say at that meeting?" and if you did not make answer on that occasion:

"Yes, sir. Mr. Bryan was very interested in it, and I told Mr. Bryan it was election time and it was impossible to get an injunction in Magoffin or Breathitt Counties."

Does that refresh your recollection?

A. If I remember right, I told Mr. Bryan he had page 858 } better get his injunction in Federal Court, because it was election time and he couldn't get any in Magoffin or Breathitt County.

Q. Was that answer correctly written down by the young lady out there?

A. I wouldn't think so. It wasn't the way I answered it.

Q. I will ask you to look at Question 84, and the answer right there where my thumb is.

A. (Examining deposition.) Yes, sir. I will swear to that.

Mr. Robertson: I will ask counsel to read that question and answer.

Colonel Harris: If the Court pleases, I don't need any directions as to what I am going to read. I think I show very clearly that I have been coming up to this point in order to read it to the Court.

Bert Preston, Sr.

Mr. Robertson: I didn't give him any direction. I made the request.

By Colonel Harris:

Q. "Question 84. Did he"—and the context shows it was referring to Mr. Bryan—"Did he want the men to get back to work?"

"Answer. Yes, sir. He wanted the men to go back to work and get a man hurt so he could get an injunction, and we told him we would rather lose the job than get a man hurt."

You say that is correct?

page 859 } A. That is correct.

Q. Do you recall going over to see Mr. Hart on Wednesday, or did he come to Paintsville and send for you?

A. Give me the date.

Q. Wednesday would be the 27th.

A. Mr. Hart sent for me.

Q. Did you go?

A. I did.

Q. I will ask you to look at Question No. 104, right up there, and your answer to it (indicating).

A. (Examining deposition.) I did.

Q. The question reads:

"Question 104. Did anything happen anywhere else in this particular connection?"

"Answer. Mr. Hart did come to Paintsville, and sent for me on Wednesday, and wanted to apologize for running us out over there. I asked him if he still had a picket up, and he said he did, and I told him I didn't have any talk for him."

You say that is correct?

A. That is correct.

Colonel Harris: That is all.

RE-DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Preston, you testified yesterday that after you elbowed your way into the tool house, and when Arnett called

Bert Preston, Sr.

Hart a god damned liar, that that was about as tight a situation as you were ever in, in your life.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then when Hart asked you would you honor a picket line, why did you tell him you would?

Colonel Harris: We object to that as an uncommunicated mental operation of the witness. He has said he told him that; and what went on in his mind, we submit is not proper legal evidence.

Mr. Robertson: It is just the same as everybody else.

The Court: I think he can give the reason.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Why did you tell him you would honor a picket line?

A. It was my only way out.

Q. As you understand picket line, was what he did out there a legal picket line?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why?

A. He didn't have anybody on the job.

page 861 } Q. Did you smell any whisky in the tool house?

A. I did not.

Q. Do you know a man named Noble Hobbs?

A. No, I don't.

Q. At the time you gave this signed statement which you said was given at your home, how many men came there?

A. Three.

Q. Was one of them that young man sitting right over there with his arm up on that railing?

A. It was.

Q. Do you know his name?

A. I do not.

Q. When you signed that statement, was anything written on it below your signature?

A. No, sir.

Q. I am going to read the statement, everything above your signature, to you, and then ask you whether it is true or false, and if there is anything about it not right, what is wrong.

“NOBLE HOBBS, Notary Public.

“My Commission expires 3-3-52.” And the Notary’s seal is on it.

Do you know whether Noble Hobbs is an official or representative of either the United Mine Workers or District 50 or the United Construction Workers?

A. No, sir, I don’t know.

Q. Based on what occurred and what you saw, what you heard, what you did at the job site there on the 26th day of July, did the men quit on account of the picket line, or quit because they were scared to go back to work?

Bert Preston, Senior.

Colonel Harris: We object to that question, if the Court pleases. That is the issue for this jury to decide in this case.

Mr. Robertson: The Court has ruled on it over and again, the reason why they quit.

Colonel Harris: If Your Honor has ruled on it over and over again, we object on the ground that it is a needless repetition.

Mr. Robertson: I think it is a proper question, Your Honor.

The Court: I will allow the question for what it is worth.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

page 864 } By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Based on what you heard, what you saw, and what you did, and what you know, there at the job site on the 26th day of July, 1949, did the A. F. of L. men quit on account of the picket line, or because they were scared to work?

Colonel Harris: We interpose the same objection just stated to the same question.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Answer the question, please.

A. It was through fear that we quit, instead of the picket line.

Q. When Hart sent for you there and you asked did he still have his picket line up, and he said yes, and you said you didn't have any further talk for him, what did you mean by that statement?

Colonel Harris: We object to the witness now, at this late date, interpreting plain and simple every-day language that needs no interpretation; and on the further ground that it invades the province of the jury.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, it is perfectly obvious that what the witness is using there is a colloquial, Kentucky mountain expression. I don't think anybody in this room, except my friend there, considers it plain page 865 } English. I am trying to clear it up.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What did you mean when you told Mr. Hart you didn't have any more talk for him?

Bert Preston, Sr.

Colonel Harris: We interpose the same objection just made to substantially the same question, and reserve an exception.

The Court: Go ahead and answer the question.

The Witness: I meant that I didn't have any more talk with him about the job in a new way.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. That you just didn't want to talk with him?

A. That is right.

Colonel Harris: We object to him leading the witness, if the Court please. Will Your Honor exclude that answer?

The Court: The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Either on that occasion on the 27th of July, or on any other occasion, did Hart ever offer you any sort of apology for running you off the job?

A. That was the day, the 27th, when he wanted to apologize for running us off.

Q. What did you say along that line?

page 866 } A. I told him we didn't have any talk for him.

Q. Did he say anything about having run you off the job?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say?

A. We went from there, from the street—we were on the street, Court Street, when I did the talking with him or he was talking to me. There were four or five others with him, our carpenters from Paintsville. They said they were going out to Odd Fellows Hall where they could get chairs and sit and talk. They asked me to go along, and I said no, I didn't believe I would go, but they insisted that I go.

After we got out there, he was still talking about the job, and I asked him why he brought this gang in with him. He said he wanted to show the Laburnum Construction Company their strength.

Q. Did you ever ask him in that conversation if you could go back to work?

A. No, sir.

. . . . .

page 867 } If Your Honor please, I understand counsel for the other side agrees to it, and I am going to ask that we be permitted at this time to introduce in evidence the deposition of this witness at Paintsville, Kentucky, and let me take the stand and let Mr. Allen ask the questions and me read the answers, just as we did in the case of Henry Starr.

Bert Preston, Sr.

That is all I have with this witness.

Colonel Harris: I want to ask him another question.

The Court: I will give you an opportunity to do that.

Colonel Harris: It just saves me the trouble of reading it. We were going to read it.

Mr. Robertson: I don't object to that.

The Court: I understand, gentlemen, there is no objection.

Mr. Mullen: We can't object, Your Honor. It is their deposition, and they can put it in any time they get ready, I think.

The Court: Colonel Harris, do you want to ask the witness some more questions?

Colonel Harris: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: You may proceed.

RE-CROSS EXAMINATION.

By Colonel Harris:

Q. The apology that Mr. Hart offered was that page 868 } he apologized if there was any misunderstanding on who he represented, wasn't it?

A. He didn't refer to who he represented. He said he just wanted to apologize because he had run us out of there.

Q. And there was no mention whatsoever of who he represented?

A. No, sir.

(Defendants' counsel conferring.)

Colonel Harris: That is all on re-cross examination of this witness.

The Court: All right. You may stand aside.

(Witness excused.)

page 873 } Mr. Mullen: I object to that answer on the ground it is not responsive to the question and also it is hearsay, No. 28.

The Court: The next question is, who told you that?

"Question 48. Could all of them get in the toolshed?

"Answer. No, sir.

"Question 49. About how many were in there?

"Answer. I don't know how many, but I had to elbow to get in.

"Question 50. Did they have any spokesman for the United Construction Workers?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 51. What was his name?

"Answer. Hart.

Bert Preston.

"Question 52. What happened there?

"Answer. He commenced asking the boys to join up with the United Construction Workers, and they all told him they had cards with the American Federation of Labor and some of them showed him their cards, and he told them they would have to join the United Construction Workers if they worked, and I walked in and asked him what he wanted, and he turned around and asked me who I was, and I told him I was business agent for the Carpenters Union, Local 646, and he said he would talk to me, and he said we would have to join up with the United Construction Workers if we worked, and I told him we had a contract with Laburnum Construction Corporation to finish the tippie and schoolhouse, and he said if we wouldn't join up he would go to Beaver Creek page 877 } and get two or three hundred men and come back, and he said, 'you see what that will mean.' And I said, 'No, I don't know what that means.' And he said, 'It means we will kick your ass out of here, if the lady will excuse me.'

"Question 53. What did you reply to that?

"Answer. I told him I had worked on Beaver Creek and knew a number of people on Beaver, and he said that he sure was going to see that we didn't work there on that job.

"Question 54. Did you see Mr. Bryan there that morning or that day?

"Answer. No, sir.

"Question 55. What was the outcome of your conversation in the toolhouse, what did it all lead up to?

"Answer. I told Mr. Hart I was going to take it up with the International organization and go to Mr. Hutcheson, the President of the Carpenters Local.

"Question 56. When you were in the toolhouse there were any of the fellows with Hart drinking?

"Answer. I don't know. I never seen them drinking any.

"Question 57. Did you smell any liquor?

"Answer. No, sir, I didn't.

"Question 58. Did you notice them drinking on the outside, any of the crowd with Hart there?

"Answer. No, sir.

page 878 } "Question 59. Did you notice any guns on any of that gang that was with Hart there?

"Answer. No, sir.

"Question 60. Did you see any marks of guns through their clothing?

"Answer. No, sir. I saw motions but no marks.

Bert Preston.

"Question 61. What kind of motions?

"Answer. When John Arnett told Hart he couldn't give his men what they were getting, he said, 'You are a damned liar,' and they made all kinds of motions, running their hands in their shirts. I told John Arnett to be quiet, that I would do the talking. It looks pretty suspicious to me that something could start awfully quick there, is what I thought.

"Question 62. What did John Arnett say?

"Answer. Hart was promising the men that came in there with him our jobs there.

"Question 63. How did the thing end up there in the tool-house and outside there during the lunch hour? What was the end of it?

"Answer. The end of it was that he was going to picket, and he told one of the fellows to walk out there and stand, and I told him we wouldn't recognize that kind of picket, that he would have to put up a card to show what he was picketing for.

page 879 } "Question 64. Did he do that?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 65. What kind of card did he put up?

"Answer. He got a pasteboard card and wrote on it, but I didn't see what he wrote on it.

"Question 66. Did he put it up?

"Answer. I don't know. I walked on over to the office.

"Question 67. Did anything else happen there?

"Answer. As I was walking along one of the laborers was walking along with his lunch kit in his hand and a fellow walked up and held out a card and said, 'Sign this.' And he said he wasn't going to sign it, and two or three fellows walked up and said, 'By God, sign this.' And he set his lunch kit down by his side and signed it.

"Question 68. Did Hart say anything about signing to you?

"Answer. He said we had to sign.

"Question 69. Did you advise your men to quit work?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 70. Who did you give your instruction to?

"Answer. Henry Starr.

"Question 71. What did you tell him?

"Answer. I told him they had put up a picket sign and we would recognize it.

page 880 } "Question 72. Were you afraid to go back to work there as a result of what Hart and his crowd had said and done?

Bert Preston.

"Answer. I wasn't working there, but I was afraid for the men to go back to work.

"Question 73. Why?

"Answer. I knew the condition over there. They don't care any more for killing you than sitting down at the table and eating.

"Question 74. What was the meaning of Hart's reference there to going to Beaver Creek and getting men?

"Answer. They have a reputation on Beaver Creek of being very bad, and they had taken a job on Beaver Creek from a Prestonsburg local.

"Question 75. You or Mr. Starr mentioned something about some men from Tiptop.

"Answer. They got these men from Tiptop.

"Question 76. What sort of reputation does Tiptop have?

"Answer. Tiptop is very, very bad.

"Question 77. What sort of set-up is it there at the tippie with reference to the hills and woods?

"Answer. A man working on the tippie was just a taget to men who know how to shoot like Breathitt County men do.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, we object to that answer as not responsive. It is not material and it states the opinion of the witness.

Mr. Robertson: I think it shows the occasion page 881 } for fear, Your Honor, and is material and relevant for that reason.

The Court: The Court sustains the objection. Disregard the question and the answer, gentlemen of the jury.

(Reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

"Question 78. Do the hills come right down close?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 79. And does that same situation exist there at the schoolhouse?

"Answer. Yes, sir; only worse. They can get on each side there at the schoolhouse.

"Question 80. Did you attend the meeting on August 2 which I think was the following Tuesday at Salyersville between your local and the local over there?

"Answer. Yes, sir, on Tuesday, August 2, 1949.

"Question 81. Who generally was at that meeting?

"Answer. Mr. Bryan was there, and we had two inter-

Bert Preston.

national men there, and the laborers had a man from Lexington.

"Question 82. What was the purpose of that meeting?

"Answer. We were trying to figure out a way of getting back to work.

"Question 83. Did Mr. Bryan have anything to say at that meeting?

"Answer. Yes, sir. Mr. Bryan was very interested in it and I told Mr. Bryan it was election time and it page 882 } was impossible to get an injunction in Magoffin or Breathitt County.

"Question 84. Did he want the men to get back to work?

"Answer. Yes, sir. He wanted the men to go back to work and to get a man hurt, so he could get an injunction, and we told him we would rather lose the job than get a man hurt.

"Question 85. Did Mr. Bryan ask a point-blank question if the men out of your local would go back to work?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 86. And then did he ask the men out of the local over at Salyersville if they would go back to work?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 87. And what did they tell him?

"Answer. They told him they wouldn't.

"Question 88. What did you tell Mr. Bryan?

"Answer. I told him it was very dangerous for the men to try to work.

"Question 89. And was it Robert Poe that spoke up for the Salyersville local?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 90. When I was questioning you about July 25, and 26, 1949, I failed to ask you if there was a meeting held here in Paintsville by your local on the night of July 26, 1949, which would have been Tuesday night.

"Answer. Yes, sir.

page 883 } "Question 91. Were you at that meeting?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 92. About how many men would you say were there?

"Answer. I imagine there were 30.

"Question 93. Was Mr. Bryan there?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 94. Tell us what happened at that meeting?

"Answer. Mr. Bryan still wanted us to go back to work, and I told him the conditions there, that he was from Richmond, Virginia and he never was in Breathitt County before, and he insisted and I told him if he would put carpenter's clothes on and go with the men and stay with them, I would be willing for them to go back on Wednesday.

Bert Preston.

"Question 95. What did he say to that?

"Answer. He said he would.

"Question 96. And in consequence of that what did the men say they would do?

"Answer. They went back, several of them.

"Question 97. Was Mr. Bryan there on the morning of July 27?

"Answer. I wasn't there. I don't know.

"Question 98. So you don't know whether he did what he said he would do or not?

"Answer. No, sir.

page 884 } "Question 99. I believe you said you never worked over there.

"Answer. No, sir.

"Question 100. But you are a carpenter?

"Answer. That is right.

"Question 101. If you had been working over there and Hart had told you what went on there would you have been willing to go back to work?

"Answer. No, sir."

Mr. Mullen: Your Honor, I object to that. It is hypothetical and calls for a conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, you have ruled on it over and over again. It is relevant to show whether or not they had fear. The next two or three questions show that.

The Court: The objection is overruled, Mr. Mullen.

Colonel Harris: Reserve an exception.

(Reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

"Question 101. If you had been working over there and Hart had told you what went on there, would you have been willing to go back to work?

"Answer. No, sir.

"Question 102. Why?"

Mr. Mullen: Same objection.

The Court: Same ruling.

page 885 } (Reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

Bert Preston.

“Question 102. Why?”

“Answer. I wouldn’t want to get hurt.”

“Question 103. Mr. Preston, what I have been trying to do here is to get you to tell, as far as you know it yourself, what happened there on this job from the time you received a request on Sunday to go over there the following day, and on through. Did anything occur there other than I have asked you about, that would throw further light on this?”

“Answer. I don’t remember anything else that happened over there.”

“Question 104. Did anything happen anywhere else in this particular connection?”

“Answer. Mr. Hart did come to Paintsville and sent for me on Wednesday and wanted to apologize for running us out over there. I asked him if he still had a picket up and he said he did, and I told him I didn’t have any talk for him.”

* * * * *

page 886 } Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, Mr. Preston concluded his testimony in deposition form, and he testified again at Paintsville on November 18, 1950, and I am going to ask permission to read that. It is very short. It covers matters about which he has been questioned by Mr. Harris. I don’t have my copy from the office up here. I didn’t know I was going to need it today. I can read the questions and answers. It is very short, three pages, I think.

(At this point the deposition of Bert Preston was read to the jury, Mr. Robertson reading the questions and the answers, as follows:)

“The witness,

BERT PRESTON,

having been first duly sworn, testified as follows, to-wit:

“DIRECT EXAMINATION.

“By Mr. Robertson:”

This is at Paintsville, Kentucky, on November 18, 1950.

“Question 1. Mr. Preston, your name is Mr. Bert Preston?”

Bert Preston.

"Answer. It is.

"Question 2. You are the same Mr. Bert Preston who testified in the depositions which were given in this action in August, 1950?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

"Question 3. Mr. Preston, when you had the conversation with William O. Hart on July 26th, 1949, did you ask him why he did not shut down the tipple at the No. 1 Pocahontas Mine?

"Answer. Yes, sir.

page 887 } "Question 4. Will you state what it was you asked him and what his reply was?

"Answer. I asked him what was the reason he didn't shut the tipple down as well as us, and he said he had orders from Tom Raney not to shut it down that day.

"Question 5. Did he say anything about shutting it down at any later time?

"Answer. He said, 'not unless he had to; not to shut it down for a day or two unless he had to.'

"Question 6. When he made that remark to you, did you say anything about communicating with a man by the name of: William Hutchinson?"

Mr. Mullen: There is an objection there, Your Honor, on the ground of hearsay and immateriality.

Mr. Robinson: If Your Honor please, my recollection is that they have already cross-examined Bert Preston regarding his reference to William Hutchinson, and the purpose of this is to show who William Hutchinson is. I think it is relevant for that purpose, and tends to connect the local situation out there with the national office in Washington.

The Court: I will overrule the objection.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an objection.

Mr. Robertson: I will re-read the question:

page 888 } (The reading of the deposition continued as follows):

"Question 6. When he made that remark to you, did you say anything about communicating with a man by the name of: William Hutchinson?

"Answer. It was before that, that I told him I would take it up with William Hutchinson. It was when I was in the carpenter's shop.

Bert Preston.

“Question 7. Who is William Hutchinson?”

“Answer. He is president of the Carpenter’s Local, or Carpenter’s Union of the United States.

“Question 8. What was it you said to Hart about taking it up with William Hutchinson?”

Mr. Mullen: Same objection, Your Honor.

The Court: Same ruling.

Colonel Harris: Exception.

Mr. Robertson: There was no answer to that question.

(The reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

“Question 9. Now, Mr. Preston, what was your conversation with Mr. Hart regarding William Hutchinson?”

Mr. Mullen: Same objection.

The Court: Same ruling.

Colonel Harris: Exception.

(The reading of the deposition continued as follows:)

“Answer. I told him I would take it up with the page 889 } international officer, William Hutchinson, for him coming over there and running us out.

“Question 10. What did he say to that?”

“Answer. He said to let them thrash it out in Washington; for William Hutchinson and John L. Lewis to thrash it out in Washington.

“Question 11. On the 26th day of July, 1949, and also just after that, do you know whether or not a man by the name of Robert Poe was a business agent for the Salyersville Local, #697 A. F. of L.?”

“Answer. Yes, sir, he was.”

Mr. Robertson: I ask that Willard P. Owens come forward and be sworn.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, Mr. Owens is a member of the Legal Department of the United Mine Workers, has been working with us in this case, and everything he knows, he knows in his confidential relation as an attorney. He was not out there, nor a participant in anything that happened. He never went out there until we sent him out to get information for us. He is not a proper witness, under the circumstances.

Bert Preston.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, you remember that Mr. Owens has been constantly attending these pre-trial conferences.

The Court: Gentlemen, let us retire to chambers.

Mr. Robertson: I will ask Mr. Owens to stay page 890 } out of this conference so I can tell the Court what I have in mind.

The Court: The same ruling will apply in this instance with Mr. Owens as did with Mr. Bryan.

page 891 } (The following proceedings were had in chambers:)

Mr. Robertson: May I ask you when you were employed in this case, Mr. Mullen?

Mr. Mullen: I don't know. My firm was employed a way back in the very beginning.

Mr. Robertson: Do you remember the approximate date?

Mr. Mullen: I could find out. It was certainly right after the suit was brought.

Mr. Robertson: Let's get the papers and see when this suit was brought. Get the Notice of Motion.

(Mr. Moore left the room to get the paper referred to.)

The Court: Colonel Harris, in regard to your motion for mistrial, it may be well for you to present me with an order filing same, and I will enter it as of the date you made your motion.

Colonel Harris: If we present it in the morning, will that be time enough?

The Court: That will be perfectly all right. I wanted to remind you of it.

Mr. Mullen: The suit was instituted on November 17, as I recall, 1949.

Mr. Robertson: That is right.

page 892 } If Your Honor please, I wish to call attention to this: that at the first pretrial conference at which Mr. Willard Owens appeared, which I think might have been around October 12, you remember I asked who he was, and he didn't want to disclose his identity. He finally told who he was, and said that he was here as a spectator and was not counsel in the case, and did not expect to testify for any of the defendants in the case, and therefore he thought he should be permitted to stay in the pretrial conferences. The Court ruled in those circumstances that he might do so, and he appeared for them constantly, appeared with them constantly thereafter, in these pretrial conferences.

Now it develops that he, on the 8th day of December, 1949, long before he ever came in here but within 30 days after the suit was instituted, if you believe Bert Preston, was at Bert Preston's home taking a statement from him.

I propose to call him to the stand and ask him who he is, what his father's name is, and what position his father occupies with the United Mine Workers of America. I think there is nothing privileged about that. I think it is relevant and material, and that I have a right to ask it as tending to establish agency here between the United Mine Workers and what occurred out at the job site.

The Court: That is as far as you propose to go?

Mr. Robertson: Yes

page 893 } Colonel Harris: And we submit, if the Court pleases, that where a young man is employed as a lawyer and his employer is sued, the use of that young man in preparation of the defense is no ratification of anything that happened prior to the time the suit was brought. A union of the size of any one of these three necessarily has to have legal counsel; and for them to have legal counsel to defend lawsuits, it would be absurd to hold that having counsel to defend suits that are brought against them makes them responsible for the suit that is brought. That is what he is arguing.

Mr. Mullen: If Your Honor please, I can't see that they have any right to put him on the stand to ask him even those questions. They purposely say it will show agency. Any information that he has, he has as a lawyer. He was sent out there at our request, as was said, about 30 days afterward, to get some statements. All he said here was that he was not going to enter of record for the trial of the case, but he was an attorney being used in the case.

I have been called as a witness on three different occasions. I was not counsel in the case. It involved clients of mine. I always claimed immunity, and that was immediately allowed.

Mr. Robertson: We summoned this boy as a witness the first day he was here.

page 894 } Mr. Mullen: I know you did. You slipped out and summoned him the first day we were here. You had no right to do that, I believe.

Mr. Allen, There is no rule of law against calling an attorney as a witness. You may even call one that is at the bar, to the witness stand. I have done it. Of course, you can't violate the rule of privilege. We don't propose to ask this witness anything that is privileged.

Mr. Robertson: Let me interrupt you there, and then I won't say anything more. I had this up with the Power Company over and over again. If you have a whole lot of other people present, it is not privileged. They had this fellow Noble Hobbs there. I have worked that out in Power Company cases. If you give something out to your stenographer, it is not privileged.

Mr. Mullen: You have already examined Hart, and we did not claim any privilege for him.

Mr. Allen: I called a lawyer in a case in the Federal Court in Washington, I called one of counsel at the bar trying the case, around to the witness stand, and asked him non-privileged questions. The Judge required him to answer them. I got some valuable information which helped me in the case.

We have a right to call any member of counsel trying the case, provided we don't ask improper questions.
page 895 } The Court of Appeals of Virginia said in the Robertson case, you don't have even to summon the witness. If he is present in court, you may call him to the stand. That is exactly what they said.

Mr. Robertson: That is what they did to me in that case, and made me open up my file.

The Court: I don't think there is any question about calling a witness if he is present in the courtroom, but do you have a case on calling an attorney?

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please—

Mr. Robertson: I can tell you this, that Ed Preston has had cases in Law and Equity Court, Part 2, and I think he put Mr. Allen on the stand.

Mr. Allen: He did.

Mr. Robertson: If I am wrong, you can correct me.

Mr. Allen: That is correct.

Mr. Robertson: Mr. Allen intimated there was some rascality going forward, because Ed Preston interviewed his witnesses before the trial. Ed Preston thereupon called Mr. Allen to the stand and made him admit that he always did it and considered it his duty to do it.

Do you remember that, Mr. Allen?

Mr. Allen: That is exactly correct, and I took no exception to it because I thought he had a right. There has been no case in Virginia, so far as I know, passing upon page 896 } the right to call counsel, but I have never known of any case anywhere where it was held by any court that the opposing parties didn't have a right to call counsel to the witness stand.

Of course, if you ask questions that are privileged, then counsel claims the privilege for his client. It is the privilege of the client, however, and not counsel.

Mr. Mullen: It is the privilege of the client, yes, but the client can ask—

Mr. Robertson: I can give you cases on this, because I think I have tried about three for the Power Company.

For instance, here is a typical case of it: You catch a bus driver stealing. We have had them who admitted stealing $40 or $50 a week above their pay. He is some nice young boy who has come in from the country, and you feel sorry for him. You call him in and have a nice fatherly talk with him and try to get him straightened out.

We had it there with June Penick. June Penick's assistant was there, and June Penick's stenographer was there. I have forgotten whether anybody else was there or not. The lawyers were not there. Then the boy immediately goes out and sues you for defamation of character, and all that. I have fought, bled and died that those conversations were privileged, and have been overruled time and again that they were not.

page 897 } The Court: I understand you want to ask him his name and who he is, what his father's name is, and what the father does, and stop?

Mr. Robertson: Then if they want to cross-examine him about circumstances—

The Court: The Court will allow you to go that far and no further. I don't think that is privileged. I don't think those questions are privileged.

Colonel Harris: May we have our objection and exception in here, instead of having to repeat them in the presence of the jury?

The Court: Certainly.

Mr. Allen: That is all right.

Mr. Mullen: I don't think it is privileged to put him on the stand and ask him who he is, and he can testify he is a lawyer.

The Court: Those two questions, I understand, are all he is going to ask. He certainly didn't learn, by virtue of his relationship of attorney and client, that his father is Secretary and Treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America.

Colonel Harris: May we state our objection?

The Court: Certainly.

Colonel Harris: Our specific objection is on the ground of irrelevancy and immateriality, and in view of page 898 } their statement that they want to prove who his father is to show ratification of participation by the unions with which his father is connected, we object on the ground that by no process of reason does the identity of a lawyer used by defendant after he is sued operate to make the defendant a participant or one who ratifies a wrong claimed to have happened some months before.

Willard P. Owens.

Mr. Robertson: Just to keep the record straight, of course we have never said one word about ratification here. We have said we intended it to show the agency relationship. On the relevancy of what happened out there, the Court has already ruled, I think.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception to each ruling.
page 899 } (The following proceedings were had in open court:)

The Court: Mr. Owens, will you take the stand?

Mr. Robertson: I don't think he has been sworn.

Mr. Owens: I was sworn the first day, Your Honor.

Whereupon,

WILLARD P. OWENS

called as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiff, having been previously duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Q. What is your father's name?

A. John Owens.

Q. What is your father's connection with the United Mine Workers of America?

A. He is Secretary-Treasurer of the United Mine Workers.

Mr. Robertson: Stand aside.

The Court: All right, stand aside.

ing.

John Hackworth, Jr.

Q. Before that Monday morning had you as a member of the union been told that there would be any difficulty there that week?

A. Yes, sir.

Colonel Harris: We object to that on the ground that it is hearsay, if the Court pleases.

Mr. Robertson: It is the same ruling that the Court has made.
page 902 }

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Before that Monday morning had you gotten any knowledge that anything unusual would happen there that week?

Colonel Harris: Same objection and exception.

The Court: Same ruling.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What was that knowledge?

Colonel Harris: Same objection and exception.

The Court: Same ruling.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What had you heard?

Colonel Harris: Same objection and exception.

The Court: Same ruling.

The Witness: Mr. Hart had come up there, him and one more fellow to the job, the schoolhouse where we were working. So he came around where I was at, me and another carpenter. He said, I am Mr. Hart, representing the United Construction Company." He says, "We want you fellows to join up." He said "You will get more wages and," he says, "we have plenty of work here for you." He said "This is our job and we are going to have it. This is our work."

page 903 }

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What day was it he came there that first time?

A. That is the first time.

Q. What day was it, if you remember?

A. The best I remember it was the 22nd day of July.

John Hackworth, Jr.

Q. Go ahead and tell the full conversation with Hart that day.

A. So I told him I belonged to the A. F. of L. and I didn't feel like I should change over. He said, "You can consider this and suit yourself." He said, "You will either change over or you will get out of this damned hollow."

I said, "I will not change."

Q. What was the next time you saw Hart?

A. That was on the 26th day of July.

Q. Were you working at the schoolhouse there on that Tuesday morning?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many men were working there, if you remember?

A. Roughly I would say there were around eight or nine men, carpenters.

Q. How close do the woods come down to that schoolhouse?

A. In places within 50 yards, I would say.

Q. When you saw Hart on Tuesday, about what time was it that you saw him?

page 904 } A. About 11:30.

Q. Did he come to the schoolhouse?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now state the circumstance under which he came there.

A. The starting of it was we knew that they were coming, they had said they would. I heard around three to four shots fired when they started up the hollow, that is from the company's store up to the schoolhouse. So in about I would say 15 minutes they came up the hollow where we were.

Q. How many men would you say came up there?

A. Roughly I would say from 35 to 50.

Q. Were any of them drunk?

A. They had all the appearance of being drunk. Three or four of them looked like they had all they could go with, and I could smell whiskey on them.

Q. Did you see any of them with guns?

A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. Did you see any prints of guns?

A. The only thing I saw, the only thing that imitated his gun was they rubbed against me and it felt like a gun on them, one fellow did.

Q. Suppose you would be him and I would be you, show how he rubbed against you.

page 905 } A. He walked up to me like this, three or four of them. He rubbed up and said, "You will join now, won't you, by God?"

John Hackworth, Jr.

Q. What did you say?

A. I said "No, I will not join."

Q. Go ahead and tell what happened there at the school house.

A. They just kept gathering right on around us until they were all up there, you see, all of them. They were cussing and talking around. Some of them had their knives out whittling. Our carpenter foreman said, "Boys, we might as well quit." He said, "We might as well quit and have lunch."

We asked them, "Can we have lunch now?" And they said "Yes, go ahead and eat, but be damned sure you don't go back to work."

So we had lunch and after that Howard, our foreman, said "Boys, there is no use our sticking our necks out. We ain't got a chance." He said "We will just take our tools and go down to the tippie."

Q. Did they have you outnumbered?

A. Yes.

Q. How much?

A. I would say—there were 35 to 50. You could consider it 8 or 9 men.

page 906 } Q. Were your brothers working there with you that day?

A. Yes, sir; two of them were.

Q. So after lunch was Hart with the men at the school-house?

A. Yes, sir; he was until we started eating dinner.

Q. Then what happened to him?

A. He says "Enough of you men stay here that you make damned sure they don't go back to work and we will go on down to the tippie."

Q. After you finished lunch did any of the men there at the schoolhouse go back to work?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you go back to work?

A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. Why?

A. I was afraid to.

Q. Why were you afraid?

A. I was outnumbered, and it didn't make sense for me to stick my neck out.

Q. Then after you had finished lunch did you go on down to the tippie?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Do you remember who you went with?

John Hackworth, Jr.

A. I went with—the best I can recollect now was Howard Williams, the foreman.

page 907 } Q. Did you go directly to the tippie or did you go by the store and then to the tippie?

A. No, sir. We had to go close to the store, but we went straight to the tippie, though.

Q. What was the situation at the tippie when you got there?

A. First when we got there, there was a bridge crossing the branch before we got to the tippie. There were I would say eight or ten men standing there at the bridge. They said, "You fellows are not going across this bridge." I said, "Well, I don't want to work. I am going across the bridge to get some of my tools."

He said, "Go ahead, but be damned sure you don't go to work."

Q. Then you went from there on to the tippie?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you got down to the tippie what was the situation?

A. When I got down there all the boys had quit work and were standing around. There were several men on the ground. I would say by that time there were around 100 men there from their side.

Q. Were they men you knew, who had been working on the job, or strangers?

A. They were most of them strangers.

page 908 } Q. Was Hart there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was giving orders to the men or directing them?

A. Mr. Hart was.

Q. Did you go in to the toolhouse there while Hart was there?

A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. Did you hear Hart make any statements down there at the tippie?

A. No, sir; I didn't hear Hart, but I heard some of his men.

Q. What statements did you hear from Hart's men?

A. They were walking around to the laborers telling them they had to join if they worked in that holler. They were just ganging around them like they thought they might run and get away or something.

Q. Did you see them make any laborers sign up any cards?

Colonel Harris: We object to his leading the witness.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

John Hackworth, Jr.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. State whether or not you saw them make any laborers sign any cards.

A. I didn't see anybody sign any papers, but page 909 } I seen them go with one fellow—there were three of them. They had him by each arm. I did not see him sign any papers, though.

Q. Did you see anybody handling any bullets down there, either at the schoolhouse or at the tippie?

A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. About how long did Hart and his crowd stay at the tippie?

A. They were there until about four or five o'clock that afternoon, the best I can remember now.

Q. I think you said you did not go to work at all that day.

A. No, sir.

Q. About what time did you leave there?

A. It was around 4:30, I guess.

Q. Did you attend a meeting of your local union in Paintsville that night?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. About how many men do you think were at that meeting?

A. Roughly I would say 35 or 40 men.

Q. What was the purpose of the meeting?

A. The purpose of the meeting was to see if we could get things settled so we could go back to work.

Q. Was Mr. Bryan at that meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

page 910 } Q. Did he make a talk?

A. Yes, sir; he did.

Q. What did he say and what was said to him?

A. He said, "I think you boys are crazy for not going back to work." So we told him he didn't realize the circumstance of that place, that he was out of town and didn't know what trouble was. He said he wouldn't be a damned bit afraid to go. So our business agent said to him, "You put on a pair of carpenter overalls and lead this gang." He said, "Yes, sir; I will."

Q. Was there anything said about the men going over there carrying guns?

A. Yes, sir. The business agent said "If you men go, don't take less than two '38's."

Q. What did Mr. Bryan say to that?

John Hackworth, Jr.

A. He said to be sure we didn't take any guns or any weapons at all.

Q. Was any arrangement made as to where you would meet the next morning?

A. Yes, sir. We were supposed to meet at Salyersville at a filling station.

Q. Did you meet there the next morning?

A. No, sir. I was about 30 minutes late.

Q. Did you go over to the job site that morning?
page 911 } A. Yes, sir.

Q. About what time did you get over there?

A. I would say around 7:30 is when I got there.

Q. What happened when you got over there as far as you know it and took part in it.

A. I stopped at the timekeeper's office and Mr. Bryan came in there and said, "You fellows go to work and you won't lose any time for being late." So a couple of the boys—there were only three or four of us there at that time—a couple of them wouldn't go. Me and another fellow started. We went over to the tippie.

Q. When you got over to the tippie was anybody there?

A. Yes, there were.

Q. Who was there?

A. Practically all of our carpenters were there, and I would say around 75 to 100 men of theirs, of their organization.

Q. What were they doing?

A. They were doing the same thing they did before. They were running around walking around looking at one another, trying to get them to sign.

Q. Did you go to work that Wednesday?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why?

A. It didn't make sense. I had a wife and baby, page 912 } and I didn't feel like I wanted to die because I have had three or four chances at it myself.

Q. What time did you leave there that day?

A. The best I remember it was about 3:30 when I left.

Q. Have you ever worked over there since?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that?

A. About two months later.

Q. After Laburnum left?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were you working for when you went back after Laburnum left?

John Hackworth, Jr.

A. Codell Construction Company.

Q. Do you know whether or not they are working United Construction Workers?

A. Yes, sir; they are.

Q. Did you have to join up with the United Construction Workers to go to work with them?

A. I worked two weeks, and on the day before I quit one of their men came around with a piece of paper and said we had to sign it if we worked. So I signed the piece of paper, and the next day I quit.

Q. Were you in the armed services during World War II?

Colonel Harris: We object to that.

The Court: I will sustain that objection.

page 913 } Mr. Robertson: I don't want to press it, Your Honor, but they said there wasn't anybody scared out there. I just wanted to show whether this man is susceptible to fear or whether he has been in danger in other circumstances.

The Court: I still sustain the objection.

Mr. Robertson: All right, sir.

The witness is with you.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. Mr. Hackworth, what date was it you said you first talked to Mr. Hart?

A. On the 22nd of July.

Q. Where?

A. Up at the schoolhouse.

Q. At that time he said he wanted you to join the United Construction Workers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was the Friday before they came over and, as you claim, ran you off the work?

A. That was before they came to run us off.

Q. Who was the president of the local to which you belonged, of the A. F. of L.?

A. Monroe Sublett, I believe, the best I can remember. We have had two or three since then.

Q. Was he the man that you asked Mr. Bryan page 914 } about putting on overalls and going with you?

A. No, sir.

John Hackworth, Jr.

Q. Who was that?

A. The business agent, Bert Preston.

Q. Didn't he ask Mr. Bryan, "Will you put on overalls, and lead us across the picket line"?

A. About that picket line I couldn't state how that came out.

Q. If any one else testified to that, you would not deny that is correct?

Mr. Robertson: That is why we separate the witnesses to keep them from ganging up. That is an improper question.

The Court: I think the separation of witnesses applies to both sides in this case, gentlemen. Repeat the question, please. Let me get the exact wording of the question.

(The pending question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Mullen: I didn't state they had testified to that.

Mr. Allen: If Your Honor please, it is certainly an improper method in examining the witness to ask him if somebody else testified to so and so what would you say to that. That is not a proper way, I submit, to examine the witness.

Mr. Mullen: All right, Your Honor.

page 915 } The Court: Ask him if he affirms or denies.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. Will you deny or affirm that that was said?

A. I will say that he said that he would put on a pair of carpenter overalls and lead the men to work. I don't recollect hearing him say about the picket line.

Q. I say that you saw three men around a man trying to make him sign?

A. Yes, sir. I didn't see them make him sign, but I saw they had him by each arm.

Q. Was that man a carpenter or laborer?

A. He was a laborer.

Q. You said also you saw them talking to the other laborers, didn't you?

A. The gang, yes.

Q. It was the laborers that they were asking to join when they were over there on the 26th, wasn't it?

A. They wanted all to join. He says, "You fellows will all join if you work."

Q. But you only saw him talking to laborers?

John Hackworth, Jr.

A. No, sir; they talked to me myself when I was down there.

Q. Did you see Mr. Hart on Monday, July 25th?

A. I don't remember that question.

page 916 } Q. You said you heard four or five shots. That was not at any of the places where the men were working, was it?

A. Well, they were working all around there, the whole job.

Q. But that was between the two points.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was around the bend of the road?

A. We had men working at the houses right next to where we heard the shots fired, and we had men working on up the holler and then down the road.

Q. Could you say where you saw the shots come from?

A. No, sir, I could not.

Q. You could say you just heard some shots?

A. That is right.

Q. You don't know who fired them?

A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't hear any men complain they had been shot at?

A. Not as I know of.

Q. Was anybody beaten up by any of these men who came there?

A. No, sir; not as I saw.

Q. Was anybody shot at?

A. Not as I seen.

Q. Was any property destroyed?

page 917 } A. No, sir; not that I know of.

Q. It was all talk?

A. It was all talk and action, yes.

Mr. Mullen: That is all.

Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, they used this witness' deposition in Paintsville as a guide in their cross-examination of him, and I ask that I be allowed to introduce it in evidence and read it to the jury just as we did in the case of the other witnesses.

Mr. Mullen: You are very much mistaken in my using it. I didn't refer to it a single time.

Mr. Robertson: I saw you looking at it.

Mr. Mullen: But I did not ask a question based on it.

Mr. Robertson: But you and Mr. Harris put your heads together and then looked at the thing to ask the question.

John Hackworth, Jr.

The Court: I don't think Mr. Mullen quoted anything from it.

Mr. Robertson: I don't think he quoted it directly, but I think I have a right now to introduce the deposition to the jury to show whether this witness is testifying the same today or differently in substance from what he did before, so they can determine his credibility.

Mr. Mullen: I think when the witness is page 918 { present and testifies, the deposition is not properly introduced.

Mr. Robertson: You let the other one in. Why do you object to this one?

The Court: As presently advised the Court sustains the objection.

We will now recess, gentlemen, for five minutes.

(Brief recess.)

page 919 { The Court: Who is your next witness, Mr. Robertson?

Mr. Robertson: Before the next witness, Your Honor, these witnesses from Kentucky are laboring men whose jobs are being held for them, and I would like for them to be excused so that they can go home after they testify, if that is agreeable.

The Court: Is there any objection on behalf of counsel for the Defendants?

Mr. Mullen: I don't think we object. There is no reason, after they have testified, for keeping them.

The Court: All right, that is satisfactory with the Court and satisfactory with all counsel.

Mr. Robertson: Norman Hackworth.

The Court: Does that agreement apply to all witnesses who have testified?

Mr. Mullen: That applies, so far as we are concerned to all witnesses.

The Court: All witnesses who have testified for the Plaintiff up to the present time, with the exception, of course, of Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Mullen: Any time we want to make an exception, we will ask the Court as they leave the stand.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Robertson: Come around and be sworn, Mr. Hackworth.

page 920 } Whereupon,

NORMAN HACKWORTH,
called as a witness on behalf of Plaintiff, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Hackworth, your name is Norman Hackworth?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you a brother of Mr. John H. Hackworth, who testified a few minutes ago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you another brother named Robert Hackworth?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How old are you?

A. Thirty-five.

The Court: What is your first name?

The Witness: Norman.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Where do you live?

A. Riceville, Kentucky.

Q. How far is that from Paintsville?

A. About 10 miles.

Q. How far is it from the Laburnum job site in Breathitt County?

A. It is 45 miles, close to 45.

page 921 } Q. How big a town is Riceville?

A. Just a small village.

Q. How old are you?

A. Thirty-five.

Q. What kind of work do you do?

A. Carpenter work.

Q. Are you connected with any union?

A. A. F. of L.

Q. What is your Local?

A. 646, Paintsville, Kentucky.

Q. Where are you working now?

A. I am not working now.

Q. Were you working for Laburnum Construction Corporation in July, 1949?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of work were you doing?

Norman Hackworth.

A. I was doing carpenter work.

Q. Were you working at the schoolhouse or at the tippie or at the store?

A. I was working at the schoolhouse.

Q. Were your two brothers also working there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention now to the week which began on Monday, July 25, 1949. Before that morning, did you have any contact with a man named Hart about your work there?

A. No, sir.

page 922 } Q. What was the first time you had anything to do with Hart?

A. On July 26, 1949.

Q. Tell us what happened there at the schoolhouse that day?

A. About a quarter of 11, a quarter after 11, we were working at the schoolhouse, putting in the foundation. I heard some shots down the road, and in about two or three minutes I seen a big gang of men coming around the curve. The rumor had been around that they were coming to run us off the job, United Construction.

Q. How many men would you say were in that group that came around the bend in the road and up to the schoolhouse?

A. I don't know the exact number, but there must have been between 35 to 50 of them.

Q. Was anybody in charge of them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was that?

A. Mr. Hart.

Q. Were those men walking or riding?

A. They were walking.

Q. What sort of crowd of men were they?

A. It was a rough looking gang to me. Some of page 923 } them—I would say part of them were drunk, or at least they were drinking pretty heavy. You could smell whisky on their breath.

Mr. Hart comes up and makes himself known to us. He comes over to me with a—

The Court: Talk a little louder.

The Witness: He comes up to me with one of his application blanks and said, "Are you going to join United Construction?" And I said, "No." He said, "God damn you, if you work here, you are going to join the United Construction." I said, "I have been carrying my book too long with the

Norman Hackworth.

A. F. of L. to quit and join the United Construction, and I am not going to do it." He said, "You are not going to do it?" He said, "God damn you, we will kick you out of here."

I didn't have any other choice more than to go ahead and leave the job, because I knew the reputation of those people in that country. It was very bad. I didn't want to get killed, and I felt if I worked on there, I would get killed. So whenever they told us we had to quit, we stopped to eat lunch. Hart told part of his men to stay there at the schoolhouse to see that the gang that was working there with us didn't go back to work after lunch. He left 10 or 12, I would say, and they told him they would see that we damned sure didn't strike another tap on that schoolhouse, regardless of what it took to stop us.

Q. Did you go back to work there after lunch?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why?

A. Because I was afraid to.

Q. What did you do after lunch?

A. After lunch, I gathered up the company's tools and put them in my car and drove them down to the tool house and put them away.

Q. Was the tool house at the tippie?

A. No, sir. They had one tool house at the camps up above the tippie.

Q. Did you go to the tippie?

A. Yes, sir, I did go down there.

Q. What was the situation at the tippie when you got down there?

A. I didn't go to the tippie. I went across from the tippie in the road. The men all seemed to be mixed up over there. There wasn't any of them working. They just kept marching around. I didn't go over to the tippie. Some of the men who were riding with me come from the tippie over to my car at the road, and we come home.

Q. How close to the tippie did you get?

A. Oh, I would say 700 feet of the tippie.

Q. Why didn't you go on over there?

page 925 } Colonel Harris: We object to that as an uncommunicated mental operation of the witness.

Mr. Robertson: I think he has a right to show why he was scared to go or whether there was some other reason that he didn't go.

Norman Hackworth.

The Court: I overrule the objection.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Why didn't you go?

Mr. Harris: We reserve an exception.

The Court: Same ruling.

The Witness: The reason why I didn't go to the tippie was because I didn't want to go over there. They told me I wasn't going to work any more, and I didn't want to get around where they were at, because I felt maybe some of them would stick a knife in my back or shoot me.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Did you ever go back to work over there after that?

A. I went back, but I didn't go to work.

Q. When did you go back?

A. I went back the next morning, July 27.

Q. What happened over there then, that Wednesday morning?

A. I came to the company's office, and Mr. Bryan asked me if I was going to work. I told him, "No."

Colonel Harris: We object to the conversation page 926 } between him and Mr. Bryan as hearsay, if the Court please.

Mr. Robertson: It is relevant for the same reason, Your Honor, to show whether the man was scared to go work or not.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception; and may we have an objection and exception to that entire line of questions?

The Court: You may.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What was your conversation with Mr. Bryan?

A. He asked me to go to work, and I told him I wasn't going to work. He asked me why. I told him I thought a lot more of my life than I did of that job of work; that I feared I would be killed if I went back to work.

Q. How long did you stay there at the tippie?

A. I stayed there about an hour.

Q. I took it up a little out of order.

Norman Hackworth.

After you left the job site on Tuesday, July 26, did you attend a meeting of your Local in Paintsville that night?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the purpose of that meeting?

A. The purpose of that meeting—

Colonel Harris: May we have an objection to page 927 } all questions on that line, on the ground of hearsay and immateriality?

The Court: Very well.

Colonel Harris: And an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What was the purpose of that meeting?

A. The purpose of that meeting was Mr. Bryan was trying to urge us to go back to work, not let them run us out of there. So we told Mr. Bryan he didn't know the danger of those people in that country; that he didn't know their reputation; and there wasn't any law protection out there, and we didn't have any way to protect ourselves unless we wanted to go to the means of taking guns in there with us and doing our own fighting, and we didn't think that was the proper thing to do and get a bunch of our men killed and kill up somebody else.

Mr. Bryan still demanded that we go back to work. We told Mr. Bryan to put his overalls on and cross the picket line and go on down ahead of the men, and we would all go to work.

When we got over there the next morning —

Q. Did Mr. Bert Preston say anything about whether or not you should go armed?

A. Mr. Bert Preston said if we went over there, to go over there taking guns with us to protect ourselves. I page 928 } I remember he said to take at least two good guns.

Q. What did Mr. Bryan say to that?

A. Mr. Bryan objected to that. He said he didn't want any man taking a gun over there at no time.

Q. Did they agree that they would meet anywhere the next morning?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was that?

A. They agreed to meet at Salyersville at a filling station, and the crew would all leave together.

Q. Did you meet there with them?

A. I got there—I didn't meet there with them. I got there about five minutes after they had pulled out for Breathitt County.

Q. I think you have already stated what happened over there when you got over there. Did you go back there any more after that day?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever worked there since, for Laburnum?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why?

A. Laburnum don't have any job over there any more, and the United Construction and United Mine Workers has got the work in that section. I don't belong to the United Mine Workers or United Construction, and for that page 929 } reason I don't work over there. I wouldn't work over there, anyway, after this all come about, if they offered me a job.

Q. Why?

A. Because I would be afraid to go back over there.

Q. Do they let you work over there if you don't join up with the United Construction Workers?

A. No, sir.

Q. At any time, have you helped Robert Poe to get membership applications for laborers that worked over there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that?

A. I wouldn't say just exactly the date it was, but it was a week or more before this all come about.

Q. How did you happen to help him get membership applications?

A. Mr. Frank Dixon gave me the applications, and told me to take them in there and help to organize the men, the laborers.

Q. Did any of the Laburnum people tell you that you had to join the A. F. of L., or you couldn't work?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did any of the Laburnum people tell you to turn the heat on them to make them sign up?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you turn the heat on them to make them page 930 } sign up?

A. No, sir.

Colonel Harris: We object to that as calling for a conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Robertson: The witness is with you.

Norman Hackworth.

The Court: Do you wish to reply to the objection, Mr. Robertson?

Mr. Robertson: Sir?

The Court: Do you want to reply to the objection?

(The last question and answer were read by the reporter.)

Mr. Robertson: I assume, Your Honor, that they are going to claim that we put the heat on them to make them sign. Mr. Mullen has already said here that if the boss sends anybody out to sign up for the union, that is practically a threat in itself.

The Court: I will allow the question for what it is worth. Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. When that crowd came there to the schoolhouse on Tuesday, July 26, did you see anybody handling any bullets?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that?

A. They would run their hand down in their pocket and pull out a handful, looked to me like, .38 pistol shells, page 931 } and would roll them from one hand to the other. The man was practically drunk. I would say he was drunk.

Q. Was there any rough talk there at the schoolhouse?

A. Yes, sir, there was.

Q. Just tell us what it was. Make it as rough as it was or just as smooth as it was.

A. I don't remember the words that were spoken, but one man they talked to was Henry Harland Houchell, and they talked very rough to him. I don't remember the words that were said, but it was more than I would want to talk about, and I would be afraid to tell you.

Q. What was it?

A. I don't remember what was said. The only thing I remember about it, I remember they talked very rough to him.

Q. Did you see anybody with any knives there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of knives?

A. They were pocket knives, but they wasn't no penknives.

Q. What were they doing with them?

A. They were whittling around on sticks.

Q. How long were the blades of those knives?

Norman Hackworth.

A. I wouldn't say the exact measurement of the blades or anything of the kind, but they were big knives.

Q. Did anybody call you a son-of-a-bitch?

page 932 } A. No, sir, they didn't.

Q. Did you hear them call anybody else that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the fellow who was called that take it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why?

Colonel Harris: We object to that.

The Court: I sustain the objection.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. When you went to get people to sign up application blanks to join the A. F. of L., what did you say to them?

Colonel Harris: We object to that as hearsay and immaterial and irrelevant.

Mr. Robertson: The reason I am asking it, Your Honor, I reckon later on they will claim that the witness gave a conclusion. I am trying now to go into enough particulars that he will be stating facts and not conclusions.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What would you say to them when you tried to sign them up?

Colonel Harris: Same objection, and exception.

The Court: Same ruling.

page 933 } The Witness: I only asked them if they wanted to sign up with the A. F. of L., and I told them that I thought it would be better for them; that they would get better wages, that we would all like to be organized and work together. I didn't tell anybody they had to join the A. F. of L. I didn't try to force anybody to join it. I only tried to help them out. I had talked to them along time before that, trying to get them organized.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Was Robert Poe with you on a number of those occasions, or were you pretty much by yourself?

A. Robert Poe was with me on some of them, and I was by myself on some of them.

Mr. Robertson: I have no other questions.

Norman Hackworth.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. Are you a member of the union now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is it?

A. 646, A. F. of L., Paintsville, Kentucky.

Q. That is the same union that had men on the job for Laburnum?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were a member of it at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You state that you signed some of the men page 934 } up about a week before these happenings?

A. Yes, sir, something like that.

Q. You are very certain of that?

A. I wouldn't say for sure it was a week, that it was more than a week or less than a week, but it was pretty close to a week.

Q. It was pretty close to a week. It wasn't as early as the first part of July, was it?

A. No, sir, it wasn't.

Q. It wasn't as early as the 10th of July, was it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see any guns?

A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. You said some of the men had knives and were whittling. Whittling is a kind of common occupation among men when they are not working, isn't it?

A. It might be for some men, I don't know, but the way they were going around among us men at the time, with 8 or 10 or 12 men crowding up around us, each one of us there, with a knife in his hand and whiskey smelling on his breath, those knives didn't look too good. It didn't look to me as though they meant just to whittle a stick.

Q. Did anyone ever make a pass with one of the knives?

A. Nobody made a pass at me.

Q. You say you had talked to some of the labor-page 935 } ers before about joining. Had they refused, when you talked to them before?

A. No, sir, they hadn't. They seemed to want to get lined out to join it, but they never could make up their minds and all of them get together.

Q. What does it cost to join the Paintsville Local Union?

A. The Carpenter's Local?

Norman Hackworth.

Q. Yes.

A. It cost $50.

Q. What are the dues?

A. $1.50 a month.

Q. So these laborers would have had to pay $50 to join?

A. I don't know what the laborers' initiation fee is, and I don't know what their dues would have been. I never looked it up. But I think it was $10 that it cost them to join.

Q. Did you see any picket signs on the work? You were there on the 26th, you say?

A. There wasn't any picket signs at the schoolhouse.

Q. Were there any anywhere else?

A. I didn't see any on the 26th. I didn't go over to the tippie where they were working, where some of them had put up a picket sign, I understood.

Q. You understood they had put up a picket sign?

A. Yes, sir.

page 936 } Q. What did you do with the cards that you got signed up by the laborers?

A. I turned over what cards I got signed up to Bob Poe, Robert Poe.

Q. You don't know what he did with them, do you?

A. No, sir, I don't.

. . . . .

Q. Who filled in the cards that you got signed?

A. I filled them in.

Q. All you asked the man was to sign his name?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how many you filled in?

A. I don't remember the number I filled in.

Q. You didn't fill them all in, did you?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Mullen: I have no more questions.

page 937 } Mr. Robertson: If Your Honor please, I offer this witness' testimony at Paintsville and ask that I be permitted to read it to the jury and introduce it in evidence in corroboration of the testimony the witness gives here today.

Mr. Mullen: I object to that, Your Honor.

The Court: I sustain the objection.

Mr. Robertson: That is all, Mr. Hackworth.

The Court: Stand aside, Mr. Hackworth.

(Witness excused.)

Robert Hackworth.

Mr. Robertson: Mr. Robert Hackworth.

Whereupon,

ROBERT HACKWORTH

called as a witness for Plaintiff, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION.

The Court: Where?

The Witness: Riceville, Kentucky.

Mr. Robertson: R-i-c-e-v-i-l-l-e. I have been page 938 } out there.

am talking so all these gentlemen can hear you.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. How far is Riceville from the Laburnum site in Breathitt County?

A. I would say it is 25.

A. It is not much of a town at all, just a small village.

Q. How old are you, Mr. Hackworth?

A. 38.

Q. Are you a brother of Mr. Norman Hackworth and Mr.
John Hackworth, who have both testified here this morning?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of work do you do?

A. Carpenter work.

Q. Where are you working now?

A. I am not working at carpenter work now.

Q. Are you a member of any union?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What union?

Robert Hackworth.

A. 646, Paintsville, A. F. of L.

page 939 } Q. Were you working for the Laburnum Construction Corporation in July, 1949?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention now to the week that began on Monday, the 25th of that July. Tell us where you were working then. Do you remember where you were working then?

A. Pardon me?

Q. I say on the week that commenced on Monday, July 25, 1949, were you working for Laburnum then?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you?

A. At the schoolhouse.

Q. Do you remember whether or not you had had any talk or heard any talk of William Hart before that Monday?

Mr. Harris: We object to that on the ground it is hearsay.

Mr. Robertson: It has the same purpose.

The Court: Do you have anything more you want to say?

Mr. Robertson: It is the same objection he has made time and again, Your Honor.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Colonel Harris: Of course every time he asks the question we have to object.

The Court: That is true.

Q. Do you remember whether or not you either had any talk yourself with Robert Hart before that Monday morning or whether you heard any talk by him before that Monday morning?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. When you went to work that Monday morning, July 25, at the schoolhouse, did anything happen that day or did you work on through the day?

A. The 25th?

Q. Yes.

A. We worked through the day.

Q. On Tuesday, the 26th, what happened?

A. There wasn't anything happened that I knowed of on the 26th. You mean on the 26th of July?

Q. Yes.

A. Sure.

Robert Hackworth.

Q. There is a calendar there which you can watch to keep your mind straight.

* * * *

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Were you there at the schoolhouse when Hart came there with a crowd of men?

A. Yes, sir.

page 941 } Q. Tell what happened.

A. You want me to tell when he came there the first time or the time with the crowd of men?

Q. I want you tell the first time he came first, and then the second time. Tell about the first time first.

A. It was on the 21st or 22nd of July, the best I remember, that he came there. He asked us to join the United Construction. He said "We are taking this job over." We told him, "No, we wouldn't join," that we already belonged to a local.

He said, "Well, you make up your minds. We are coming back." He said, "I am going to take this job over. If you work here you are going to have to join up with us." So he left. Then on the 26th, the following day, he came back with a bunch of men. He came up to the schoolhouse where we were working.

Q. How many men would you say were with him?

A. I would say there were—the best of my memory, 30 or 40, I guess. It could have been more.

Q. Tell the jury what happened when they came there to the schoolhouse.

A. They came up, and they just rushed right up on us and crowded right up and said, "All right, boys, we are here now. Are you going to join up with us or not," and we said "No, we are not." They said, "All right, if you are not you are going to have to quit work."

page 942 } I said to Mr. Hart, "Well, let's talk just a minute." "No," he said, "I have no damned talk for you." He said, "You fellows are just going to have to quit, that is all there are to it. We don't want to have to get rough with you."

We all just quit and went up to eat our lunch. It wasn't hardly the lunch hour, but we quit. I don't remember how many there were, but he told some of them to stay there and see that we didn't work any more. He said, "The rest of us will go down to the tipple."

Robert Hackworth.

We went up there and sat there and ate our dinner, our lunch. Then after we ate our lunch we gathered our tools all up and put them in our boxes and went down to the company's store there. Then those men came on down to the tippie.

Q. When Hart and his men came there to the schoolhouse, was it a bunch of men that you knew or were they strangers?

A. They were strangers, most of them were. There may have been—I never looked, you know, to notice them enough to see if there were any in the bunch. They were in a crowd. There may have been some of the boys that I worked with there before as laborers, but I don't—

Q. Were any of them drunk?

A. There were part of them that were acting page 943 } drunk, you know, like they had been pretty tight,
I will say.

Q. Did you smell any liquor?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Did you see any guns?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any cussing there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What words did you hear used?

A. I said to Hart, "Let's talk a minute," and he said "I have got no God-damned talk for you."

*     *     *     *     *

The Witness: Those men there were cursing around, you see, and every time Hart would say something, they maybe would curse, and you know, backing him up something like that.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Did anybody call you a son-of-a-bitch?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did they call you anything else?

A. No, sir.

Q. How many did they have you outnumbered?

A. I guess we were outnumbered, the best of my opinion we were outnumbered six to 1.

Q. After you gathered up your tools you say you went where?

page 944 } A. We went back down the road apiece there to a company store where we left our cars and things and we loaded our tools in a car. Those men that guarded us there until we quit work, went on down to the tippie where the rest of the gang went.

Robert Hackworth.

Q. Did you go on down to the tippie?

A. No, sir; not that day.

Q. Why?

Mr. Harris: We object to that, if the Court please, as calling for an uncommunicated mental operation.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Why didn't you go down to the tippie?

Colonel Harris: Same ruling.

The Witness: They said they were going to stop everything, so I knew we had to stop up there. I just never drove on down to the tippie. I waited there until the rest of the gang came out.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Were you scared to go to the tippie?

Colonel Harris: Same objection.

The Court: Same ruling.

Colonel Harris: An exception.

page 945 } By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Were you scared to go to the tippie?

Colonel Harris: Same objection.

The Court: Same ruling.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Will you answer the question?

A. Sure.

Q. Why?

Colonel Harris: Same objection and exception.

The Witness: I figured they would have trouble or something down there and I didn't want to get involved enough to maybe get hurt or be killed or something.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Did you attend the meeting of Paintsville local that night?

Robert Hackworth.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear what went on there?

Colonel Harris: May we have an objection on the ground of hearsay to this line of questioning?

The Court: The objection is overruled.

The Witness: I heard a part of what went on there.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. State what went on there so far as you heard it.

A. Well, it was late after the meeting started when I got in, and Mr. Bryan was there. He was talking page 946 } about wanting us to go back to work. Some of the boys said to him, "Will you put on a pair of carpenter overalls and lead us in there to our job?" He said "Yes, sir; I will."

Q. Was anything said about whether they would carry guns or not if they went back?

Colonel Harris: Your Honor gave us an exception to this line?

The Court: Very well.

The Witness: Some of them said "If you go back there you are liable to get killed if you are not protected some way."

Mr. Bryan said, "No, we don't want you to take any guns or anything."

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Then did they make any arrangement as to how they would go the following day?

A. Yes, sir. They were supposed to meet at Salyersville, and all go in together.

Q. Did you go over there the next day?

A. No, sir. I went through there, but the gang had all gone in. I went in late.

Q. Did you go on over to the job site after the other men had gone ahead of you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About what time did you get over there?

A. I suppose it was 8:30, maybe nine o'clock.
page 947 } I wouldn't say for sure.

Q. What was the situation when you got over there?

Robert Hackworth.

A. When I got over there I noticed the man over at the tipplem so I never went on over to the job myself. I stopped at the office. I noticed they were fixing to come out with their tools and things and I just never went on over.

Q. Did you sort of hang back a little and go back over there late on purpose?

A. You mean after they came out?

Q. No, I mean—

A. Sure.

Q. From Salyersville.

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Why did you do that?

Colonel Harris: Same objection and exception.

The Court: Same ruling.

The Witness: I couldn't make up my mind to go back to work. I just dreaded to go in there and probably start work and maybe get killed or something. I didn't want to do that. I finally decided to go. I intended to work if they were working and had everything settled down. I wasn't sticking my neck out.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Mullen:

Q. You say you talked to Mr. Hart on the 21st or 22nd?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you report that talk to anyone?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To whom?

A. Some of the members who were working.

Q. Do you know whether it was reported to Mr. Delinger?

A. No, sir; I don't know whether it was reported to Mr. Delinger or not.

Q. Those who came with Mr. Hart, you say you knew some of them, that some of them had worked with you. Were those that you knew or among those you knew some of the laborers on the Laburnum job?

Robert Hackworth.

A. Those that came with him, the best I can remember, it seems that I had seen two or three of those laborers that I had been working with. I couldn't call their name because I never found out many of their names. I never fooled with them too much.

Q. You just recognized them as some of the laborers that you had been working with?

A. That is right.

page 949 } Q. At the meeting on the night of the 26th of of the Paintsville Union, Mr. Sublett was the man who asked Mr. Bryan the question was he not?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Whoever asked, you remember the question being asked as to whether he would put on overalls?

A. Well, no, I don't remember just exactly who asked him the question to do that, but I heard it mentioned and heard whoever it was as it, but I don't remember at this time who it was.

Q. You remember that the question was asked?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wasn't the question asked Mr. Bryan, "Will you put on overalls and lead us across that picket line?"

A. No, sir; not as I remember it.

Q. You don't remember that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see the picket signs there?

A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't see any of them?

A. I did not.

Q. Did any of your fellow workers report to you that there were picket signs?

A. That there were picket signs?

Q. That there were picket signs there.

page 950 } A. I heard some of the boys say something about there being some signs there, but I don't know what they were. I never seen them.

Mr. Mullen: I have no further questions.

Mr. Robertson: I have nothing further. If Your Honor please, I offer in evidence the testimony of this witness at Paintsville and ask that I be allowed to read it to the jury.

Mr. Mullen: Same objection, Your Honor.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Gentlemen, we will recess for lunch and come back at 2:15.

Jack Patrick.

(Whereupon, at 12:50 o'clock p. m. the Court was recessed until 2:15 o'clock p. m. the same day.)

AFTERNOON SESSION.

2:15 p. m.

Mr. Robertson: Jack Patrick, please.

This witness has not been sworn.

Whereupon,

JACK PATRICK

called as a witness for Plaintiff, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Mr. Patrick, your name is Jack Patrick?

A. That is right.

Q. How old are you?

A. 42.

Q. Where do you live?

A. Paintsville, Kentucky.

Q. What kind of work do you do?

A. At the present time I am engaged in the mining business.

Q. What kind of work were you doing in July, 1949?

A. Carpenter work.

Q. Do you run your own mine property?

A. I do now, yes, sir.

Q. How many men do you work there?

A. From 12 to 18.

page 952 } Q. Do you just dig the coal out and load it in a truck and sell it yourself?

A. That is right.

Q. Are you affiliated with the A. F. of L. local union in Paintsville?

A. I am a member of it.

Q. Were you a member of it in July, 1949?

A. I was.

Q. Were you working for Laburnum Construction Company in Breathitt County, Kentucky in July, 1949?

Jack Patrick.

A. I was.

Q. I call your attention now to the week that began July 25, 1949, the Monday of that week. Were you working there that day?

A. I was.

Q. Before that time did you receive any report that the United Construction Workers were going to run you off the job?

A. I did.

Colonel Harris: Just a moment, please. We object to that on the ground that it is illegal, irrelevant, immaterial, incompetent, and hearsay.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Colonel Harris: We ask an exception.

If the Court pleases, in order to save time and to speed up the trial, can we have objections to every question of that sort that deals with a rumor or report with reference to what they were to expect, and an exception?

Mr. Robertson: There is no objection.

Mr. Allen: No objection.

The Court: Very well.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What was the report you got as a member of the union that the United Construction Workers were going to run you off the job?

A. That they were coming in there and were going to take the job.

Q. On Monday, July 25, where were you working?

A. I was working at the bottom of the hill on the mine tipple.

Q. Did anything happen that Monday, did any trouble occur that day?

A. No, sir; I don't believe there did. I believe it was on the following Tuesday.

Q. Tell what happened there that Tuesday while you were there, what you saw and heard and did

A. Well, this fellow—it was noontime and we were all having lunch at this time.

The Court: Mr. Patrick, take your hand away from your face, please.

Jack Patrick.

The Witness: We were in the shed and were page 954 } all having lunch. This fellow Hart, as I later found him out to be, comes in the building first.
We were sitting there not paying much attention to him. I was sitting there on a horse. He walks up and begins talking to me. I don't remember the exact words that he used now. Anyway he said it was their job and they was taking the job over. He asked us if we would like to join up with them and work with them.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What was your answer to that?

A. I didn't answer it because I was nothing more than steward on the job at that time and our business agent by that time had walked into the building and he taken over. I didn't say anything else.

Q. Were you the steward on the job there then?

A. That is right.

Q. When this conversation occurred between Hart and Mr.
Bert Preston, the business agent, about how many men do you think were there in the toolhouse?

A. It wasn't a very large building. There weren't but about 12 or 20 foot. It was full. I would say 25.

Q. What was the conversation between Hart and Preston and Arnett, if Arnett came into it?

A. When Hart said he was taking over the job, I don't know how it was, but anyway several—

The Court: Talk louder, Mr. Patrick. page 955 } The Witness: There were some pretty harsh words passed there, and there was a disturbance there, a racket about to start. That is when Bert Preston gets into it. Hart says he would take over. He could go and bring 600 men out of Beaver Creek and take the job over.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Was there any cussing going on?

A. There was.

Q. What words did you hear pass?

A. He said they could kick our damned ass off the job.

Q. Did Arnett take any exception to anything that Hart said?

A. Yes, sir; he did.

Q. What did Arnett have to say about it?

Jack Patrick.

A. I just can't quote exactly what the man said. I have forgotten.

Q. What is the upshot of it?

A. That is when everybody was getting loud and rough. Some fellows on the outside of the building, all rushed the building, crowded the door. Even the outside and all, they were jammed full in there.

Q. Were any of them crowded up around the windows and doors?

A. They was.

Q. Did any of the men go back to work after page 956 } lunch that day?

A. You mean the A. F. of L. men?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you go back?

A. I did not.

Q. Why?

A. Well,—

Colonel Harris: On each one of these "why" questions may we have an objection throughout the rest of the case to save time. It calls for an uncommunicated mental operation and invades the province of the jury.

The Court: You may save the point.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Why didn't you go back to work that afternoon?

A. The fact of the matter, they threw a picket line on it in the first place and in the second place if they hadn't, I wouldn't have gone back. They threw a picket on it and if they hadn't thrown a picket on it I wouldn't have gone back.

Q. Why?

A. There are too many fellows there talking too big for me.

Q. Were you scared to go back?

A. It didn't suit me to go back, no, sir, I didn't.

Q. Did you go to the union meeting in Paintspage 957 } ville that night?

A. I did.

Q. We have been over that pretty thoroughly. I don't think we need go into all that again.

Did you meet with others at Salyersville the next day, Wednesday, to go back out to the job?

A. I did.

Jack Patrick.

Q. Did you go together or go separately?

A. We all went pretty much together.

Q. Why?

A. Well, so if anything started we would all be together on it. We went more or less in a group so we would all be together.

Q. When you got out to the job site did you go down toward the tipple?

A. I did.

Q. Did you see anybody down there at that time?

A. I believe there was one fellow.

Q. Did you have any talk with him?

A. I did not.

Q. Then during the course of the morning on Wednesday did you as the steward have any talk with the men there in the foolhouse or in any of the buildings there at the job site?

A. I called a bunch of men off from work.

page 958 } Q. About what time was that?

A. I would say that was an hour, possibly an hour and a half after they started to work.

Q. Why did you pull them off the work?

A. Unsafe.

Q. Had any reports come to you that anything was going to happen in particular about running them off the job that day?

A. Nothing—one fellow who worked on the tipple all the time was a United Mine Workers, an electrician. I went up on the tipple and he came up to me and said, "Jack, what are you doing, putting these men back to work?" He said, "Don't you know we are with these boys, too?" Then I called them all off the tipple.

Q. What is the reputation of the United Mine Workers there in Kentucky for pulling rough stuff and running people off the jobs?

Colonel Harris: We object to that question, if the Court please. It is highly prejudicial and improper. It is no way to charge responsibility in a claim of this sort.

Mr. Robertson: It goes right to the heart of the case. They have intimidated they quit work because they wanted to honor the picket line.

page 958-A } The Court: Are you going to ask him about any particular event?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

The Court: I will allow the question.

Colonel Harris: We reserve an exception.

Jack Patrick.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. What is the reputation of the United Construction Workers about being rough or gentle in running people off jobs in eastern Kentucky?

Colonel Harris: Same objection and exception.

The Court: Same ruling.

The Witness: They just walk in on a job and demand it and take it over. They are bad that way.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Do you know of any instances where they have done that?

A. I do.

Colonel Harris: Same exception and objection.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Can you name some of them?

Colonel Harris: May I have an objection and exception to all the questions on this line to save repeating?

The Court: You may save your point.

By Mr. Robertson:

Q. Will you name as many as you can, any of them that you can, where you have known them to run men off page 958-B } the job in the same way that they ran A. F. of L. men off the Laburnum job?

A. There was a job going on at Beaver Creek, a tipple. They took it all over and put them off the job. They had a lot of trouble there. The same way in Prestonsburg, a construction job, non-union outfits. They put them off. They came along and taken our job from us. I believe that is all that I recall at the present time.

Q. Did you know about that when you called your men off the Laburnum job?

A. Part of it.

Q. Was that one of the reasons you called them off?

A. I knew what had been in the past, yes, sir.

Q. Did you notice any drinking among Hart's men there on Tuesday?

A. I didn't see anybody drinking, no, sir.

Q. Have you ever seen Hart since that Tuesday that he was there?

Jack Patrick.

A. I have.

Q. When and where?

A. In front of the Howard Hotel, the following day.

Q. Is that in Paintsville?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him there?

A. I did.

Q. What was that conversation?

page 959 } A. He was sorry, that he didn't mean to take the job in that way and put us fellows all out of work. All he wanted was us to sign up with him and go to work for him, that they were in need of carpenters. He wanted us to go back to work.

Q. Did he say you could go back to work over there without signing up with him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he still say you would have to sign up?

A. That is right.

Q. What did he say you would do if you went to work without signing up?

A. It wasn't mentioned.

Mr. Robertson: The witness is with you.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

By Colonel Harris:

Q. Do you know John Arnett?

A. I do.

Q. How long have you known him?

A. On this one job over there.

Q. The rough talk started in the toolhouse when John Arnett told Hart, "You are a damned liar," didn't it?

A. I couldn't answer that. I don't know. I don't remember that.

Q. You don't remember that?

page 960 } A. No, sir.

Q. You do know that your business agent, Bert Preston, touched John Arnett on the shoulder and said in substance, "You shut up. I will take charge." You remember that, don't you?

A. I don't remember that.
